Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2011 with funding from LYRASIS members and Sloan Foundation

http://www.archive.org/details/washingtonelm199295wash

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Fri.: Showers, H 57, L 39
Sat.: Cloudy, Breezy
H near 50, L near 30
Sun.: Partly cloudy
H near 50, L near 30

Volume 63, Number One • August 28, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Diverse Freshman Class

Kevin Coveney, Vice President for Admissions and Enrollment Management, has announced that this year's freshman class will be one of the biggest, brightest and most ethnically diverse in the College's 210-year history.

Coveney says that by early July, 310 new students (280 freshmen and 30 transfer students) had committed to enroll. Although final enrollment figures will not be available until September 1, the 1992 fall entering class will be considerably larger than last year's of 213 students and on par with the record enrollment figure of 299 new students in 1988.

Of this year's new students, 28 are African-American — more than doubling the school's total African-American population and bringing minority enrollment more in line with nation's leading private liberal arts and sciences institutions. Among these students are two young men from the Washington, D.C. area who earned scholarships through Carl Rowan's Project Excellence.

"I am delighted that our substantial efforts to assemble a more diverse student body have paid off," commented Charles H. Trout, the college's 24th president. "This dramatic change will unquestionably make us a more academically and socially vibrant institution. It is a change that is long overdue."

Coveney attributed the success in minority recruitment in large part to Assistant Admissions Director Kathy Waye, who worked to draw students from Maryland's Eastern Shore, Baltimore and the Washington, D.C. suburbs and to student members of the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange who telephoned and hosted potential students "and affirmed for them it's okay to be an African-American student at Washington College."

While the numbers are good news for college administrators struggling to stretch education dollars, the scholastic makeup of this entering class is even more impressive. Coveney says the number of "high-ability freshmen" has more than doubled. Twenty Hodson Trust scholars have SAT scores that average well above 1200, with a 3.9 GPA. The new class includes 62 National Honor Society members, 12 valedictorians, two salutatorians, nine Maryland Distinguished Scholars, a Presidential Scholar and two National Merit finalists.

New light at x-walk

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

The infamous crosswalk on Washington Avenue at Washington College received its traffic signal yesterday.

Hawking Electric Company of College Park installed the light; electrical work was finished this week.

The State Highway Administration has changed the road signs from "Yield to Pedestrians" to "Signal Ahead."

Installed was a red-yellow-green traffic signal, along with corresponding "Walk/Don't Walk" signals for pedestrians.

There is now a push button for pedestrians, and the light's timing will be coordinated with the Greenwood Avenue stoplight.

In addition, the light will operate only at peak hours — not at night, weekends or breaks. The remainder of the time, the light will flash yellow, as it did previously.

SHA Administrator Hal Kassoff announced the state's intentions in an April 3 letter to Chestertown Mayor Elmer Horsey.

He added the SHA did not turn the signal on until an orientation took place with the RA's.

Chief Wayne M. Bradley of the Chestertown Police Department expressed reserved optimism about the light.

"I hope it works," he said. "I think it's going to be helpful, but we'll have to see.

"I don't think there's going to be a problem with the cars stopping when the light's red, but are the kids going to stop or are they going to run through in front of a car trying to get to class on time," he asked.

Bradley stressed the fault is on neither side. "Cars aren't going to stop for a pedestrian who runs out on a green light. It's the same everywhere, cars stop on red, and speed up on yellow and green."

He also said the department will be ticketing pedestrians and motorists at the crosswalk.

"Not all the drivers are at fault, and not all the pedestrians are at fault. But there's just a few of each that make a problem. There's a few everywhere that just want to defy something. ... I just hope it works."

See "Crosswalk," page 12

Wubbels Arrives at WC

by Amanda Burt

As the 1992-93 academic year opens, Gene G. Wubbels will mark his first semester as the new permanent Dean and Provost of the College. He was selected on March 16th of this year to replace Acting Dean John Taylor, who assumed the role temporarily after former Dean Elizabeth Baer resigned.

Wubbels is an acclomplished scientist who began teaching chemistry in 1968 at Iowa's Grinnell College, where he became the chair of the department and was named the John and Nellie Dack Professor of Chemistry.

A founding member of the Council of Undergraduate Research, Wubbels has published numerous articles as well as proposals for research grants. In 1989, he was the recipient of the Chemical Manufacturers' Association's Catalyst Award for chemistry teaching.

Committed to strengthening undergraduate scientific education throughout the United States, Wubbels served as the Program Director for the National Science Foundation's Education Division in Washington, D.C. from 1990 to 1992 before coming to Washington College this summer.

Wubbels noted that in his search for an academic dean position, Washington College was particularly attractive to him because he saw the potential to do some good. "I was very impressed by the leadership that President Trout offered. I think that he is a startlingly impressive leader for this place," he stated.

In addition to finding an "engaging, optimistic and energetic" faculty and staff, Wubbels said that the college has made some auspicious improvements on campus with the new buildings and re-modelings that he feels will be powerfully attractive to prospective students. "The new Daly Hall and the renovations for William Smith will create a space for students and faculty to informally get together, and it will make the college a better place," he said.

Washington College has already felt the academic impact of Wubbels, as he brought an NSF-RUI research grant with him that focuses on organic photochemistry. The grant, awarded at Grinnell College, was stalled during his term as Program Director for NSF but reactivated once he came to Washington College.

During the summer, he

See "Wubbles," page 12

INSIDE:

Resident Socialist Scott Koon on the elections, pg. 3

Bricks & Mortar: Summer Renovations, pg. 9

Mike Sapp, pg. 2

Lanee Hired as Women's B-ballCoach, pg.15

Tell Me, Tell Me, Tell Me ELM

For those of you who missed it last year, that's a quote from James Joyce. And it's one of our mottoes of sorts.

And to answer another burning question (that's my job), no, we are not going to change the name of Washington College's weekly newspaper.

Rumor has it that Louis Goldstein, Chairman of the Board of Visitors and Governors, Maryland State Comptroller and graduate of the Class of '34, was the first Editor-in-Chief of the ELM.

I was talking to a woman (I'll call her Ms. W.) who graduated this May, and that was her first question. She was relieved to hear that this was, in fact, not true. She told me that during her four years at WC, the ELM was something that was always there. It did have changes over the years, some for the better, some for the worse, but it was in the Dining Hall every Friday at lunchtime, rain or shine.

Ms. W.'s stay at WC included four new buildings (Larrabee Arts Center, Casey Academic Center, Johnson Lifetime Fitness Center, and the new Security Office), the addition of the Cater Walk as it is today, and the loss of the tree that this newspaper took its name from.

She was happy to hear that, while editors come and go, the name remains the same.

And what did I tell Ms. W. when she asked why I had decided, before talking to her, to keep the old title?

"Ms W.," I said, "newspapers are made from dead trees."

New Business in Town

This summer, Chestertown mourned the loss of three of its favorite businesses. The Newsstand, the Alley Cat Café, and the Sly Horse have all gone by the wayside. The Newsstand simply wasn't making enough money in its last location on South Cannon Street to make the venture worthwhile. The Alley Cat was also hit hard by the recession, and the Downtown Chestertown Antique Center now lies in its place. It's a nice store. And so was the Sly Horse, which sold everything from brightly colored silk dresses to candles and birthday cards. Mrs. Joan Horsey, President of the Downtown Chestertown Association and wife of Mayor Elmer Horsey, opted to close her store. The Yardstick will be moving from High Street to the Cross Street location.

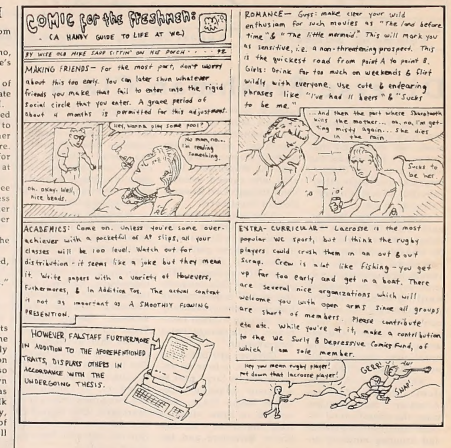
New businesses also sprung up all over town. Eastern Shore Cameras moved to Washington Square Plaza (where Superfresh is), and in its place is a shiny new 24-hour convenience store. Royal Farms is in walking distance, they sell sodas, snacks and cigarettes, and they're open all night. Smiley's does still have gas, pizza and cheerful cashiers, and a lot of nostalgia for those of us with cars.

A new bookstore at Washington Square Plaza, Family Book Nook, boasts a large used-book section for half off the cover price. They'll also buy back used books.

Another Time II, High Street Extended, sells not only antiques, but furniture, rugs, pots and pans, and signs and posters. They'll also buy back your used furniture at the end of the year when you're moving out, so you don't have to throw it in the dumpster. They offer a 10 percent discount with WC ID.

And, mmmm, there's a new ice cream place in town. The Reel Scoop, located in the lobby of Royal Prince Theatre on High Street, sells ice cream so good it melts in your mouth (ha.). They also have stuff for lunch, and they sell daily and weekly newspapers, for those of you who think the ELM isn't quite enough.

While I'm at it, I'd like to put in a plug for two relatively new stores, both of which opened last school year. Wilma's Kitchen, on Cross Street, serves healthy and yummy food. And the Classy Closet, next to the Imperial, has really cool used clothes and jewelry. And they'll give you 10 percent off when you bring your ID.



The Washington College ELM
Established 1950

Editor-in-Chief J. Tate Travers

Photography Editor Andrew Sisna
News Editor Amanda Burt
Features Editor Jason Tyner
Arts & Entertainment Editor Jennifer Grey Reddish
Sports Editor Chris Vaughn
Advertising Manager Peter Jones
Circulation Manager Gordon Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadline for letters are Wednesday night at 8 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered in the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quicknet. Articles without bylines are press releases.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8385.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Some stories this week reprinted with permission from Eau Claire County News.

To the Editor:

I have never met Richard DeProspo and have no idea of his age or relative academic brilliance, but if he weren't identified as a faculty member I would have guessed from his remarks on the Sophie Kerr Award [ELM, May 1 1992] that he was either an insecure sophomore or an embittered contender. Maybe as an "adult" he is actually both!

I graduated from WC in 1969 and returned to take an MA in '77. Since, I have earned an M.Ed. from Harvard and survived 20 years as an educator, including a few good many hours of adolescent and post-adolescent counseling.

If the Sophie Kerr competition "poisons all relationships between students and faculty," I have never, in all my years of association with WC, seen evidence of it. To the contrary, I have returned for any number of visits and have been welcomed to the traditional "Mayor's Party" on half a dozen occasions as recently as two years ago, when I saw them as before: no signs of poison between the students and their chair of other English faculty. Really, Professor DeProspo sounds not only ill-informed (see below) but light-headed.

Many people first objected to the seemingly too-grand largess of Ms. Kerr's. The college challenged the will, as I recall, not once but twice, and the courts ascertained that Ms. Kerr knew exactly how she wanted her money disposed of.

If Professor DeProspo has refused to do his duty as an English Department member and participate in the Sophie deliberations, it isn't surprising he came up with an entirely off-the-wall proposal to ignore the wishes of the woman who made this significant gift to WC and its students! He must be a trial, spouting off about things he hasn't bothered to learn. What an example to the students!

If WC is turning out graduates who at 21-22 years of age cannot withstand the pressures of competing for a $20,000 prize, God help America. The job market is a competition for hopefully much higher stakes, and if our grads can't participate without having their "relationships poisoned" and their psyches forever warped, then DeProspo and all who agree with his "students as wimps" philosophy had better leave off teaching and start building barricades, because such a non-competitive population as they are nurturing will be overrun by stronger men and women of greater force and clarity!

Sincerely,
Margaret Nuttle Melcher '69
Evergreen, CO

P.S. Can anyone seriously envision English Department Chairman Lamond threatening "serious reprisals" against DeProspo or anyone else with whom he might differ intellectually? Give me a break! How ludicrous! DeProspo must believe we "students" are not only wimps but idiots! Interesting that Lamond has tenure and is chairman and a Lindback winner because he has 20 years as one of WC's truly outstanding teachers! Maybe DeProspo would be happier elsewhere where his competition is less excellent.

—MNM

Scott Koon: Resident Socialist

Scott Ross Koon's column, covering local, national and global issues, will appear every week in the ELM.

Like many Americans, the first time I saw Bill Clinton in a television interview as a Presidential candidate he was busy skirting the question of whether he had ever been unfaithful to his wife. At the time I saw no hope of him winning the nomination. He looked like a real loser, a candidate who was a talented politician who also had too much personal baggage to hope of boarding Air Force One. As the campaign continued, however, I slowly realized that I had underestimated Clinton. I also realized that the overriding issue of this campaign is not what's right about Bill Clinton, but what's wrong with George Bush.

Over the course of the past twelve years two Republican Presidents have failed to eliminate the deficit as promised. Moreover, their regressive tax policies and their complete lack of a rational industrial policy lay at the core of the current economic crisis. While Reagan still boasts of creating millions of jobs, the truth of the matter is that most of those jobs were low paying jobs in the service sector, or jobs at foreign owned factories which wind up exporting the financial fruit of America's skilled work force to Japan. Fundamentally Americans don't care who Clinton sleeps with as long as he provides some hope for a brighter future for America's children.

At the Republican convention America saw Bush's handlers crass attempt to use the patriotism of the American people to ensure the victory of their candidate. Bush claimed that the end of the Cold War was a Republican victory-not an American one. Despite claims to the contrary, I really don't think that many Americans actually lost any sleep over the possibility of nuclear war. Bush's foreign policy failures far outweigh his successes. Saddam Hussein is still in power. The Khmer Rouge has returned to Phnom Penh. Fighting continues in Bosnia. Bush has long ignored the threat of famine in Sudan, and millions will die because of his lack of concern for African lives. Bush murdered uncounted poor Panamanians in his ruthless attempt to arrest just one man. Once upon a time America was the promised land to all the "huddled masses yearning to be free." Now George Bush has changed that tradition in refusing to allow hungry and oppressed Haitians to come to America. Bush cared more about the overthrow of a ruthless monarch half a world away than the overthrow or a democratically elected priest just a dinghy's row away from American shores.

George Bush's handlers would have us believe that he supports family values. The Republican embodiment of these values is a middle class white family in which the mother stays home and cares for the children-a

See "Koon," pg. 12

CAMPUS VOICES

What is the best piece of advice that you can give a freshman?

Remember when choosing classes as a freshman that you don't know what you'll be doing as a junior or a senior. Keep your options open!
Rachael Sara Fink, PA

At the risk of sounding like a parent, have as much fun and explore as much as you can but remember the main reason you're here — a college education.
Stephanie Tennyson, PA

Don't get so involved in extracurricular activities that you lose sight of your priorities. Be well rounded, but don't bite off more than you can chew. Also: READ! READ! READ!
Keith Eric Daniels, PA

I think a freshman should not try and become Mr. or Miss Perfect in several activities. Pick a couple of clubs or extracurricular activities and try to excel in those. Do not overestimate yourself by doing too many activities, relax. You have four years to experience life to the fullest. Enjoy!
Michael Frey, RA

Don't be afraid to get involved.
Andy McKim, RA

I think the most positive advice I could give a first year student is to open themselves to new concepts and ideas. With an open mind and willingness to flexibility, one can truly overcome all obstacles.
Monique Ware, RA

Open Forum: Welcome to Chestertown

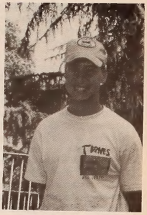
Open Forum is a weekly op/ed column available to all members of the Washington College Community. Queries may be made as to suitability to the Editor-in-Chief or Features Editor. Submission deadline is Wednesday at 6p.m. for that week's paper. Articles are not to exceed 1000 words. No footnotes, please.

Matt Shields

So this is Chestertown and you're thinking, what's there to do here? Once you're over the thrill of being out of the jurisdiction of your curfew, or in the case of my first college roommate: once you're done crying because you miss your parents,[1] you'll find out there is plenty to do here.[2] The brochures sent to you over the past couple of months truly capture the warmth and excitement that is Washington College.[3] Whether you're watching geese flying silhouetted against a vibrant Chester River sunset or sitting in the Literary House with your buddies discussing the fourth dimension in terms of Non-Euclidean geometry, you'll be reaping the benefits of a smaller school.[4]

College means it's time to take on some responsibilities. It is certainly not a place where one goes to try to emulate the Animal House antics of the late actor John Belushi.[5] Besides, I doubt any of you incoming freshman are old enough to consume alcohol legally. Despite the noble efforts of our lawmakers, some people do end up getting trashed, some stay trashed, others... well maybe you can become a positive example for others and find something better to occupy your time.[6] And for those of you who refuse obey the law of the land remember: alcohol is not always the catalyst for a good time. I know of what I speak because when I went off to go to college the drinking age in Colorado was 18 and even to this day I regret some of the serious time I lost at my studies due

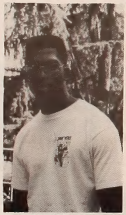
See "Shields," pg. 13



Faces of the 1992-93 Resident Assistants

Bridgette Winchester
Kent 1st Flooor South

John Phoebus
Kent 1st Floor North



Monique Ware
East Hall

Mike Ginns
Dorchester House

Chris Vaughn
Cecil House

Andy McKim
Kent 2nd Floor North

Nancy Whiteman
Kent 2nd Floor South

Lionel Dyson
Middle Hall

Susan Czechowski
Queen Anne 1st Floor

Brenda Stanley
Queen Anne 2nd Floor

Deborah Harner
Reid 1st Floor

Kristen Kujawski
Reid 2nd Floor

Eleanor Shriver
Reid 3rd Floor

Tyler McCarthy
Somerset 1st Floor

William Griffin
Somerset 2nd Floor

Faces of the 1992-93 Resident Assistants

Charles Linehan
Cardinal F

Monita Airen
Minta Martin 3rd Floor

Jennifer Ruppert
Caroline 1st Floor

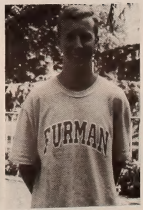
Ryan Mahoney
Caroline 2nd Floor

Michael Frey
Caroline 3rd Flooor

Salwa Amer
Wicomico 1st Floor

Chris Kleberg
Wicomico 2nd Floor

Tim Stoltzfus
Worcester 2nd Floor



Michelle Crosier
West Hall

Ashley Holladay
Talbot House

Whitney Myrus
Somerset 4th Floor

Chris Freisheim
Somerset 3rd Floor

Christy Harris
Minta Martin 4th Floor

Faces of the 1992-93 Peer Advisors

Lisa Brown

James Baker

Stacy Sherman

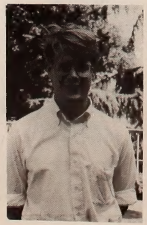
Jennifer Reddish

Rachael Fink

Marcella duffy

Curtina Arnold

Maria Jerardi



Dawn Israel

Jennifer Hozik

Stephanie Tennyson

Renee Rhodes

William Ball

Harrison Gallagher

Renee Kuhnel

Faces of the 1992-93 Peer Advisors

Megan Ward

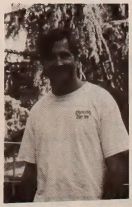
Andrew Evans

Tina Dayhoff

J. Tarin Towers

Miriam Jecelin

Rebecca Bryant



Amy Osborne

Bridgette Avant

Melissa Sirick

Abigail Clifford

Anne McDermaid

Keith Daniels

Susan Wackerbath

Boyer to Speak at Convocation

Washington College officially opens the 1992-93 academic year with Fall Convocation on Thursday, September third. The Convocation, during which two educators will receive honorary degrees and students will be recognized for their past academic achievements, begins at 7:30 p.m. in Tawes Theatre of the Gibson Performing Arts Center. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Honored guests will be Ernest L. Boyer, President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and Senior Fellow of the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University, and James G. Nelson, retired Executive Vice President of the Aspen Institute.

Boyer will give the keynote address, and he will receive the honorary Doctor of Humane Letters. Nelson will receive the honorary Doctor of Letters.

With a long and distinguished career in education, Boyer is recognized as one of the nation's leading educators. Since assuming the presidency of the Carnegie Foundation in 1979, he has helped shape the national education debate — giving priority to the empowerment of teachers, the importance of language skills in all coursework, a core curriculum, community service for students and the arts.

He came to The Carnegie Foundation after serving as US Commissioner of Education during the Carter Administration. Prior to that, he served for seven years as Chancellor of the State University of New York — the world's largest higher learning institution.

Just this summer, he was appointed chairman of the Lincoln Center Institute for the Arts in Education and was charged with overseeing the Center's initiative for bringing arts education programs to more than 100,000 elementary and secondary school children each year.

Boyer is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, and he is a trustee of The Aspen Institute, Haverford College, the University of Pennsylvania Medical Center and the Museum of the American Indian. Holder of more than 100 honorary degrees, recipient of the Distinguished Service Medal, Teachers College, Columbia University and awardee of the President's Medal, Tel-Aviv University, Ernest Boyer has influenced the field of national education like no other.

James G. Nelson's influence has been felt most keenly on the Eastern Shore. He served for 25 years as Director of Wye Institute, a private non-profit foundation concerned with issues of regional economic and community development. Situated on an idyllic spot near Queenstown on the Wye River, Wye Institute, once a mediocre all summer camp for high school students, became a retreat for policymakers and executives.

When Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies moved to Wye in 1982, Nelson was instrumental in smoothing the transition. He is considered a visionary who nurtured initiatives that enhanced the quality of the environment, education and other intellectual and cultural organizations on the Eastern Shore.

Nelson served on various state commissions and advisory councils, including the Governor's Commission on Environmental Education and the State Department of Education Advisory Councils on Title III and Title IV programs.

He is the author of more than 20 books about the cultural history of the Chesapeake Bay region and is a consultant and frequent speaker on rural development issues. He served on Washington College's Board of Visitors and Governors for 10 years.

UPS FAX COPIES STAMPS

The Choice is Yours:

The U.S. Post Office or the Post Office Alternative®

Mail Boxes Etc.[4]	U.S. Post Office
Mailbox SuiteService™	Mailbox Rentals (P.O. Box #)
Mail-Hold (Indefinite)	Mail Hold (30 Days)
Box Holder Mail Forwarding	Limited Mail Forwarding
Call-In Service & 24-hr. Access	NO
Stamps	Stamps
Envelopes	Envelopes
Postcards	Postcards
Packing Supplies	Shipping Boxes
UPS Rapid Air Shipping/Receiving	Express Mail next day service
UPS Ground/Parcel Post	Parcel Post
American Express Money Orders	Money Orders
Packaging/Gift Wrapping	NO
Western Union® Money Transfer® Telegram® Mailgram® Cablegram®	NO
Voicemail	NO
FAX/TELEX Sending & Receiving	NO
Copy Service (24-hr. Available)	NO
Business Cards & Stationery	NO
Office Supplies	NO
Secretarial Service/Word Processing	NO
Notary Public	NO
Phone Message Service	NO
Rubber Stamps/Name Plates	NO
Passport/I.D. Photos	NO
Laminating	NO
Key Duplication	NO
NO	Long Lines

UPS Authorized Shipping Outlet

MBE MAIL BOXES ETC.®

We're The Biggest Because We Do It Right!™

29 Kent Plaza
Chestertown, MD 21620
Tel. (410) 778-9446
Fax (410) 778-9448

Foam Loose-Fill Recycling Center

©1991 Mail Boxes Etc. An independently Owned and Operated Franchise

PACKING SUPPLIES MAILBOXES RAPID AIR OFFICE SUPPLIES

Twigs & Teacups

Jewelry, Toys, Cows, Candles, Cards, Corn & other Curious Things

112 South Cross Street
Downtown Chestertown

Attention

All Students!

Practice your bowling
Ten-pin and Duckpin
Monday through Friday
3 - 5 p.m.

Only $4.00 with college ID! (Price includes shoes)

Queen Anne's Bowling Centre
Rt. 213 South of Chestertown
778-5800

Summer

Man Dies on Campus

A 63-year-old Emmitsburg man attending a conference at Washington College died of an apparent heart attack Saturday, June 13. Lionel Trefor Walker died in the emergency room at Kent & Queen Anne's Hospital, a hospital spokesperson said. Walker, who was attending the Central Atlantic Conference for the United Church of Christ, had gone for a walk at 6 a.m., Chestertown Police Chief Wayne M. Bradley said. According to police reports, Tom McFall found Walker not breathing about an hour an half later near the college's tennis courts. College security responded and the Chestertown Police and Kent-Queen Anne's Rescue Squad were notified by Kent Central. Members of the Department of Natural Resources, attending a separate conference, assisted with cardiopulmonary resuscitation, said Jerry Roderick, director of college security. He said Walker was wearing a medical bracelet indicating a history of heart trouble. The rescue squad transported Walker to the hospital.

WC/KCHS Partnership

Washington College and the Kent County Board of Education have established a mutually beneficial educational partnership. A surplus Heidelburg Press from Kent County High School's vocational department has found a new home at the college's O'Neill Literary House pressroom, where students will use it to print books. The 40-year-old press has not been used in the high school for several years because it is obsolete by commercial standards. However, it is still a valuable tool for teaching the history and art of printing, Mike Kaylor, Literary House Press Director, said. In return, Washington College donated six surplus Apple IIe computers to the school system. In exchange, the college will offer printing demonstrations and workshops to interested high school students. The computers, used in the college's physics and chemistry departments until the end of this past semester, will be put in county classrooms for student use.

reager Resigns; WC-ALL Continues

y Angie Smidga
taff Writer

The Continuing Education partment will pilot a new dult program this Sep- mber as planned, despite e resignation of one of the heme's cofounders.

Mary Creager, who aded Continuing Ed. for ar and a half while orking on an MA at the llege, left the post for a ll-time teaching job at alena Middle School last day Creager introduced the cademy of Lifelong Learn- g (WC-ALL) to the college nd community last Sep- mber, after attending minars on a nation-wide etwork of adult academic stitutions in March 1991.

"I think the best way to escribe it is, it's a club for he intellectually thirsty," aid the 46-year-old reager, who met with ommunity members last eptember to tap local in- erest. As one of nearly 200 ch adult institutes around he country, WC-ALL will ffer non-credit, non-de- ree academic courses ught by locals who offer eir expertise and teach- g experience, Creager aid.

The project, which is cheduled to offer classes n the Casey Academic Cen- er starting September 15, s the first of its kind on the astern Shore, though it hares the region with one of the country's largest in- dependent ALL programs, based at the University of Delaware in Wilmington.

Though most of the approximately 40 current members come from Chestertown, Maureen Jacoby, head of the steering committee, said she hopes the program will attract residents of surrounding Cecil and Talbot counties as well.

Each class, limited to about 15 students, will meet once a week on campus, where members of WC-ALL can freely use the Miller Library. In keeping with Washington College's philosophy, the six-week and four-week long lecture courses must retain an academic focus, which means "no macrame!" Creager said.

"One of the important things for us is to reflect academics at Washington College," agreed Jacoby, a 3-year retiree and Heron Point resident who took over the program after Creager's departure. WC-ALL recruits teachers from its own membership, which explains the diversity and sometimes unpredictable nature of the offerings, she said.

This fall's courses include psychology, health, ethics, music, and history, and are open to WC-ALL members only. Members pay a semester or yearly dues of $60 and $100 respectively, and can attend up to three classes concurrently.

Sally Bruel, a 70-year-old Heron Point resident who joined WC ALL last February while it was still in the planning stage, suggested that the nurturing of a new adult program might have stemmed partly from the 1991 opening of the Heron Point retirement community.

"The retirement community was just about burgeoning," she said, "and it was clear that there was a vast academic potential to be tapped."

Washington College has proffered a $2,400 budget for WC ALL's next fiscal year, said Lyell Ritchie, steering committee member in charge of finance, who said he anticipated financial self-sufficiency for the program in about two years.

Kent County Issues Bonds to WC

The Kent County Commissioners recently agreed to issue economic development bonds to help Washington College finance its underground tank removal project. Senior Vice President for Management and Finance Gene A. Hessey told the commissioners the bond issuance would not cost the county or place any obligation on it. The issuance will not exceed $700,000. Hessey estimated removing the 18 tanks and remediating the soil from the four leaking tanks would cost $625,000.

Summer Improvements

By Chris Mihavetz
Staff Writer

Once again, plans for the summer renovation of the old WC Coffee House and Snack Bar, both in the basement of Hodson Hall, have been put on hold. Reid Raudenbush, Director of the Physical Plant at Washington College, cited a lack of funding for the postponement of the renovations. "State moneys and grants are not available for the renovation of Hodson as opposed to buildings such as the proposed academic building," he said.

Raudenbush said the Hodson renovations were to take place in several phases. Phase one was completed last year when the old bookstore in the basement of Hodson was gutted and refurbished to provide a study area for students.

However, aside from minor cosmetic changes to the snack bar, which has been renamed the 'WC Deli,' the other Hodson basement facilities have remained essentially the same.

Simply put, we don't have the funds for the other phases of renovation, we have to wait until the college comes up with some money, or a generous benefactor donates the funds," Raudenbush said. "I do know that completing the renovations is high on President Trout's list, as he was very unhappy with the condition of the Coffee House."

Despite delays in some projects, there were some unseen renovations around the WC Campus this summer. Old oil tanks, 14 altogether, were removed from the ground around many of the dormitories and other campus buildings.

The tanks held oil used by hot-water heaters around campus. Some of the older tanks had already begun to leak oil into the soil around them and were, in Raudenbush's words, "environmental time bombs that we had to eliminate." The contaminated soil was also removed.

In place of the old hot water system that used individual oil-fueled water heaters, water is now being heated in each building by steam generated in the campus boilers. To augment the original main boilers, a new smaller boiler was added to provide steam for water heating in the spring, summer and fall.

During the winter the small boiler is switched off and the main boilers provide steam for both water

See "Renovations," pg. 13

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
236 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

Welcome Back Students & Faculty!

Wishing You A Successful Academic Year

Brambles Clothing
335 High Street
Downtown Chestertown

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm

Welcome Back WC!!
Friday 28 & Saturday 29
THE CAUSE
We love their music -- ranging from originals to your favorite Beatles tunes
21 or older please
Dregsinal
Thursday, September 3 Acoustic Rock/Folk/Blues
JulieHoward

Week at a Glance

Calandar of Events

August 28 - September 3

Friday 28 - Sunday 30
Actors Community Theatre presents I Am a Camera
Norman James Theatre, 8:00 p.m.
For information call 778-1100 †

Friday 28
Singer: Paul Strowe
Martha Washington Square, 9:30 p.m. †

Saturday 29
Registration, new students
Benjamin A. Johnson Lifetime Fitness Center, 3:00 p.m.

Band: The Movies
Martha Washington Square, 9:30 p.m. †

Sunday 30 - Monday 31
Film Series: White Man Can't Jump
Norman James Theater, 7:30 p.m.

Sunday 30
Returning students arrive on campus

All College Picnic with Mariachi De Las Americas
Turner's Creek Park, 2:30 p.m.

Monday 31
Undergraduate classes begin

First day to drop / add classes.

Wednesday 2
Septemberfest
Band: Psycho Johnny
Kent Quad, 5:00-8:00 p.m.

Lecture: William Hardie
Sophie Kerr Room, 8:00 p.m. †

Thursday 3 - October 2

Art Exhibit: Leonardo Da Vinci: The Intentions
Tawes Lobby, Gibson Performimg Arts Center

Thursday 3
Field Hockey vs. Salisbury
Scrimmage, 4:30 p.m.

Psychic Readings by Fahrusha
Martha Washington Square, 11:00 a.m.-3:00 p.m. †

Opening Convocation
Tawes Theatre, 7:30 p.m. †

†See related article

A&E

Student Profile: Jen Del Nero

Jen Del Nero's resumé of awards and activities de campus leadership. A senior English major who prese participates in the education program, Jen is the female Student Government Association president s 1982.

Since Jen arrived as a freshman, she has been activ campus life. Her freshman year she worked for The in fall as a reporter and in spring as Arts and Enter ment editor. She first became involved in the S. G. A. as a dorm senator her sophomore year continued as secretary her junior year. Spring seme
her sophomore year she became a resident assistan
Reid Hall and last year headed first floor in Queen An Dormitory.

Service oriented, Jen has worked two years with Easter Seals Camp, a program for the disabled, Chestertown, MD and Santa Cruz, CA, successively.
first year was as a counselor and her second year wa head counselor.

Jen's latest project, Target Tutoring, with Maria Jer and Stephany Slaughter, began this past year. The gram, which took a semester to plan and anothe implement, helped Garnett Elementary School stude who needed extra attention.

Despite her busy schedule, school work has remain priority. Jen has received the Hauge Scholarship, future teachers; the George Washington Scholar aw for academic achievement; and the Sophie Kerr scho ship, for prospective English majors. She received Handbook of Chemistry and Physics Award her fresh year and the Visitor's and Governor's Medal her ju year.

Jen plans to attend graduate school and hopes to te English at the public secondary school level and then e special education. She would later like to enter pu school administration.

In her free time, Jen is a closet chocoholic who enj riding around Chestertown on her bike. An avid trave she has driven cross-country several times and ventured abroad to Germany.

Her advice to incoming students: "Don't wait to involved, try something new. Waiting just wastes y potential for success and to develop your strengths."

Fahrusha Will Amaze All

Fahrusha the psychic will forsee your fortune and sense your personal characteristics for a dollar in Martha Washington Square from 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. on Thursday.

A direct descendent of Merlin, Fahrusha has traveled the globe in search of the Earth's natural energy sources.

From high atop Mauna Kea to Ngorongoro Crater to Stonehenge and Egypt and Mexico's pyramids, Fahrusha has meditated on the basic unity of life.

Her tools include Tarot cards, palmistry, crystal ball, I Ching, tea leaves, coffee grinds, rune stones, and handwriting analysis. Quit worrying about your future at Washington College. Do something about it. See Fahrusha.

If that does not work, try the Career Center gurus. They work magic with their information packets.

Fahrusha The Magnificent

Paul Strowe Sings

New York Singer and comedian Paul Strowe will perform in Martha Washington Square at 9:30 p.m. tonight.

Strowe's music repertoire spans three decades and includes covers of the Moody Blues, Lynrd Skynyrd, Eric Clapton, Billy Joel, The Eagles, The Beatles and James Taylor.

Get ready and practice the "Doo Wa Ditty" song.

Strowe's acoustic rock sound and wit will have your clapping and laughing all night long.

Forget Gone With the Wind

The Movies will play this Saturday in Marth Washington Square at 9:30 p.m.

Hailing from Delaware, these four guys rock audiences with their '50s and '60s sound.

Frequent performers at Andy's, they are known for their covers of such classics as "Mustard Sally" and "Some Kind of Wonderful."

Don't miss The Movies, a band known as "the most fun around."

WANTED:

Reporters
Photographers
Ad-sellers

$

Come to a meeting in the basement of Reid Hall for all interested students 8:00 p.m. September 8 or call 778-8585

San Quentin Drama Workshop to perform

The San Quentin Drama Workshop will perform The Shepherd's Song, , a drama of hope and courage for the crack and AIDS generation, at Tawes Theater, September 11 at 8:00 p.m.

Playwright Rich Cluchey, portrayed by Nick Nolte in the film Weeds, heads a diverse cast of Black, Latino and White actors.

These teenage prostitutes, drug dealers and small time street punks have more in common than first meets the eye: they all have tested H.I.V. positive. None suffer yet from full-blown AIDS.

The Shepherd's Song, which stresses a drug free life style, becomes the only way to stop the asyptomatic, soon-to-be-released H.I.V. carriers from actively spreading A.I.D.S.

The Shepherd, an A.I.D.S. victim and a recovering heroin addict, dedicates his life to teaching young people how to live with H.I.V.

I Am a Camera

Actors Community Theater will present I Am A Camera by John Van Dresden this friday and saturday in Norman James Theatre at 8:00 p.m.

Adapted from stories by Christopher Isherwood, the play, on which the musical and the movie, Cabaret, also is based, depicts the rise of German Nazism in the early 1930s.

The play features Tom O'Handley, a Washington College Development Office employee, as Christopher, and Gina Braden, an alumnae, as Sally. John MacDanolds, also a Washington College graduate, directs the play.

If you cannot attend the evening shows, do not worry. The company will perform a sunday matinee in Norman James Theatre at 3:00 p.m.

For additional information, call 778-1100.

William Hardie to lecture on eminent painter

This wednesday, Scottish art critic and dealer William Hardie will present a lecture in the Sophie Kerr Room at 8:00 p.m. on English painter, David Hackney, an eminent Los Angeles artist who now has an exhibition in Glasgow.

Hardie is an acknowledged authority on Scottish painting. Born in 1941, he was educated at Ipswich School, Glasgow Academy and Glasgow University, where he studied modern languages.

He has worked as Visiting Lecturer in the History of Art in the French department of Dundee University as well as served as Research Assistant to the Fine Arts Department of Glasgow University, Keeper of Art and then Deputy Director of the Dundee Art Gallery and Museum.

He joined Christie's in Scotland and set up the Scottish Pictures Department, which played a major role in the transformation of the international market for Scottish art.

He also formed William Hardie Limited in Glasgow in 1984, a consultant organization, specializing in Scottish paintings. It opened the Washington Gallery in 1986 and the William Hardie Gallery in Glasgow's West Regent Street in 1990.

William Hardie has pioneered the renewed interest in such Scottish artists as Orchardson, the Glasgow School, George Dutch Davidson, the Scottish Colourists, Stanley Cursiter, William McCance and Donald Bain, while the younger contemporary Scottish artists have been selectively presented at his gallery.

Author of numerous articles and catalogues, and translator of the Larousse Dictionary of Modern Art, William Hardie lives with his wife and two teenage children in New Lanark.

His earlier book Scottish Painting 1837-1939 was widely regarded as a classic of modern art history on its publication in 1976.

"Koon," from pg. 3

lifestyle which is becoming increasingly atypical due to the economic realities brought about by Republican policies. George Bush vehemently opposes abortion, and has for twelve years. Yet most American families support abortion as an inherent natural right necessary to ensure that women have economic, political and personal freedom, for without reproductive freedom no other freedoms are possible for any woman. George Bush claims that he is "pro-family", yet he is utterly out of touch with mainstream America on the abortion issue. After twelve years of Republican appointments to the Supreme Court that body is neither supreme nor a court, but rather an activist group of political appointees dedicated to their President and their anti-choice agenda.

George Bush claims to be the candidate of change, yet the only change most Americans can see is that more people are jobless and more children are raised in poverty. Bush has created a great demand for change- you can go to any city in the country and a hundred people will ask you for change inside of half an hour. Bush and his party have lost touch with the American people primarily because they have become so indebted to the far right. The Republicans still dream of being the majority party, but their alienation of mainstream America has produced the opposite effect. Today the Republican party has become the party of the old, the few and the rich, which is why increasing numbers of Americans believe that G.O.P. stands for Gerontocratic Oligarchic Plutocrats.

"Wubbels," from page 1

worked with five WC students and said that while they experienced some problems that were an inevitable result of the lab being moved, the research went well, and the results were interesting.

Wubbels spent most of the summer talking to people and getting acquainted with the college in an effort to determine its strength and weaknesses. While he hesitated to speak about weaknesses, he preferred instead to focus on maintaining and expanding the college's strengths.

"Washington College has a peculiar strength in English and Creative Writing, and one ought to begin to try to strengthen the college by playing off that strength," he commented. "One way I'd like to do that is to urge this community to perceive writing as more far-reaching than just literary writing."

He stressed his belief that writing is essential to becoming a scientist or mathematician as well as an effective tool for finding one's own thoughts. Wubbels said that he would like to devise a course or set of courses for incoming freshmen that has writing as its focus. Ideally, the program would involve the entire faculty and would be tied to the academic advising of freshmen.

Faculty and student research outside the classroom is another activity that Wubbels feels is necessary to the structure of the college. "What we're teaching must be grounded in the world. Research is one way to connect what we're doing in the classroom with the real world," he stated.

Although he does not believe that faculty members must publish or perish, he noted that a mind alive always shows some kind of product. While mental fertility should make faculty want to publish, he admitted that publishing is not the only product of a creative mind. "What ought to be published are those pieces that stem from an authentic desire to publish something," he said.

Wubbels stated that the best intellectual interests always pertain to the students, but that those interests which are irrelevant in the classroom are the wrong kinds. "As a dean, my primary concern is to monitor the intellectual temperature of the college, and it is my responsibility to help the college as a whole, and the faculty in part, to achieve intense involvement intellectually."

"Crosswalk," from page 1

Washington College President Charles H. Trout was cautious —yet hopeful. "I don't really know exactly how the thing is going to work. ... I have high hopes that it's going to reduce dangers at that crossing."

Trout also expressed concerns about cooperation between motorists and pedestrians.

Jerry Roderick, college security director, also was cautious in predicting the stoplight's effect.

"At this point, it is hard to determine what effect the light will have on the travel patterns of the students, but it will definitely determine the right-of-way," he said.

According to Roderick, there have been two accident-related injuries at the crosswalk in the last two years. "We've averaged about one a year."

He is hopeful the injuries will stop with the red light.

"The biggest question here is, are we going to have full cooperation between the students and the motorists. ... It's very difficult for any of us to be at a two-lane highway and have to stop when there's no traffic," Roderick said.

"But it's a traffic control device, placed there to ensure compliance with the right-of-way, and there'll be no question who had the right-of-way, should enforcement be necessary."

What do you think? Next week in Campus Voices: Students' reaction to the Crosswalk Stoplight and space heating. To hold fuel for the campus boilers, two state of the art oil storage tanks were placed in the ground beside the boiler building, replacing the outdated tanks that were removed. The new tanks have a double-hull construction with an alarm that is activated when the inner hull is breached.

"Renovations," from pg. 9

"That way, we can detect when oil is leaking into the void between the two hulls and do something about it before it seeps into the soil," Raudenbush said.

The old oil fueled water heaters were left in the buildings and smaller tanks, much like the ones in oil-heated homes, were installed. "If there's a problem in the boiler system, the affected buildings will be able to switch to the oil heaters as a backup."

Drop-Off Laundry
We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service
Laundromat Dry Cleaning
Kent Laundry
607 High Street
778-3551

FAMILY BOOKNOOK
15% Off Hardcover Books
10% Off New Paperback Books
50% Off Pre-read Paperback Books
ALL DAY EVERYDAY
on regularly stocked titles
Welcome Washington College Students
Visit Chestertown's Newest Bookshop
DISCOVER OUR PRE-READ PAPERBACKS
CREDIT FOR YOUR PRE-READ PAPERBACKS
Free Gift Wrapping • Gift Certificates • Books Mailed Anywhere
Free Special Ordering • BROWSERS WELCOME
VISA • MASTER CARD • CHECKS
Washington Square Shopping Center
Rt. 213 Chestertown • 410-778-3705
Open Mon., Tues, Wed, Fri 10 - 6,
Thursday 10 - 8, Sat 10 - 5
Art & Wendy Littman Proprietors
Parents of Arthur - WC '85

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
UNLAWFUL ENTRY
Friday & Saturday 7 & 9 • Monday-Thursday 7:30
The Body Shoppe
Toning & Tanning
Kent Plaza, Chestertown
778-0922

(410) 778-0536
Appointments preferred
The Nail Shoppe
Specializing in Artificial & Natural
Nail Care, Skin Care & Nutritional Products
Owner, Cheryl Hurt
Owner, Karen Dionisio
347 High Street
Chestertown, MD

"Shields," from pg. 3

o alcohol induced revelry.[7] Please, let's not have any regrets.[8]

Speaking of regrets, here is a growing misconception that college aged students are engaging in sexual activities. I'd like to put that ugly rumor to rest right now.[9] I mean, come on, like really. Seriously, how many students would do that, I mean besides the married ones? The Washington College Health Services even went so far as to provide free condom packets: "Three For Free", they call it, how charming.[10] Sounds like another total waste of our tuition money, but I suppose if it prevents one unwanted pregnancy it would be worth it.[11] I still refuse to believe this kind of behavior would occur at the tenth oldest college in the United States.

I think you all can see where this article is going: Sex, Drugs (alcohol is a drug - bad), and, you guessed it Rock and Roll! Washington College has in the past provided one rockin' environment![12] With the CD jukebox in the snack bar[13] and the raging big name concerts in the Coffeehouse your ears will be bleeding![14] But don't bang your head too hard, you might bruise your brain! You will need your brain.[15]

Most of your quality time at WC will be spent in class.[16] I haven't taken every single class offered here so I don't feel I can recommend any one professor in particular, or any one class for that matter, but I can tell you that whatever course of study you pursue I'm sure you'll be in good hands.[17] Just remember that your professors are your friends at WC.[18]

And by the way, my name is Matt but people call me Elvis and I want to be your friend too.[19] If you ever see me zipping across campus on my mountain bike just wave.[20] We're all one big happy family at good old Washington College.[21]

[1] He was a weenie, considered the Righteous Brothers a hard rock band, and no he doesn't go here ... I'm a transfer student.
[2] Bullshit.
[3] Propaganda.
[4] Here's the shit: The benefits of a smaller school. I went to the University of Colorado right out of high school. Where ever I went or what ever I did at the "big school" I was always 227-46-2392. Not a name but a number! Big deal, you're thinking. You ever read Revelations? This is serious! The government has developed these things called GPS receivers. (GPS stands for Global Positioning System.) What these tricky little devices do is feed information to a constellation of 21 in-service satellites to give the exact whereabouts of any given person alive anywhere on the planet. GPS receivers are small too! The Government is having dentists put them inside caps and fillings. If you've never had a cavity in your life and then all of the sudden you need a tooth filled you'll know what I'm talking about. You're being watched, but you're still a name at Washington College.

[5] I'm serious about this. Nothing worse than watching some 18 year old "can't grow a mustache" simp puking through his nose along the Cater Walk in the middle of the night. Actually, the High-octane-testosterone-I'm-one-tough-mother-fucker-I-played-high-school-football-Did-you-say-something,-asshole? attitude many young drinkers acquire after a couple cans of Suds 'N' Soda special is just as bad as a kid coughing up acidic stomach juices.

[6] I am not implying anything sordid here, no hyper-sexual activity, no alternative lifestyles (Unless that's what you're into. Which I'm not. Not that I have anything against such activities, I'm just not suggesting that you dabble in such activities with this passage.) not drug use or abuse (A definite no-no. The Government is putting experimental additives in the drug supply but that's another topic.) I am not implying anything other than maybe there is life at college beyond the drinking aspect.
[7] Yeah, right.
[8] Do I have any regrets? I'm still Harold T. Stock) had to reattach the poor soul's suspensory ligament after damage caused by a condom. Ouch!
[11] Pregnancy? Hell, I'm more worried about the AIDS.
[12] Every year they promise U2 and we end up with some weak teen-aged cover band that doesn't even know "Freebird".
[13] If you are ever in there and hear "Warm It Up Kris" ten times in succession you'll know who did it. I love those guys, they're totally crossed out.
[14] This I'm guessing at. I've only hung out in the Coffeehouse just long enough to get an ear ache.
[15] Some of you may use it wisely. Some may use it to remember to pass out face down. Either way you'll need it.
[16] Seriously! And I'm not kissing administrative ass here . . . I'm getting paid.
[17] Beware moody or emotionally unstable professors and before you declare your major, if a Sociology professor asks you what major you're considering, you'd better say Sociology. The same holds for any professor (I'm not attacking the Sociology department here.). Believe me, this will save your ass a whole letter grade.
[18] Don't trust them. They have access to your files. We all know who they really work for.
[19] Call me Master, and no, I don't really want to be your friend.
[20] Piss off. You suck. Don't bug me.
[21] If you consider the separatist tendencies of the frats, sororities and cliques to be a family and happy with one another I'm not lying.

The Reel Scoop
High Street
Gelato Fresco
Better Than Sex Ice Cream
Chicken Wings • Hot Dogs
•High Street Fries•
Columbo Non-Fat Yogurt
PB&J only $.50
Newspapers - Daily and Sunday
Gelato Dependents Support Group • This Week's Speaker: Natty Bumppo

McKim Receives Scholarship

Washington College senior Andrew McKim has been selected as a 1992 Baltimore Sun/Independent College Fund of Maryland (ICFM) scholar. The Baltimore Sun and the Independent College Fund of Maryland created the scholarship program to draw attention to the significant contibution students attending Maryland's independent colleges make through personal service to their communities.

The award carries a $2,000 scholarship and is one of nine presented to students attending private colleges throughout the state.

McKim, an international studies major, was selected for his academic record and demonstration of his commitment to community service. As vice chair of "Hands Out," a student volunteer organization, he was instrumental in engaging the school's environmental club with the community group, Kent Conservation, Inc., and he established a local chapter of Save Our Streams. He also worked with disabled children at Camp Fairlee.

Fall Classic
When the weather turns chilly, it's still Birkenstock time. Add a pair of your favorite socks and let the Original Contoured Footbed support and cradle your feet. Birkenstock? The shape of comfort.™
Arizona in brown cotton canvas
Birkenstock
Paul's Shoe Store
227 High Street
Chestertown, Maryland
778-2860

Washington Soccer Looks To Rebuild: Is This the Year?

By Tim Reardon
Co-Sports Editor

After a somewhat disappointing 1991 season, the Shoremen soccer team looks to rebound and have a successful fall season. This is Coach Todd Helbling's second year as head coach and after going 1-13-1 last year he hopes for a complete turnaround. With barely enough players to field one full team last season, Coach Helbling began a huge recruiting campaign at the end of the Shoremen's 1991 campaign.

Photo by Gary Brown

Chris "The Dutch Boy" Kleberg, better known as Flea, takes on a defender with skillful precision. As the '92 co-captain with Charlie "Love" Linehan, they hope for a 180 degree turn around for this year's soccer campaign.

Even though the team's season was fairly unsuccessful, it may have actually helped in the recruiting procedures as many young and upcoming players will be given a chance to start and play alongside other talented returning players to help this rebuilding process. When practice started on Monday of this week 45 players and six goalies showed up to try out. Now Coach Helbling is faced with making decisions for a first team which he did not have to do last year and which the W.C. soccer program has not had to do in quite a few years. With this many players, Helbling should be able to field a very strong squad and has a good chance of creating a highly powered offense, something the team has traditionally lacked.

Their first scrimmage is on Sunday followed by the season opener at Lebanon Valley on Saturday, September 5th. Their first home game is against Lancaster Bible on Thursday, September 10th at 4:00 PM. The team hopes that everyone will come out and watch this revitalized program swing into action.

Exciting Outlook for Field Hockey in '92

By Renee Guckert
Staff Writer

Despite intense heat and humidity, the 1992 field hockey team met for the first time on Monday to sweat it out and begin preseason practice. A squad of twenty-two emerged and has already proven to be a group with enormous potential. Communication and hard work have been extremely evident in the four to six hours the team has practiced each day.

Senior Kris Phalen remarked that, "the skills of each of the players are more advanced than I've seen in past seasons. Now, all we need to do is put them together with the elements that make a unified team and I think we could go all the way."

Photo by Gary Brown

Coach Diane Guinan feels that the eleven returning players "who had a tremendous impact on last years success" will be an essential element to the 1992 season and crucial to every aspect of their game. "It's certainly much too early to make any predictions about the outcome of our season," says Guinan, "but the new players seem to be connecting well with the experienced ones, even after just a few days."

The Shorewomen take on Salisbury State in a scrimmage at home on Thursday, September 3 and their season opens Saturday the fifth at Dickinson College. Their first home game is Wednesday the ninth versus Wesley. So get out there and support this year's field hockey machine as they bring quite a bit of excitement to the Kib Jr.

Another Time II
Fine Furniture, Collectibles & Antiques
•housewares, lamps & decor•
10 percent discount with College ID
819 High Street Extended
Chestertown
778-6525

Benita Hyland, Owner
The Classy Closet
"We're Here for You"
Consignment Shop
10 % Discount With College ID
204 High Street Downtown Chestertown

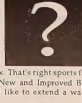
778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
Janey Thompson
(301) 778-0088

Lucinda & Company
Vintage Clothing and Jewelry
Open 10-6 Monday-Saturday
201 High Street Chestertown

Sports Information Director Goes to "The Show"

Chris Vaughn
Sports Editor



Remember those indible photo shots we had istered throughout the orts section last year? nd remember the sweet dition of the box scores the back page? Well, ose were all made posble with the helping hand Gary Brown, W.C.'s orts Information Director ndstatistician extraordinaire.

You may know him as e guy with that little ofe at the entrance of the Dome. You know, the always at the computer typing athletic brochures and paraphernalia. Well, the office may have been small but the role Gary Brown played, the sports information he disseminated, and the impact he had was quite the contrary. It is because of the fine work which he routinely produced that he has recently received a new position as a publications editor for the NCAA News in the Midwestern state of Kansas.

Geoff Miller, the Athletics Director, however, stated not to worry, that the interviewing process has begun and that they hope to find a worthy replacement in the near future. John Conkling, an intern from Washington & Lee, has filled in well for Mr. Brown this past summer.

Gary will be greatly missed as he was of terrific help for the Athletics Department and especially for the "BLEACHER CREATURES" (That would be SPIDERMAN & THE VAUGHNSTER, the guys responsible for this sports section last semester). We wish him all the best from The Elm sports guys and will miss the action photos he willingly supplied us with week after week. Good Luck Gary!

NEWT'S Player of the Week

And we're back. That's right sports fans, guess who. WRONG! IN YER FACE. THE New and Improved BLEACHER CREATURES have returned and we'd like to extend a warm welcome to all the early arriving athletes!

Typically, this is the most important section in the entire ELM!- even more so than the obituaries. Traditionally, the students of W.C. immediately turn to it, seeking the new stud or studette of the week, which by the way is chosen by yours truly, The Vaughnster, and my new partner in crime, Tim "The Bird Man" Reardon (welcome aboard), after a long, laborious and rather selective process.

So if it's fame, fortune, and glory that you seek, we advise you learn the game of caps; a pastime here at W.C. But in the mean time, this is where you're gonna get it- the Ultimate Sports Achievement-NEWT's P.O.W.! It makes The Heisman look like some five & dime, two bit, cheap imitation!

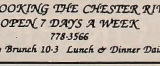
Washington College Initiates Women's Basketball Program: Lanee Is Hired As Coach

Taking the first step to ablishing women's basball as an intercollegiate rsity sport here, Washgton College has hired a oung woman from the rdwest to serve as the omen's basketball coach.

Lanee Cole, formerly an sistant coach at Central issouri State University, ins the College's athletic aff this month, Geoff iller, Director of Athlets at the Chestertown hool, announced. She will ach the women's basketall team in club status ring this academic year, anticipation of varsity atus within the Centennial nference next year. In 92-1993, Washington llege changes its sports iliation from the Middle lantic Conference to the ewly formed Centennial nference.

Cole also will take over he leadership of the omen's softball program.

The Minnesota native gan her coaching career Lakeland High School in issouri, where she was e head coach of girls' basball and volleyball. Prior her two-year position at entral Missouri, she dieted the Reed Spring High hool girls' basketball and lleyball teams and ached track on the junior h school level. In college, le played basketball for two years at Iowa Lakes Community College, where the nationally-ranked team compiled a 46-7 record and won two conference championships during her time there.



She earned her bachelor's degree in physical education from Tarkio College in 1987. At this Missouri school, she excelled in basketball and softball and earned postseason honors. During her junior and senior years there she was selected Sportswoman of the Year, and in her senior year was named Woman of the Year.

Cole received her master's degree in physical education from Central Missouri last year.

"We are genuinely excited about Lanee Cole coming on board as the newest member of our team," says Miller. "Her background demonstrates a commitment to the student-athlete concept we promote here at Washington College. We are particularly impressed with her ability to coach, recruit and communicate. We believe these skills will serve her well as she gets our women's basketball program off the ground and provides new direction for our softball program. We are confident that she will be an excellent role model for our female student athletes."

Cole is looking forward to the challenges ahead. "I have high expectations and goals set for myself, and I am anxious to get to know the students and the staff at Washington College," she says. "I'm excited to begin working towards the improvement of both the women's basketball and softball programs here."

Next Week:
Horoscope

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

THE FINISHING TOUCH

Welcome Back WC!

Fine Framing • Select Gifts
Artists' Materials

311 High Street
778-5292

WELCOME BACK WC!

THE WASHINGTON COLLEGE ELM STAFF WISHES EVERYONE A WONDERFUL YEAR

THIS PAPER IS DEDICATED TO THE FOLLOWING PEOPLE:

STU NEIMAN

PAT ATTENASIO

CLINT BAER

GARY BROWN

CHRIS GRIEP

"W"

The Paper that Eats Like a Meal

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Fri.: Partly Sunny, H mid-80s NW winds 10-15 mph
Labor Day Weekend
Partly cloudy, chance ofiate T-storms /showers.
H mid-70s - low 50s, L mid-60s

Volume 63, Number Two • September 4, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Saturday's Blaze Destroys One Building, Guts Another

Photo by Andrew Stone

Fire fighters from one of 34 companies battle Saturday's blaze

Scott Koon & J. Tarin Towers

Last Saturday, a five-alarm fire engulfed the McCrory's discount store and the former Newsstand building and caused smoke damage to the many Downtown Chestertown businesses and homes.

Deputy Chief State Fire Marshall Thomas stated that the fire started due to a fault in the electrical wiring between the apartment and the storage area on the second floor of McCrory's.

Lucille Anderson and her daughter, Barbara, lost their home, which was above the store. They did, however, retrieve their three cats due to the efforts of a local fireman.

The first alarm went out at 2:06 p.m., and the fire had been burning for approximately forty-five minutes, said Thomas.

Thomas added that damages have been estimated at $1.2 million. McCrory's has been leveled and the former Newsstand gutted.

President Charles H. Trout expressed concern at the loss of the chain. "It brought a lot of people into the Downtown area besides rich tourist-types," he said. Trout said that the chain has recently declared bankruptcy and closed half its stores. "I'm just afraid they'll take the insurance money and run, and that the place won't be rebuilt," he said.

The lot uptown of McCrory's is occupied by Pride & Joy, a children's clothing store. According to the Kent County News, damages will not be known until Tuck Davidson completes removal of debris. Davidson began clearing the McCrory's lot on Sunday.

Bob Ramsey, owner of the Finishing Touch, told the ELM that the art supply store and gallery are in good shape and have been open for business. All artwork that was in the shop for framing was removed before the building was evacuated. There was some smoke damage, and the shop will have to close for a few days to recover.

Upstairs from the Finishing Touch is a restoration studio run by Ken Milton. Since a hole had to be cut in the roof to release heat, there was a lot of smoke damage, but the works in the studio were kept in a fire-retardant room, said Ramsey. The works will have to be re-cleaned.

During the fire, curious residents and visitors would try to make it past the cordon set up by fire fighters and police, only to be firmly ordered back. South Front Street, High Street and Spring Street were blocked off to allow firefighters to work and to run the hoses to the Chester River.

Cannon Street was blocked off, and the train tracks which run parallel to it saw unusually heavy foot traffic as stranded Chestertonians abandoned their cars and walked home.

An engine from Dover was parked next to Hynson-Ringgold, and another was parked by the water. Kevin Fountain of the Dover Fire Department told the ELM that they were participating in a parade in Smyrna when they responded to the fifth alarm.

He also said that they had an important role to play, as their department had five inch hoses capable of moving more water at lower pressure than the other equipment available at the scene.

Over 18 million gallons of water were drained from the town reservoir, according to the Kent News, which drained it from the normal level of 11.5 feet to an eight-foot low. After Dover arrived, water was pumped from the river at a faster rate. Although smoke damage, temporary loss of power and phone and closed streets affected the entire downtown area, that was nothing compared to the October, 1910 fire which destroyed 20

See "Fire," pg. 9

Local Democratic Campaign Headquarters Open on Cross St.

Justin M. Cann
Staff Writer

On Tuesday the 1st, the new Clinton, Gore, McMillen, and Mikulski campaign headquarters for the area opened on Cross Street.

Tom McMillen, the Democratic representative from the Fourth District, cut the ribbon in the early evening. McMillen is now running in the First District against the incumbent representative, Wayne T. Gilchrest, because of Maryland's recent redistricting. At 7:30 that night, the two representatives debated at the Kent County High School in Worton.

When asked how the redistricting had effected him politically, McMillen answered, "I've made a lot of new friends."

The Women's Democratic Club of Kent County has contributed much time and effort to the campaigns of Mikulski, McMillen, Clinton and Gore. They are planning an "Old Fashioned Rally & Social" on Tuesday, September 8th in the Hynson Lounge at 7:30 p.m. The rally is free and open to the public. There will be a cash bar, and complementary hors d'oeuvres will be served.

The special guests will include Clayton Mitchell, the Speaker of the House of Delegates; Winfield Kelly, Maryland's Secretary of State; Louis Goldstein, WC class of 1935, Comptroller of the Treasury and Chairman for WC's Board of Visitors and Governors; Ron Guns of the House of Delegates, and other state and local officials.

Tipper Gore, the wife of Vice-Presidential candidate, Al Gore, has been invited to attend.

Charmayne Dierker of the Executive Board of the Women's Democratic Club of Kent County said, "We're really pushing hard to get as many new voters registered as possible." The headquarters needs volunteers, and anyone who wants to help should go to headquarters or contact Jan Grahame at 648-5476.

INSIDE:

Telephones to be Installed in Dorm Rooms, pg. 9

New Cuts in Student Counseling Services, pg.5

Horoscope By Krystal Brite, pg. 7

Wolff on Buffy, pg. 9

Editorial

I worked at the Kent County News this summer, as a (barely) paid intern. I swept not a single floor and made not a single cup of coffee for the boss.

However, I wasn't exactly covering murder trials or drug busts, either (both of which occured in plural here this summer). No, the folks with degrees, training, and experience did that. Go figure.

My first article for the Schnooze, as those who know so lovingly call it, was to interview an opera singer who vacations in Georgetown, at the north end of Kent County. Big stuff? No.

Other assignments would include interviews with a bagpiper, a world traveler, and a lady who makes dolls at home. Nice people? Yes, every one. Exciting? Not really.

I covered various and sundry meetings and celebrations, took lots of pictures of kids doing various things for the community, covered the ill-fated Perot campaign, and proofread so many stories every week I thought my eyes would bleed. Really.

My big story would occur one night when I was hanging out at Moonpile's house (he worked for the Computing Center this summer). One Friday I worked until five or so, and walked across the street to Moonpile's house on the corner of Cannon & Queen Streets. Scott, Joey and Kristin lived there, too. Everything was normal, we were listening to Check Your Head, as I recall, and the weather was the usual: hot, humid, and still.

Then it started to rain.

No big deal, in fact it was a relief from the mid-summer drought that was affecting everyone from crabbers to soybean farmers, all folks in weather-dependent trades.

Then it started to thunder.

Great! I love thunderstorms! But this was somehow different — with the earliest thunderclap in earshot came the earliest fire siren in earshot. Hmmm.

So I said, hey, I'll just hit the road before it starts to rain so hard I can't see my way home (10 miles to Church Hill, where I lived for the summer). Famous last words.

I got out the door, across the street and barely into the parking lot. A wise man once said, "Once you're wet, you're wet." So I could run to my car and wait until the rain stopped, possibly losing my contacts along the way, or run back to Moonie's house, possibly losing my contacts along the way.

I opted for the pile. Warm, dry, and larger than my car. I turned around in the middle of Queen Street in time to see lightning strike — twice — the utility pole just on the other side of the crossroads. I might add I was a maximum of 25 feet away.

That, I thought then, was the most impressive, fearsome thing I had ever seen. It was a total act of God, one could say, for simultaneously, a large and rotten pecan tree behind the house fell into the road, crushing a car (still available to tourists as a monument to the storm) and all but covering Moonie's van.

"Shit," I said, when I got back inside, "My car windows are still down."

"Shit?" said Moonpile. "My cars buried under a tree and live wires are dancing all over it!"

That's when I grabbed my camera, not quite waterlogged, and snapped actual photos of actual destruction.

That was my big news.

Until Saturday.

There is only one thing that has put more fear and awe into my heart than witnessing natural destruction from less than 30 feet away. That would have to be witnessing manual destruction from the same distance.

However indirectly, that fire was caused by men. Faulty wiring, no matter how accidental, is not an act of God or a fluke of nature. It is a consequence to an action set forth by human hands.

And these actions, whether in the form of buildings, books, or babies, are so easily undone it is incredible, in the original sense of the word. We cannot comprehend, as humans, that what we do is so ephemeral that our life's work could be blown away by a bad wire.

I refuse to acknowledge any rumors that the fire was intentional.

But I refuse to deny that in some small part of me, watching the fire still blazing at 11:45 Saturday night, that I wasn't terrified, scared for my life, and for everyone's.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddish
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters is the Wednesday night at 8 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8567.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

To the Editor:

This school year, students returned to find a new traffic control device installed at the crosswalk. The new traffic light seems to have created some confusion amongst a few pedestrians and motorists. Some pedestrians are ignoring the signal to wait until the light is red before crossing; Some motorists are yielding the right-of-way to pedestrians when the light is green. These actions have, from time to time, created very uncertain outcomes. Fortunately, for all involved, good luck has been on their side.

The proper use of the light is quite simple. Pedestrians approaching the crosswalk on either side must stop and push the button to activate the light. Once the pedestrian signal alerts you that it is okay to cross, you then proceed across the road. Of course, it should be noted that it is in your best interest to look both ways before entering the roadway. Most drivers in their driving career have been known to run an occasional red light.

Motorists, on the other hand, have the very simple task of obeying a traffic light. Red means stop and green means proceed. Yellow, quite obviously, means slow to stop. In most areas, yellow is interpreted as full throttle until the intersection is cleared. Obey the signals, and you will do just fine.

Remember, this light was installed for your safety. Cooperation is the key to its success. Failure to comply with the signal could result in your injury, or perhaps, even an encounter with the legal system. We hope you will find this latest change in the crosswalk a real improvement.

Jerry Roderick
Director of Security

Are you a journalist?

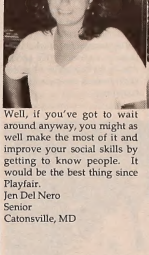
All writers, photographers, etc. are invited to a Staff Meeting of the ELM Tuesday, September 8 at 8 p.m. No experience needed. We'll teach if you'll learn. Anyone applying for the ELM work-study job is expected to attend.

Scott Koon: Resident Socialist

Scott Ross Koon's column, covering local, national, and global issues, will appear every week in the ELM.

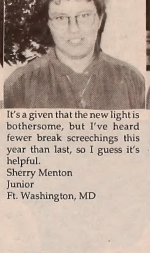
For over a week, American, British and French planes have been flying into southern Iraq to prevent Iraqi planes from bombing Shiite revolutionaries. The Saudi Air Force has also been involved in the mission, which has been dubbed "Operation Desert Watch" by whatever Pentagon public relations officer whose job it is to devise glamorous names for military adventures. During Operation Desert Storm American psychological warriors urged Iraqi Shiites to rebel against Baghdad. They did so, and this diversion proved to be yet another asset in the overall plan to ensure that the Iraqi military remained off-balance and confused. After the war America and the rest of the coalition left the Iraqi Shiites at the mercy of Saddam's army and air force. It is ironic that no moves were made to protect the Shiites months ago when the coalition opted to protect Iraqi Kurds. Now, after the deaths of innumerable civilians, Washington has finally decided to slow the slaughter.

But why did it take so long? Evidently Washington desires to ensure that the conflict in southern Iraq continues without absolute victory for either side, at least until someone in the Iraqi military stages a successful coup against Saddam Hussein. Presumably the next leader in Baghdad will be allowed to slay whomever he wants, whenever he wants, just so long as he is friendly to the U.S. and remains inimical to Iran. I make this assumption based on the fact that the U.S. continues to allow Turkey to attack its Kurdish rebels in their Iraqi camps with impunity. It is an odd contradiction that U.S. policy allows Turkey to bomb the same civilians the U.S. does not allow Iraq to bomb. It seems that it is important to the administration who is doing the killing, not who is actually dying.



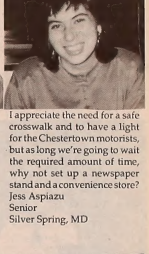
This week the New York Times reported that Turkey is receiving intelligence on the location of the Kurdish Workers Party installations from intelligence units which make excursions into Iraqi territory. When Turkey sends spies into Iraq to get information on guerilla encampments, Washington does not protest. When Turkish planes "accidentally" bomb civilians, Washington does not protest. But when Iraq kills civilians, it is somehow less acceptable. It seems that there is a new world order, but its chief component with respect to American policy is that there is no coherent American policy in the Middle East.

This is nothing new, of course, but it is disheartening, especially with the new hope of peace in the Middle East brought about by the election of the new Labour government in Israel. Before Desert Storm, Bush kept hinting at how pleased he would be if someone would overthrow Saddam Hussein. During the war the Administration led the Kurds and the Shiites to believe that they would benefit from American support after the war if they revolted during the war. Now, after America has abandoned them, Washington is allowing the Iraqi military to slaughter them. Perhaps the Iraqi military will be more successful than the Kurds and Shiites in overthrowing Saddam. Then Washington will be able to support the new regime.

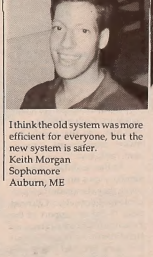


See "Koon," pg. 9

CAMPUS VOICES

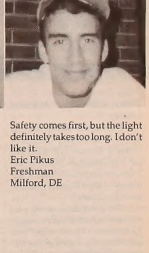


What do you think of the new lights at the crosswalk?



Well, if you've got to wait around anyway, you might as well make the most of it and improve your social skills by getting to know people. It would be the best thing since Playfair.
Jen Del Nero
Senior
Catonsville, MD

It's a given that the new light is bothersome, but I've heard fewer break screechings this year than last, so I guess it's helpful.
Sherry Menton
Junior
Ft. Washington, MD



I appreciate the need for a safe crosswalk and to have a light for the Chestertown motorists, but as long we're going to wait the required amount of time, why not set up a newspaper stand and a convenience store?
Jess Aspiazu
Senior
Silver Spring, MD

I think the old system was more efficient for everyone, but the new system is safer.
Keith Morgan
Sophomore
Auburn, ME

I feel substantially safer, but it's so slow.
Ciaran O'Keeffe
Junior
England

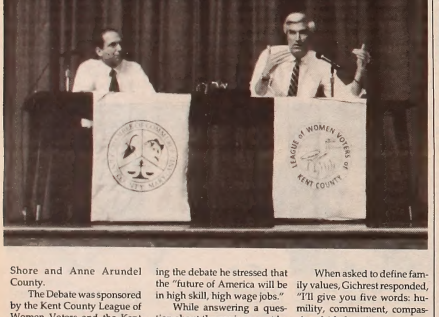
Safety comes first, but the light definitely takes too long. I don't like it.
Eric Pikus
Freshman
Milford, DE

Open Forum: A Question of Diversity

Zylia N.L. Knowlin is the Vice-President of the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange, a student organization named for the first black woman to graduate from Washington College. Their goals include raising issues of culture and promoting understanding between students of all races. Here, Knowlin responds to the "hype" about the diversity of the class of 1996.

Zylia Knowlin

Unfortunately, the campus sees this burst of a minority population as a great benefit, when in truth, it is something that has been long awaited to be justified. The administration adds twenty-eight African Americans, a handful of Asians, and more students from places other than Maryland, to the acceptance list, and that makes the campus diverse. Considering that the freshmen class, including transfers, totals over 300, percentage wise we are not that much better off than the years that have passed.



Please, do not confuse my criticism as a 'slap in the face' to the administration, "For a nation that is afraid to let its people judge the truth and falsehood in an open market is a nation that is afraid of its people" (John F. Kennedy). However, I feel that as educated individuals, we should see more than an increase in the numbers of people of color on the Washington College campus. Rather, we should further realize the desperate need for deeper implications of true campus diversity.

Consider, for example, the absence of African American sororities and fraternities, the neglect of cultural dishes in the dining hall, the far-from-diverse curriculum, and most importantly, the need for cultural diversity within the faculty and the staff of the college. I think it is a shame that, at the very least, the professor for the African American Experience class is not black. If the administration could not get a black professor, who in my opinion would be more culturally qualified to teach the items discussed in that particular class, where could they possibly get any other professors for the classes, besides direct minority-based courses, which there are none of anyway. Hopefully, by the examples that I have given, we all realize that it is just not enough to be content with what we see, because if we just take a closer look, we will see there is still so much to do. . .

Incumbents Debate at KCHS

Justin Cann
Staff Writer

Representatives Tom McMillen and Wayne T. Gilchrest, both running for re-election to the House of Representatives in Maryland's First District, debated at the Kent County High School, on Tuesday, September 1st. Due to recent redistricting, McMillen, from Anne Arundel County, is running against Gilchrest, from Kent County. The First District now consists of the Eastern Shore and Anne Arundel County.

The Debate was sponsored by the Kent County League of Women Voters and the Kent County Chamber of Commerce. Susanne Hayman, State's Attorney of Kent County, moderated the debate.

The candidates were presented in advance with the same questions. There were two questions from each of the following catagories: Economy, Environment, Education, Family, and Health Care. They were given two minutes each for every question. After both candidates had spoken on the two questions in each subject, they were allowed a one minute rebuttal. After the predetermined questions were answered, the candidates took written questions from the floor. At the end, they had three minutes to deliver their closing remarks.

Representative McMillen started off the debate answering questions about the economy. Several times during the debate he stressed that the "future of America will be in high skill, high wage jobs."

While answering a question about the environment he stated that "we have to get rid of every possible incinerator in the state of Maryland," and "we have to do everything we can to preserve open space." McMillen also said "good business can mean good environment."

On education, McMillen noted that "it does not cost a dime to raise standards." He voiced his support for the idea that "you have got to pass your schoolwork to be in extra-curricular activities."

Representative Gilchrest declared that "government should stay out of business," and suggested a, "$5,000 first-time homebuyer's tax credit." Gilchrest also called for a "scientific assessment of what is or is not a wetland." He added that "in the Bay region, a healthy environment means a healthy economy."

When asked to define family values, Gichrest responded, "I'll give you five words: humility, commitment, compassion, faith, love."

As the candidates stressed similar views on the environment, they also made their pro-choice positions clear. Gilchrest said, "I am in support of the Freedom of Choice Act because it codifies Roe v. Wade." About the same act, McMillen said, "I'm more than just a supporter, I am a co-sponsor."

Library Moves Toward Computerization

Amanda Burt
News Editor

Miller Library has initiated major changes in its computer research system in an effort to streamline the network for the Washington College community.

Since1991, both staff and student employees have been busy transforming the library system into a fully computerized one, a process which will not be completed for several more years.

Students, staff and faculty are now required to have barcoded identification cards in order to circulate books in and out of the library. Librarian William Tubbs said the new system will be more reliable because it is "all electronic" and faster for students because they will not have to sign library cards.

Tubbs also said that the computers automatically show the status of a book, indicating whether or not it is on loan.

If a book is on order and not available, the computer will note how many copies of the text are on order and when it is expected to arrive. Terminals will immediately record received orders so that a book can be checked out before it is even shelved.

The periodical system has been upgraded so that the dates of the latest received and future issues of periodicals appear on the screen when referenced. Tubbs said that it will be at least another year before records of past issues are logged in the computers.

"We have done a lot more since the end of last year, so while the system is more complicated, it is potentially more gratifying for the [Washington College] community," he said.

Tubbs stressed that the library staff is committed to helping students benefit from the system.

Students and any member of the faculty and staff will have the oppportunity to familiarize themselves with the new system during a series of workshops headed by Reference Librarian Ruth Shoge.

The workshops will run every Monday, Wednesday and Friday for five days beginning September ninth and ending on September 18th. There will be six sessions on those days that start every hour on the half hour. The three morning sessions will be from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., and the afternoon workshops start at 1:30 p.m. and conclude at 3:30 p.m.

"We want to teach everyone how to use the system ... either in the library or anyplace else in the network," Shoge said. She added that the system is available to any Macintosh computer that can enter the campus network, and it is online 24 hours a day.

Members of the Washington College community who are not part of the network should contact Tim Kirk at the Computing Center. The library currently has eight working terminals.

Shoge said there will more workshops focusing on general research and periodical articles sometime after the conclusion of next week's sessions.

Summer Dormitory Renovations

Chris Mihavetz
Staff Writer

The condition of the Caroline House and Queen Anne House dormitories has been a concern for years. Raudenbush said that, as with the Hodson renovations, any renovation of Caroline and Queen Anne will take place in phases.

However, unlike the renovations to Hodson Hall, the restraining factor is not funding but the constraints of time and manpower. The repairs can only be made when students are not occupying the dorms, and they are made by the Maintenance Department, which has limited personnel.

This summer, maintenance was able to repaint the halls, doors and door frames in both dorms and replace the ceilings and lighting fixtures in the shower rooms of Queen Anne. Eventually, all of the surfaces and fixtures will be upgraded to resemble the recently renovated Kent house.

More renovations took place on the other side of Washington Avenue, on the Quad. The less-than-water-tight rooves of Cecil, Dorchester and Talbot houses were repaired. Water leakage during heavy rains had become a serious problem in the dorms, and some water damage was beginning to show. This summer, the aged rooves were completely stripped, new roof drains were installed, and the leaks fixed.

The roof surfaces were then coated with waterproofing tar. After the rooves had been adequately repaired, Maintenance repaired the water damage suffered by the dorms.

Another Time II
Fine Furniture, Collectibles & Antiques
•housewares, lamps & decor•
10 percent discount with College ID
819 High Street Extended
Chestertown
778-6525

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
101 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Taylor Donates Books to Kerr Collection

More than 1,500 books and albums, including some from fiction writer Sophie Kerr's collection, have been donated to Washington College.

Mary Elizabeth Taylor of New York City made the donation from her collection as well as from those of her late husband and Kerr herself.

Taylor, 85, was a distinguished newspaper woman with the Associated Press in New York and the Courier-Journal in Louisville, KY.

She also wrote fiction with the encouragement of longtime friend Sophie Kerr, an Eastern Shore native who lived most of her life in New York City.

Co-executor of Kerr's estate, along with New York attorney Ferdinand J. Wolf, Taylor inherited Kerr's personal property and her literary rights.

Taylor's late husband, Davidson Taylor, was a broadcasting executive and the first dean of Columbia University's School of the Arts.

The college already owns a large collection from Sophie Kerr's library. The most recent gift consists of the last of her books and a collection of her personal memorabilia.

"There are leatherette-bound editions of the books she wrote, many books from her personal library and five of her plays," said William Tubbs, Librarian.

"Also of note is Sophie Kerr's scrapbook with notes in her hand and letters written to her."

Among the books donated from the Taylor library are a set written under the Federal Writers Project in the 1930s, a good collection of early editions of 20th century American authors and several museum catalogs on 20th century art.

Of particular historic value is a two-volume set on entomology, published in 1749, in which the illustrations are hand-colored, Tubbs said.

The Taylor gift also included more than 300 recordings, musical scores, antique children's books and part of Sophie Kerr's collection of cookbooks and cat books.

Taylor also provided the college with items on indefinite loan, including her husband's radio broadcast of the Allied landings on the western coast of France during World War II.

At the time, he was chief of radio for William S. Paley's psychological warfare division of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Allied command in Europe.

A week-long workshop on college admissions for new secondary school guidance counselors and college admissions officers was held recently at the Dana Hall School in Wellesley. Workshop coordinator Helen Burke Montague, right, of Dana Hall, welcomes Debbie Smethurst and Brooke Frank of Washington College, Chestertown, MD, to the conference. Smethurst and Frank have recently joined WC's Admissions Office.

Counseling Cuts

Tanya Allen
Staff Writer

This year the College Counseling Service is limiting the number of sessions per student. According to the new policy, students are eligible to receive up to 15 sessions per year.

If more sessions are needed, students will have to make other arrangements off-campus. In comparison to other colleges it is actually a good deal, as some colleges limit students to 15 sessions during their entire four years of college.

Washington College's new limitations are necessary because the Counseling Center consists of only 3 part-time therapists, who have a total of 25 hours a week available for the entire campus. The Center simply doesn't have enough time or therapists to see students who need on-going therapy.

The Center will refer people who have medical insurance to private practices. Students who have financial problems or do not want their parents to know they are in therapy will find services available on a sliding scale at such places as the Family Service in Maryland, the Kent County Mental Health Clinic, and an in-town group called Four Seasons.

According to Bonnie Fisher, the Counseling Center's policy is a flexible back-up policy, one which they hope they won't have to use. In any case, the Center will try to accommodate students as best they can, and will always try to see a student within a day or two after they make an appointment. Their first priority is to students in crisis situations. Appointments should be made through Health Services, and in an emergency, students should contact Security, who will call a therapist, no questions asked.

In a related matter, the SGA will be forming a task force to improve Health Services and the Counseling Center. Anyone interested in being a part of the task force should contact Tanya Allen or Jen Del Nero.

Chaffin Returns

Amanda Burt
News Editor

After a leave of two years, Jeff Chaffin, Assistant Librarian and Director of Readers' Services, has returned to Washington College to resume his position. He spent the last two years in Rome, Italy directing the Rome Center Library for Loyola University of Chicago.

Chaffin said that the university campus in Rome is used for those students who spend their junior year abroad. He was responsible for re-evaluating the library in an effort to improve the campus.

"The object was to cater to an education inside the classroom and outside the classroom — the outside classroom being Europe," he stated. "Fortunately, I was given the money and freedom to do whatever it took to get the students in there [the library]."

In an effort to achieve a healthy balance between studies and the cultural attractions throughout Europe, Chaffin and the 200 University students traveled to different locations around Europe by train on the weekends, collecting information about popular events. When Germany reunified, Chaffin went to Berlin to join in the celebration. He also visited Euro-Disney.

When his term expired at the library, Chaffin made a two-and-one-half month trip around the world as he made his way back to Chestertown. He visited Egypt, Kenya, India, Kathmandu, Hong Kong, Japan and Hawaii. To unwind from his traveling he spent two weeks in a Massachusetts Trappist monestary.

While Chaffin said that his return to Chestertown was anticlimactic, he is happy to be home and wants to share his experiences with the Washington College community.

"WC has always been home," he stated. "Even though we're in a small environment, we do have access to the world."

The Postmaster has announced a new postal address for Washington College. All mail should be addressed in the following manner.

Your Name
Washington College
300 Washington Avenue
Chestertown, MD 21620-1197

Andy's

337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm

FRI 4 SAND CREEK Acoustic Folk Blues Duo
SAT 5 THE ANGIE MILLER BAND We love Angie: Jazz/Rock with Dynamite Back up
THURS 10 DEAR JOHN Acoustic Folk
778-6779

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
226 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-6188

Week at a Glance

September 4 - 12

Friday 4, Sunday 6-Monday 7
Film Series: The Player
Norman James Theatre,
7:30 p.m.

Friday 4
Dance: Oldies from the Oldies
Sponsored by Alumni Association
Miller Library Terrace,
9:00 p.m. - Midnight

Saturday 5
Comedian/Singer,
David Andrews
Sponsored by Student Activities
Martha Washington Square,
8:00 p.m. - 11:00 p.m.

Monday 7
Labor Day
No Classes

Tuesday 8
Graduate classes begin

Tuesday 8-Friday 11
Sign-up for Rec Sports,
Casey Swim Center

Wednesday 9
Inter-fraternity Council Dinner
Hynson Lounge,
6:00 p.m.

Writers' Union Meeting
O'Neill Literary House,
7:00 p.m. †

Thursday 10
Caricatures by Ben
Martha Washington Square,
11:00 p.m.-12:00 p.m.
Rain location: CAC
$1.00

First College Community Chorus
Rehearsal
Norman James Theatre,
7:00 p.m.
For information call: (778) 7837 †

Hands-Out Meeting
Hands-Out Room,
Minta Martin Basement,
7:30 p.m.

Friday 11
Last day to drop /add classes

Trip to see Baltimore Orioles vs.
Milwaukee Brewers
Camden Yards, game time: 7:35 p.m.
Free transportation
Depart 5:00 p.m., CAC
Purchase tickets at Student Activities

Saturday 12
Kent & Queen Anne's Alumni Flea Market
Campus Avenue,
9:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m.
Rain Date: September 13
For information: 778-2800 x-7811 †

W. C. Miniature Golf Tournament
Campus Lawn,
1:00-5:00 p.m.
Rain location: BAJLFC †

Dance: Zeta Tau Alpha's
"First Party Back'
9:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m.

† see related article

Leonardo Da Vinci: The Inventions exhibit will be open to the public in the Tawes Lobby, Gibson Performing Arts Center until October 2.

A&E

Shop 'n' Golf on Campus

Don't miss perhaps one of the most exciting weekends at WC yet. Saturday, September 12 will feature two exciting events: the Kent County and Queen Anne's Alumni Chapter Flea Market and the Miniature Golf Tournament.

The Flea Market, which will be located on the campus lawn from 9:00 a.m. from 1:00 p.m., will have tables selling everything that a college student needs to decorate a dorm room as well as an off-campus apartment.

Rain date is September 13, 1992.

Be sure to get there early to get first pick among the wares.

As soon as the flea market ends, the campus lawn will transform into a miniature golf course.

Sponsored by the Student Activities Office, students will have the chance to show-off their golf abilities and even win trophies.

In case of rain, the course will be moved to the BAJLFC.

Be part of the action this weekend. Shop 'til you drop, then play some golf.

Student Profile: Lisa-Marie Castro

Photo by Andrew Stone

Lisa-Marie Castro, a twenty-year-old junior and native of Trinidad and Brooklyn, is majoring in biology with a minor in psychology.

Paying for college on her own, Lisa has worked at least thirty hours a week at two different jobs as well as taken a full load or more of classes, including two science labs, each semester. Despite long days in required science labs and at work, Lisa has maintained her determination to attend medical school to become a pediatrician.

Lisa graduated from Polytechnic High School with a concentration in science.

Her awards include the Frederick Douglass Scholarship, the William Clayton Scholarship and the Maryland State Scholarship.

Lisa has recently received an internship at St. Benedict's Hospital in conjunction with the Washington College psychology department.

She will work with severely mentally handicapped children.

Along with her desire to become a doctor since the age of five, Lisa enjoys dance and ballet.

She plans to show-off her ballet talent during Black History Month's Martin Luther King celebration.

Lisa seems well on her way to success, in the sciences and in the world.

Attention All Writers:

Writers' Union Meeting September 9

All new and returning students are encouraged to attend the first Writer's Union meeting, Wednesday at 7:00 p.m. in the Eugene O'Neill Literary House living room.

Professors Day and Wagner of the English Department will discuss general information and special events concerning the O'Neill Literary House.

All those who wish to begin their own publication should attend.

Guidelines concering funding for special student events and publications will be reviewed.

For those interested in the Literary House Press, Michael Kaylor will discuss his Fall Printing Workshop.

Former elected leaders of the Writer's Union Junta — the people who get things done — will be present to answer questions.

Elections for this year's Junta will be held.

If you would like to lead or simply become a member, don't miss the year's first Writer's Union meeting.

Be sure to bring plenty of ideas and suggestons for this year's events which will include an open reading September 18.

Review: O'Rourke's "Whores"

Rachael Fink
Staff Writer

Parliament of Whores: A Lone Humorist Attempts to Explain the Entire US Government by P. J. O'Rourke
published by The Atlantic Monthly Press

Known chiefly as a columnist for Rolling Stone magazine, journalist P. J. O'Rourke brought us his unique sense of political humor literature several years ago with Modern Manners, then Holidays in Hell and Republican Party Reptile.

Now fans of his wit, satire and humor have another book to exalt. Parliament of Whores, published in the middle of 1991, is full of O'Rourke's typical style of political censure and promises which pokes fun at everyone in D.C. from the two ruling parties to special interest groups, and a few who just wish they were.

A conservative Republican (as if there was any other kind), O'Rourke spares no one involved in the game of governing, including himself and fellow journalists.

O'Rourke begins by explaining "Why God Is a Republican and Santa Claus Is a Democrat," on the last page of the preface.

"God is a ... middle-aged male, patriarchal rather than paternal ... It is very hard to get into God's heavenly country club ... Santa Claus is another matter.

He's cute ... nonthreatening ... And he loves animals."

This, he says, is the only thing that he is quite certain about in connection to the government.

Just a quick glimpse at the section and chapter titles is enough to cause a few snickers.

For example, he titles the section on Congress, the President and the Supreme Court "The Three Branches of Government: Money, Television and Bullshit."

The Chapter on the Supreme Court is titled "Doing the Most Important Kind of Nothing."

The Chapter on the Federal Budget, "Would You Kill Your Mother to Pave I-95?" and the Savings-and-Loan Crisis, "Setting the Chickens to Watch the Henhouse."

O'Rourke even proposes his own budget plan to solve the deficit problem.

He cuts out the whole energy budget (leaving only the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, because it upsets tree huggers)" and recreational resources (people who can afford Winnebagos can afford national park entrance fees)."

He even cuts some of the National Defense budget. "I had friends at Kent State, so screw the National Guard."

Parliament of Whores is sometimes offensive, sometimes unrealistic and sometimes right on the money.

However, its a funny and easy read.

Even for the politically illiterate, P. J. O'Rourke brings the U. S. government down to its laughable, lowly position.

Jamison's Arsenal

George Jamison
Staff Writer

I sprinted to buy Morrissey's Your Arsenal CD.

I loved it.

However, those of you who know me know that Morrissey is my favorite artist of all time.

I've loved his music when he was the lead singer/songwriter for The Smiths.

I stood by him during his messy break-up with them. I praised the unpopular beginning of his solo career.

And why not?

His music contains everything for which a young, melancoly fed-up-with-life-like individual is looking.

He sings about depression, loneliness, lack of love, problems with love, hate of love, disgust of "popular" music, jealousy, expectations, shotdown dreams, drugs, marriage, the press, suicide and the royal family.

That is why Your Arsenal is the epitome of Morrissey's work. In fact, it is one of his better releases.

It took me three listening to full grasp the incredible power that he displays.

When I did it was well worth the wait.

Having hear the first release, "We Hate it When Our Friends Become Successful," on the radio, it was a wonderful addition to a great summer.

Yet knowing that I missed out on the rest of the disk is a disappointment.

There is a song here for everyone, even those of you who do not like Morrissey. It would just take time for you to reflect and find it.

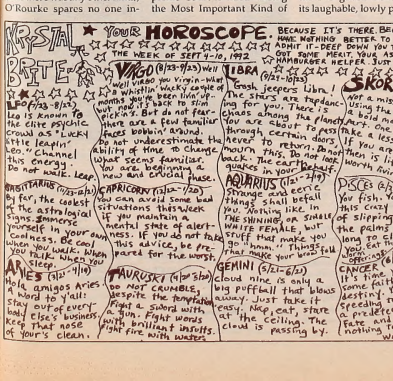
While I amatit, Morrissey's other CD's, Kill Uncle, Viva Hate, and Bona Drag are also worth the money. Also check out The Smiths, too. Later.

Send all meeting and event announcements to Jennifer Reddish, A&E editor through Campus Mail

First Chorus Rehearsal

The College Community Chorus, under the direction of Kathy Mills, will have its first practice this Thursday at Norman James Theatre in William Smith Hall at 7 p.m.

The group, which includes students, faculty, staff and community, meets every Thursday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Norman James Theatre in William Smith Hall.



The fall practices will culminate into a Christmas concert on December 12 at Norman James Theatre.

It will feature classical pieces by Bach and Monteverdi as well as traditional carols and folk songs.

The show's theme will be Peace on Earth.

In the past, they have performed concerts with themes such as Women Composers, which celebrated Washington College's co-education centennial and A Night at the Opera, which featured choruses from various operas.

For additonal information, please call (778) 7874.

The Body Shoppe
Toning and Tanning
Specializing in Artifical and Natural Skin Care +Nutritional Products
Kent Plaza, Chestertown
778-0922
(410) 778-0536
Appointments preferred

The Nail Shoppe
Specializing in Artificial & Natural
Nail Care, Skin Care & Nutritional Products
Owner, Cheryl Hurt
Owner, Karen Dionisio
347 High Street
Chestertown, MD

Out with the Old, In with the New

FACULTY ADDITIONS AND REPLACEMENTS:

Department	New	Replaces
English	Meoghan Byrne	N/A (New Position)
English	Mark Cronin	N/A
Education	Joan Ellenhorn	Rachel Scholtz (on leave)
English	Beth A. McCoy	N/A
Psychology	Kevin McKillop,Jr.	Andrew Aprill
English	Robert Schreur	N/A
Philosophy (sabattical)	Peter W. Wakefield	Robert Anderson
Spanish	Andres Villagra	George Shivers (on leave)

STAFF ADDITIONS AND REPLACEMENTS:

Position	New	Replaces
Director of Graduate Program	Thomas Cousineau	J. David Newell
Special Events Coordinator	Jessica Davies	Marshall Williams
Coordinator of Technical Services	Jannette Hartley	temporary
Director of Financial Aid	Jean Narcum	Ellyn Taylor Levin
Director of Planning and SpecialProjects	Reid Raudenbush	Clint Baer
Assistant Director of Admissions	Deborah Smethurst	Steve Johnson
Central Services Clerk	James Somers	Tamara Allspach

Davies Replaces Williams as Special Events Coordinator

Jessica Davies, a native of San Antonio, Texas, has been appointed Special Events Coordinator at Washington College. Davies succeeds Marshall Williams, who stepped down from the post to pursue a doctorate in dramaturgy at Yale University.

In announcing the appointment, President Charles H. Trout said, "We are delighted to have Jessica Davies join the Washington College community. She brings a substantial knowledge of the arts and a keen sense of organization to the position."

A graduate of Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas, Davies previously has worked with several performing arts groups including the San Antonio Shakespeare Festival, the San Antonio Performing Arts and a joint venture with the Holland Festival of Early Music in Utrecht, The Netherlands.

Her experience also includes fundraising, volunteer management, performing, and "DJ-ing" at a classical radio station.

As a Special Events Coordinator at the college, her duties will include publishing the monthly calendars, overseeing all special events on campus and working closely with community groups who use the campus facilities.

Jessica Davies

Buildings & Grounds Works to Keep Trees Healthy

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Five trees were cut down over the summer and removed from the Washington College campus.

One elm, behind William Smith Hall, was infected with Dutch elm disease and was dying rapidly.

The tree was removed to prevent the disease from spreading.

Three sugar maples were removed from the property adjoining Campus Avenue. The area has poor drainage and was too wet for the trees.

An additional maple, which was dying of an unspecific cause, possibly old age, was removed from in front of Minta Martin dormitory.

Reid Raudenbush, director of the college's physical plant, said the rash of tree removal is not an indication of unhealthy plant life.

The area along Campus Avenue will be replanted with trees, like red maples, that adapt to wetter conditions.

And the remaining elms on campus have been treated by Elms Ltd. of Raleigh, N.C.

A new pressure-injected plant serum, used to prevent Dutch elm disease, is the latest tactic being used nationwide to preserve elm trees.

Other trees that have been removed include about a dozen loblolly pines, which were part of the landscaping project completed this spring.

They did not adapt well to transplanting, Raudenbush said.

"We will continue to replant with the largest replacement-caliber trees that we can afford," he said.

The college plans to continue its reforestation project, keeping the trees on campus as healthy as possible.

When the campus was inspected by Elms Ltd., its trees, including the remaining elms, seemed to be strong and healthy, Raudenbush said.

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred

A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS

505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)

Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0898

Telephone Update

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

The Department of Technical Services and the Computing Center Staff have been busy instituting one of the most far-reaching changes to student life in recent history, one that has the potential to affect every student living on campus: the new phone system.

Each dorm room will have phone hook-up capabilities, and all students will be able to plug in a phone that will serve as an extension. For a $25 fee, all students will also have long-distance service.

In the past, many dorms had only enough capabilities to operate phones for the RA staff and a few others; other students who wanted a private line had to spend about $150 for a C&P hook-up. Students who depended on hall phones often had difficulties in finding a free phone or receiving messages taken by dorm mates.

All campus offices and dorm rooms will have a four-digit extension assigned to them. From on campus, simply pick up the phone and dial those four digits; from off campus, dial 778 plus the extension number. There is no need to use 778-2800 to reach parties whose extension is known. This means that the bulk of calls can bypass the switchboard.

According to Earl Savage, Director of Techical Services, the phones were placed in dorms so that students could easily reach Security (ext. 7810). It also serves the needs of professors who need to reach students.

Telephones hookups should all be active within the next week, according to Computing Center personnel.

THE POST OFFICE ALTERNATIVE

You can trust the experts at Mail Boxes Etc.® to handle your postal, business or communication needs in over 1500 neighborhood locations.

PACKING SUPPLIES
MAILBOXES
UPS
FAX
COPIES
STAMPS
RAPID AIR
OFFICE SUPPLIES

UPS Authorized Shipping Outlet

MBE MAIL BOXES ETC.®

29 Kent Plaza
Chestertown, MD 21620
Tel. (410) 778-9446
Fax (410) 778-9448

©1991 Mail Boxes Etc.
An Independently Owned and Operated Franchisee

Lelia Hynson Dies

Philanthropist Lelia Hodson Hynson, a long-time resident of Scarsdale, NY (from 1925 to 1992), died in her home on July 15. She was 93.

As Hynson was a strong supporter of the arts and education and a lifelong civic leader, the Lelia Hynson Pavilion in Washington College's Wilmer Park is named for her.

Daughter of Sara Payne and Colonel Clarence Hodson, founder of the Beneficial Corporation of Wilmington, DE, Hynson was born October 12, 1948, in Baltimore, MD. She spent her early years on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Hynson graduated from the Baldwin School, Bryn Mawr, PA in 1918. In November of 1920, she married Lauren Rogers of Laurel, MS. He died in July of 1921. In October of1924, she married Rogers' Princeton classmate and friend, James N. Hynson, who died in September twenty years later.

Hynson was a founding member of the Scarsdale Unit of the Junior League of New York. She served on the board of the Westchester Council of Community Services, the Scarsdale Public Library, the Scarsdale Foundation and was a member of the Scarsdale Auxiliary of White Plains Hospital Medical Center.

She was a trustee of the Lauren Rogers Museum of Art (Eastman Memorial Foundation) from its inception in 1922 until 1979, at which time she was elected trustee emerita.

Hynson served as a member from 1953 to 1974 on the Board of Visitors and Governors of Washington College. She became emerita in 1974 and received an honorary doctorate from the college in 1975.

A member of the National Society of Colonial Dames of the State of New York from 1938 on, she served on the Board of Managers and was elected to the National Roll of Honor for Service.

Also a sports enthusiast, Hynson was a member of the Fox Meadow Tennis Club of Scarsdale, NY, the American Yacht Club, Rye, NY and the Colony Club of New York.

Hynson belonged to All Hallows Episcopal Church, Snow Hill, NY.

She is survived by three daughters, including Anne Hynson of Scarsdale, NY, Sally Hopkins of Baltimore and Mary Thurocsy of Hampton, NJ, as well as eight grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Memorial services in Laurel and Scarsdale will be announced at a later date. In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations to her memory be sent to Washington College or to the Lelia Hynson Memorial Fund, Lauren Rogers Museum, Fifth Avenue, Laurel, MS.

"Fire," from pg. 1

business-homes and six houses on High and Cross Streets, according to the Kent County News.

This year, due to the tremendous efforts of 34 fire companies, the destruction was limited to two buildings. Fire departments from as far away as North East, MD; Dover, DE; and Cape St. Claire in Anne Arundel County, MD responded to the blaze.

One year ago this week, September 2, the Eliason Building at 110 Cross Street was gutted, again due to a supposed electrical fire. The building housed the studio for Actors' Community Theatre, as well at T-Line Enterprises and Blue Heron Kitchen.

According to Vince Raimond, producer of ACT, both fires occurred the afternoon of the Fireman's Picnic.

Although the fire was "under control" by 6:18 p.m. Saturday, the blaze was not out until early Sunday.

Buffy: A Woman of the Nineties

Dr. Beverly Wolff, visiting assistant professor of English, film buff and amateur film critic, taught last year's Introduction to Film class. She is interested in starting an informal film discussion group for Monday evenings.

Luke Perry's character, Pike is my idea of a truly 90's man. He plays the guitar; he has a job, he's well-spoken, he cleans up to go to a dance — and he really shouldn't drink. But most of all, he recognizes a woman of value when she shows her stuff.

Dr. Beverly Wolff

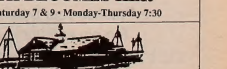
Even as a Valley Girl, Buffy is not afraid to confront Pike and his buddy, but when the going gets tough, we don't see Buffy's soft side. She is who she is: she can rescue Pike with tact, leave him to sleep in her living room while she tends to her own wounds, and still assure him that she really doesn't like to lead when they dance. To his credit, Pike says he doesn't like to lead either — and they maneuver just fine on the dance floor.

For her part, Kristy Swanson plays Buffy's double role with a charm that manages to keep both her fluffy brain and her kick-boxing feet from being too obnoxious. My favorite lines in the film are between Pike and Buffy. He tells her, appreciatively, "You're not like other girls." She replies, "Yes, I am." Each female has the capacity to be the "chosen one." It takes a real male to recognize that; vampires never do.



"Koon," from pg. 3

doned its one-time partisan allies, how can it maintain any amount of credibility in the region? How do Iraqi generals know that they will receive any more assistance than the others the administration has encouraged to rebel against Hussein? Clearly, they cannot be sure of this, which is precisely why none of them will dare to move against Hussein.

Bush has reiterated that he does not support the partition of Iraq. If he were to support Kurdish autonomy then that would anger Turkey. If he were to support Shiite autonomy, then that would strengthen Iran and anger our Arab allies. Once again, Bush seems stuck between a rock and a hard place and no trace of the "vision thing" is evident in the decision to block Iraqi aircraft. The American government seems more concerned with what Kuwait wants than what the American people want.

American policy should be an active and vital force in the region, working through affirmation rather than a tedious and wasteful succession of contradictory "thou shalt nots." American policy is guided by either fear of Iran or fear of Iraq or both. What is needed is policy determined not by fear, but by our national interest. For forty years, paranoia has been the overriding determinant of American foreign policy. It is now time for a new generation of American patriots to take up the reigns of power and move decisively for peace and disarmament not only in the Middle East but the entire world.

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
DEATH BECOMES HER
Friday & Saturday 7 & 9 • Monday-Thursday 7:30

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Head Coach of Crew Goes To World Championships

Melissa Harmeyer
Staff Writer

Mike Davenport, the Head Coach of the Washington College Crew Team traveled to Montreal, Quebec this summer as a team leader for the United States World Championship Team.

The World Championship's is an event that occurs every year in a different area of the country. Since 1992 was an Olympic year, only the lightweights and the juniors (18 years and under) attended the Championships, while the others were sent off to Barcelona, Spain for the Olympics.

Davenport's job as a team leader dealt with the management of the United States team. He overlooked each team, making sure they were at the right place at the right time and also checked up on the coaches.

Both leaders and rowers had to go through a selection process before they were chosen to be a part of the United States World Team. The team leaders went before a board after being chosen. The top four leaders were sent to the Olympics while the next four in line went to the World Championships. The rowers had a year long tryout that included being tested at selection camps.

The United States team consisted of 75 rowers from various States. There were two rowers from Maryland, neither of which were from the Eastern Shore. The rowers that were chosen were among the very best in the U.S. In fact, the U.S. came out with four medals, which seemed a little disappointing to some. The U.S. rowers did get a thrill from beating the Germans in the Men's Varsity 8, which also won them a gold. Davenport stated, "Beating the Germans was the best part of the trip, we were tired of hearing the German anthem."

We hope to see some Washington College men and women compete in the World Championships. Anyone can still learn to row, just see Mike Davenport. His coaching ability has reached world championship level and Washington College is very proud to have him represent us.

Rec Sports Underway

Rec Sports hits the '92 intramural season running! Quite a few things are taking place all of next week so The Bleacher Creatures advise you jump on it right away.

Registration for Flag Football, Aerobic Dance, and Soccer for women can all be taken care of at Dennis Berry's office in the swim center. If you're interested in entering your dorm, hall, or whatever, get your R.A. to assist you.

There is also a Club Sports Association Meeting on the 9th of September at 8 p.m. It will be dealing with funding, scheduling, and any new athletic interest (We guess). And don't ask us where it is. Ask Dennis- he failed to inform us on this one. This is a good way to bring new sports to the campus as any creative and insightful ideas are welcome. Hey, so if it's professional ice curling that floats your boat, this is the way to bring it to campus.

Plus, from what we hear, Dennis has enough money to do anything you want! So get in touch with him or Matt Boyle, his assistant, early next week.

Attention
All Students!
Practice your bowling
Ten-pin and Duckpin
Monday through Friday
3 - 5 p.m.
Only $4.00 with college ID! (Price includes shoes)
Queen Anne's Bowling Centre
Rt. 213 South of Chestertown
778-5800

Women's Volleyball: What's in Store for '92?

Tyler "Fish" McCarthy
Staff Writer

The expectations are high for the Shorewomen's Volleyball program this year as last season the team had a winning record of 22-18 and only hope to do better in '92. The loss of some very valuable seniors from the '91 squad may be their toughest obstacle to overcome but, the women have high hopes that the 7 newly acquired freshmen this year will quickly fill their shoes. These graduated seniors include three time All-MAC Laura McClellan and fellow teammate Theresa Sganga, an All-Cheseapeake player.

Coach Fall expects this year to be very interesting. Like all fall sports, the Shorewomen were back a week early running double and sometimes triple practice sessions. Coach Fall has a good grasp on who will be starting in the rotation and who will have the biggest impact on the upcoming season. She had two adjectives to describe this years team, "Young and Talented." Coach Fall believes that the key to how well this year's team does depends upon how quickly the team matures.

The Shorewomen will be lead by the three captains Julie Dill, Mirian Desser, and Beverly Diaz. Coach Fall says that these women have the stability to lead the way for freshmen Jennifer Dixon, Michelle Chin, Courtney Myers, Amanda Barnes, Nikki Goenaga, and Mariah Geissler.

Coach Fall also has her hopes set for the future. They had a very successful year for recruiting and hope that they will have another good recruiting year for the 1993 season.

When asked about the attitude of the team for the upcoming 1992 season Laura Heidel answered, "We not only have a lot of talent but also a lot of committed and spirited players." Beverly Diaz also added, "We may be a young team but all of our opponents are in for a tough ball."

The women will be playing their first match next Wednesday, September 9th against Notre Dame followed by a tournament at Gettysburg the weekend of the 11th through the 13th. We look forward to your support in the 1992 Women's Volleyball season!

Photo by Curry Brown

This year's volleyball unit will miss the patented Sganga hammerings such as this one. They will be looking for the potpourri of incoming freshmen to fill the void.

Mangan Named Assistant Lacrosse Coach at Washington

Terry Mangan, a 1988 graduate of Roanoke College, has been named an assistant lacrosse coach at Washington College. Mangan is replacing Jim Townsend, who left this summer after two years of service, to become the Head Coach at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, New York.

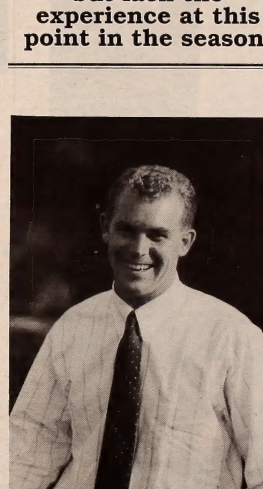
The Lake Ronkonkoma, New York native joins the Shoremen coaching ranks after serving two seasons as the head coach at Archbishop Spalding, a school near Annapolis, Maryland. Mangan's leadership helped in turning around a Spalding program that was on the decline and last season they finished with a respectable 7-6 record. After graduating from college, Mangan returned to his old high school, Sachem, and served as an assistant coach for two years.

While at Roanoke, Mangan played on four teams that qualified for the NCAA Division Three Championship Tournament. In his senior year, Mangan played goalie for a squad that advanced to the National Semi-Finals.

Soccer Turned a Few Heads Last Weekend

Jason Ronstadt
Staff Writer

With the insurgence of twenty new players to the now twenty-five man roster of the Washington College soccer team, it has been relatively easy for player and spectator alike to forget the past and look ahead to a bright new future. It is this enthusiasm which both excites and frightens coach Todd Helbling, who hopes that expectations won't skyrocket too high and too quickly for such a young Shoremen squad.



Said Coach Helbling, "Our team is deep in talent, but it still may take a while for the younger guys to learn our system and adjust to the level of competition." Along with the help of the new assistant coach, Jack Schaefer, hailing from Bethany College in West Virginia, Todd hopes this task will be conveyed with greater ease. Jack has proven to be not only a good coach but also a good enthusiast for the team.

But while coach Helbling intelligently plans to tackle one game at a time it remains hard for the rest of the W.C. community to contain it's optimism, especially after the results of last weekend's marathon scrimmages, which pitted the Shoremen against Catonsville Community College, Goldey Beacon College, and Chesapeake College.

Washington emerged victorious in two out of the three scrimmages, besting Chesapeake 3-0, and Goldey Beacon 1-0. Even the 2-1 loss to Catonsville proved to be a hard fought battle which could have gone in either teams favor. All tolled, the Sho'men scored only one less goal in the three games this past weekend than in all of last season. And while the three meetings were only classified as scrimmages, the results have many a Shoremen soccer fan feeling good about the team's chances in the ensuing season opener at Lebanon Valley tomorrow.

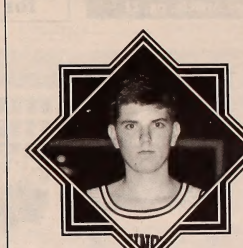
But don't miss the home opener next Thursday as the fighting Sho'men, the team that may produce quite a few Newt's Players of the Week (if The Vaughnster and The Bird Man see some cash and free brew coming their way), take on Lancaster Bible at 4 p.m. sharp at Kibler Stadium. Good seats are still available at the box office.

It's just one game at a time this season. We have promising talent but lack the experience at this point in the season.

Head Coach Todd Helbling

Photo by Gary Brown

Drop-Off Laundry



We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service

Laundromat Dry Cleaning

Kent Laundry

607 High Street
778-3551

NEWT'S Player of the Week

Jay Devlin

Hey, Mutha Scratchas, over here!! IN YER FACE!! The first week is through and we hate to admit it but shame has already stricken the caps court. Now, we all know that caps isn't really a sport. Shaaah. . . As If. . . Caps not a sport. Come on guys, this is Washington College, where men have played caps on the varsity level for years or, as "The Bird Man" puts it, "Where the men are men and the sheep are nervous!" Ex-squeeze me? Baking Powder?

Actually, no sports heroes have emerged this week because no competitive action took place. But, we have a tradition to carry on and this damn space to fill every week so we had to pick someone. And what better way to spend the space but on a fine caps player who goes by the name of Jay "I'm goin to Sizzler" Devlin. That's right ladies and gents, Jay, with the help of John Shanahan, toasted two chumps who call themselves players 7-2, 7-2. (That would be best out of three, of course.) So congrats Jay- spend your $18 wisely and watch out for wooden nickels.

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

Benita Hyland, Owner

The Classy Closet

"We're Here for You"

Consignment Shop
10 % Discount
With College ID

204 High Street
Downtown Chestertown

Soccer Starts off on The Right Foot

See Article, pg. 11

Rec Sports Gets Underway

WC • ELM

Sports

Field Hockey Continues to Prepare for Season Opener

Volleyball Set to Spike the Competition

See Article, pg. 10

Photo by Gary Brown

Greg Miller literally steals one away from an opponent. Greg, a returning sophomore, who won the starting goalie position his freshman year, has continually showed his fearless attacking style out of the cage. Aided by a new offensive strike he hopefully will be tested much less than last year.

Jay Devlin: NEWT's Player of the Week

Spring '92 Results

Men's Lacrosse
10-4

Women's Lacrosse
3-8

Baseball
12-16

Softball
1-14

Men's Tennis
20-3

Women's Tennis
13-6

Men's Rowing
13

Women's Rowing
11

Lax Hires New Assistant

See Article, pg. 10

Coach Davenport Rows Through the Summer

See Article, pg. 10

Open All Night — We Never Close!

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Fri - morn: mostly cloudy; aft: partly sunny, low humidity H in mid-80s
Weekend - Mostly sunny, H in 70s

Volume 63, Number Three • September 11, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Groundbreaking for New Academic Building Slated for Summer 1993

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Architects from the firm of Tai Soo Kim Partners of Hartford, Conn., visited campus Wednesday to present their current plans to the faculty for the Daly Academic Building and the renovations of William Smith Hall.

Whit Inglehart and Tai Soo Kim discussed current developments in the planning of Daly, while Peter Doo displayed elevations of the plans for Smith.

The Daly Building will have four levels, all of which are handicapped-accessible.

The basement level will house the Computing Center, including the lab, administrative offices, the mainframe housing and the technical repair office. A faculty workspace will be added to the Computing Center in Daly; there is not an adequate equivalent in Ferguson (the Computing Center's Current location).

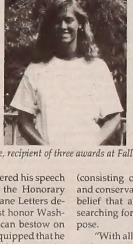
Central Services will possibly be split into two levels upon relocation to Daly. Bulk mailing functions and other heavy-duty operations are slotted for the basement, while the day-to-day mailings and xeroxing will occupy the first floor.

Other offices moving to the first floor include the Faculty Lounge (currently in Smith) and Student Affairs (currently in the Casey Academic Center). Two classrooms and five faculty offices with secretarial space are also slated for first-floor space.

Student Affairs' current space will be occupied by some Foreign Language offices.

The second and third floors will be similar in layout, each housing six classrooms and 10-11 offices. On the second floor, a student lounge is planned, and a similar space will be occupied by a student/faculty workroom on the third floor.

Appearance-wise, the building is brick, with two stairways jutting out from the front facade and surrounded by glass cylinders with lanterns at the top. The main floor centers around a courtyard-type lobby, which is continued to the ceiling of the structure by an open-air atrium encircled by balconies on the second and third floors.



There will be large bay windows on the rear facade to see "Architects," pg. 5

Boyer, Nelson Join WC Class of 1992

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Ernest Boyer, in his keynote address to those assembled at Fall Convocation last Thursday, called for "diversity and cultural cohesion at the same time."

Constance Pope, recipient of three awards at Fall Convocation

Boyer delivered his speech after receiving the Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree, the highest honor Washington College can bestow on any person. He quipped that he was the latest addition to the Class of '92 -- "the Fall Class, that is."

"Conformity," said Boyer, "denies us the sacredness of the individuality that makes us truly humane." He insisted, however, that instead of emphasizing the differences, we should concentrate on those things which all humans have in common.

Naming eight key characteristics which all people share formed the basis of his speech. Boyer included the basic life cycle; the use of symbols (language) in communication; art and culture; a sense of time and the use of memory; the formation of groups and institutions; humanity's integration with the rest of nature; the need and desire to work (consisting of production and conservation); and the belief that all people are searching for a larger purpose.

"With all the divisions and separations in our world today," said Boyer, "this is the glue that holds us all together. It is here that the spirit of community can be formed.

Boyer, a lifelong educator, advocates the study of language as part of a core curriculum. Along with components of language such as composition, expository writing and oral discourse, he stresses a

See "Convocation," pg.4

Three WC Freshmen Injured in Car Accident

Amanda Burt
News Editor

Freshmen Ian McVeigh, Mark Murphy and Erin Downes were injured last Saturday when the Nissan Pathfinder they were traveling in hydroplaned and then flipped on a stretch of route 64 near Richmond, VA. Also present in the car was Murphy's girlfriend, a student at William and Mary College in Williamsburg.

According to McVeigh, he and Downes drove to Williamsburg Friday night with Murphy to visit his girlfriend. On Saturday, the four drove to Charlottesville to meet several students at the University of Virginia and watch the football game against the University of Maryland.

After the game, they left to return Murphy's girlfriend to William and Mary before coming back to Chestertown. The accident occured between 6:00 and 6:30 p.m. while they were en route to Williamsburg during heavy downpours. Alcohol or drugs were not a factor in the accident.

McVeigh said that he and Downes were both asleep in the backseat when the Pathfinder that Murphy was driving hit a large puddle of water and began to hydroplane. As the vehicle slid into the guardrail, McVeigh awoke and braced himself while it flipped four times, landing upside down. Downes was thrown ten feet in front of the Pathfinder.

Several witnesses in nearby vehicles stopped to help the students, including one doctor who tended to Downes. McVeigh said that he was pulled out of the car along with Murphy and his girlfriend before the paramedics arrived on the scene. He added that the passengers, all of whom were conscious, were told to lie down so that they could be covered with blankets and umbrellas.

McVeigh and Murphy's girlfriend were transported to Henrico Doctors' Hospital. He was treated for a contusion of the thigh, and the unidentified William and Mary student suffered a broken wrist and received some stitches in her knees and elbows. They were both released early the next morning.

Downes and Murphy, who are roommates, were taken to the Medical College of Virginia at Virginia Commonwealth University from the accident site. Downes was treated for gashes in his legs, back and face. He was also released early Sunday morning.

Murphy sustained three fractures in his vertebrae and had stitches in his ear and face. McVeigh added that Murphy will be required to wear both a neck and back brace until his injuries heal.

"I thought we were dead," McVeigh said. "It's unreal that I came out of an accident of that caliber with a couple of scratches and a hurt leg."

Both McVeigh and Downes returned to Maryland together, while Murphy, who was not released by Wednesday, remained at the hospital. McVeigh was able to attend classes this week and hopes to continue playing for the baseball team as soon as his leg heals.

He said that Downes, who has been recuperating at home, is expected to attend classes today or next Monday. McVeigh added that he did not know when and if Murphy will return this semester.

Inside

Koon on Social Security, see pg. 3

Car Theft, see pg. 4

Summer Conferences, see pg. 4

Shepherd's Song, see pg. 7

Fresh Victims

I've been lucky, I guess. I'm one of three out of every four women who hasn't been raped. So far (knock on wood), I've been on the positive side of the statistics. If you didn't do the math, let me spell it out: One out of every four women is raped sometime during her life. Twenty-five percent. Look around you at the lunch table, folks. Count off like in gym class: one, two three, four...

Who's the one? Which one of you, or your classmates, or your hallmates, has already been raped, or is going to be raped?

Forgive me for not citing my source. I've read it in every women's magazine that's thought to address the issue. Of course, some measure it higher. So many rapes aren't reported that they cannot become statistics, so they raise the count to fully a third. Or more.

Nice, clean, safe Washington College is not immune. There's a nifty law which applies to all college security departments, requiring them to issue a report annually. This report must contain, among other things, statistics of on-campus instances of all violent crimes reported to them.

For those of you who haven't read the Student Handbook yet, let me sum up these statistics: no murders, no robberies, no car thefts, no rape, two aggravated assaults and 12 burglaries.

Let me remind you that these are the crimes REPORTED to Security.

Let me also remind you that very few instances of rape are stranger rapes. Not to say that's a zero, other. For those underclassmen not present in the spring of 1991, let it be known that a stranger rape did occur that year, on campus.

I don't want to turn the woman in question into a statistic, or worse yet, an example. I'm just saying it happens, watch your back, and don't take your personal safety for granted.

Especially with guys you know. Most rapes are what is called acquaintance rape, or date rape. Something everyone hears about, and no one, seemingly, pays any attention to.

Let me give you another statistic. In the January 1992 issue of the Journal of American College Health, it was reported that of women in the college age group, one out of four of them HAS BEEN RAPED by SOMEONE SHE KNEW.

Date rape is something not reported to authorities, most often; and it's that same something that may just pull that first statistic up to 33 1/3.

The court process aside, in a campus with blinders on regarding the quantity of sexual assault each year, perhaps each weekend, it can be difficult to get the nerve to report a crime of this intensity. But it needs to happen so that the problem can be addressed as a physical, not imagined one.

WHY? Why don't women report what they know is a violation of every right they have? Because of what will be said to them?

"She asked for it / she meant yes / she was dressed for it / she wanted it— are those reasons you would give for why a woman was hit by a car? Then why would they be valid excuses for something I consider no less brutal and no more her fault?

Don't forget one of the favorites: "she was drunk / I was drunk"

Let me tell you about another nifty law, specific to Maryland and some other states: If a woman is drunk, say, to the point of not driving, she is incapable of consent, and therefore it is rape. In other words, guys, if you don't have her Rational, Conscious permission, forget it. This even stretches to heavy prescription drugs.

According to a 1988 Ms. Magazine survey, 75 percent of men and 55 percent of women who were involved in a date-rape situation were using alcohol or other drugs prior to the crime.

True, there are things both parties can do to protect themselves. A really easy rule to remember is, if you can't trust 'em by day, then don't trust 'em by night. This goes both ways. Think about it.

As someone who has been in a room where she is the minority (meaning I was the one women out of 4 who hadn't been raped), let me pass on a few things:

- Don't assume he's a nice guy.
- Although gossip isn't gospel, if you've heard a guy is bad news, he probably is.
- Never, ever get drunk "with the guys" in their room, alone. There is no strength in numbers if you're outnumbered. This can include one-on-one.
- Never underestimate the power of testosterone over your rationality. It happens to the best of them, but some just don't know when to stop.
- Guys: rape is wrong. Imagine having someone else's dick shoved in your mouth (or worse) while you were just chillin' with friends and drinking. Guys are not only not immune to rape, they are more responsible, i.e., it is mostly men doing the raping. Therefore it is HIS responsibility to make sure that her consent is not only legal, but genuine.
- Be aware and respect yourself. You become more of a target the drunker you are and the lower your self esteem.
- Finally: when sex is shared, by mutual consent, it is a matter of trust above all. Make sure BEFOREHAND that you're both cool with things. You can't change your mind the next morning about what you did the night before, but you can prevent it before the fact.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddish
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 5 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quicknet. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8280.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

To the Editor:

I have to be honest. After reading Ms. Knowlin's article on racial diversity at WC, I felt like giving myself the proverbial kick in the rear. Recalling a similar conversation she and I had had two days earlier, I remembered that I had been guilty of thinking in the same categorically, statistically oriented mind-set. I too had totaled the number of "new multiracial/ethnic" students at the college with glee, as if this were the answer to complete diversification. But honestly, were mere percentages ever the catalyst in changing opinions and creating an evolution in thinking?

What I do know is that it only takes one person to make a difference — to have the confidence and faith in him or herself to say "This is me, who I am and how I live." If you are such an individual, be you black, white, Asian, Hispanic, Jew or Gentile, please don't forget to share your story with those whom you are among. For if your background is swallowed up, we may as well forget the rest of history.

Jessica Aspiazu
Senior

To the Editor:

I would like to thank Dr. Beverly Wolff for her article, "Buffy: A Woman of the Nineties" [Sept. 4, 1992]. Now I know I was not alone when I left the darkened theater this summer thinking "Buffy, The Vampire Slayer" was a feminist movie. Finally, a vampire movie where all the females are not victims. In fact, the first to bear the vampire's scar is male!

The character Buffy proves to be quite a modern woman. Slowly, as her physical skills are mastered, we see her emerge with new confidence. To the movie's credit, Buffy is allowed to be both morally and physically strong, and yet, still capable of retaining her sexual identity. One of my favorite scenes involves Buffy and a gang of bikers. She runs out of a high school basketball game chasing a student vampire. A row of bikers and their motorcycles are outside. One male shouts, "Hey, how about getting some real power between those legs." Buffy answers, "Thank you. I think I will," meanwhile knocking him off his bike, and drives off in hot pursuit of her criminal.

I agree with Dr. Wolff in her praise of Luke Perry's character Pike. He is indeed a unique male. When she saves him from a nasty bunch of vampires, he jokingly says, "I'm here saving your butt," but then is man enough to admit her victory. He knows that she alone is the "chosen" one, he chooses to help in a secondary, supportive role much as Robin does for Batman. Buffy's friends are not so sympathetic about her newfound strength. When she flips a friend and throws him against a locker for slapping her butt, they are horrified. Still the loss of friends is a burden Buffy chooses to accept. She will not defer her responsibilities simply because she is not as popular as before.

"Buffy, The Vampire Slayer" was a true summer movie gem. I recommend it enthusiastically. I hope in the future Hollywood will continue to produce movies with heroines I'm proud to root for. They are too few and far between. Here's one cheer for Buffy. Hooray!

Rebecca Bryant
Avid Movie Watcher

In the article, "Women's Volleyball: What's in Store for '92," that appeared in last week's ELM, Miriam Jecelin's name was misspelled. The ELM regrets any confusion that arose as a result of this error.

Scott Koon: Resident Socialist

At the Republican National Convention, George Bush and his party made it clear that they want "family values" to be one of the chief issues in this Presidential election year. When people speak of families today, they usually concern themselves with only two generations: people of child rearing age, and their children. The tendency is to ignore the role that people of retirement age play in the family.

Conservatives love to blather about how welfare is a dis-incentive to both marriage and work: they use compelling economic arguments to "prove" this while simultaneously expressing the belief that poverty exists in a vacuum. They contend that poverty is primarily due to behavioral factors such as drug use and paternal irresponsibility rather than economic factors such as unemployment and regressive, anti-family taxation policy.

While conservatives steadfastly refuse to cut Social Security spending, they also refuse to offer any explanation as to why the real wages of young heads of households have declined so dramatically over the course of the past thirty years.

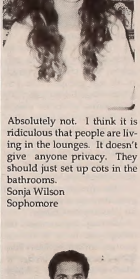
It was a Democratic Congress which passed the Social Security Act and it was a Democratic president who signed it into a law. While virtually every other entitlement program is vilified by conservatives, Social Security is immune from their wrath.

This is because older voters play a pivotal role in the conservative coalition. Because older people vote and younger people tend not to vote, the interests of older people are represented and the interests of younger people are not. The most significant redistribution of wealth in America today is not from rich to poor but rather from young to old. The real after tax earnings of householders aged 15-24 declined 14% from 1967 to 1988, while the real after tax earnings of those aged sixty five and older rose 35% during the same period.

In my view, this is primarily due to a 46% increase in Social Security Taxes and a 19% increase in average Social Security benefits. Table A shows the relationship between the real incomes of 15-24 year olds, the real incomes of those sixty-five and older and the average annual Social Security benefit.

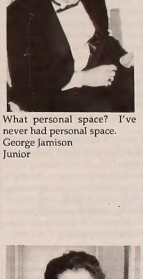
Social Security taxes are especially regressive because they are levied at a flat rate regardless of income, and there is a limit to the amount of earnings to which the tax can be applied. This effectively shelters the income of wealthy wage earners, and of course, any income from interest and investments are exempt form the tax.

Social Security tax rates are also higher for those who are self employed, and this acts as a disincentive to small businesspeople who pay their own wages. Social Security taxes are also a strong inhibitor of growth in the workforce for two additional reasons.



First, the rate is applied not only to the wages earned by the employee but to the employer as well. This increases the cost of labor and therefore prevents employers from hiring additional workers.

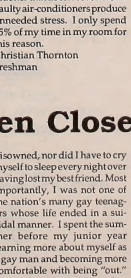
Second, Social Security taxes have the effect of any other tax on wages in that they reduce after tax income and therefore



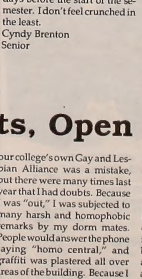
See "Koon," pg. 9

CAMPUS VOICES

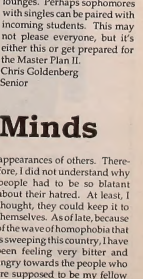
Given the dormitory crunch, do you think the school has done enough to alleviate problems of personal space?



Absolutely not. I think it is ridiculous that people are living in the lounges. It doesn't give anyone privacy. They should just set up cots in the bathrooms.
Sonja Wilson
Sophomore



What personal space? I've never had personal space.
George Jamison
Junior



I think the school has dealt with the problems of personal space as well as it could. However, better planning in the future could avoid these problems
Dennis Kelleher
Senior

...Would have to say my only problem is that my room is a furnace with only one air-conditioner that doesn't even work. Faulty air-conditioners produce unneeded stress. I only spend 25% of my time in my room for this reason.
Christian Thornton
Freshman

The Student Affairs Office worked diligently to find me campus housing only a few days before the start of the semester. I don't feel crunched in the least.
Cyndy Brenton
Senior

I believe that there exist better ways to solve overcrowding than placing students in lounges. Perhaps sophomores with singles can be paired with incoming students. This may not please everyone, but it's either this or get prepared for the Master Plan II.
Chris Goldenberg
Senior

Open Forum: Open Closets, Open Minds

Gehrett Ellis, a senior Humanities major, is co-president and co-founder of the Gay and Lesbian Alliance. GALA holds bi-weekly discussions concerning gender related issues. Meetings are opened to all members of the college community, and confidentiality is guaranteed.

Gehrett W. Ellis

Last year when I came out of the closet, I was fortunate enough to be accepted by my family and friends. I was not disowned, nor did I have to cry myself to sleep every night over having lost my best friend. Most importantly, I was not one of the nation's many gay teenagers whose life ended in a suicidal manner. I spent the summer before my junior year learning more about myself as a gay man and becoming more comfortable with being "out." Then, in the fall, I returned to Washington College.

Not to say that helping start our college's own Gay and Lesbian Alliance was a mistake, but there were many times last year that I had doubts. Because I was "out," I was subjected to many harsh and homophobic remarks by my dorm mates. People would answer the phone saying "homo central," and graffiti was plastered all over areas of the building. Because I was not raised by a homophobic or racist mother, I was never taught to prejudge the lives or appearances of others. Therefore, I did not understand why people had to be so blatant about their hatred. At least, I thought, they could keep it to themselves. As of late, because of the wave of homophobia that is sweeping this country, I have been feeling very bitter and angry towards the people who are supposed to be my fellow Americans. Many times, I have

"Judge not."
—André Gide

You could say that I am definitely one of the lucky ones.

See "Ellis," pg. 9

Brief Beef

On Thursday, August sixth, Dr. Richard C. DeProspo married Erin Murphy, a 1990 graduate of Washington College, at the Newberry Library in Chicago. Their wedding was the first ever to be held at the library, the site of "Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin and American Culture," an eight-week summer conference in which DeProspo participated. Present at the wedding were DeProspo's two children from a previous marriage, Amy and Rebecca, and Calvin Forbes, former member of Washington College's English department.

Due to the resignation of Susan Czechowski, the editorship of Washington College's yearbook, the Pegasus, is available immediately. Anybody interested should submit an application to Richard C. DeProspo, Chair of the Board of Publications.

Congratulations to Tanya Angell Allen, a junior Washington College student who received the second prize of $100 in the annual Lyric College Poetry Contest. Allen's poem, "Mother in Storms," was selected from among 900 students throughout North America.

The United Way of Kent County is kicking off its 1992-93 Campaign on Saturday, September 26, with a Super Stars day of games, races, food and fun at Worton Park. Students are invited to form teams of two to four members to compete in the day's Olympics-style events, ranging from foot races and swimming (at the Casey Swim Center) to volleyball, archery and frisbee golf. Competition begins at 8:00 a.m., and teams must participate in at least eight of the 18 athletic events. Register your team with Kent County Parks and Recreation by calling 778-1948.

There will be a referendum on November 3 to vote for Question Six, a law protecting a woman's right to reproductive freedom which would replace the current restrictive law, effective should Roe v. Wade be overturned. To obtain a copy of the complete bill, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to the League of Women Voters of Maryland, 200 Duke of Gloucester

WC's Hidden Resource: Summer Conferences

Martha Kimura
Staff Writer

Washington College hosted over 4,000 people during this year's Summer Conference Program, which was designed to promote the college to prospective students and to provide meeting space for adult professional programs. The conferences were held from May 22 to August 14.

During the ten weeks, twenty-seven different programs were offered to people of all age groups. The programs ranged from leadership workshops to sports camps. The Summer Conference Program not only enriched the people who attended, but it also provided jobs for high school and college students and current college employees.

The program generated gross revenue of over $400,000 for Washington College.

During the summer, the college was home to diverse groups, including Maryland Girls State, a conference in which approximately 300 high school seniors were invited to learn first hand about government. This year Girls State celebrated its 15th summer at Washington College.

The annual Pyrotechnic Conference was also held at the college. It explored the chemistry of explosives and was directed by Dr. John Conkling. The conference was attended by men and women from various corporations and government agencies.

The conferences ended with a series of sports camps sponsored by the Washington College Athletic Department. The camps gave swimming, tennis, lacrosse and soccer lessons.

The Baltimore Bicycling Club attracted the largest group of the summer with 592 guests.

Paul D. Knowles and Mary Brown, directors of the Summer Conference Program, said they hope to expand the programs offered by developing new ones based on the Gifted and Talented Summer Centers' Write Program. It was discontinued due to the budget cuts in the Maryland State Department of Education.

Additional plans to create a new writing program are being pursued by Professor Robert Day, and the college is contemplating long term contractual agreements with several other programs.

Any Washington College student who has attended one of the Summer Conferences should contact Mary Brown at extension 7250.

Sansing's Car Stolen

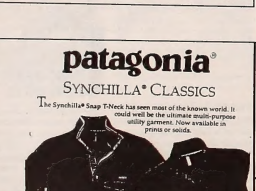
Jennifer Waldych
Staff Writer

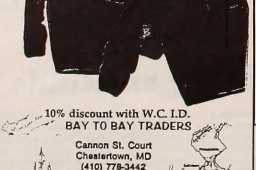
While Washington College freshman Dina Sansing was visiting her home in Northwest Washington D.C. last weekend, her car was stolen. The 1991 Cappuccino Honda Accord was parked outside the Sansing home when it was stolen between 12:30 AM and 6:00AM Saturday, September 5th.

Dina and her mother, Associate Dean Lucille Sansing, were both asleep when the theft occurred.

Police said that although 92% of automobiles stolen from Northwest D.C. are found within a week, they are usually stripped. Items in the car when it was stolen included Washington College identification and keys, school books, CD's, and clothes. Dean Sansing was reportedly calm about the theft of her daughter's car until she learned that her rollerblades were in the trunk.

"Convocation," from page 1





study of the ethics of communication. "It's not just the content, but the integrity of what is said," said Boyer.

Also receiving an Honorary Doctor of Letters was James G. Nelson, who directed Wye Institute for 25 years and served on WC's Board of Visitors and Governors for 10 years.

Several students received annual awards for academic excellence: Megan Ward, the Fox Freshman Scholarship Medal; to both Michelle Crosier and Renee Rhodes, the Alumni Medal (for the sophomore year); and to Constance Pope, the Visitors and Governors Medal (for the junior year).

In addition, the Visitors and Governors Scholarship Award is given to the rising junior and senior who have achieved the highest cumulative grade-point average. Crosier, Rhodes and Pope were all presented with this award. Pope, along with Jen Del Nero, also received the Middendorf Scholarship, which is presented annually to a rising senior on the basis of academic excellence and leadership.

The Interfraternity-Sorority Loving Cups, given to the Greek organizations with the highest average GPA for the group, went to Alpha Chi Omega and Kappa Alpha Order.

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap-T-Neck has been most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.

10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442

We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

Andy's
337 1/2 HIGH ST.
Music Starts At Approx. 9 pm
FRI 11 & SAT 12 BIRDDOG AND ROADKINGS
They're Back!! Country Rock Swing Rockability-Dancing IS Mandatory!!!
TUES 15 dissapear fear A Special Performance by Cindy and Sonia!! Don't miss this fabulous duo...
THURS 17 DUANE DILLARD Jazz

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

artwork - prints - jewelry - crafts - custom framing
gallery 59
117 SOUTH CROSS STREET
CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620
301-778-3483

"Architects," from Pg. 1

continue the open-air feel. The basement level features a sunken terrace on one side, and the walls in that area contain lots of windows to allow natural illumination of the Computing Center.

Dr. Steven Cades, faculty representative to the Board of Buildings and Grounds, was concerned by the detailing, that it appears "too modern on such a classical academic structure."

Associate Dean Lucille Sansing said that despite all the glasswork, Daly is "very traditional. It's integrated with Bill Smith, but it's not a twin — it has its own integrity."

Two of the main concerns when planning the renovations of Smith Hall are handicapped access and fireproofing, both of which are currently below state standards.

The renovations will retain the existing wooden stairs and provide fire doors at each end of the hall way. Some classrooms and offices will open up into these fire-doored stairwells. "This has been approved by the State Fire Marshall, considering that there is no change of occupancy, and that this is a historic building and it is fully sprinklered," said Doo.

While the external appearance of Smith will remain unchanged, one physical restructuring will occur in the basement. The current ramp/corridor will be flattened out; the "basement feel" will be replaced partly by turning the rear entrance area into a lounge that

Architect's model of the Daly Academic Building, still in the planning stages opens up onto a courtyard.

The basement will house three classrooms and five faculty offices, as well as three Audio-Visual rooms.

On the main floor, there will be two classrooms and seven faculty offices; the second floor is allotted two classrooms and six offices, as well as a student/faculty workroom.

Topping it off on the third floor is the math workshop and writing lab, as well as a computer classroom and four faculty offices.

Some of the more major changes to Smith may be in Norman James Theatre. Currently, plans entail removing the balcony seating while improving the projection booth. The balcony would be shortened by about half its current length, and the Audio-Visual booth would run the length of the mezzanine.

This is contingent on whether the balcony is original to the building. Since it does block off part of the bay windows on either side, Doo feels it was probably a later addition and can be parted with.

Before renovations begin, it must be determined what the most frequent use of Norman James will be. It is currently assumed that the main function will be that of a 140-seat lecture hall (seating capacity in the main auditorium will not change) and audio-visual classroom.

The current usage includes music recitals and drama productions, as well as rehearsal space for both. Acoustically, said Doo, there is a big difference between lecture and musical space. "Music/theatrical purposes require a reverb rate of two beats per second," said Doo, "while video/lecture use only needs one.

"We could compromise with a level in-between, but that would be less than ideal," he said.

It should be stressed, said Cades, that all the plans for allocation of space are tentative. Certain departments are currently depicted in certain spaces, but it is difficult to say now what will appear in the final plans for allocation of office space. Allusions to room draw were made, however, when determining which member would be assigned to which specific office.

Some considerations in the development of the two new academic spaces were provided by inadequacies in current campus structures.

The seminar rooms in Casey, for example, are far from soundproof. Tai Soo Kim assured faculty that the walls in Daly would go all the way to the ceiling, and would be made of staggered-stud wallboard.

The faculty offices in Daly are approximately 130 square feet, which is slightly larger than the bigger offices in Ferguson.

Director of Planning and Physical Plant Reid Raudenbush expressed hope that ground breaking for Daly would occur in spring or summer of 1993.

Ferguson, after both projects are completed, will stand empty and be used either for storage or bulldozing.

Stock Market Game Returns

This year's Stock Market Game begins October 2nd and ends December 11th. Players, who may be individuals or groups of two or more persons, use $100,000 in computer money to trade NASDAQ stocks and stocks listed on the New York and American Stock Exchanges.

Stocks bought and sold during the ten week period are subject to normal brokerage fees. Computer printouts showing the current value of each team's portfolio are provided weekly. Instructions and game materials are also provided.

There is a $15 registration fee per team. Prizes will be awarded to the teams who place in the top three at Washington College. Anyone who is interested in playing should call Dawn Baker at ext. 7888 by Friday, September 18th.

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

Lucinda & Company
Vintage Clothing and Jewelry
Open 10-6 Monday-Saturday
201 High Street Chestertown

The Body Shoppe
Toning and Tanning
Specializing in Artifical and
Natural Skin Care +Nutritional
Products
Kent Plaza, Chestertown
778-0922

Pip's Discount Liquors
Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported
Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER – CHILLED WINES
QUANTITY DISCOUNTS
BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES
TELEPHONE 778-0178
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA, CHESTERTOWN

The Butterfly Bush
Your Special Place
Fashion Clothes
110 CROSS STREET
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
301-778-1409

Shrimp · Crabs · Live Lobsters
Seafood & Salad Deli · Steamed Platters
E & E SEAFOOD, INC.
KENT PLAZA · CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
Retail · Wholesale Availability
301-778-6333
Hours: Sunday · Thursday 11:00 A.M. to 7:00 P.M.
Friday · Saturday 10:00 A.M. to 9:00 P.M.

Week at a Glance

September 11- 20

Friday 11, Sunday 13-Monday 14
Film Series: Mediterraneo
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m..

Friday 11
Last day to drop / add classes

Trip to see Baltimore Orioles vs. Milwaukee Brewers
Camden Yards, game time: 7:35 p.m.
Free transportation
Depart 5:00 p.m., CAC
Purchase tickets at Student Activities

The Shepherd's Song
Tawes Theatre,
8:00 p.m. †

Saturday 12
Kent & Queen Anne's Alumni Flea Market
Campus Avenue
9:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m.
Rain Date: September 13
For information: call (778)-7811

W. C. Miniature Golf Tournament,
Campus Lawn,
1:00 p.m.- 5:00 p.m.
Rain location: BAJLFC

Dance: Zeta Tau Alpha's "First Party Back,"
CoffeeHouse,
9:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m.
$2.00†

Wednesday 14
S.G.A. Petitions due
For Freshman Class Officers & Dorm Senators Student Affairs Office

Tuesday 15

Goldstein Program Lecture: Election '92:
Can We Govern Ourselves,
Douglass Cater
Hynson Lounge,
7:30 p.m.

Lecture: Elena Figurina, Russian painter
Sponsored by the Arts Exhibition Committee & Lecture Committee
Sophie Kerr Room,
8:00 p.m. †

Meeting: Writer's Union Junta
O'Neill Literary House,
8:00 p.m.

Wednesday 16
Lecture: Ecological Economics: A Biological Perspective
By Wolfgang Sterrer, Ph.D.
Sponsored by McLain Program in Environmental Science
Dunning Hall
7:30 p.m.

Thursday 17
Rehearsal: College Community Chorus
Gibson, Room 10
7:00 p.m.

Second Annual Goodfellow Lecture: The Dawning Light of a New Era: Women's Quest for Learning in the Gilded Age
By Mari Jo Buhle, Assoc. Prof. of History and American Civilization, Brown University
Sponsored by History Department
Norman James Theatre,
8:00 p.m. †

Friday 18
Referendum Task Force Meeting
Kent County Public Library,
7:30 p.m. †

Open Poetry Reading
O'Neill Literary House,
9:00 p.m. †

Senior Bash Back
Band: Derry Berry & Alagia
Martha Washington Square,
9:00 p.m.
Rain location: CoffeeHouse,

Saturday 19
Club Fair
Cater Walk,
3:00 p.m.-5:00 p.m.

Velcro Wall
Campus Lawn,
8:00 p.m.-11:00 p.m.
Rain Location: BAJLFC

Saturday 19 - Sunday 20

Othello
UMBC Shakespeare on Wheels,
Sponsored by Sophie Kerr Committee, Lecture Series, and Actors Community Theatre
Campus Mall,
8:00 p.m.
Rain location: Tawes Theatre †

†see related article

Art Exhibit: Leonardo Da Vinci: The Inventions in Tawes Theatre will be open through October 2. Renaissance Festival, Annapolis Maryland 10:30-7:00 p.m. through October 18

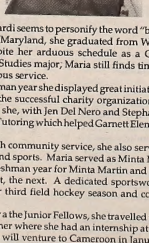
A&E

Return of the Bub

Zeta Tau Alpha will hold the "First Party Back" tonight in the CoffeeHouse. The Bub will return as DJ, featuring great dance tunes from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.

Admission is $2.00. Commemorative t-shirts are available for $10 in Minta Martin102.

The alcohol policy is the same as last year: beer will be available from the W.C. Deli. Alcohol is not allowed to be brought to the dance.



Open Reading

The first poetry reading of the year will be held Friday, September 18 at the O'Neill Literary House.

Everyone is invited to attend and to read. Whether it be one's own work or the writings of another, the reading will give people a chance to get back into the Washington College literary scene.

Refreshments will be served.

Student Profile: Maria Jerardi

Maria Jerardi seems to personify the word "busy". A native of Columbia, Maryland, she graduated from Wild Lake High School. Despite her arduous schedule as a Chemistry and International Studies major, Maria still finds time for community and campus service.

Her freshman year she displayed great initiative, beginning and chairing the successful charity organization Hand's Out. This past year she, with Jen Del Nero and Stephany Slaughter, began Target Tutoring which helped Garnett Elementary School Students.

Along with community service, she also served in student government and sports. Maria served as Minta Martin's dorm senator her freshman year for Minta Martin and as sophomore class president, the next. A dedicated sportswoman, she has just begun her third field hockey season and coxed crew last spring.

A member a the Junior Fellows, she travelled to Bangladesh this past summer where she had an internship at the American Embassy. She will venture to Cameroon in January1993.

In her free time, Maria enjoys roller-blading, bike riding, and piano playing. Her freshman year she performed in the Early Music Vocal Consort and presently has started her third performing year with the Nom de Plum Quartet. She is a member of the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority and the International Relations Club.

Maria's honors include the Maryland Distinguished Scholarship, the George Washington Scholarship and the Johns Hopkin's Credit Union Scholarship. She is also the recipient of the Fox Freshman Medal and the Handbook of Chemistry and Physics Award. She has been on Dean's List and is also a member of the Omicron Delta Kappa Honor Society.

The Shepherd's Song Plays Tonight

The recent death of Ryan White and announcement of Magic Johnson have shown America that the threat of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, A.I.D.S., is real. However, many people, especially the younger generation, have chosen to ignore the risk of contracting H.I.V., the virus that causes A.I.D.S. Misconceptions concerning "safe sex" have sustained many people's promiscuous life style.

A.I.D.S. and other issues discussed in the play will occur after the performance in an informal question and answer session.

The Shepherd's Song, a gripping drama, faces America's taboos: A.I.D.S., crack cocaine and teen pregnancy. The audience witnesses a small group of H.I.V. positive inmates, in different stages of denial who recount their life on the streets. The sessions are led by the man known as the Shepherd, a recovered cocaine addict and H.I.V. victim, who teaches his patients how to live and stay well despite the disease.

The actors who portray these characters give chillingly real performances. Their seemingly perfect performances stem from research through extensive reading, volunteer work, and prison visiting. The finished work has caused quite a stir across the United States. Maryland public schools have banned the play due to its raw language and graphic dialogue.

"The whole thing is about intervention, catching people at an early enough age," says Cluchey who founded the San Quentin Workshop.

The workshop, formed thirty years ago, is known to most people through the film Weeds.

Cluchey, a current resident of Silver Spring, MD, began his theatrical career at age 23, starring in Waiting for Godot. He served twelve years of a life-sentence without the possibility of parole after almost receiving the death penalty for a flesh would he inflicted on a courier he held captive during the escape of a failed armed robbery. He was released by Governor Pat Brown and after ten years on parole he was pardoned by Governor Jerry Brown.

Cluchey's credits with the San Quentin Workshop include performance and direction on Broadway after warming it up at the Arena Stage. He friend and mentor Samuel Beckett trained Cluchey to become a world-renowned interpreter of his works. He is also the recipient of an Obie for David Mamet's Edmond and is the first American winner of the Italian theater critics' Premio Critica. He also has two Los Angeles Dramalogue Critic's awards in writing, directing and acting.

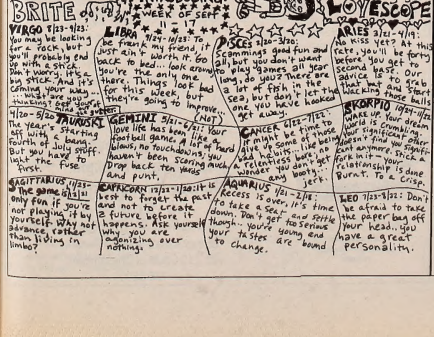
Perhaps Cluchey describes The Shepherd's Song the best. As an attempt to "show worlds we need to change ... In terms of the relationship of A.I.D.S., crack and pregnancy, there is not better vehicle than this, with characters who speak a language that provides a bridge. It is incumbent for the audience to take that message and do something with it, not just sit on their butts and be gratified."

Russian Impressionist To Speak

On Tuesday, September 15, 1992 at 8:00 p.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room, the Washington College Lecture Committee will present a lecture by Elena Figurina. She will show slides of her work as well as discuss current Russian visual arts movements.

She also will tour the Constance Stuart Larrabee Art Center to see and to talk with students on September 16.

Often compared to the great impressionists, one critic said her work represented "an immediate naive innocence ... Although on a formal level, Figurina's work may seem related to that of Matisse, Gauguin, Chagall or the German Expressionists, the artists remains distinctly individual in her representations of the world. ... The dissonant colors employed by the artist intensifies the strangeness of the beings themselves, and of the alien worlds they inhabit."



A resident of St. Petersburg, Russia, she will visit the United States for only one month. After her visit at Washington College, she will attend the openings of her one-person show, entitled International Images, outside Pittsburgh, PA and in California, respectively.

(410) 778-0536
Appointments preferred

The Nail Shoppe

Specializing in Artificial & Natural
Nail Care, Skin Care & Nutritional Products

Owner, Cheryl Hurt — 347 High Street
Owner, Karen Dionisio — Chestertown, MD

FAMILY BOOK NOOK
15% Off Hardcover Books
10% Off New Paperback Books
50% Off Pre-read Paperback Books
ALL DAY EVERYDAY
on regularly stocked titles
Welcome Washington College Students
Visit Chestertown's Newest Bookshop
DISCOVER OUR PRE-READ PAPERBACKS
CREDIT FOR YOUR PRE-READ PAPERBACKS
Washington Square Shopping Center
Rt. 213 Chestertown • 410-778-3705
Open Mon, Tues, Wed, Fri 10 - 6,
Thursday 10 - 8, Sat 10 - 5
Art & Wendy Littman Proprietors
Parents of Arthur – WC '85

Renaissance Festival: A Blast From the Past

Want to get off campus? Interested in going to England — but lack the grades or money to participate in the Oxford Junior Year Abroad program? Want to get out of the 1990s? Then spend a day at the Maryland Renaissance Festival.

The festival grounds are set up like an English village of 1535, with stands of over 130 craftspeople and merchants selling jewelry, clothing, 3 foot-tall candles, crystals, swords, pottery, trees, unicorns, dragons, wax hands, and so on. You can embarrass a friend by hiring a "mud man" to grovel noisily and dirtily at their feet.

You can find fried cheese, mead, turkey legs, steak-on-a-stick, men in tights, corn, peasant bread, pickles, apple dumplings, imported ales, and lots of other sorts of food — many of which are unavailable in the W.C. Dining Hall, even on Wednesday nights.

You can get a massage, have your fortune told, lock annoying peers in the village stocks, learn how to juggle, play games that test your aim and strength, plus sell cute friends to a flirtatious pretzel-man — or talk to one of the many other actor/vendors also roaming the festival grounds. You can hear madrigals, a recorder troupe, minstrels, bagpipe players, harpers, and pipe organists; plus see fire-eaters, horse tricks, comedy, magic, and A Midsummer Night's Dream.

For more entertainment, the continuing story of Henry VIII and Anne Boleyn is played out all day by a troupe of actors known as "The Village Ensemble."

The festival runs every weekend through October 18, from 10:30 AM to 7:00 PM, and is an event that really shouldn't be missed. Parking is free. To get there take Route 50 West past Annapolis to Route 450, Crownsville exit; take a right on Crownsville Road and follow it for one-and-a-half miles to the Fair, which will be on the left.

If you have any Renaissance-period clothing, wear it. If you don't have any Renaissance-period clothing, you may at least want to wear a silly hat, because you will feel slightly out-of-place at the festival if you don't look at least a little eccentric. You can also rent costumes inside the gate. Stay on the lookout for a sign-up sheet for a future culture-van trip.

Wanted: Yearbook Editor
Please apply in writing to Richard C. DeProspo, Publications Board Chair

Mari Jo Buhle: "A Woman's Quest for Learning"

Mari Jo Buhle, a distinguished women's historian and Associate Professor of History and American Civilization at Brown University and a MacArthur Fellow, will lecture in Norman James Theatre at 8:00 p.m.

The lecture, The Dawning Light of a New Era: Women's Quest for Learning in the Gilded Age, is sponsored by the Guy F. Goodfellow Memorial Lecture Series.

Buhle received one of 31 so-called "genius grants" given annually by John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation. The $290,000 grant, to be awarded over five years, recognizes her contributions as a pioneer in the field of American Women's history and her work with graduate students committed to the relatively new field of women's history.

Her own research interests, which the MacArthur Fellowship will permit her to pursue, is women's cultural and intellectual history. She is best known for her early book, Women and American Socialism, 1870-1920, an award-winning treatise on women in the labor movement that is considered a major contribution to the literature of the field. She recently completed her section of a textbook on post-revolutionary U.S. history, which she and three other historians are writing for Prentice-Hall, and she is finishing the final chapters of a book on the relationship between psychoanalysis and feminism.

Buhle started teaching women's history at Brown in 1972, while writing her dissertation for the University of Wisconsin in U.S. history. After a brief stint at Sarah Lawrence, she returned to Brown where her warmth and enthusiastic teaching made her undergraduate course in women's history one of the most popular in the school. Buhle has directed more doctoral dissertations than anyone else in the field of American women's history.

FREE IMPRINTING!! of first color on custom T-Shirts
Factory Direct!!
Sports Teams * College Clubs
Fraternity & Sorority Functions
Call now to find out how affordable custom printing really is! Mention this ad and get $25 off your first order! 12 pc. min.
T-Line (410) 778-5622

Suds 'n Soda
"Your Store For Convenience"
Rt. 213 & Rt. 297
1.5 Miles North of Campus
778-5077
BEER*WINE*LIQUOR*SODA*ICE*KEGS
OPEN 6 a.m.-12 mid
7 DAYS
LARGE IMPORT SELECTION
LARGE KEG INVENTORY
"WELCOME BACK SPECIAL"
MILWAUKEE'S BEST LOOSE CASE
$7.19 + tax (Reg. price $7.69)
Until Sept 30
WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS
YOU MUST BE 21 AND HAVE 2 FORMS VALID IDENTIFICATION TO PURCHASE ALCOHOL

Fall Classic
When the weather turns chilly, it's still Birkenstock® time. Add a pair of your favorite socks and let the Original Contoured Footbed support and cradle your feet. Birkenstock®
The shape of comfort.™

Arizona.™ in lots of colors
Birkenstock
Paul's Shoe Store
227 High Street
Chestertown, Maryland
778-2860

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
UNFORGIVEN
Friday & Saturday 7 & 9 • Monday-Thursday 7:30

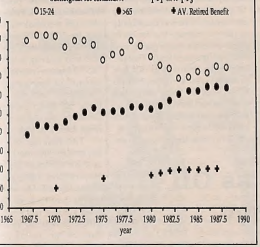
Attention
All Students!
Practice your bowling
Ten-pin and Duckpin
Monday through Friday
3 - 5 p.m.
Only $4.00 with college ID! (Price includes shoes)
Queen Anne's Bowling Centre
Rt. 213 South of Chestertown
778-5800

"Koon," from pg. 3

reduce the incentive for workers to seek work. These factors have combined with others to reduce the rate of growth in the labor force from 1.6% in the 1980's to a projected .9% in the 1990's.

Social Security taxes are also a disincentive to savings. Americans save for few reasons: chief among these are the purchase of a house or a car, education and retirement. Since Americans are guaranteed that they will receive some income upon retirement, this reduces the amount that they need to save for that expense. This explains why Americans save so much less now than they did before the implementation of Social Security.

One fear that is commonly expressed by young workers is that Social Security trust funds will become insolvent by the time that they retire. This is unlikely, as both the executive and legislative branches have proven willing to raise taxes to ensure that this does not occur.



In 1967, the SSA projected the need to raise the rate of Social Security OASDI contributions by 15% by 1988. In by 1988 the rate of taxation was increased by 35%. Given the fact that the ratio of wage earners to retirees is going to decrease sharply over the course of the next thirty years, ever-ascending tax increases are inevitable.

The most odious effect of Social Security is that it disrupts the traditional family like no other government program. Traditionally, one of the prime reasons to have children is to have someone to rely on upon reaching old age. Social Security removes this incentive by supplanting the family's traditionally supportive role.

This anti-family program causes children to neglect their obligations to their parents by fostering the erroneous assumption that the aged are financially independent in our enlightened welfare state.

This is, of course, not the case: the real beneficiaries of Social Security are the self interested politicians and the tens of thousands of government employees who inefficiently preside over a program which over the years has become an obscenely fetid vessel of vile pus spewing its foul ichor upon the fair face of our great democracy.

Table A

"Ellis," from pg. 3

considered staging "kiss ins" in front of the Casey Academic Center or covering bulletin boards on campus depicting same sex couples engaged in stages of undress and lovemaking. Then, I begin to think, is this the approach I want to take towards a group of young people who are both ignorant and unaware of what it is to be gay or lesbian?

I recall when services at Saint Patrick's Cathedral were interrupted by members of ACT-UP who then proceeded to smash communion wafers and make pleas for those people who were suffering from the AIDS virus. Are these methods helpful in what I want to accomplish on this campus? No.

What is the message that I want to convey to you, the students of Washington College? First of all, being gay is not purely in a sexual way. For decades, people have only considered gays and lesbians to be those of us who engage in deviant sexual activities with members of the same sex. While this is a part of what it is to be homosexual, a large part of my definition has been lost because of bigotry directed towards homosexuals. That part is love.

Heterosexuals engage in relations with those they love, or at least some of them do. Why do people solely consider the sexual aspect of gay and lesbian relationships? Like those heterosexual members of our community, we too are capable of love. One of my primary goals this year is to make those of you who only view gays and lesbians as sexual deviants reconsider your definition. We all live in a world that strives, or at least claims to strive, toward a unity of mankind, and a world peace. Is that possible when such negative attitudes are directed to people who live differently than you do?

Second, because of the prejudice that has been directed to the gay and lesbian community, we have lost a part of our history. People have failed to realize that an important part of the world's history was made possible by those who are gay or lesbian. André Gide, Eleanor Roosevelt, Bessie Smith, and John Maynard Keynes are only a few of those on a long list of people who made significant contributions to our rich and exciting past. Why should it be omitted from history texts that they too were homosexual? Might doing this be a helpful step in presenting to society the positive aspects of homosexuality? We should make known the efforts of those figures who gave us portions of our culture and history, those who helped direct the world toward growth and progress

This year, however, what I place far above the previous two objectives for both GALA and myself is AIDS prevention and awareness. Why? The spread of AIDS is not just a disease that effects homosexuals, but it also effects heterosexuals. It is a disease that we are all in danger of contracting. It is a common thread that unites every single one of us. This past week, I was told that a close friend of mine, who is not even 19, has tested HIV positive. AIDS is a horrifying and mysterious disease that does not discriminate against people's sexual preference, age, race, or gender. It can happen to you and happen to me. We are the generation that has been lucky enough to have been taught or at least made aware of AIDS from a time before we became sexually active. We should be coming together as a whole to combat this deadly disease. If we don't, who can say what will become of us.

My aim is not to bore you or sound redundant, but I ask you to at least be aware and tolerant of the gay and lesbian community on campus. When you enter into what has been affectionately coined the "real world" after you leave Washington College, I don't expect you to fully understand homosexuality, only to be aware that it is not a disease or something you "become." Homosexuality is loving, caring, and respecting a member of the same sex. It requires the same stipulations and efforts of what one may call "straight" relationships. It is that simple.

All I ask is that you think about it. Ask questions, don't make judgements. Above all, be aware.

SNACK SHACK
LOCATED ABOVE SUDS 'N SODA
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND
778-4230

*FRIED CHICKEN POTATO LOGS
*CHEESESTEAKS HAMBURGERS
*HERSHEY'S HAND DIPPED ICE CREAM SUNDAES/ SHAKES
*FRESH MADE SUBS
*HOMEMADE SOUPS
*FOUNTAIN SODAS

OPEN 7 DAYS
SUN-THURS 10 AM-7PM
FRI-SAT 10AM-9PM

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
236 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

Tuesday - Saturday
Evening + Real Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS + OVERLAYS + FACIALS
505 Washington Ave.
Chestertown, MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Jane Thomason
(301) 778-0898

Olde Towne Barbers
Flat Tops
Frostings
French Braids
Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

Field Hockey Falls to Dickinson, Gears up For Fairleigh Dickinson

Renee Guckert
Staff Writer

The women's field hockey travelled to Dickinson College last Saturday for their first real competition of the 1992 season. Washington's squad dominated the first half despite the treacherous field conditions, due to the heavy rains. The Lady Red Devils came back in the second half, outshooting the Shorewomen 12-5 and scoring the lone goal of the game with only three minutes left to play, to seal the 1-0 victory for Dickinson.

Freshman halfback, Jen Hanifee revealed, "I think we did fairly well for our first game and our communication on the field was good. I think the main thing we needed to work on was moving to the ball much quicker." The WAC exhibited a lot more finesse and control than the Lady Red Devils but lacked that extra jolt of aggression which ultimately put Dickinson on top. Junior Renee Guckert commented, "ourskills were there and our thought process was there, but by the time we got off a pass, Dickinson was either right on top of us or the thickness of the field had slowed down the ball too much."

Despite numerous preseason injuries and a cancelled scrimmage against Salisbury State due to severe thunderstorms, W.C.'s field hockey team continues to prepare for an exciting season. Look in next week's issue for coverage of the game against Wesley College, and come out to watch the Shorewomen tackle Fairleigh Dickinson on the WAC's own Kib Jr, tomorrow at 1:00 pm! *F.Y.I.- For those field hockey enthusiasts who feel the whistle is blown entirely too much in the course of a single game, you will be pleased to know that the infamous obstruction call has now been stricken from the rule book. This will allow players to play the ball more freely, while helping the referees to cut down on whistle blowing which previously made the game slower.

Photo by Trish McGee

Freshman Greg Walker dishes one off.

Soccer Kicks Off Fresh Season

Dave Taibl
Writer at Large

The Washington College soccer team launched its 1992 campaign with a stunning victory over Lebanon Valley College on Saturday.

The Shoremen meant business as they travelled to Pennsylvania and spent little time getting to the point of the matter. Senior captain Chris Kleberg paved the way, tallying his first goal of the year that tied him with the leading goal scorers of 1991. Seasoned veteran Chris Graham followed with his first of two goals on the day, proving that with time comes experience (and no one knows experience better than Graham). Lebanon struggled to fend off the ever-growing Sho'men momentum, but great defensive efforts by freshman standouts Tad George and Chip Helm held LVC to a lone goal. Junior sensation Rory Dillon Conway blasted his first ever Shoremen tally to seal their opponents fate. And when the dust had cleared, Washington College stood atop a 4-1 victory, looking anxiously toward Thursday's home game against Lancaster Bible.

When asked what factors led to their tremendous success, Conway stated, "Enthusiasm and a great work ethic combined with confident leadership inspired us." Kleberg added, "We've got The Juice and we'll continue to have The Juice throughout the season."

Come out and experience The Juice with the Shoremen soccer team as they travel to Dickinson on Saturday, and return to Kibler Field to take on Salisbury State September 19th.

Netters Begi First Full Season Unde Gray

Lizzy O'Hara
Staff Writer

The tennis program Washington College we through a turbulent time ing its 1991-1992 season, h Tim Gray is looking beyond obstacle and eager to begin '92-'93 season with an immea amount of enthusiasm. B the men's and the wome team did quite well last ye and hope to continue doing since there will be few chang

This year will be a rebui ing one for the women's te as their numbers 1, 3, 5, an players have either graduat or transferred. However, Gr is confident that this will b good chance for him to st with a new team and a cle slate as far as his coachin techniques are concerned.

Gray explains that "it w difficult for me to do much r cruiting because of the timi of when I came to Washingt College, but this year will gi me a chance to work with t new players and prepare f others in the fall of 1993." T schedule the team will be facin seems to be much more co petitive this year than last, b he is really looking forward t the performance of their nu ber one player this season, Pa Hendrickson.

The men's team ended thi season on a positive note b participating in the NCA tournament for the seventh ye in a row. They entered the tou nament seeded eleventh an finished ninth while beating th fifth and sixth seeded team along the way. At the end of th tournament, Trevor Hurd an Alberto Diaz were picked a First Team All-American Unlike the women's team, th men only lost their number fi player and "exhibition" sp cialist Jeff Rexford to gradu tion. Gray looks forward t having two freshmen, Er Pikus and Sam Berger, join th Shoremen this year and me tioned the hope of anoth player transferring here fro South Africa in the Spring '93. The schedule for the m looks good according to Gr and he is "very eager to beg this year."

The first important tou naments for both the team begin soon. The women beg the first weekend in October Mary Washington for the Rol tournament and the men beg at the end of September Washington and Lee in th Rolex as well.

Another Time II
Fine Furniture, Collectibles & Antiques
•housewares, lamps & decor•
10 percent discount with College ID
819 High Street Extended
Chestertown
778-6525

J & M'S FAMILY RESTAURANT
JOIN US FOR A PIZZA & AN ICE COLD DRAFT BEER
Soft Shell Crabs • Homemade Crab Cakes
Steamed Crabs • Hoagies • Philly Cheese Steaks
Dinner Served Daily 4 - 8pm • Breakfast Served All Day
Open 6am-10pm • 7 DAYS A WEEK
1 1/2 mi. S. of Chester River Bridge Next to Emily's • 778-5881

Forney's Jewelers
Chestertown, MD
778-1966
OUTDOORSMAN
Ray-Ban®

Volleyball Gets Tested by Anne Arundel

Tyler McCarthy
Staff Writer

On Wednesday of last week women's volleyball remained busy with pre-season action in a scrimmage against Anne Arundel Community College. Winning 2 out of their 3 games, they continually experimented and readjusted the young line-up looking for a chemistry which might work once the regular season begins.

On this day the starters for the Washington College Shorewomen were Beverly Diaz, Julie Dill, Miriam Jecelin, Jen Dixon, Michelle Chin, and Courtney Myers. It was an important scrimmage for these Shorewomen starters because it not only gave them the chance to learn how to function as a team but it also gave them a chance to prove what they could do individually.

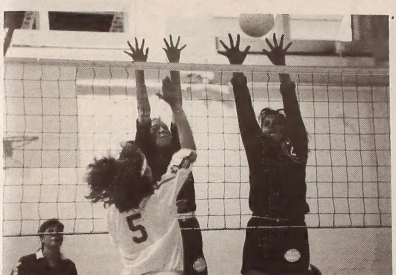


Photo by Caty Braun

Miriam Jecelin goes up with defensive stopper Beverly Diaz.

At the beginning of the match W.C. came out playing timidly and lacked aggression on the offensive side. However, as the match rolled on the Shorewomen pulled it together and began to play as a whole. Up front the team's strengths were junior Katina Duklewski and freshman Michelle Chin, the two high flying setters. These two girls play very well together and the team has high hopes that they two will continue to improve.

On the defensive side powerhouse Beverly Diaz and counterpart Julie Dill consistently came through when called upon. Diaz and Dill also worked as inspirations for the rest of the women and had the squad working like a well oiled machine as play continued.

"We definitely solidified once we were past the initial jitters," stated Diaz.

The Shorewomen opened up the season at Notre Dame Wednesday, September 9.

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

Christian Graham

Hey, Redskins Fans, IN YER FACE AND IN YER FACE HARD!! The Cowboys are back in town and they're a ridin' into town a whoopin' and wopin'! (Right there, buddy- that's the power of the editor position in action. The Bleacher Creatures can write and show favoritism any time they want- at least in this section we can.)

Anyway, let's get down to business as we present the first real Newt's POW for the '92-'93 W.C. Athletic year. You may know him as "Cracker" and you may just know him as Graham, but we The Bleacher Creatures just like to call him the lamest caps player we ever saw- Ha, ha. Chris Graham has opened up the way for the soccer team this season as he demonstrated the punch he contains striking twice for 2 goals against Lebanon Valley. Both were hit in the first half of play. Good job and if you need caps lessons give us a call!

$5 off any service over $20 with ad
(one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2655 AMD 21620

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Houston's
DOCKSIDE EMPORIUM
200 High St, Chestertown, Md. 21620
410-778-9079
Deck & Sportswear • Nautical Decor • Boating Accessories
Hobby Shop - Scale Model Trains, Ships, Boats • Books • Gifts

SENIORS! ATTENTION! IMPORTANT!
THERE IS A SENIOR MEETING ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14TH IN THE HODSON STUDY LOUNGE. ALL SENIORS SHOULD ATTEND AS THE SENIOR COMMITTEE SELECTION WILL TAKE PLACE AT THAT TIME. BE THERE!!

The Classy Closet
Benita Hyland, Owner
"We're Here for You"
Consignment Shop
10% Discount With College ID
204 High Street
Downtown Chestertown

Drop-Off Laundry
We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service
Laundromat Dry Cleaning
Kent Laundry
607 High Street
778-3551

Soccer Deftly Wins Season Opener

See Article, pg. 10

Register For Rec Sports Activities!!

WC • ELM

Sports

Netters Get Underway for Another Strong Campaign

See Article, Pg. 10

Field Hockey Edged Out by Dickinson

See Article, pg. 10

Photo by Gary Brown

Just a typical day on the job for "Frigid" Brigid Devries. She makes plays like stopping this point blank firing look easy. Coming to us three years ago from St. Mary's High School in Annapolis, Maryland, Brigid has been a tremendous force in the hopper. Her senior year should prove to be none other than spectacular.

Christian Graham: Newt's Player of The Week

Scores

Men's Soccer

Washington	4
Leb. Valley	1

Field Hockey

Washington	0
Dickinson	1
Washington	3
Wesley	0

Women's V-Ball

Washington	2
Anne Arundel	3

On Deck

Field Hockey
FDU
Sat. 12th 11 a.m.
Home

Soccer
Salisbury St.
Tues. 15th 4 p.m.
Home

Volleyball
Widener
Tues. 15th 6 p.m.
Home

Women's Volleyball Continues Pre-season Versus A.A.C.

See Article, Pg. 1

"We are Journalists, not Placators."

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

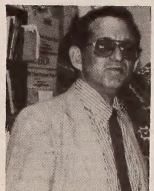
The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday night & Saturday: Partly Cloudy, chance of Showers, H mid 80s
Sunday: Fair & Cooler H mid 70s

Volume 63, Number Four • September 18, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Task Force Survey Brings Hard-Hitting Results to College, Nation

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief



Dr. Edward J. H. Weissman of the Political Science Department last week delivered "Predicting Homophobia II" to the American Political Science Association.

The 105-page paper was based on the survey put together by the Task Force on the Status of Lesbians and Gay Men at Washington College and administered last February by political science students.

The anonymous questionnaire "contained fairly standard demographic, social, political, policy and attitudinal questions," according to the report's introduction.

Two of the main goals in administering the survey were to find out what portion of the campus is homosexual, and what portion is homophobic, or opposed to gay and lesbian lifestyles.

Below are some of the results of the survey; all figures are from Weissman's report.

Dr. Ed Weissman

• Out of a sample of 88 men and women attending classes last February, 8.7 percent of the men and 9.7 percent of the women had engaged in a sexual act with a member of the same sex.

• 75 percent of the sample had engaged in unsafe sex (vaginal or anal intercourse without the use of a condom).

• The mean number of sexual partners for WC students is 6.3. The minimum reported was zero and the maximum was 38. Seven students refused to answer this question.

• When only those students who are sexually active were averaged, 85.7 percent had engaged in unsafe sex.

• Among sexually active students, women average 5.2 sexual partners, while men list 8.2.

• Less than 21 percent of WC students have been tested for HIV.

• A "feeling thermometer" was used to determine the approval rating for seventeen different groups on campus. Gays and lesbians were ranked fourteenth, followed by people with AIDS contracted from homosexual acts, Born Again Christians, and politicians. (People with AIDS, cause unspecified, were rated fifth out of 17).

From these data, the sample was divided into four groups by averaging their opinions about gays and lesbians as compared to African Americans. The score of each person was compared to the mean, and then placed into one of the four groups.

Egalitarians gave high marks to both groups (gay/lesbian and African American); bigots gave both groups low

See "Weissman," pg. 7

Oil Spills on Washington Avenue

Sam Johnston
Staff Writer

The Chestertown Volunteer Fire Department was on hand with a fire truck and one department cruiser in response to an oil spill that occurred on Washington Avenue just outside of Reid Hall around 8:00 p.m. Monday.

Traffic was backed up for about 45 minutes while a crew worked to contain and clean up the spill.

Richard White, Chief of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Department, admitted they were "not sure how" the oil got on the road, but that his staff was prepared for the situation with a special absorbent designed to soak up the hydrocarbons in the fuel.

The absorbent was applied with shovels and rakes, and the pavement was spotless by the time the crew departed.

English Faculty Preview Departmental Evaluation

Amanda Burt
News Editor

As part of a larger effort to evaluate Washington College's academics relative to other institutions, the English, Modern Languages, Business Management and Art departments are scheduled for external reviews during the 1992-93 year.

With over 80 current majors, English is considered to be one of the college's flagship departments, offering the Sophie Kerr Prize and numerous other literary endowments.

Contrary to a publication such as Rugg's Recommendations on the Colleges, which makes no mention of the strength of the English department, an external review will provide the English department with a more thorough, objective evaluation of its program. The 1992 edition of Rugg's lists only American Studies, Biology, History, Pre-Medical/Pre-Dental and Psychology as areas of study that excel here. The ELM spoke with several members of the English department about the potential benefits of an external evaluation and discovered that the majority believes the survey will be an effective means for curricular improvement.

Professor Bennett J. Lamond, Chair of the department, said he hopes the review will be scheduled for this semester. The department began its preparations for the review last year in a self-study designed to pinpoint issues for team consideration.

Lamond said the team will consist of three colleagues, chosen by the English department, from institutions similar to Washington College. The team will attend classes to observe teaching and student performance and talk with English majors as part of its study.

In addition to evaluating the nature of the major's course work and Senior Obligation, the team will review the Creative Writing Program, as well as the Forms of Literature and Composition course which is required of all Washington College freshmen.

Another concern is whether the English courses offered in the department accurately reflect current changes in the study of English Literature.

"My main concern in the department is the multiplicity of roles we all have beyond what we're hired to do. [Sometimes I wonder] if we're spreading ourselves thin," Lamond stated.

He added that the nature of various part-time contracts in the department will be reviewed and expansion to a larger full-time staff is possible. "We need to determine how to fairly incorporate the part-time faculty into the department so that their talents are not wasted," he said.

See "Evaluation," pg. 12

Inside

History Chair Responds to Knowlin, pg. 2

WC, AIDS, and You pg. 6

Othello Rolls On To Campus, pg. 10

Matt & Dude on Mtv, pg. 4

Becky Bryant Challenges Homophobia, pg. 5

Spilich Publishes Alzheimer's Anthology, pg. 13

35 years of Apathy

In the middle of the night on Wednesday, while attempting to write my editorial, I wondered what issues had confronted past ELM staffs.

I dug up the September 20, 1957 Issue of the ELM (35 years ago this week). The editor was one Toni Stallone.

"We of THE ELM sincerely hope this will be a most successful year for all of you. We remind you of the satisfaction and sense of belonging that comes with participation in extra-curricular activities and affairs," read the Editorial that week. "But we also hope no one will go overboard on these and neglect the prime reason for going on to college — to learn!!!"

Below the editorial was a truism that has followed us 35 years into the future: "Every year Washington College sees a new crop of freshman [sic], but somehow they always seem the same."

They (joan and misti) proceeded to list several types, including Billy Bookworm, Sylvia Snob, Alfred Athlete and Charlie Checkbook. My favorite is Herman Hotshot: "Herman wants to show the college crowd that he has 'been around.' To prove it he staggers into the Bird, perches at the bar, and orders a daiquiri."

One more interesting bit from the Ed page:

"Good news from SGA Social Chairman Charvie [sic] Lyons: 'Our campus is to be plagued no more by the attitude of apathy on the part of the general student body which has caused serious debate. A good yardstick to measure student interest in campus affairs is the amount of constructive criticism offered by the students themselves. This year we're really on the ball as evidenced by the suggestion found in the SGA box in the Snack Bar on the very first day students hit the campus. A very polite letter, it goes like this:

Would the college be so kind as to establish a fund, or to borrow from some existing fund, in order to relieve tension and improve general college morale, a small some to purchase a can of general purpose 3-in-1 oil to fix the damn leaky hinges on all the doors in Bill Smith.'

The suggestion box has since been removed from its post in the Snack Bar."

Apathy on this campus? Naw!

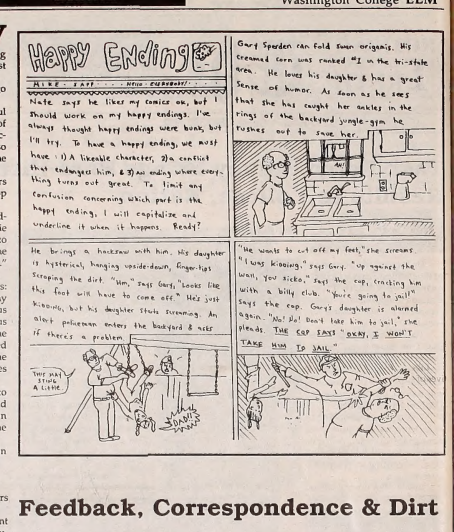
Then I checked out the issue of September 22, 1972 — 20 years ago, and the year most juniors were born.

The editor, Kevin O'Keefe, was remarking on SGA President John Dimsdale's complaint that the Board of Visitors and Governors did not take seriously his motion to include students and faculty as full participants in the Board.

"The Board, by its very nature, is constituted primarily of the social and managerial elite with a healthy sprinklin [sic] of educators. For a school with Washington's financial needs, it is imperative to have 'well placed' people on its board; however, this should not be to the exclusion of the other elements of the campus and society. The Board, in short, appears stuffy and unapproachable to the student body. Board members have no personality, instead they are a faceless part of an institution..."

Mr. O'Keefe, unless there are two, now serves on the Board of Visitors and Governors of Washington College. He, like many other members of the Board, does have both a face and a personality.

There are no students or faculty as full members; faculty representatives serve on committees, and the SGA President and myself are expected to attend full meetings, but not with a voice on motions.



I don't know who said "the more things change, the more they stay the same," but it might as well have been an ELM Editor.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddish
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Cehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters for publication for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8861.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

History Chair Responds to Knowlin

To the Editor:

In a recent column in the ELM, Zylia Knowlin expresses dissatisfaction at the degree of cultural diversity at the College. In some areas she may have a legitimate point, but I can't agree with her view that it is a "shame" that an African-American is not teaching the African-American history course.

Historians are trained to understand cultures often different from their own and to transcend their own immediate life experience. Some do and some don't. The point is that the success of a historian depends on how good a scholar or teacher the individual is and not on what color the person happens to be.

If we argue that only an African-American can be a successful teacher in an African-American course, we come close to saying that no American could teach Russian history, German history, or Latin American history and vice-versa. Could someone teach medieval history without living in the Middle Ages? Can a woman teach Shakespeare?

Many African-Americans understandably urge whites to learn something about the black experience in America. Is it now the contention that whites can't really do this anyway, and it's no use trying?

I know that Professor Carol Wilson is sensitive to the problems and aspirations of African-Americans and that she will bring this quality to her teaching in the African-American experience course. I hope Zylia Knowlin (I understand that she is in the course) will agree.

Bob Fallaw, Chair
Department of History

Maxcy Applauds Fraternity System

On Wednesday evening (September 9), the Washington College Interfraternity Council held a dinner for representatives of the three college fraternities (Theta Chi, Kappa Alpha Order, and Phi Delta Theta), to which they invited members of the Board of Visitors and Governors, the College's administration, their faculty advisors, alumni and the president of Panhellenic. I publicly wish to congratulate Jeff Lim, IFC president, and Jeff Grafton, secretary, and all those involved in organizing this very successful effort. It spoke well for the strength of the Greek system and the unity of the three social fraternities on our campus.

Edward E. Maxcy
Associate Dean of Students

Socialist?

To the Editor:

I was quite surprised to read the last ELM, in which Resident "Socialist" Scott Koon ripped into one of this nation's most vile socialist programs (Social Security). I could applaud him, but I also wonder what his fellow socialists thought of his criticism of their ideals.

Dan Kretzer '93
History Major

Crisis

Scott Ross Koon

Over the course of the next month or so we can expect to see the candidates from the two major political parties attempting to lay the blame for the recession on the other candidate's party, while each will also simultaneously attempt to take credit for the few bright spots which exist in the national economy.

This is nothing new in American political life; when the outlook is bleak politicians attempt to paint themselves as outsiders in an attempt to make it appear as if the failings of the capitalist system are the fault of their opponents.

Liberals accuse conservatives of socking it to the poor by opposing higher minimum wages and government health care programs while conservatives blame liberals for welfare policies which they see as a disincentive to seek work.

In reality, of course, it is not really the fault of either major political party—it is the fault of the capitalist system itself.

This month's issue of the liberal magazine Mother Jones seeks to blame the current economic crisis on President Bush. Among other things, Mother Jones pointed out that during the past four years the national debt rose by 57%, the Federal deficit rose by 157%, Americans unemployed 6 months or longer rose by 133% and the number of children living in poverty rose by 500,000.

These statistics are alarming—yet to blame George Bush for the failings of the capitalist system is unforgivably myopic. Capital accumulation inevitably leads to cuts in the productive sector of the economy, and this inevitably leads to a decline in consumption as laid-off and fired workers tighten their belts.

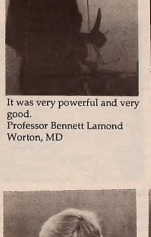
Capital accumulation leads to simultaneous higher productivity and job loss, which is a formula for disaster in an economy which is primarily fueled by personal consumption.

The latest government data available indicate that the gross domestic product has risen for the past five quarters, while unemployment has remained high.

Moreover, unemployment figures tend to deflate the total number of jobless people, as discouraged workers are not included in the unemployment statistics. When these workers are included, the jobless rate soars to about 12%.

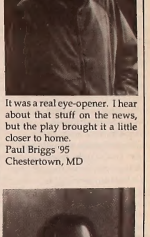
I, like most red-blooded Americans, do not personally understand all the nuances of the American economy, but I do know that increases in total output accompanied by a high rate of joblessness is one of the inevitable products of the ever increasing capitalist dynamic of accumulation as formulated by Marx. Marx wrote that:

"If the means of production, as they increase in extent and effective power, become to a less extent means of employment of laborers, this state of things is again modified by the fact that in proportion as the pro-



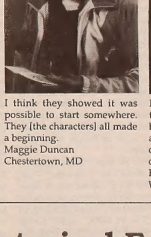
see "Koon," pg. 11

CAMPUS VOICES

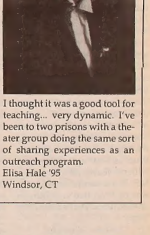


What were your reactions to the play, "The Shepherd's Song?" (See AIDS article, page 6)

It made me think about some of my friends at home. I know people on the Eastern Shore with AIDS. It's really scary.
Heather Lynch '93
Berlin, MD



It was very powerful and very good.
Professor Bennett Lamond Worton, MD



It was a real eye-opener. I hear about that stuff on the news, but the play brought it a little closer to home.
Paul Briggs '95
Chestertown, MD

Even though I can't personally relate to the AIDS problem, because the characters were so real, I felt a visceral connection to them and hence the problem.
Alexandra Baez '94
Great Falls, VA

I think they showed it was possible to start somewhere. They (the characters) all made a beginning.
Maggie Duncan
Chestertown, MD

I thought it was a good tool for teaching... very dynamic. I've been to two prisons with a theater group doing the same sort of sharing experiences as an outreach program.
Elisa Hale '95
Windsor, CT

Open Forum: The Daly Historical Eyesore

Sherry Ann Menton is a junior double majoring in English and History. She is editor of Other Worlds, WC's genre fiction magazine and of Open Minds, a campus issues-oriented pamphlet.

When I first approached the ELM about getting space in the Open Forum to discuss the plan for the new Daly Academic Building, I was informed that several people had complained to them about the location of the building.

Paradoxically, the location of the Daly Building is just fine with me. Placed behind Bill Smith and in line with Larrabee and Gibson, the new building will be convenient to Bill Smith and the mailroom, and will create an academic quad along the yet-unnamed mall that extends south from Martha Washington Square.

Sherry Menton

My problem with the plan for the Daly Building is in the design of its facade. The model depicted in last week's ELM shows a building Georgian in style, even more traditionally so than the CAC, actually. The accompanying article describes detailing designed to give the building an open-air feel, with bay windows in the computer center and a two-level atrium above the first floor central courtyard. To carry out this open-air feel, the staircases on either side of the front entrance to the building are to be "surrounded by glass cylinders with lanterns at the top," with said glass cylinders jutting anachronistically out from the front facade.

These glass stairwells are completely inappropriate for a variety of reasons. On the practical side, the glass panes provide a tempting, three story tall bull's-eye to weekend carousers. If the administration thinks it has problems with people destroying the projection screen in the CAC Forum room, just wait until this building goes up and the windows start getting broken.

Another technical problem with these glass-enclosed staircases is the propensity that glass has for magnifying heat. My high school had a glass staircase, and I know firsthand that it will invariably be at least 90 degrees inside that stairwell. While this might be attractive in the wintertime to residents of dormitories that don't have thermostats in every room, it will be vexing to the students and faculty who have to use this building every day, and will be less than attractive to prospective students who enter the sauna/stairwell while touring the campus' pride and joy.

While the above-mentioned difficulties would be annoying, what truly horrifies

See "Menton," pg. 5

Mtv: The Taste of a New Generation

On September 9, Elvis Matt Shields and Doug "Dude" Smith watched the Mtv Video Awards. What follows is a n actual transcript of their actual conversation.

DS: I don't want to watch Melrose Place. I'm too bummed out about that whole earring scene between Dylan and Brenda. The way the commercials have been hyping it out all week I thought she was going to kill him.

MS: Blaming it on his mother, what a creep. I can't believe people say he looks like me.

DS: Yeah, Brenda deserves better and you look more like Brandon anyway. Hey, what's on MTV?

MS: What? You don't wanna watch Melrose Place?

DS: The hell with that. . . . Change the channel will you?

MS: You're right, those cats on Melrose ain't cool rockers like the kids on the Heights.

DS:(singing) "How do you talk to an angel?"

MS: OH, NO! A Pepsi commercial! Plug your ears.

DS: CHANGE THE CHANNEL!

Shields leaps to his feet.

MS: Save seat!

He fiddles with the cable box (television engages in playful TV-like action) stopping on the audio/video nipple, channel 33, MTV. What they don't know is just how big the worm they just bit is.

MS: It's the MTV Video Music Awards!

DS: Hey wow! It's Dana Carvey doing George Bush. That's not old, worn-out or tired!

MS: Want me to get you a beer?

DS: Sure… Hurry up… you're missing the Sacred Cowes, and Bruce is wearing bell-bottoms with pot leaves all over 'em.

MS: Bruce sure has lost a lot of weight. Wait, that's not Fatman on the drums. That's some dirty hippy.

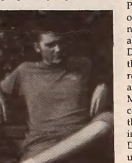
DS: Think he went solo?

MS: Dude, put your glasses on. That's some Sacred Cowes cover band.

DS: Oh, wait, that's the Black Crowes. E-A-B chord progression; when was the last time you heard one of those?

The next half hour saw Bobby Brown Humpin' with dancers that were nowhere nearly as bonkers as Hammer's dancers; U2 performed live via Zoo TV with Garth (Who's this Garth guy?); Def Leppard got rocked and ended the night's broadcast for millions of sleepy junior boppers (TV cameras discreetly avoided showing one-armed-wonder Rick "I'm not telling him he's out of the band. You tell him" Allen's stump); We all smelled Nirvana as Kurt "Mr. Courtney Love" Cobain took the stage sporting a stylin' Bruce "76 Olympics" Jenner haircut, oh, and that stupid bass player thought he was Pete "I used to club people in the head with my guitar, but now I'm sensitive because I'm gay" Townshend and clubbed himself in the head with his guitar. Upon accepting awards later in the show Nirvana's Chris "I just clubbed myself in the head on national TV, and boy do I feel like a dope" Novoselic's forehead sported a nasty welt that looked extremely sensitive . . . no comment as to the welt's sexual preference; Elton John provided ample time to grab more beer and use the bathroom. We now rejoin our unsuspecting viewers already in progress.

DS: Pearl Jam? They're like a bad band coming from an even worse band. That overdose was the best thing to happen to all parties involved: the dead guy looks like a cool rocker now, the band inherited credibility and the new singer doesn't have to work at Burger King anymore.



MS: He kept the hat though . . . More like "Hurl Jam." Wait, this song's about one of those homicidal-demon-possessed elementary school kids with an "I'm the NRA" sticker on his New Kids lunch box. Yeah, like Pink Floyd and Metallica haven't already covered that ground.

DS: (singing) "Hold my breath as I wish for death. . . " But these guys have nothing lyrically on Metallica. "Please God kill me!"

MS: Not another Pepsi commercial.

DS: OK, look . . . the commercial is so obvious. These kids are pursued into a dark alley by the critter from the Alien movies. It's about to bite into their tiny little heads and suck out all their bodily fluids, right? But at the last minute, the lads offer the thing a Pepsi. The creature scampers off into the night, with a gut full of Pepsi, and here's the kicker: it doesn't even touch the kiddies. I saw Alien 3 over the summer. I've seen all three movies actually, and the only time the Alien didn't kill whoever was within a hundred yards was when it had already put its eggs into it. These kids really don't have a clue, do they?

MS: Poor kids . . . they probably fell for the whole Smurf thing, too. Why else would you have blue people, anyway?

DS: No, and get this: you know that other Pepsi commercial? The one with the pizza dudes who get picked up by a flying saucer because they happen to announce the brand of soft drink they're carrying in the car?

MS: Of course, that's just the GPS receivers in their fillings transmitting along low-frequency radio waves. Anybody with a short-wave could pick up on that conversation. Use code words or something . . . pig Latin. Christ! Why didn't they just tell 'em where they were?

DS: So these pizza dudes get picked up by the aliens, who analyze their Pepsis and send them on their way, minus a few tissue samples and plus some free creative dentistry. And they're so obvious . . . no other soft-drink company uses extra-terrestrial imagery in their advertising. I mean, ever since I started having those dreams about Pepsico trying to kill me, I've been watching my every move. Don't think I haven't; it's like they control everything. Did you ever notice that The Phone Company and The Pepsi Corporation have the same initials?

MS: Good thing we've taken the necessary precautions. I can't believe that they would allow supermarkets to sell GPS blocking devices. I guess nobody realizes yet. Good thing we stocked up.

The phone rings. MS and DS look at each other.

DS: I think I need more aluminum foil. My thoughts seem to be escaping.

MS: Better take a layer of the tin. We don't want to run out of the good stuff. Just wrap it tighter. Check it out! It's the Red Hot Chili Peppers!

DS: Anthony "Fishboy" Kiedis sucks.

MS: Didn't they sell Pepsi at Lollapalooza?

DS: Sure, they're trying to co-opt all the little punk rockers.

MS: Yeah, I see it all ever so clearly now. An army of steel-toed brats force-feeding us Pizza Hut and Taco Bell, and all of them drinking the choice of a neo-generation. Tell me more about these dreams of yours.

DS: Wait until Heather's out of the house (Heather Evans: their roommate). I'm not too sure about her.

MS: What about that Diet Pepsi commercial where Cindy "Yes, these are real" Crawford goes into a trailer home with a can of Diet Pepsi and comes out after undergoing some sort of a transformation.

DS: And the old ladies in the commercial look at Mrs. Gere knowing the physical changes that occurred to her upon consumption of the laced liquid and remarked to one another that they too will drink Pepsi to experience the same metamorphosis themselves. It all makes perfect sense.

MS: That Cindy Crawford's not shy about it either. She's got her GPS receiver mounted right on her face!

DS: I think that's a mole.

MS and DS sit silently through Michael "The grey hermaphrodite" Jackson's, I'm sure that was live footage, appearance; then came Canada's Bryan "Chris Jackson's fault" Adams doing something that was instantly forgettable. And now back to a colorful living room at tranquil 505 High Street:

MS: Oh, look it's Barkley vs. Godzilla, how cute. Of course, Barkley wins, cuz it's gotta be the shoes. How come Godzilla didn't breathe fire on Barkley's head or something? Its' not like there was a ref anywhere.

DS: And they wander off into the atomic sunset, probably to drink Pepsis. You know, Godzilla would be the perfect "spokesman" . . . blackmailing whole nations into drinking a particular beverage out of fear for their lives. Choice of a generation, my ass.

MS: More like the choice of a planet living on its belly because a 100-story lizard with Gene Simmons breath (pre-removal of makeup) has been given a corporate-sponsored license to destroy. It makes me sick.

DS: Speaking of being sick, look! It's Guns N' Roses doing their hit "November Rain." Kinda sounds like Elton John trying to rip-off "Stairway To Heaven."

MS: That is Elton John, dude. Doesn't he have the AIDS?

DS: Oh, get a clue. How would Elton John get the AIDS? He's not a needle user. And wasn't it these Guns N' Roses guys who you beat up, Matt?

MS: Well, I took out the body guard while Adam Brown kicked the shit out of Slash. I told you about all that, right? Me and Adam were in this slimy little bar in New York when G N' R strutted in after their

See "MTV," pg. 5

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
SISTER ACT
Friday & Saturday 7 & 9 • Monday-Thursday 7:30

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 18 MICHAEL MULVANEY Blues From Charlottsville
SAT 2 The BAY COUNTRY GENTLEMEN Bluegrass and Country
THURS 24 THE DENNS Texas Duo: Folk/Blues singer songwriters

On Being "Straight" in a "Gay" Organization

Rebecca Bryant

I was recently in the ELM office with a friend when he received a Broadcast message from "LOU". The conversation started with the question, "Are you a girl?". My friend responded, "I'm a gay male." The conversation ended unpleasantly with a response from "LOU" to the effect that gays are the ones who are insecure about their sexuality. I'm tired of them trying to force their sexuality on others, he said, "Fuck off."

All the while, I was watching the conversation unfold with interest. After Lou's last response I wanted to answer back. Unfortunately, because I am computer illiterate I typed too slowly, messed up the message, and by the time I was ready to send it, "LOU" had left Broadcast.

I'm a heterosexual female who is very secure about her own sexuality. And yet, I'm treasurer of GALA, Washington College's Gay and Lesbian Alliance. Is this confusing to many people? Yes. I'm sure many of you are thinking, "Why is she a member of a gay student group if she's not gay?" One would not join the WC Swim Team if one couldn't or didn't like to swim. I'd like to explain why I feel it is important for the heterosexual community to support the homosexual community on campus.

Last summer one of my best friends "came out." He admitted to me that he was gay. In all honesty, I was not surprised. I had already suspected that he might be gay, but I did not want to confront him. I felt it would be better for him to tell me when he was comfortable. Since his revelation, our friendship has not changed much, yet I've noticed a change in my friend. He seems happier, more relaxed, and at peace with himself.

Even though I have a homosexual friend, I have not had to wonder about my own sexuality. He does not spend his time trying to convert me or others for that matter. Yet, this is a common misconception of heterosexuals. "LOU" expressed the fear of a gay trying to force homosexuality on him. This simply isn't the case and is certainly not the aim of GALA. GALA tries to raise awareness of homosexual issues and tries to educate people. It is not a radical group of homosexuals trying to take over the world by brainwashing "straights."

Since I joined GALA, my own awareness of gays has heightened, and I feel I am a better friend because of this. I am aware of negative portrayals of gays in the media. When I hear of violence against gays, I am hurt. These are my friends being beaten. GALA tries to overcome homophobic fears in people's minds. Homosexuals are simply human beings who deserve the same respect and rights as every other human being.

To join GALA, you do not have to be gay or have a gay friend, relative, etc. You just have to recognize that gays and lesbians are discriminated against daily and need the support of a group of friends just as any other minority in our community needs support. If I do not have to explain to you the importance and legitimate need for the NAACP in our country, then I should not have to explain any further the very real need for organizations such as GALA.

From "MTV," pg. 4

Meadowlands show and started doing cover tunes on stage.

DS: So why did you kick their asses? Was it because Slash is a dwarf?

MS: Yeah, he's a dwarf all right, but that had nothing to do with us kicking his ass. I like dwarves, I really do. But that dwarf was wearing red, white and blue cut off jeans over fishnet stockings. I think you know what I'm talking about.

DS: Red, white and blue, that can only mean one thing . . .

MS: Yup, Pepsi colors.

DS: Christ! I mean, I knew about the ads for Black Death vodka, but that's OK, you know? That's respectable, honest work. But glamorizing this. . . JUNK! to, to kids is just sick. Slash is a public figure, a role model to children the world over. You think he'd set a better example or something. It's that whole rock-star mentality, you know? Anything for a buck. Maybe he should seek help.

MS: Once they got a GPS receiver in your ass, it's all over. There's little anyone can do to help.

DS: Maybe we could send him some foil.

MS: And the Warner Communications people won't confiscate it immediately? Get with the pogrom, dude.

DS: Check out those video bombshells faking that they're playing orchestral accompaniment to Axl "I stuff my lycra tights" Rose. I was in high-school band for four years and there weren't any chicks like that . . . They all tended to look like that big-boned lass in Wilson Phillips.

MS: Don't you get it? G N' R has revived the Robert Palmer girls for the '90s! What a great idea... now if we could just replace everybody else in the band. . . .

The awards were fraught with disappointment, but nothing angered these young critics more than the pirating of the music of the Beastie Boys for the show's commercials, without even nominating the band once. Like the Beastie Boys would have anything to do with a bunch of lame-ass Pepsi swilling TV execs with $2000 suits and haircuts their mother gave them. Kriss Kross — can you believe this one? — got dissed for best rap video, and in a bizarre twist of fate, Eric Clapton stole the best rock video from the shoo-in, Weird Al Yankovic. Then again, Weird Al didn't throw his two-year old son from the top story of a real tall building and then try to play it off by writing a really bad song about it. Matt suggested that someone should watch him when he's alone to make sure that he doesn't burst out into spontaneous fits of laughter whenever he sees pictures of his departed son, or picks up his royalty checks.

DS: There oughta be a law for people like that Clapton fella.

MS: There is, but in our topsy-turvy society, it doesn't apply to truly evil people like that. They can just walk the streets, free to do anything to anyone they want to, and then write a really sappy song about it.

DS: If he shows up at our house, we should pretend we're not here.

MS: Like he won't have X-ray glasses equipped with ultra-violet and infra-red scopes. You might as well try to hide from God.

DS: I wonder what kind of soda he drinks. . . .

So we leave now, with our humble narrators sitting in front of a glowing video screen as the credits roll and the music fades. They are each left with a hollow feeling for having wasted three and a half hours watching this presentation. They sit in silence for several minutes, neither of them wanting to get up to change the channel, then. . . .

MS: Hey, Doug?

DS: Yeah?

MS: Did you ever realize that "Pepsi Cola" backwords spells "Aloc Is Pep?"

DS: This could be worse than I thought!

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap T-Neck has been most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.

10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442

We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

"Menton," from pg. 3

me about these glass staircases is the glaring anachronism they present. Significant portions of this campus are designated historic sites and are protected by Chestertown law. In the past, the Washington College administration has gone to considerable trouble to safeguard the historic content of this campus. The opening of the student lounge in Hodson Hall was delayed and much money expended in order to properly restore the college seal found underneath the bookstore floor.

The CAC, whatever we think of its functionality, is not appallingly out of place architecturally.

These glass stairwells will directly face the back of Bill Smith Hall, on which the administration plans to spend several hundred thousand dollars conducting a renovation that will be in keeping with both safety codes and the building's historic status. To have these "glass cylinders" directly opposite the lovely (and soon to be restored to their former loveliness) stained glass of Norman James Theater invites a comparison that would not reflect favorably on the building Mr. Daly has endowed Washington College to build.

It would be very easy t brick these staircases over adding windows in the stair wells to provide an open-air historically acceptable feel t the building. In light of the can and sensitivity for the heritag of the Washington Colleg campus that the administratio has demonstrated in the past, find it remarkable, and lamen table, that it has not alread demanded the removal of th "glass cylinders" from the pla of the Daly Building.

AIDS: Wake Up Now, or Wake Up Dead

Jennifer Reddish
Arts & Entertainment Editor

Do you have Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS), herpes, chlamydia, syphilis, or genital warts? Most people's knee-jerk reaction to that question, of course, is "No." When was the last time you awoke with no memory of the previous night, next to a total stranger?

According to statistics complied by Time Out, The Truth about H.I.V., AIDS and You, 75 percent of AIDS cases worldwide are the result of heterosexual contact, and AIDS is the sixth leading cause of death among young people between the ages 15-24.

Washington College, despite its remote location, is not isolated from AIDS. On Friday, September 11, The San Quentin Drama Workshop, two members of which have died of AIDS, presented "The Shepherd's Song," which examined the connection between crack and AIDS. The play's characters came from the streets, where they contracted the syndrome from shared needles, prostitution and crack addiction.

Though directed towards inmates, many of whom have little education, the play's message remained clear: everyone, women, heterosexuals, homosexuals, even unborn children are vulnerable to HIV infection.

Statistics support this notion, even in the isolated areas of Maryland's Eastern Shore. As of 1991, fifty-three living cases of AIDS were reported. The Center for Disease Control estimates 6.5 HIV carriers exist for every full-blown AIDS case.

However, the Whitman Walker Clinic finds these numbers modest, gauging approximately 10 to 15 HIV carriers to each AIDS victim.

According to these numbers, as many as 530-795 Eastern Shore residents have become HIV carriers. College and resort towns, such as Chestertown and Ocean City, have higher concentrations of HIV infected people due to increased sexual activity.

Despite the risk, many college students remain promiscuous which has spread sexually transmitted diseases at a rate fifty percent higher than HIV. The transmission stems from the hazardous mix of alcohol, recreational drug use and sex.

According to Gary Filmore, AIDS Educator at the Whitman Walker Clinic, "Being stoned or drunk lowers one's commitment to safer sex. Everyone's unbelievably attractive when inebriated, and one does not think of asking questions about a partner's sexual history or about using a condom.

As a student security guard at Brown University, it was not unusual to find a young lady or man naked in the woods by the school due to gang or date rapes brought about by drinking."

Students can prevent communicable sexual illnesses and violent assaults through self-preservation. Women should remain in large groups while drinking — even the nicest of men can become aggressive while inebriated. Drinking should be done responsibly, avoiding excessive inebriation.

If AIDS infection is suspected, drinking, smoking, and drug use, which weaken the immune system, should be curbed or stopped. Frank discussion concerning a partner's sexual history is imperative.

Unprotected anal sex, for women and men, is particularly dangerous, due to the large, absorbing cells in the rectum. The penetration recipient during sexual activity is most at risk due to the tissue tear that normally occurs. Semen and other bodily fluids easily enter these newly-formed abrasions.

AIDS transmission occurs though body fluids via intimate contact. The HIV virus, which usually takes three to six months for an infected individual to develop antibodies (and be detectable), eradicates the body's defense against disease.

A carrier of HIV does not have AIDS, nor does the individual necessarily develop the syndrome. Twenty different diseases indicative of the illness have been identified by the Center for Disease Control. Therefore one does not die of AIDS, but of the diseases it allows one to receive.

The cast of Shepherd's Song

Dental dams (cut open condoms or non-microwavable plastic wrap) should be used when having oral-anal sex or oral sex on a woman.

Testing for the HIV antibody is important, especially if one is promiscuous. An infected person may carry the virus for eight to ten years without any symptoms.

The "AIDS" test itself is a misnomer, because the blood exam does not diagnose the syndrome, but only detects the antibodies one creates if the virus is present.

If the initial test is positive, a confirmatory test is run to make sure that no other medical condition you might have may have caused the disease.

Free, Anonymous HIV antibody testing is available at the Kent County Health Department, Monday through Friday, preferably before 3:00 p.m. The individual is identified only by a number. Positive or negative outcomes are released only to the patient.

To an AIDS victim, the dust in the air becomes potentially lethal. This list has become outdated, for many AIDS-related complexes in females were not known when the roster was created.

For vaginal and anal sex as well as oral sex on a man, reliable condoms should be used. Lifestyles condoms, available at Health Services through the three-for-free program, have one of the worst performance rates on the market.

Confidential (different from anonymous) testing reveals test results to those who need to know, including insurance agencies. Legislation may make personal AIDS information more accessible to families, employers and the general public.

To make an appointment, simply call 778-1350 and ask for Ms. Moore. Anonymous testing is conducted. Results are available eight to ten days later. If you have the disease, social and support services along with mental and health counseling will be available.

During this time, avoid alcohol, smoking and drugs, for they weaken the immune system.

AIDS is no longer a calling card to immediate death. A positive HIV analysis means you must take care not to infect others with the disease. Continue a healthy lifestyle including a well-balanced diet free of tobacco, alcohol and controlled substances.

One should make sure not to expose himself to the virus again; re-infection simply renders the immune system weaker, causing AIDS to surface earlier.

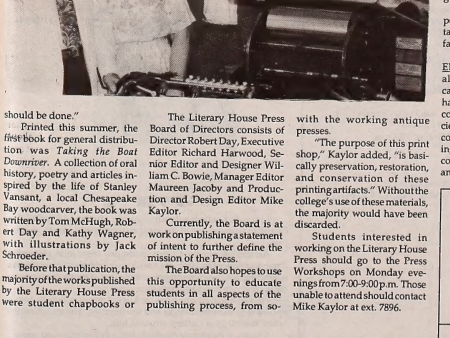
Simple preventive techniques can prolong the enjoyment one has of life. Sexual relations should represent an enjoyable part of one's life, not a nightmare. Rhetoric about God's punishment against gay men should cease. The spread of the infection in the homosexual community has slowed, with heterosexual females become the fastest-growing group. Worldwide, 75 percent of AIDS results from heterosexual contact.

As for the Washington College campus, October marks AIDS Awareness Month, sponsored on campus by the Gay And Lesbian Association in conjunction with Washington College Health Services and the Student Activities Office. It will feature pamphlets, testing information and lectures.

Students, need to wake from their sexual dreamland. Hiding from the real world ended with prep-school graduation. As of right now, one out of every 250 American adults will have HIV By the year 2000, approximately 40 million people will carry the virus around the globe.

The time to prevent communication of sexual diseases is now, before one becomes a carrier and infects others.

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown



The Classy Closet
Consignment Shop
10 % Discount
With College ID
Benita Hyland, Owner
"We're Here for You"
204 High Street
Downtown Chestertown

Literary House Press Expands

Sam Johnston
Staff Writer

The O'Neill Literary House printing press workshop underwent a radical expansion with the formation of the Literary House Press publishing company last Spring and the addition of a new mechanical press last June.

The purpose of this new publishing company, said T. Michael Kaylor, Director of the Literary House Press, is "finding and publishing things that should be done."

Printed this summer, the first book for general distribution was Taking the Boat Downriver. A collection of oral history, poetry and articles inspired by the life of Stanley Vansant, a local Chesapeake Bay woodcarver, the book was written by Tom McHugh, Robert Day and Kathy Wagner, with illustrations by Jack Schroeder.

Before that publication, the majority of the works published by the Literary House Press were student chapbooks or items of interest to the immediate Washington College community. Kaylor said, "first we are printer to the college. After that we intend on publishing books of regional Bay interest."

Although prior publications were printed by hand on the Pressroom's platen presses, the gift of a Heidelberg press from the Kent County School System will allow for a higher volume of work to be produced without compromising the standard of excellence for which the pressroom is known.

licitation and editing to selection of paper and distribution.

A number of students got hands-on experience over the summer, when, working under a six-week deadline, they learned to operate the new press, print 1,000 copies of the book, and bind them by hand.

"The learning curve was great on that one," Kaylor laughed.

Taking the Boat Downriver was printed in exchange for the type used. The type now resides in the pressroom along with the working antique presses.

"The purpose of this print shop," Kaylor added, "is basically preservation, restoration, and conservation of these printing artifacts." Without the college's use of these materials, the majority would have been discarded.

Students interested in working on the Literary House Press should go to the Press Workshops on Monday evenings from 7:00-9:00 p.m. Those unable to attend should contact Mike Kaylor at ext. 7896.

The Literary House Press Board of Directors consists of Director Robert Day, Executive Editor Richard Harwood, Senior Editor and Designer William C. Bowie, Manager Editor Maureen Jacoby and Production and Design Editor Mike Kaylor.

Currently, the Board is at work on publishing a statement of intent to further define the mission of the Press.

The Board also hopes to use this opportunity to educate students in all aspects of the publishing process, from so-marks. Homophobics responded negatively only to gays/lesbians, and racists were negative only about African Americans.

"Weissman," from pg. 1

Egalitarians and bigots were a tie: 32 percent of the campus is one or the other. The remaining portion is 27 percent homophobic and 9 percent racist.

Women tend to be more open than men at WC: While 45 percent of women are egalitarian, only 20 percent of men are.

Bigots are about even: 30 percent of women and 33.3 percent of men. Twenty percent of women are homophobic, compared to 33.3 percent of men; only 5 percent of women are racist, compared to 12.5 percent of men.

• Support of gay rights: 54.5 percent agree that sexual orientation should be included as a factor in human rights laws.

Weissman told the ELM that the Task Force has already begun to affect the campus. Lesbians and gay men have "greater visibility, greater comfort ... [the College's] policies of nondiscrimination ... will come to have some real meaning ... [and we are] beginning to confront the issues of prejudice and bigotry, as well as issues involving AIDS," he said.

One of Weissman's favorite statistics was the one showing the gender differences in egalitarians, bigots, etc. "There's a real gender gap on this campus... women and men are really significantly different."

Although Weissman stressed that the results of the survey go beyond student life, he advocates serious reforms in the way that gay and lesbian students are treated. Counseling, preferrably by gay caregivers, is a must for those students coping with "coming out," he said.

"Aid is a must. Other things must end or be cut back to free up funds for programs which deal with the very life of members of this community.

"This college is in absolute

This college has confused trivia with a liberal arts education cent of men.

• As for opinions on homosexual issues, 62.5 percent of those surveyed disagree with US military policy of banning gay men from the armed forces.

denial of everything important," said Weissman. "This college has confused trivia with a liberal arts education."

He stressed the significance inherent in the finding that 85 percent of the students engage in unsafe sex. "Unless the college seriously undertakes programs of AIDS education and issues of sexuality, the overwhelming probability is that one-third of the students, or more, will be dead before their tenth college reunion."

Weissman announced at last Monday's faculty meeting that the official report of the task force should be finished by the end of the month, as the force's activities wind to a close.

Students for Vote America

Washington College will take part in a nationwide effort sponsored by the Vote America Foundation to increase voter participation by college-age people.

The Vote America Foundation is a non-profit, nonpartisan organization working with student groups at high schools and colleges across the nation to improve voter awareness and participation.

"Washington College Students for Vote America," in conjunction with local election officials, will hold a "Vote About It" Voter Registration Week, the week of September 28 to October 2, to register students to vote.

During that week tables with registration sheets and voting information will be set up in the cafeteria. The organization will then hold a Voter Turnout Week to remind and encourage students to vote on Election Day or by absentee ballot.

The group will also provide voting information for all 50 states for WC's out-of-state students. Anyone interested in helping should contact Stacy Sherman, (Queen Anne 102) Doug Peterson, (Talbot 206) or Tanya Allen (Reid Apt.).

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists Materials
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
P.O. Box 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Attention
All Students!
Practice your bowling
Ten-pin and Duckpin
Monday through Friday
3 - 5 p.m.
Only $4.00 with college ID! (Price includes shoes)
Queen Anne's Bowling Centre
Rt. 213 South of Chestertown
778-5800

Week at a Glance

September 18 - 24

Friday 18, Sunday 20-Monday 21
Film Series: Where Angels Fear to Tread
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

Friday 18
Meeting: Pro-Choice Referendum Task Force
Kent County Public Library, 7:30 p.m.

Sale: Poster Show
Casey Academic Center Gallery
9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m.
Sponsored by the Washington College Bookstore

Open Reading
O'Neill Literary House, 9:00 p.m.

Dance: Senior Bash Back
Band: Derryberry and Alagia
Martha Washington Square
9:00 p.m.-1.00 a.m.
Rain location: CoffeeHouse

Saturday 19 - Sunday 20
Othello
UMBC's Shakespeare on Wheels
Campus Mall, 8:00 p.m.
Rain location: Tawes Theatre
Sponsored by Sophie Kerr Committee, Lecture Series and Actors Community Theatre †

Saturday 19
Club Fair
Cater Walk, 3:00 p.m.-5:00 p.m. †

Tour: Chestertown Candle Tour
6:00 p.m.-10:00 p.m.
For tickets and information: (410) 778-3499 †

Velcro Wall
Kent Quad, 8:00-11:00 p.m. †

Room to Room-Around the World in a Day
International House,
10:00 p.m.
$3.00 †

Sunday 20
Comedy: Def Comedy Jam
Wicomico Youth & Civic Center,
8:00 p.m., $19.50
For tickets and information call:
(410) 548-4911

Monday 21
Last Day to change to Pass / Fail

Film Discussion Group
Movie: Rear Window
O'Neill Literary House, 9:00 p.m.

Tuesday 22
Class: Jazz
Dance Studio, BAJLFC, 4:30-6:00 p.m.

Meeting: Visual Artists' Union
New Members Welcome
CSL Art Center, 7:00 p.m.

National Reading: Writer's Harvest for the Homeless
Miller Library Terrace, 7:00 p.m.
For information call: (778) 7895 †

Wednesday 23
Internship Coordinator:
Bureau of Near Eastern and South Asia Affairs
CAC Commons Room
3:00 p.m.-4:00

Meeting: Junior Year Abroad Interest
Hynson Lounge, 3:30 p.m.

Class: Ballroom Dance
Dance Studio, BAJLFC, 6:00-7:00 p.m.

Comedy: Snicker's Comedy Club
Maryellen Hooper
Student Union, 8:30 p.m.
$1.00 †

Thursday 24
Class: Ballet Class
Dance Studio, BAJLFC, 4:30-6:00 p.m.

† see related article

Leonardo da Vinci: The Inventions exhibit will be open to the public in the Tawes Lobby, Gibson Performing Arts Center until October 2.

Renaissance Festival in Annapolis, Maryland will run until October 19.

A&E

Seniors Throw Themselves a Party

The "Senior Bash Back", sponsored by the senior class, will occur this Saturday, September 19 in Martha Washington Square at 9:00 p.m. In the event of rain, the dance will be moved to the CoffeeHouse.

Remember to bring your student I.D. Admission is $2.00 for the general public and free for seniors.

The dance features Derryberry and Alagia. The band formed their acoustic rock duo as undergraduates at Georgetown University and have performed, recorded and toured around the eastern United States since 1987.

They recorded their most recent album, Ruabaga Stew , with Grammy winner producer and guitarist John Jennings. Nominated for eight Wammies (Washington Area Music Awards), they received the Wammie for Best Acoustic Artist / Group.

Student Profile: Ciaran O'Keeffe

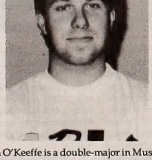

Photo by Andrew Stone

Ciaran O'Keeffe is a double-major in Music and Psychology. Ciaran is perhaps one of the most charismatic students on campus.

An English citizen, Ciaran graduated from John Hampden Grammar School in 1989. He took a year sabbatical from school, beginning his own volunteer business in paranormal investigations. (He has business cards to prove it).

He also traveled abroad in the United States, where he began applying to various colleges and universities. His search ended when Washington College wrote to him.

Ciaran, a third-year student, has scholarships and second second-semester junior status. He received college credit for his advance level exam music scores. President of two clubs, Rugby and the International Relations Club, Ciaran edits N.O.D., a comic book. (The acronym's official meaning is Never Omit Decadence, but Necrophiliacs on Drugs also has been mentioned).

Ciaran is a member of the Dale Adam Heritage Society and hopes to begin the Debate Society soon.

However, Ciaran's first love is music. He performs with the Jazz Ensemble and the Early Music Vocal Consort. As of last week, Ciaran has become the musical director at The Emmanuel Episcopal Church.

In his spare time, Ciaran is a researcher-member of a psychic researcher society, a steadfast horror film fan and an infamous pool hussler. He also enjoys music writing and piano playing.

Ciaran's outlook on life is simple: "Life is like a grapefruit. It's yellow and dimply on the outside and soft and squishy on the inside and you have half of one for breakfast."

Churchill Rocks Their Stage

John Fahey and Cliff Eberhardt will appear at 7:300 p.m., Saturday, October 10 in the Churchill Theatre. Tickets may be mail-ordered until October 1 or purchased at the box office, (410) 758-1331. Tickets cost $17.50.

Cliff Eberhardt will open for John Fahey. Chosen by Billboard Magazine as one of the '90s brightest new talents, Eberhardt has a husky voiced, folk rocker style. His acoustic guitar music, along with a "pop combo," will feature songs from his 1990 number one folk-rock album The Long Road.

Described as a "legendary guitar master," John Fahey has graced the folk rock scene since the late 1960s. His latest album, God Time and Causality, has been likened to a "fine wine, these tunes carry the richness and fullbodied feel only time can provide."

His repertoire includes originals such as "Revelation," "The Red Pony," and "Requiem."

Politics on the Bay

The McClain Program in Environment Science presents The Policies and the Politics of the Chesapeake Bay, a lecture by the Honorable Gerald L. Baliles, Governor of the commonwealth of Virginia, 1986-1990 in Dunning Lecture Hall at 7:30 p.m.

The McClain Program lecture series explore timely environmental issues, especially now when many states have become concerned with economic growth for which natural resources are imperative. For many states, such as Virginia and Maryland, the Chesapeake Bay represents a prime resource for trade with other states and nations. The rampant decline of the Chesapeake Bay in the past few years has arrested the attention of many scientists, environmentalists and politicians alike.

Governor Baliles possesses the knowledge and the experience to examine the political dynamics of the Chesapeake Bay. The first Virginia governor to establish a cabinet-let post for economic development, he direct the expansion of world trade promotion initiatives. He also led an historic state wide program to modernize Virginia's infrastructure and a vigorous program of education reform aimed especially at preparation for work in an international marketplace.

As Virginia's chief advocate for economic development and improved trading relationships, Governor Baliles led eight trade and business development missions overseas, including trips to fourteen different nations.

As a result of his efforts in economic development and international trade, exports of Virginia products increased to such an extent that within two years exported products accounted for over 25 percent of the state's economic growth.

Hooper to Whoop it up Wednesday Night

Wednesday, September 23 marks the grand opening of the Snicker's Comedy Club in the CoffeeHouse. Donations of $1.00 will be greatly appreciated, though not required.

This year's comedians will include Danny Sheehan, Billy Boosler. She also has appeared in such comedy groups as The Flamethrower Comedy Bashers with John Bizarre, the Long Island Laughter Company with Bob Nelson and the New York Laughing Stock Exchange with Robb Bartlett.

Maryellen Hooper, Comedienne

Garan, Big Daddy Graham, Melvin George as well as the Snicker's Comedy Club's first performer, comedienne Maryellen Hooper.

Hooper's television and film credits include The Unholy with Ben Cross and Ned Beatty and Broadway Baby with Elaine Featured as the cover story in the February 11, 1990 Philadelphia Inquirer Sunday Magazine, Hooper took second place in The Tropicana's Laugh-Off in Atlantic City, NJ in November, 1989 and was a finalist in the Delaware Valley's Comedy Competition that year.

Share Our Strength: Reading for the Homeless

According to the 1990 Food Research and Action Center Community Childhood Hunger Identification Project, one in every eight American children under age 12 suffers from hunger. One in four children in that age group—a total of 11.5 million children—is at risk of hunger.

The 1991 U.S. Conference of Mayors Task Force on Hunger and Homelessness Report stated that the demand for emergency food relief increased by an average of 26 percent in 28 major U.S. cities. The number of families with children requesting emergency food aid also increased by 26 percent over the past year and a little over two out of every three people requesting emergency food assistance in the survey cities were members of families, namely children and their parents.

Despite the grim statistics, relief foundations still work with hope for a better future. Washington College will do its part to combat hunger Tuesday, September 22 at 7:00 p.m. in the Miller Library Terrace as it takes part in The National Reading: Writers' Harvest for the Homeless. Fictionist Frederick Busche, who visited Washington College this past spring, organized the national reading and will read at Colgate University.

Colleges and universities across the United States will hold simultaneous readings to help raise funds in the fight against hunger, homelessness, and illiteracy. The money raised will benefit Share Our Strength (S.O.S.), the country's largest private fund-raising organization. The audience is encouraged, though not required, to donate $5.00.

Washington College's reading will feature Richard Ben Cramer and Robert Day. Cramer, who lived in Cambridge, MD has recently published his new novel What it Takes. Robert Day, Washington College English Professor and author of The Last Cattle Drive as well as numerous newspaper and magazine articles, also will read.

Other readers include fictionist Scott Turow, author of Presumed Innocent and Gwendolyn Brooks, winner of the Pulitzer Prize will read at Chicago's Sullivan Room. Poet Carolyn Forche, who visited Washington College last fall will read at George Mason University. Lynn Doyle, who taught at Washington College last year will appear with Sophie Kerr winner Peter Turchi will appear at Michigan State University.

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred

A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS - OVERLAYS - FACIALS

505 Washington Ave
Chestertown, MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)

Janie Thompson
(301) 778-0898

TEMPLE BOOKS & COOKS
15% Off Hardcover Books
10% Off New Paperback Books
50% Off Pre-read Paperback Books
ALL DAY EVERYDAY
on regularly stocked titles
Welcome Washington College Students
Visit Chestertown's Newest Bookshop
DISCOVER OUR PRE-READ PAPERBACKS
CREDIT FOR YOUR PRE-READ PAPERBACKS
Washington Square Shopping Center
Rt. 213 Chestertown • 410-778-3705
Open Mon, Tues,Wed, Fri 10 - 6,
Thursday 10 - 8, Sat 10 - 5
Art & Wendy Listman Proprietors
Parents of Arthur - WC '85

Othello on Wheels

Sherry Menton
Staff Writer

The University of Maryland, Baltimore Campus' Shakespeare on Wheels has surpassed itself with this year's production of Othello, which it will bring to the campus mall on the weekend of September 19th and 20th at 8 p.m. (Rain site is Tawes Theatre).

The Shakespeare on Wheels program was created by UMBC 8 years ago to bring Shakespeare's plays into neighborhoods across Maryland and in adjacent states through its modern-day, stage-on-a-flatbed-truck imitation of the medieval pageant wagons which travelled from faire to faire, seeking new audiences for their performances.

Staged in a traditional style, this year's Othello features actors garbed in the gowns and tunics of Renaissance Italy. The use of new-found formulism marks a change for the group, which in the past has presented a Japanese kibuki interpretation of MacBeth, a sort of latter-day hippie As You Like It, and a somewhat less successful rock opera adaptation of The Tempest.

James Brown-Orleans performs the title role in accented English, bringing to life more realistically than Olivier's blackface rendition the Moor's descent from keen intelligence and emotional stability into passionate jealosy and murder.

The "honest" Iago is played by John C. Hansen, whose portrayal of this villain extraordinaire delights and disgusts simultaneously. Iago's own joy in his mischief-making, and the gullibility of the other characters, makes the audience... well, if not like him, at least appreciate the cunning involved in Iago's developing plot as he learns more about the weaknesses of others. However entertaining, this Iago is not the lurking, brooding, unreasonably evil character, second only to Richard III in dastardliness.

Bonnie Webster as the naive Desdemona and Alan Aymie as the hapless Cassio both deliver performances that make their seventeenth-century speech seem modern and thoroughly understandable.

Indeed, the clarity of the language, given life by the entire cast, is one of the most remarkable things about Othello. This is not surprising, since Shakespeare on Wheels' aim is to bring Shakespeare to the masses rather than the city-bred, theater-going elite.

This rendition of one of Shakespeare's greatest tragedies will make the most unwilling student of Shakespeare appreciate the poetry and the drama of Othello.

James Brown-Orleans and Bonnie Webster of Othello

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

RHODES
the BARNISH COLLECTION
REPRODUCTIONS
241 High Street
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone (410) 778-6688
Fax (410) 778-6438

Another Time II
Fine Furniture, Collectibles & Antiques
•housewares, lamps & decor•
10 percent discount with College ID
819 High Street Extended
Chestertown
778-6525

KRYSTAL BRITE-O-SCOPE

TWINKIE WATCH
He's not a hero and he's mad. That's the story.

BUNNIE LOG

VIRGO 8/23-9/23: Instead of being Virgo, your sign should be called Jerk-O, cuz that's what you are. Take the hint. If you're a JERK-O, no one will treat you as one.

LIBRA 9/24-10/23: No more "Lucky Libra," you are now "Lowlife Loser." What was once going for you has now run away..... because you smell bad. Take a bath.

SCORPIO 10/24-11/22: You just got bucked off your high horse. And when you stood up to get back on, he kicked you in the head. You'll die a miserable death in the mud.

SAGITTARIUS 11/23-12/21: You've gone through life disappointing people, but don't worry, we're not suggesting you change. That's impossible. No one has ever liked you, and no one ever will.

CAPRICORN 12/22-1/20: Love is a splendid thing, but none of that will be coming your way. You've got your eyes on the special someone, and they hate you. Loser.

AQUARIUS 1/21-2/19: Your life is like a sad dream, but it's not a dream--it's real. It's too bad you're not a dog, cuz then people would pet you on the head and pretend to like you.

PISCES 2/19-3/20: Dumb dumb dumb Fish. Go back to the sea and visit all your slimey, oozing, disgusting, limp, flabby, gross worm friends.

ARIES 3/21-4/19: How does it feel to be such a nice person? And you should wonder why nobody likes you. Because you're so nice. You don't come from a nice family... And you're ugly. Raised glues out of paper bags. Get some.

TAURUSKI 4/20-5/20: You're so ugly, you should pray for leprosy. Then you'd have an excuse. Or maybe your face could just fall off and we could stop looking at you.

GEMINI 5/21-6/21: You should be called Germ-ini because you're gross. Go back to personal hygiene class. Your breath smells very bad.

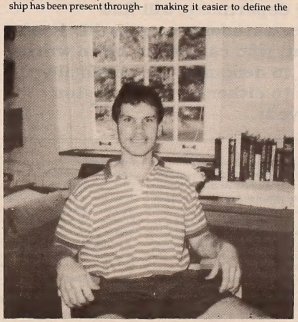
CANCER 6/22-7/22: When was the last time you heard the phrase "I love you," or even "I like you"? Think about that, bozo. You're a clown. Beat it you creep!

LEO 7/23-8/22: You're the only decent astrological sign. The pets of the gods. You should get off this campus PRONTO. Or form a clique. Only "Club Leo" for you.

THE SEPTEMBER 18 HOROSCOPE

Need a job?
Want a job?
Then come to the Elm office and apply for the position of Business Manager.
Only one person is needed.
Only one person is wanted.
Only one person is required.
Only one person is desired.
Only one person is necessary.
Only one person is essential.
Only one person is vital.
Only one person is crucial.
Only one person is important.
Only one person is significant.
Only one person is meaningful.
Only one person is valuable.
Only one person is worthwhile.
Only one person is useful.
Only one person is helpful.
Only one person is beneficial.
Only one person is advantageous.
Only one person is profitable.
Only one person is lucrative.
Only one person is remunerative.
Only one person is rewarding.
Only one person is gratifying.
Only one person is satisfying.
Only one person is fulfilling.
Only one person is enriching.
Only one person is enhancing.
Only one person is improving.
Only one person is bettering.
Only one person is advancing.
Only one person is progressing.
Only one person is developing.
Only one person is growing.
Only one person is expanding.
Only one person is increasing.
Only one person is augmenting.
Only one person is supplementing.
Only one person is complementing.
Only one person is completing.
Only one person is finishing.
Only one person is ending.
Only one person is concluding.
Only one person is terminating.
Only one person is stopping.
Only one person is quitting.
Only one person is leaving.
Only one person is departing.
Only one person is exiting.
Only one person is vacating.
Only one person is abandoning.
Only one person is deserting.
Only one person is forsaking.
Only one person is relinquishing.
Only one person is surrendering.
Only one person is yielding.
Only one person is giving up.
Only one person is giving in.
Only one person is submitting.
Only one person is succumbing.
Only one person is capitulating.
Only one person is conceding.
Only one person is admitting defeat.
Only one person is losing.
Only one person is failing.
Only one person is flunking.
Only one person is bombing.
Only one person is crashing.
Only one person is burning.
Only one person is melting.
Only one person is dissolving.
Only one person is disintegrating.
Only one person is falling apart.
Only one person is coming apart at the seams.
Only one person is going to pieces.
Only one person is losing control.
Only one person is losing it.
Only one person is losing his mind.
Only one person is losing her mind.
Only one person is losing their mind.
Only one person is losing its mind.
Only one person is losing our mind.
Only one person is losing your mind.
Only one person is losing my mind

Kevin McKillop Understands His Enemy



Tanya L. Cunic
Staff Writer

Do you think you have enemies, or do you perceive yourself in a enematic relationship with someone? If you answered yes to this question, Dr. Kevin McKillop, the new social psychologist in the Psychology Department, may help you understand this unpleasant, but common experience in life.

A graduate of Flagler College and University of Florida, Dr. McKillop is currently researching enemy images and the incidents which may have prompted these relationships.

Among college students, the predominant cause is usually related to romance. However, McKillop states that according to his findings, most of these relationships don't cross gender boundaries. Females and males usually perceive members of the same sex as enemies.

McKillop, who came here from Iowa State University, believes the results of his enemy perception research may provide clues to a better understanding of self concept development and how it forms and changes. The enemy relationship has been present throughout history, and therefore may play some role in defining the self.McKillop theorizes that enemies serve as a negative contrast to individuals, thus making it easier to define the self. Yet individuals with low self-esteem may compare themselves with their enemies.

In addition to his research, Dr. McKillop currently teaches Developmental Psychology and Statistics. Eventually, he would like to teach courses that would include the study of prejudice and discrimination.

He has also expressed an interest in creating courses that would study persuasion and attitude change. All of these interests are a reflection of Dr. McKillop's reason for becoming a social psychologist.

He believes that psychology is a young science, too young to be confident that its theories are positively affecting people. Therefore, he wants to participate and develop research that discovers "what works before we try it out."

The combination of researcher and teacher is one of the reasons why McKillop is "happy to be here." He encourages students to get involved in experimentation, so eventually the students will perceive research as an oppurtunity, not a chore. He wants experiments for students to become as easy as "looking up a word in the dictionary."

The Writers' Union junta for the 1992-93 school year is as follows:
Freshmen, Samantha Johnston, Ryan Walker
Sophomores, Becky Bryant, Andrea Nolan
Juniors, Ervin Meeks, Jennifer Reddish
Seniors, Tanya Cunic, Justin Cann

The ELM received the following letter just before deadline last week:

Dear Editor:

I am a prisoner on death row at the Arizona State Prison and was wondering if you would do me a favor. I have been here for almost sixteen years and have no family or friends on the outside that I can write. I was wondering if you could print my letter for me so that I could receive some correspondence. I realize you are not a pen pal club or anything like that, but I would appreciate it if you would help me.

I am a caucasian male, age 46, and I would like to correspond with either male or female college students. I want to form a friendly relationship and more or less exchange past or present experiences and ideas. I will answer all letters and exchange photos. Prison rules require a complete name and return address on the outside of the envelope.

Thank you,
Jim Jeffers
Arizona State Prison
Box B-38604
Florence, AZ 85232

"Koon," from pg. 3

ductivity of labor increases, capital increases its supply of labor more quickly than its demand for laborers . . . . The condemnation of one part of the working class to enforced idleness by the over-work of the other part, and the converse, becomes a means of enriching the individual capitalists, and accelerates at the same time the production of the industrial reserve army on a scale corresponding with the advance of social accumulation." (Capital, 401)

Every piece of evidence available confirms that this is indeed what is taking place.

In 1981 American businesses spent 128.68 billion on new plant and equipment; expenditure on new plant and equipment is projected to be 182.81 billion in the manufacturing sector this year.

This is the reason why unemployment and productivity have both slowly risen. Yet if Marx's theory is to hold true, then the capitalists must be showing some benefit from this dynamic and the workers must be receiving no benefit.

The evidence bears this out; since 1986, annual corporate profits have risen from 227.6 billion to 336.9 billion, whereas per capita disposable income has risen by only $1844 (in 1987 dollars). Over the past ten years, the consumer price index has also risen by 40%, creating the greatest concentration of wealth in our nation's history.

For years, Marxists have wondered why capitalism has proven to be so durable, and many have posited that it has survived by expanding into the third world and exploiting the workers and resources there.

Over the past two decades, jobs in the manufacturing sector have slowly declined. In the 1980s the service sector appeared to be a safety valve. But there is a limit to how far the third world can be exploited, and there is a limit to how many fast food restaurants a nation can have.

Both limits are drawing near, which is the real reason for the current (dare I say it?) depression. The GDP can grow forever and yet mean nothing if personal income does not grow at a rate sufficient to provide a market for these goods.

There is no way to address this problem from within the capitalist system.

Neither liberalism nor conservatism hold the answer to America's problems. Ultimately, the insatiable greed of American capitalism will prove to be its own undoing. More and more Americans will find themselves laid off, more and more Americans will find themselves impoverished, more Americans will be hungry and more Americans will be fed up and unwilling to accept the same old "blame the Japanese" arguments offered up by their elected representatives.

When that day comes, change will not mean a new, improved, kinder, gentler white bourgeois male in the White House; it will mean government of the people and by the people, finally and forever!

Suds 'n Soda
"Your Store For Convenience"
Rt. 213 & Rt. 297
1.5 Miles North of Campus
778-5077
BEER*WINE*LIQUOR*SODA*ICE*KEGS
OPEN 6 a.m.-12 mid
7 DAYS
LARGE IMPORT SELECTION
LARGE KEG INVENTORY
"WELCOME BACK SPECIAL."
MILWAUKEE'S BEST LOOSE CASE
$7.19 + tax (Reg. price $7.69)
Until Sept 30
WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS
YOU MUST BE 21 AND HAVE 2 FORMS VALID IDENTIFICATION TO PURCHASE ALCOHOL

"Evaluation," from pg. 1

Lamond noted that while he does not foresee any major curricular changes as a result of the survey, he hopes that there will be refinements in the department.

Dr. Thomas J. Cousineau, Professor of English and Director of the Graduate Program, is also optimistic about the prospect of an external evaluation. He said he looks forward to the process with an expectant attitude.

Cousineau believes the English department has the unique opportunity to receive frank opinions about its strengths and weaknesses. He said that because the college is isolated, faculty cannot as easily discuss undergraduate studies with colleagues at other institutions of higher learning.

"One of the primary values of an external evaluation is that the reviewers can advise the administration and give support to requests by the English department for additional staffing," he added.

While Cousineau said the size of larger colleges allows for more experimental programs than a smaller school such as Washington College, he noted that new faculty would augment the diversity of the department.

The fact that proficiency of a foreign language is not required is another topic of concern for Cousineau. He said that speaking foreign languages is a way of escaping provincialism at a time when multiculturalism has become such an important objective.

There's a reluctance even to entertain the possibility of any substantial curricular change ... As proof, I predict that a member of the English department will find somebody else, a student, or more likely a former student, who can be put up to writing in to the ELM to denounce me personally and invite me to either love Washington College or leave it.

Cousineau is also disturbed by the number of English majors that graduate from the college who do not have an adequate background in classical and Biblical literature.

"It is absolutely essential that students become acquainted with the literature of classical antiquity. It's unfortunate that it's not required and isn't even offered. I find that a glaring defect in our program," he stated.

Professor Robert Day, Director of the Creative Writing Program, believes the external review is a necessary process. "It is an opportunity for us to get some help solving some of our own problems," he stated.

Day said he expects to learn both what other good schools are doing and how to run a better Creative Writing Program. He noted that the advanced course in creative writing could be changed from a general workshop to specific workshops focusing on fiction one year and poetry the next.

The structure of the Senior Comprehensive Exam is another issue for the review team to consider, Day said.

Because the college is privileged by the Sophie Kerr endowment and possesses extraordinary resources in English and American literature, Day said that the review team should measure the department by high standards.

"The college has also earned the gift of fine, hardworking English majors, which is advantageous to our program," he said.

Dr. Audrey Fessler is a more recent member of the English department, as the 1992-93 academic year is only her second one. She feels the department is interested in a healthy, rigorous review.

"The review process will be healthy. I think it can be done so as to encourage us to develop without setting us at strife amongst ourselves," she stated.

Fessler said that any changes will depend on how insightful and thorough the review is. She added that the department should be selective and invite evaluators with open minds and sound ideas who can step beyond their individual patterns.

During the review process, Fessler hopes to determine how frequently certain courses are taught. Knowing whether or not the department repeats courses too often could affect what is taught when so that students feel they have a variety of choices, she said.

Dr. Beverly Wolff, Visiting Assistant Professor of English, agreed that experienced colleagues from different institutions will give the department different and valuable perspectives on the structure and content of the curriculum.

"[They] will give us ways in which we can re-evaluate ourselves, individually and as a functioning component of the college," she said.

Because she teaches Forms of Literature and Composition to first-year students, Wolff stated that she is particularly interested in changes that may occur in writing skills and common background courses.

She also said she is curious to learn how her position and contributions are assessed by the review team.

"Some visitors may bring experience with alternative programs to shed light on our weaknesses and strengths; they will evaluate us — but we'll also get to pick their brains," she stated.

Robert Schreur was hired this year to teach Forms of Literature and Composition. Even though he is a new English professor, he said he was initially impressed by the department's vitality.

"The department has a strong, clear sense of what it wants to accomplish," he stated. Schreur added that while he has been at schools where the departments were defensive and anxious, Washington College's English program is confident and vibrant.

He feels his role in the external review is more a reflection of the department's ability to hire able new recruits than an assessment of his individual contribution.

Dr. Richard C. DeProspo, member of the English department and Chair of American Studies, is not optimistic about the prospect of an external review. He said he does not want to give legitimacy to a process which will have no outcome.

In his experience at Washington College, DeProspo said there was only one fundamental academic reform, which took place during the late 50s and early 60s under the leadership of President Daniel Z. Gibson.

At that time, DeProspo said the college was proudly anti-intellectual, deplorably provincial, a sports school and white racist men's academy. "Gibson had the vision of turning the college into the Amherst of the Eastern Shore," he stated.

DeProspo said Gibson was committed to hiring professors that could have gone to more credible institutions. "There was a real attempt to raise standards, but since then, there has been no significant academic reform, absolutely none," he noted.

Since the college's academic revolution, DeProspo said the attitude toward literature which still predominates today is that it is something to be appreciated "over high tea and sherry."

He added that the English program continues to be ruled in essence by Nick Newlin, a former Chair of the department who played an active role in the college's academic reform. Newlin instituted the Forms of Literature and Composition requirement in the late 1950s.

"Every effort has been made to reassure the department that the administration will not invite people to do a hatchet job on the department," he stated. "This review will result in no significant changes whatsoever in the curriculum."

DeProspo said that while he does not intend to speak candidly with the review team should he be interviewed, he has no problem speaking candidly to the ELM. "I trust students a lot more than I trust anybody else," he noted.

He said that whenever he has attempted to seek reform through official channels, he has been punished and personally attacked.

"There's a reluctance even to entertain the possibility of any substantial curricular change," DeProspo said. "As proof, I predict that a member of the English department will find somebody else, a student, or more likely a former student who can be put up to writing in to the ELM to denounce me personally and invite me to either love Washington College or leave it."

Rugg's Recommendations on the Colleges, Ninth Edition, by Frederick E. Rugg, is published by Rugg's Recommendations of Sarasota, Florida.

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

The Body Shoppe
Toning and Tanning
Specializing in Artifical and Natural Skin Care +Nutritional Products
Kent Plaza, Chestertown
778-0922

(410) 778-0536
Appointments preferred

The Small Shoppe
Specializing in Artificial & Natural Nail Care, Skin Care & Nutritional Products
Owner, Cheryl Hurt
Owner, Karen Dionisio
347 High Street
Chestertown, MD

William Hardie, Art Critic, Speaks to ELM

Jennifer Gray Reddish
A&E Editor

On September 2, 1992, William Hardie lectured on the works of David Hockney in the Sophie Kerr Room.

Hardie's resume lists an impressive career in the art world. He read Modern Languages at Glasgow University where he later worked as an Assistant to the Fine Arts Department. In 1984 he founded William Hardie Limited, which specializes in art consulting.

He opened the Washington Gallery in 1986 and the William Hardie Gallery in Glasgow's West Regent Street in 1990. His book, Larousse Dictionary of Modern Art, explores the modern art world with breadth and with clarity.

With these credentials, Hardie gave an engaging lecture that held the interest of even the most novice art connoisseurs.
His style intertwined personal anecdotes about the author and his art along with technical detail, making Hockney's art more attainable to the audience.

The highlight of the evening was slides of Hockney's work. Even though slides cannot accurately reproduce a painting, Hockney's passion and talent survived the transition from canvas to film. With each slide a rush of excitement came from the audience, as the artist's use of reverse perspective involved the audience from the first glance.

To fully understand the innovative technique of Hockney's work, one must understand reverse perspective. In Hardie's words, reverse perspective "simply means that large things are rendered small and small things rendered large."

For example, a reverse perspective painting would show a road small that becomes larger as it progresses away from the reader, rather than the traditional technique of painting "reality," in which the road seems larger and closer to the reader and then diminishes as it moves further away in the picture.

Some of Hockney's work seems to poke fun at the "old-school" use of perspective. One painting has wooden slats used to show the illusion of the depth in the work. Another painting shows the problems of traditional perspective, as it displays a man on a mountain lighting his pipe from the match of a woman leaning from the window of a building that is "near" the viewer.

Either the man in the painting has arms a hundred miles long, or Hockney has detected an almost comic mistake made in traditional perspective technique.

As Hardie said about Hockney's use of reverse perspective, "do the subjects seem any less real drawn in this manner than in the traditional way? No."

Hockney paintings cut close to human emotion. He was a student of the Cubism school, and paintings done in this style show all the perspectives and give the audience a sense of walking around the subject, experiencing it entirely.

In essence, Hockney tries to invade the audience's personal space, drawing him into his life and his message by encompassing the viewer into the world of the picture.

Each phase of Hockney's work reflects a personal insight. The son of a liberal working class family, his father campaigned against war and his mother was a religious vegetarian. Hockney never feared stating his views.

His phase of paintings known as the "Love Paintings" and the "Shower Paintings" proclaim his homosexuality as well as his artistic talent.

Other paintings such as The Bigger Splash also display his spontaneous style and technique. Another of the Walt Whitman inspired "Swimming Pool" paintings, Portrait of the Artist features two people, a signature of Hockney's.

Perhaps the most fascinating aspect of this portrait was the pool itself. Hockney captures the complex patterns of light as it bounces from the pool's bottom on canvas.

Greatly affected by the works of Picasso, Hockney saw his first Picasso exhibit in 1960 but did not begin to use the his discoveries until after the artist's death in 1970. Many of his paintings since that time have the classic "two-eyed-Picasso-esque" look.

His later works include many photographs placed together to create one piece called a "joiner". He has also created large paintings whose oriental scroll-like borders make the viewer's eye travel around the paintings, creating a definite sense of time.

Hockney is currently designing sets for the Opera House at Covent Garden for its production of Strauss's Del Franco Ohne Schatten which will appear in November.

His newest paintings will be featured in a one-person-show next year at William Hardie's Washington Gallery in Glasgow. This exhibit will be Hardie's first after a long hiatus from the art show circuit.

Hardie summarized the effect of Hockney's work by describing the artist personally. "He is a very nice man who is alert and intellectually stimulating. He has strong opinions about everything and is not afraid to express them. Overall, David Hockney is simply a pleasure with whom to be."

Spilich Publishes Alzheimer's Research

Tanya L. Cunic
Staff Writer

Go to the Psychology Department Lounge sometime. It is located on the second floor in Dunning. There will be a long line of psychology majors waiting to meet with Dr. George Spilich.

He gives new meaning to the word busy. Spilich currently conducts research on smoking and memory loss, teaches a full course load, advises seniors on a number of timely issues (graduate school, theses) — and by the way, his new book hit the stands on September eighth.

Neurodevelopment, Aging and Cognition, published by Birkhauser, is the result of a conference that was held in Yugoslavia concerning Alzheimer's disease. The purpose of this conference was to bring the world's top researchers in one place to discuss this growing dementia.

It gave researchers from various psychological fields the oppurtunity to present papers and informally discuss the possiblities of integrating experimental procedures in order to understand this progressive disease better.

These papers were converted into essays which are listed in the categories of "neurodevelopment, neuroscience, cognitive science, and clinical applications." The result is a comprehensive text in which any person can receive a broad understanding of Alzheimer's disease.

Although four editors are credited on the book cover, Dr. Spilich, with the help of his research assistant Dianna Holden, were the only editors of the text.

Two of the listed editors were unable to participate in the process due to the war that broke out in Yugoslavia, and the other declined the position.

Dr. Spilich refined the series of essays for over one year before it was ready for publication. Although the process was timely, and according to Spilich sometimes "a pain," it was well worth the effort.

He believes Neurodevelopment, Aging and Cognition will not only add to a better understanding of "the needs of the elderly cohort," but will ultimately aid in fusing the broad areas of psychological research for one solution.

SNACK SHACK
LOCATED ABOVE SUDS 'N SODA
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND
778-4230

*FRIED CHICKEN POTATO LOGS
*CHEESESTEAKS HAMBURGERS
*HERSHEY'S HAND DIPPED ICE CREAM SUNDAES/ SHAKES
*FRESH MADE SUBS
*HOMEMADE SOUPS
*FOUNTAIN SODAS

OPEN 7 DAYS
SUN-THURS 10 AM-7PM
FRI-SAT 10AM-9PM

WANTED! WANTED! WANTED!

Editor for Pegasus, WC's Yearbook

Apply in writing to Richard Striner, Chair, Board of Publications

Field Hockey Recovers From Season Opener

Reneé Guckert
Staff Writer

After a disappointing loss to Dickinson College, the WC field hockey team thundered back to beat both Wesley and FDU Madison at the WAC last week. The winning steak began with a 3-0 shut-out against Wesley. Just five minutes into the game, Marie "The Breather" Mohler fired a shot into the goal, assisted by Heather "The Woman" Mayr on a penalty corner.

Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

Renee Guckert stabs one past the keeper

Following Mohler's lead, Eleanor Shriver, once again assisted by Mayr, put a clean shot into the goal on yet another penalty corner with 19:36 remaining in the half. The last of the three goals was driven down the throat of the Wesley goaltender by Liz Olivere and assisted by Marie Mohler.

"I think everything just really seemed to click for us against Wesley," commented sophomore Amy Barrell. "The communication was good and everyone really hustled throughout the entire game."

The Shorewomen out-shot the frustrated Wesley team 35-3, and despite severe heat were able to dominate the majority of the contest. Senior Amy McCleary stood out on defensive plays and recoveries as well as attempting two out of the three penalty strokes awarded to Washington during the course of the game.

Then, last Saturday, the WC Shorewomen trampled a tough FDU-Madison team with another shut-out on their home turf. Junior Reneé Guckert scored the lone goal, unassisted, with 20:12 remaining in the first half. With fierce desire and unlimited effort from both the forward line and the defense, the WAC hockey team was again unstoppable.

Jen Hanifee and Heather Mayr led the defense, keeping Farleigh Dickinson out of scoring range and helping to keep the ball in WC's offensive end. Goalie Brigid DeVries, sliding and diving about the goal, chalked up eight saves, giving her a total of eighteen for the season . Attack wings Amy Barrell and Marie Mohler continuously raced down the sidelines, keeping the ball in play and away from a fierce FDU squad.

Stated DeVries, "I am really very excited for the rest of our season. With the enthusiasm of the freshmen and the determination of the upperclassmen, we should be able to go far — hopefully, all the way to the MAC finals." The Shorewomen's next home game is Saturday, September 26 against MAC rival, Elizabethtown College, but look for the results of yesterday's contest versus Catholic University in next week's issue.

Soccer Drops Three in a Row

Jason Ronstadt
Staff Writer

Since the successful outing against Lebanon Valley in the season opener, things have run awry for the Shoremen soccer team. Playing hard with talented yet inexperienced personnel has forced the team to drop their last three contests which were games, according to Assistant Coach Jack Schaefer, that were lost due to "a lack of hunger and experience." Said Coach Schaefer, "We have a lot of great young talent and every so often we see sparks of potential. But it is still too early — the team needs more time to gel."

The three losses include a 2-3 fall against Lancaster Bible, a hard fought 1-3 battle to a talented Dickinson squad, and the latest 1-3 loss to Salisbury State. In each of these three games the Shoremen took the field with a different starting lineup, an obvious indication that coaches Heibling and Schaefer are still feeling out a group which is almost completely new to them.

Yet all is not amiss out on Kibler Field. Junior forwards Rory Conway and Chris Graham have provided a potent offensive spark at the helm of the Shoremen attack combining for four goals and one assist to date. Senior mid-fielders Charlie "Can I borrow some Money" Linehan and Chris "Flea" Kleberg have provided a strong example for the younger players to emulate. And goaltender Greg Miller, in only his second season, has been tougher than ever in the net for the Shoremen.

Rory "Let's Griff" Conway rises to the occasion

The team continued its busy schedule this week, traveling to Saint Mary's College on Sept. 17th (to be covered next week), followed by another away match-up versus Catholic University this Sunday, September 20th.

FREE IMPRINTING!! of first color on custom T-Shirts
Factory Direct!!
Sports Teams * College Clubs
Fraternity & Sorority Functions
Call now to find out how affordable custom printing really is!
Mention this ad and get $25 off your first order! 12 pc. min.
T-Line (410) 778-5622

Crew Poised for '92

Melissa Harmeyer
Staff Writer

Although the fall has a less serious racing circuit than the spring, the Men's and Women's Novice and Varsity Crew teams are looking forward to a very exciting autumn season. Both womens teams have new coaches this season. Beth Speer will be taking on the novice side of things while last year's mens novice coach will be taking on the women's varsity position. Mike Davenport is the men's varsity head coach and will receive help from former WAC rower Will Brandenburg.

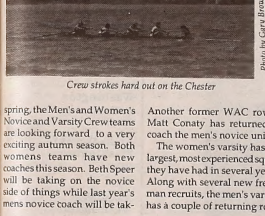

Photo by Gary Brown

Crew strokes hard out on the Chester

Another former WAC rower, Matt Conaty has returned to coach the men's novice unit.

The women's varsity has the largest, most experienced squad they have had in several years. Along with several new freshman recruits, the men's varsity has a couple of returning rowers as well. While the Fall is dedicated to training and teaching skills, the spring is the true racing season.

Yet, the W.C. rowers are competing in several regattas throughout the Fall of '92. The Varsity begins the season on October 10th at the Head of the Patapsco in Baltimore, Maryland. Over Fall Break, the Womens Varsity 8 and Ray Herndon's Mens Lightweight Single are competing in the Head of the Charles in Boston, a great honor since this is the world's largest regatta. Then on October 24th the Varsity teams head to Philadelphia to race in the Head of the Schuylkill. Head of the Occoquan is on Halloween and the Frostbite Regatta on the 21st of November will end the Fall season.

Overall, Washington College Rowing looks experienced as they are seen as "the team to beat." Coach Davenport hopes to see good results this year!

Sho'women Upset In First Two Confrontations

Tyler McCarthy
Staff Writer

The women's volleyball team fell to 0-1 after their match against Notre Dame this past Wednesday. Simply put, "The other team had a lot more experience playing as a squad," said Miriam Jecelin.

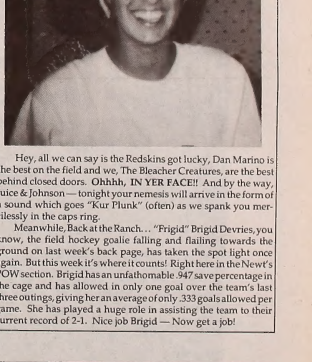
The Shorewomen set out to come home with a victory but the young squad proved they still need more time to develop as a cohesive unit. Again, the six starters were Beverly Diaz, Julie Dill, Miriam Jecelin, Jen Dixon, Michelle Chin, and Courtney Myers.

As expected, the defensive giants, Beverly Diaz and Julie Dill, had a strong performance and tried their best to bring the squad together. But, try as they might, with the lack of court experience as well as poor communication, the downfall of the rotation was soon realized. "We started off very well — everyone was talking but we still lacked the know-how needed to win the match," said Jecelin. Despite the loss, the squad remained positive as they reflected on their play.

The Shorewomen then took a road trip up to Gettysburg for the Gettysburg Invitational this past weekend where they came up against Western Maryland, Seton Hall, and Albright College. Losing all three matches, they disappointingly returned home with a record of 0-4.

The biggest setback of the three-game series came when WC's defensive wonder and team captain Beverly Diaz injured herself. Diaz went up for a block in the first match against Western Maryland as a player from Western Maryland's front line inadvertently fell under the net causing Diaz to land improperly, taking her out of the action for the rest of the weekend.

The team's morale sagged as Diaz, their inspirational leader, was helped off the floor. Teammate Katina Duklewski was eager to fill her shoes, but it was not enough as they eventually dropped the match.



"Overall this was a good learning experience and our hopes are still high as we push on through the rest of the season," said Jecelin.

The Shorewomen played Tuesday, September 15, against Widener and then on Thursday, September 17, against Catholic University and wind the week down with Dickinson on Saturday, September 19 (all to be covered next week). The Shorewomen will have the home court advantage versus Dickinson at the Cain Dome so we hope to see you there in full force!

Drop-Off Laundry
We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service
Laundromat Dry Cleaning
Kent Laundry
607 High Street
778-3551

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

Hey, all we can say is the Redskins got lucky, Dan Marino is the best on the field and we, The Bleacher Creatures, are the best behind closed doors. Ohhhh, IN YER FACE!! And by the way, Juice & Johnson — tonight your nemesis will arrive in the form of a sound which goes "Kur Plunk" (often) as we spank you mercilessly in the caps ring.

Meanwhile, Back at the Ranch... "Frigid" Brigid Devries, you know, the field hockey goalie falling and flailing towards the ground on last week's back page, has taken the spot light once again. But this week it's where it counts! Right here in the Newt's POW section. Brigid has an unfathomable .947 save percentage in the cage and has allowed in only one goal over the team's last three outings, giving her an average of only .333 goals allowed per game. She has played a huge role in assisting the team to their current record of 2-1. Nice job Brigid — Now get a job!

J & M'S FAMILY RESTAURANT
JOIN US FOR A PIZZA & AN ICE COLD DRAFT BEER
Soft Shell Crabs • Homemade Crab Cakes
Steamed Crabs • Hoagies • Philly Cheese Steaks
FRESH ROCKFISH PLATTER
Dinner Served Daily 4 - 8pm • Breakfast Served All Day
Open 6am-10pm • 7 DAYS A WEEK
1 1/2 mi. S. of Chester River Bridge Next to Emily's • 778-5881

Soccer Suffers Following Initial Win

See Article, pg. 14

BAP ARE CHUMPS!

WC • ELM

Sports

Women's Club Soccer Gears Up!

Field Hockey Finds Their Grove

See Article, pg. 1

Scores

Men's Soccer

Washington	2
Lancaster Bible	3
Washington	1
Dickinson	3
Washington	1
Salisbury St.	3

Field Hockey

Washington	1
FDU	0

Volleyball

Washington	1
Notre Dame	2
Washington	2
Essex	0
Washington	0
Seton Hall	2
Washington	0
W. MD.	2
Washington	0
Albright	2

Tad George eyes down an offender as he gracefully moves in for the defensive slide/take-away. Tad has been a mainstay in W.C.'s backfield this year as he brings the WKRP fever with him from Cincinnati, Ohio. With three years of eligibility still in front of him he should become one of the predominant figures in D-III soccer.

Photo by Sarah Fegeltern

Volleyball Struggles Early On

See Article, pg.1

Davenport has High Hopes For W.C. Crew in '92

See Article, pg.

Brigid Devries: Newt's Player of the Week

"The Anonymous Speaker has no True Voice"

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: partly cloudy.
H 69 L 57
Weekend: sunny unseasonably cool
H upper 60's L mid-50's

Volume 63, Number Five • September 25, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

College Explores Plans for Larger Enrollment

Jason Ronstadt
Staff Writer

During the September 11 Board of Visitors and Governors meeting at Wye Woods and the first faculty meeting of the year, President Charles H. Trout, in conjunction with the Academic Affairs Committee, announced that the college was exploring an increase in the size of the student body.

Washington College presently has 923 students, and the board overwhelmingly agreed that expanding the student population to 1200 over the course of five to eight years would help strengthen both the curricular and co-curricular activity at the school.

While larger enrollment would increase the applicant pool by a dramatic margin, whether or not the college's budget can keep pace with a growth rate that would increase the student population by nearly one-third remains an unanswered question.

"The larger enrollment will create more revenues which would facilitate the building of a new academic center and dorms," President Trout said. "It would also allow for the hiring of new faculty. We are looking to produce a critical mass that would support more curricular and co-curricular activity throughout the school."

Some Washington College students fear that although larger enrollment means more revenue, the cost of tuition will increase in order to fund current projects such as the new Daly Academic Building.

One sophomore who asked not to be identified described the possible plans for expansion as ridiculous. "Students come here because they are looking for a small college. The dorms are cramped as it is, and we don't want any more 'fuggly' buildings in our backyards."

Kevin Coveney, Vice President for Admissions and Enrollment Management, addressed the issue of a possible tuition increase. "Students at this school already pay a good amount," he said. "What I'd prefer to see is a gradual increase in enrollment and see how the school is doing at, say, 1,050. We're at the point now where even if we did increase tuition, we'd probably end up raising financial aid."

Coveney cited the SAT College Plans and Preference Study as evidence that increased enrollment would benefit the college. "When students taking the SAT were asked what size of school they would like to attend, only 6.7% said they would prefer a school with under 1,000 enrolled.

"But once the enrollment was increased to between 1,000 and 5,000, the percentage of interested students rose to 29.6%. Such an increase in the applicant pool would result in more applicants who do not need financial aid."

Assault Victims Offered On Campus Counseling

Martha Kimura
Staff Writer

In response to the alarming number of assault victims on campus, Washington College has allowed For All Seasons, a voluntary non-profit agency, to counsel at the college's Health Services every Thursday.

The agency provides confidential counseling for both male and female assault victims.

For All Seasons provides therapy, education and support on both an individual and group basis in counties that are unable to give financial support to such programs.

In addition to the counseling services available for assault victims, For All Seasons also provides an Anger/Violence group, designed to help victims of violence outside the family unit; a batterers group for men convicted of domestic violence; private counseling; and a speaker's bureau to provide information on rape, sexual assault, and violence and anger control.

For All Seasons directs its Crisis Center from Easton, Maryland and has offices on 400 High Street in Chestertown. The Crisis Center operates a 24-hour hotline in case of rape.

The Center also offers free counseling for both the victim and his or her family and friends. The counselors will provide support in the event that the victim chooses to press charges.

Educational programs are available upon request.

For more information contact Tami Laursen at 1-800-310-7273. The Crisis Center can be reached at (410)820-5600.

Chief Bradley is a "Good Neighbor"

Martha Kimura
Staff Writer

On Saturday, September 19, the Old Chestertown Neighborhood Association presented the first annual Good Neighbor Award, designed to promote a more community-oriented atmosphere.

The award, given in recognition for service to the community, was presented to the Chief of Police, Wayne Bradley.

Bradley has been the Chief of Police for over one year, during which time he has become an integral part of the community. He has been an active member in the drug task force and has participated in the Drug Awareness program.

He has also instituted foot and bike patrols. Bradley is currently addressing the parking problem in Chestertown.

Betty Ann Connolley, President of the Old Chestertown Neighborhood Association, presented the award. She said that Chief Bradley "genuinely cares about people and problems."

President Connolley presents "good neighbor" Chief Bradley with award

Initiative Begins in Force

Patrick Geissel
Staff Writer

In an effort to make Chestertown safer for its citizens, the Police Department of Chestertown, in conjunction with the Kent County Sheriff's Office and the Maryland State Police, has initiated the Chestertown Community Policing Initiative.

Officers will be conducting foot patrols in areas that have been identified as trouble spots, including portions of High Street. Dogs will be used in certain patrols to detect illegal drugs.

The Washington College campus is not targeted as a problem area.

Chestertown police say they hope to have the coopera-

See "Police," pg. 9

Inside

Vote America, See pg. 5

New Dorm Senators Elected, See pg. 8

Daigle in Japan, See pg. 4

This Week's Film Barton Fink, See pg. 7

Business Management Under Review, pg. 5

Bigger Campus, Bigger Pockets

Okay, so it's not final. The college has not passed any resolutions to increase the size of the student body. They present themselves, via our President, as "exploring the possibilities." Let's just say they are avidly exploring them.

Simply put, more students means more revenue. Revenue comes from several sources: student tuition, sub-businesses (the bookstore, snack bar, catering and summer conferences, for example), endowment fund interest income, investment of liquid funds, and donations from private citizens and corporations. The state of Maryland does put a penny or two into the till, but Governor William Donald Schaefer is suggesting cutting our pennies by 25 percent.

Expenses are probably too numerous to list, but one expense which the Board of Visitors and Governors has become extremely concerned with of late is that of financial aid.

Between 65 and 70 percent of WC students receive some sort of financial aid, from Federal Pell Grants to Maryland State aid to College scholarships based on both need and merit.

When you check all this in the ledger, it means that almost three-quarters of the students are not paying the $17,000+ per year to attend school and live here.

Other factors which mean red ink are students who live off-campus, don't eat on the 19-meal plan, and attend abroad programs.

So the problems (aside from the recession) which affect the (lack of) college income all lead to students. Let's examine these one at a time.

• Financial Aid: During the September 11 meeting of the Board, the figure $5.2 million was a traffic-stopper. This is the financial aid budget for the year. Please compare this with another popular figure, the $5.6 million required to build the Daly Academic Building.

What's the heart attack? $2.2 million of this was spent on our wonderfully diverse and scientific-minded freshman class. That means 42 percent of the total budget, 78 percent of the class of '96 receives some form of aid, and not all of that is given out by the college.

Men in ties shook their heads in disbelief. "We bought them, didn't we?" said one guy, and the audience didn't know to laugh or cry.

Kevin Coveney told them that "we got what we paid for" by detailing just what a lovely crop of frosh the new students are. More valedictorians, higher SAT's, just generally better stats than the previous year, including sheer number.

Not, however, including Aid received. The debated turned to one that questioned the ultimate merit in giving out lots of merit scholarships. Need-based is the way to go, they said, so we can avoid a rich smart kid getting out of paying his or her way if Mommy & Daddy can afford it.

SGA President Jen Del Nero and I, the only students in attendance, took our turns at shaking in disbelief. "They bought me, how about you," we said almost simultaneously.

• Study Abroad: Dean Wubbels wants to revamp and revitalize the Junior Year Abroad program so that more of us can have an opportunity to go. And if Dean Maxcy had his way, we'd all go abroad, at least for a semester.

But another clever Board member had another clever idea: "Why don't we send our Financial Aid students abroad and make the full-tuition ones stay?"

Har, Har, Har. Because if those of us who can barely afford to go here, go abroad, you take away those well-earned scholarships you were so loath to give us in the first place (so our senior year is even more destitute for us, but mail nice for you) we have to return to full tuition.

• More Full Board Plan Students: Nice awards. And seriously, folks, nice food (I challenge any of you to eat at Goucher, Frostburg State, or Loyola and then come back here and complain). But cut it out with the funky bands and tents and guys on stilts and one-day decorations. Save yourselves money. You only shock us with your kitsch so that our stomachs hold even less of your hard-prepared feasts.

• More students on campus: WHOA. Stop. Wait. There are 14 dorms on campus, and 923 students. This is 65.9 students per dorm. Some of us wonder if there's that many students actually living in some dorms. Assume that 5.6 percent of students (or 164) live off-campus (because 5 out of 28 dorm senators represent the o-c sector). This means that 54.2 students ARE ASSIGNED TO EACH DORM (in theoretical figures, of course). How can they possibly ask for more?

This returns to my original point: how good an idea is it to get bigger? If we need more housing now, how can we build fast enough for an increase? If there aren't enough public Macs and parking places and singles for seniors and professors of all persuasions now, will the discrepancy get sharper with numbers or will the college act on these very real complaints?

"If you build it, they will come was the outlook when the new SuperFresh — I mean Lifetime Fitness Center — was built.

I counter: "If they come, will you build it?"

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddish
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Ions
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-6160.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

GRAA President Condemns Discrimination

To the Editor:

I couldn't agree more with Rebacca Bryant's article in the September 18th publication of THE ELM, titled On Being "Straight" in a "Gay" Organization — no one should be judged on the basis of sexual preference. Though not an officer, I am a member and strong supporter of the GALA organization, finding their goals of respect and equality synonymous with my organization, The Gender Relations Awareness Alliance.

I am amazed at the Ignorance revealed in the hate-mail and comments reported by those affiliated with GALA. Assuming that a liberal arts education encourages mature inquiry into areas of controversy, I find the ridicule and abuse outrageous. If communication is truly an area the human race takes pride in mastering, I have certainly seen no evidence of it here.

One of my dearest friends made the choice to become a lesbian two years ago; I have known this beautifull and intelligent woman nearly five years now, and our friendship has grown only stronger. We see each other through the eyes of equality, one human to another. The pessimism of this campus angers me because, like all homo-or bisexuals, her value as a human beinbg has not been altered by her decision.

As a woman, I face both suble and blatant discrimination, which only strengthens my comprehension and support of a group like GALA. No more than you have to burn bras or beat a drum to join my organization do you have to be gay to join this one: we are both working for the recognition of our common humanity.

Lynn Clifford, President
Gender Relations

Brite & Blinkie Abusing their Powers

To the Editor:

We are mortified by the cruelty with which Krystal Brite and Twinkie Blinkie treat our lives and futures. As steadfast believers in the science of Astrology and after consultation with our own personal psychic interpreters, we can only assume that these two are callous, miserable wretches who lead shallow lives and only amuse themselves by intentionally forecasting doom in our futures. They are an insult to our otherwise credible and honest newspaper. These two hooligans are abusing your publication with their tomfoolery. Take a stand. Out with those villans! Out!

Gratefully,
Nathan Harned
Erin Page

Letters Policy

Letters to the Editor do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM Editorial Staff. No unsigned letters are excepted except in cases where identity needs to be protected for reasons of personal safety. Letters should be sent to the ELM via campus mail or dropped off at the ELM Office in the basement of Reid Hall no later than 6 p.m. Wednesday if they are to appear in that Friday's issue.

Crisis

Scott Ross Koon

What the bourgeoisie, therefore, produces, above all, is its own grave-diggers. Its fall and the victory of the proletariat are equally inevitable.

-Karl Marx, The Communist Manifesto

Last week's column dealt with the reasons for the instability of capitalism on a national scale. With last week's crisis in the European Monetary System, I thought that it would be appropriate this week to address the question of the capitalist crisis on an international scale.

Since the death of Marx one of the most critical questions confronting Marxists has been "Why has capitalism endured so long?" The answer offered by most Marxists is that imperialism has served to prop it up. Yet when the leading empires fell apart in the decades following World War II, a new explanation was needed. And so the idea of neo-imperialism was developed.

This imperialism takes the form of economic exploitation of the third world by the first world — exploitation which is made possible not by gunboats but by unfair trading practices and usury on a grand scale.

Today, another trend in capitalism has become apparent. During the heyday of the European powers empires were not based on geographical location but rather upon historical precedent. The Portuguese controlled Angola because they conquered it before any other European power, and the Belgians controlled the Congo for the same reason.

With the collapse of the Soviet Union and the increasing crisis of capitalism, the days of far-flung empires are over. The economic empires of today are to be based upon proximity so that they might exploit resources and populations more efficiently.

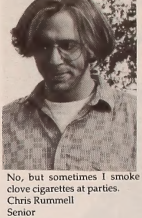
These economic blocs serve to prolong the capitalist system in another way as well; they ameliorate inter-capitalist rivalry. The European Economic Community and the North American Free Trade Zone will ensure economic dependency and eliminate the primary causes of national territorial aggrandizement.

The "Greater East-Asia Co-prosperity Sphere" was a goal which Japan could not realize through war. Yet, it appears that it shall be successful in doing so through economic imperialism.

Today, we live in a world of "International Capitalism" where national boundaries are becoming less inhibitory of free flow of capital, labor, and goods. This improves the efficiency of capitalism many fold. As the return on investments from high growth areas such as Mexico and China are realized by first world investors, the interests of individual capitalist states will be served well by such a system.

Obviously, capitalism has

See "Koon" pg. 9



CAMPUS VOICES

By Dude

Do you have a cigarette, and if so, what kind?

No. I don't smoke. Not at all.
Kerri Haskins
Freshman
New Hope PA

No, but sometimes I smoke clove cigarettes at parties.
Chris Rummell
Senior
Dover, DE

Yeah... Camel Lights.
Eric Fuchs
Freshman
Sarasota, FL.

Yeah, I do but I bummed it off of somebody else. It's a menthol so you probably wouldn't it anyway.
Belinda McLeod
Senior
Greenwich, CT

No... well I smoke, but only at parties. Whatever I can mooch.
Matt Langan
Junior
Vienna, VA

No, I don't... I'm sorry. There's some on the windowsill in the stairwell [in Reid], though.
Susan Batten
Senior
Charlottesville, VA

Open Forum: On Murphy Brown and Moderation

Open Forum is a weekly op/ed column available to all members of the Washington College community. Queries may be made as to suitability to the Editor-in-Chief (ext. 8585) or Features Editor (ext. 8766). Submission deadline is Wednesday at 6 p.m. for that week's paper. Articles are not to exceed 1000 words.

Eve Zartman is a sophomore planning on majoring in International Studies. She is a dorm senator for Reid Hall and vice-president of the sophomore class.

Eve C. Zartman

"It's just Dan Quayle" was what Frank Fontain said on Monday night's Murphy Brown season premier when confronted with the Dan Quayle speech about family values. I want the Washington College community and all those reading this article to know that a growing number of Republicans feel the same way as Frank Fontain. It is just Dan Quale's position and not that of all Republicans. There are people who use single parenthood as an example of the plummeting moral values in our society. And there are the others who simply see it as the way of the times and do their best to support those who choose or have to live that lifestyle. As Murphy Brown said, and I believe any single parent would agree, it is not easy being a single parent, and it is not an easy decision to make.

Yet, this article is not really about single parenthood. It is to let people know that the Republican image that is coming from the far right is far from representing the majority of the Republican party. After having been born a political brat, worked on the Hill and the Republican National Committee, and having just come back from the convention in Houston, I can tell you that what the American people saw on their Democrat-biased news coverage is not the entire truth.

The speeches that were shown on prime time were not the speeches of the more liberal women or of the minorities who believe that the Republican party addressed minority issues. The media did not include coverage of the woman who spoke of how the AIDS problem is being treated by the administration's policies. These are people high up in the party who are supported despite the fact they do not agree with everything the platform states.

There are many conservative Democrats as well as many liberal Republicans who agree on many issues. For example, I consider myself a social liberal and a fiscal conservative, yet the majority of my opinions are expressed by the Republican

See "Zartman" pg. 9

Back in the Spotlight Again: DaigleTakes Kyoto

Jason Truax
Features Editor

Dale Daigle's involvement in Asian Theater goes back seven years and all the way to Hawaii. He taught at the University of Hawaii, which does an exchange with Asian Sensais (masters of an art).

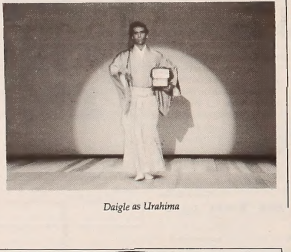
Photo by Andrea Stone

Dale Daigle, the Sensai of WC drama

This past summer Daigle, assistant professor of Drama at WC, studied Japanese theater for two months at the Kyoto Performance Institute, Japan. Daigle's trip was made possible by a visual artist grant from the Japan Foundation, a Traditional Theater Training scholarship, and funding from WC's faculty enhancement fund.

Daigle joined an international group of actors to study at the Kyoto Performance Institute, a school open only by special invitation. The group explored the mixing of many different theatrical styles including Kabuki, a type of dance which is incorporated into theatrical performances. Daigle's group was treated to an unusual rarity: they were permitted to study under the Japanese "national treasure," Knsomme Fujimora.

While at the institute, Daigle and the other students were given the opportunity to perform as well. Daigle portrayed Urahima in the play of the same name. He also performed with two Italian actors in a Commedia dell'arte.



Interested mainly in the training techniques of actors and not performing, Daigle noted that Asian actors, especially the Japanese, are rigorously trained. They train five to six hours a day starting at an early age. "The Japanese remain a focused people who strive to be as good as they can be. Their commitment and dedication produces a virtuosity you don't see here."

Although most of his time was spent training, the learning did not end with the classes. Daigle attended the theater three to four times a week, and saw traditional and contemporary performances by visiting Asian artists. He mostly studied traditional theater, explaining that contemporary forms are an evolution of traditional theater. When asked about his favorite style of Japanese theater Daigle responded, "each form has its own appeal. I enjoy different things about each type."

Contrary to what people may think, language was not a barrier. English was the common language of the group. The Japanese language was used as a social necessity. Daigle learned to speak short simple sentences to communicate; it was not as difficult as he anticipated.

Because of his hands-on practical experience, Daigle believes that he is capable of making various types of theater work for his classes at WC. Daigle said he did not look solely for differences between various styles of theater, he looked for universals, cross cultural traits, which build links between performing and teaching techniques.

Students in any of Daigle's classes, especially his Traditional Japanese Theater class, will notice the incorporation of the techniques Daigle learned while in Japan. Daigle is teaching Japanese Theater this semester for the second time since he arrived in the fall of '89

Daigle as Urahima

Gender and Germany

Tanya L. Cunic
Staff Writer

What is your ideal of being a successful male? Do you consider yourself a feminist? What shapes your ideal of what a man's role should be? Do you have any female mentors?

These are just some of the questions that Bridgette Winchester and Tina McCuen were asking this summer in Germany. McCuen and Winchester traveled to Germany in order to study the issues and the implications regarding gender in this ever changing political climate.

The travel and research was made possible by the Society of Junior Fellows, an organization of which both students are a part. This organization consists of members that have a GPA of 3.2 or above, display leadership and initiative in extra-curricular activities and community programs. Members may then apply for research and internship grants. Both Winchester and McCuen received the maximum amount of research funding which was "very generous" and acknowledged their projects would not have been possible if it were not for the Society of Junior Fellow Grants.

Although both were interested in the issue of gender, the focus, thus the results, were radically different. Winchester lived in Berlin and interviewed women that were students at Freie Universitat. The nine women she interviewed ranged in age from 20 to 40 and had the same educational background. She spoke with these women for approximately an hour and a half each. Although she had memorized her list of questions, often the interview would stray. Winchester said that this was often the most interesting part of the research.

Winchester said that although all the interviews were fascinating, one interview with a 47-year old women named Inga completely astounded her. According to Bridgette, Inga's father was a Russian POW, and when he returned, food was so scarce that he went out everyday in search of acorns in order to make acorn soup. Inga and other female members of the community also actively helped in the rebuilding of Berlin after World War II.

Although this is one of the many life reflections that were

See "Germany," pg. 9

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred

A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS

505 Washington Ave
Chestertown, MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)

Janie Thompson
(301) 778-0898

The Body Shoppe
Toning and Tanning
Specializing in Artifical and
Natural Skin Care +Nutritional
Products
Kent Plaza, Chestertown
778-0922

Forney's
Jewelers
Chestertown, MD
778-1966

OUTDOORSMAN
Ray-Ban®

Business Management Scheduled for Review

Dina Sansing
Staff Writer

Washington College's Business Management Department is one of the areas of study scheduled for an external evaluation of its curriculum. The Egnlish, Modern Languages and Art departments are also scheduled for review this year.

The external survey of Business Management was originally scheduled to occur in either October or November. The evaluation had to be postponed when one member of the review team cancelled.

While finding a replacement for the team has delayed the evaluation, other members include a faculty member from Gettysburg College and a retired faculty member from Indiana State University.

The quality of the department's program will be scrutinized, and Professor Terence Scout, Chair of Business Management, said the review should "make a good program better."

Topics of concern for the evaluation include the appropriateness of courses to the Business major and course content. While individual faculty members will not be evaluated, the team will review the faculty as a whole.

Scout said that faculty members of the Business Management department welcome the review team and have not expressed any resistance to the external survey.

While this type of evaluation has not been done before, President Trout said he would like to have an external review of all departments completed before the next Middle States Accreditation, which may occur in the spring of 1994.

Middle States reviews the entire college every ten years, and Trout hopes to continue the external evaluations on a rotating basis every five years.

Photography Contest for College Students

Photographer's Forum magazine and Nikon Inc. have announced the 13th Annual College Photography contest. Winning students will receive over $5,000 in cash, a Nikon N6006 AF SLR and a 35-70mm f/3.3-4.5 AF zoom lens as well as an exhibition at Nikon House in New York City during 1993.

Winning photos will be published in the May 1993 issue of Photographers Forum magazine, and all finalists will be published in the Best of College Photography Annual 1993.

Enter as many black & white prints, color prints or slides as you wish (subject matter open). Entries will also be automatically considered for future issues of Photographer's Forum magazine. Entry forms are available at the ELM office in the basement of Reid Hall.

WC for Vote America

Tanya Allen
Staff Writer

As part of a nationwide effort to promote voter awareness among undergraduates, Washington College for Vote America will give students the opportunity to participate in this year's election.

In 1988, only 36% of America's 18 to 24 year olds voted in the Presidential election, and to prevent this from happening again this year, Vote America is working with students at colleges across the the nation so that student volunteers can make it possible for everyone to register and have transportation to the voting centers.

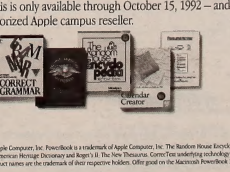
Vote America will also provide information on absentee ballots for out-of-state students.

Working with the Women's League for Women Voters, Washington College for Vote America will set up tables in the cafeteria to register students all next week, with the help of the men's crew team and other student volunteers.

The last day to register is October 2. In November, the committee plans to provide culture vans so that students will be able to get to the elections.

In addition, the committee and will launch an advertising campaign to encourage everyone to vote.

Wanted:



Editor for Pegasus, WC's Yearbook. Apply in Writing to Richard Striner, Chair, Board of Publications.

The Macintosh Student Aid Package.

Apple Macintosh PowerBook 145 4/40 | Apple Macintosh Classic II | Apple Macintosh LC II | Apple Macintosh IIsi

Get over $400 worth of preloaded software when you buy one of the Apple® Macintosh® computers shown above at our best prices ever. And if you are interested in financing options, be sure to ask for details about the Apple Computer Loan. But hurry, because student aid like this is only available through October 15, 1992 – and only at your authorized Apple campus reseller.

For more information visit the
WC Bookstore
Casey Academic Center or call x239

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo, and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Classic is a registered trademark licensed to Apple Computer, Inc. PowerBook is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc. The Random House Encyclopedia is a trademark of Random House, Inc. American Heritage Electronic Dictionary, Electronic Thesaurus, and CorrecText® developed by Houghton Mifflin Company, publisher of The American Heritage Dictionary and Roget's II: The New Thesaurus. CorrecText underlying technology developed by Language Systems, Inc. Calendar Creator is a trademark of Power Up Software Corporation. ResumeWriter is a trademark of Bowmoor Software Company, Inc. All product names are the trademark of their respective holders. Offer good on the Macintosh PowerBook 145 4/40 configuration only. All qualifying computers come preloaded with software and electronic versions of instructions. Disks and printed manuals are not included in this offer.

Week at a Glance

September 25 - October 2

Friday 25, Sunday 27-Monday 28
Film Series: Barton Fink
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. †

Friday 25
Freshman Officer Election Petitions Due
Student Affairs

Saturday 26
Greek Games Party
Band: Gullian's Fun Deck
CoffeeHouse, 9:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.
Admission: $2.00 Greek / $3.00 non-Greek
$1.00 off with purchase of $8.00 t-shirt †

Sunday 27 - Tuesday 29
Rosh Hashana

Sunday 27
Greek Games
Campus Lawn
1:00 p..m. - 4:00 p.m.

Monday 28
Meeting: Women's League of Washington College
Minta Martin Lounge, 12:30 p.m.

Life/Work Planning
Career Center Library
Spanish House, 2:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.
For information call ext. 7888

Film: Martha Graham: An American Original in Performance
Sponsored by Washington College Dance Club
Casey Forum, 6:30 p.m.

Tuesday 29
Jazz Class
Dance Studio, BAJLFC,
4:30 - 6:00 p.m.

Open Forum with President Trout
CAC Commons Room, 7:30 p.m. †

William James Forum:
The Illusion of Free Choice in Our Market Driven Society
Speaker: Robert Sorensen
Hynson Lounge, 8:00 p.m.

S.G.A. Meeting
CAC Forum, 9:00 p.m.

Wednesday 30
Bach's Lunch
Miller Library Terrace, 12:30 p.m.

Internship Coordinator:
Ms. Mary Baldwin,
Organization of American States
CAC Commons Room
3:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m.

Ballroom Dance Class
Dance Studio, BAJFLC,
6:00 - 7:00 p.m.

Snickers Comedy Club
Featuring Judith Sloan at 7:30 p.m.
& Disappear Fear at 8:15 p.m.
CoffeeHouse, $1.00†

Thursday October 1
Lecture: Dating in the Age of AIDS
Speaker: Barbara Herna,
AIDS coordinator for Harford, Cecil and Kent Counties

Ballet Class
Dance Studio, BAJLFC
4:30 - 6:00 p.m.

McLain Lecture Series
Speaker: Ms. Elizabeth Buckner
Dunning Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Freshman Election Speeches
CoffeeHouse, 7:30 p.m.

Washington College Community Chorus Rehearsal
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m

Friday 2 - Saturday 3

Theatrical Reading: Angels in America

† see related article

Leonardo Da Vinci: The Inventions exhibit will be open to the public in the Tawes Lobby, Gibson Performing Arts Center until October 2.

Renaissance Festival in Annapolis, Maryland will run until October 19.

Art Exhibit: Sue Tessem, The Imperial Hotel.

Ancient Japan Exhibit with 256 objects, at the Arthur Sackler Gallery runs though November 1.

A&E

Angels in America

Angels in America will hit the stage for a theatrical reading, Friday, October 2 - 3 in Tawes Theatre at 8:00 p.m. Written by Tony Kusher, the play bills itself as a fictional account of Roy Cohn and has made quite a bang in the London theatre scene.

WC's own Melanie Green, Ed Shroeder, Steve Brown, Cleo Patterson, Richard McKee, and Josh Buchman make up the cast.

Pinpointing Angels' theme is almost impossible. It swarms through the muddled schitzophrenic problems of American life. Each character is faced with difficult problems and choices with AIDS, homosexuality, religion, politics and equal employment.

They are people whose lives have given them tough choices at a time when they have begun to question where they are, how they got there, and most important, what the hell they should do now.

Directed by Dale Daigle, the play is not "for the faint of heart." Parental discression is advised. The play's premier in London has made rights to production unavailable. Though the actors will not be off-script, the content, not the sets or costumes, makes Angels a worthwhile play.

As Heather said, "It's going to be great and fun. Everyone should come."

Student Profile: Monita Airen

Photo by Andrew Stone

Monita Airen

Monita Airen represents the AOπ Sorority with intelligence and style. A native of Long Island, New York, Monita is a senior Biology major.

A leader in her sorority since her sophomore year, Monita has held the positions of leadership and scholarship her first and second year, respectively. She is now president of AOπ as well as the resident assistant of the sorority's home, third floor Minta Martin.

Monita has maintained Dean's List status each semester and was inducted into Omicron Delta Kappa last year. She is presently coordinating the inactive Society of the Sciences and has recently been nominated to the Student Affairs Committee.

Presently applying to over 26 medical schools, Monita hopes to become a surgeon. Despite her busy schedule, Monita still finds time to spend with her friends and family and have fun.

Illusions of Free Choice

The William James Forum's first lecture will be Tuesday, in Hynson Lounge at 8:00 p.m. The guest speaker, Robert C. Sorensen's talk will concern Illusions of Free Choice in Our Market-Driven Society.

Sorensen has his Ph.D. in sociology with an emphasis on social psychology and collective behavior from the University of Chicago.

In the late 1950s, Sorenson established the Audience Research section of Radio Free Europe, which "bootlegged" culture and information to five East European countries under Soviet domination.

He is in high demand as an expert witness due to his consumer behavior research. He has testified in over 30 cases in United States District Courts and in the International Trade Commission.

Sorenson is president of Sorenson Marketing / Management Corporation, established in 1968, designed to proved analysis and information to meet specialized needs of institutional, corporate and law firm clients.

Currently, Sorenson is a full professor of marketing at Rider College, Graduate and Undergraduate School of Business Administration as well as associate editor of Zygon: Journal of Religion and Science.

Publications

Interested in starting your own publication? The Publications Seminar for funding and publishing student-run magazines and newsletters will be held Tuesday, September 29 at 7 p.m.

Literary House Press manager Mike Kaylor will describe various publishing methods. The Writer's Union Junta then will meet with potential editors and publishers to discuss funding.

Students interested in producing independent magazines are strongly encouraged to attend.

Rock 'n' Laugh

The Snickers Comedy Club will rock and kid you this Wednesday, 7:30 p.m. with New York comic, Judith Sloan and guitar-duo, Disappear Fear.

A favorite act at Andy's, the sister team, Sonia and Cindy, of Disappear Fear, have stormed the music scene with their latest album, Live at the Bottom Line.

Armed with a sound described as "harmonic, folky pop," Disappear Fear have performed with Suzanna Vega and the Indigo Girls and have frenzied audiences from San Francisco, CA to London, England.

Disappear Fear

Walker Reviews Barton Fink

Ryan Walker
Staff Writer

Barton Fink is a less than riotous but solidly amusing comedy, most valuable as a presentation to the imaginations of those who don't mind when a movie gets "creative" or "artistic."

The central character is a young writer who has tasted critical acclaim but is yet naïve in his profession and in his life. He leaves his home state of New York for California using his reputation as a promising and artistic play wrighte to get a job with an established "B" film maker, the classic embodiment of corporate Hollywood.

The film's radical changes of direction lend the impression that at certain junctures the story writers, Coen and Coen, became bored and impatient with the plot and sacrficed consistency to introduce developments entertaining in more accessible ways. With this it views like a draft the story writers decided not to revise. Whether these shifts are calculated and / or effective is up to the viewer to decide, but the spectacle may detract from the character-driven approach that begins the story.

Artistic gobbelty-gook aside, this is at least an aesthetically pleasing picture (see urinal shot), sometime comedic, with dialogue that is often thoughtful, subtle, and expressive, and a plot that in its liberty provokes thought and appeals to the imagination. Meanwhile, there's enough open-ended symbolism to satisfy any art/lit/philosophy major. Or art-minded business majors.

It's All Greek Weekend to Them

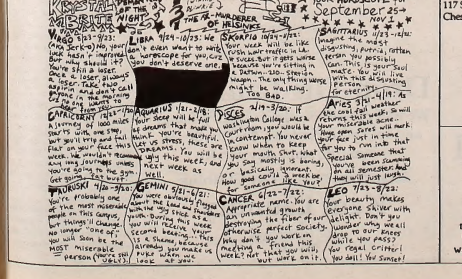
Help kick-off Greek Weekend on Saturday, September 26 from 9 a.m. - 1 a.m. in the Coffee-House. Gullian's Fun Deck will rock the house with their acoustic guitar sound. Admission is $2 for Greeks and $3 for non-Greeks. $1-off with the purchase of a Greek Games t-shirt which are available from Sam Boggess for $8.

Come watch the fraternities and sororities fight for the gold during the annual Greek Weekend Games, Sunday, September 27 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In case if last year's champions, the Theta Chi's and Alpha Chi's, can retain their championship status as they battle it out in volleyball, three-legged races, wheelbarrow races, running relays, dizzy-lizzy and—the grand finale tug-o-war.

J & M'S FAMILY RESTAURANT

JOIN US FOR A PIZZA & AN ICE COLD DRAFT BEER



Soft Shell Crabs • Homemade Crab Cakes
Steamed Crabs • Hoagies • Philly Cheese Steaks

FRESH ROCKFISH PLATTER

Dinner Served Daily 4 - 8pm • Breakfast Served All Day

Open 6am-10pm • 7 DAYS A WEEK

1 1/2 mi. S. of Chester River Bridge Next to Emily's • 778-5881

KRYSTAL
PERSON OF THE NIGHT
YOUR HOROSCOPE for September 25 - NOV 1
ARIES 3/21-4/20: Your week will be like a roller coaster ride...
TAURUS 4/21-5/20: Your week will be like a trip to the dentist...
GEMINI 5/21-6/21: You were anxious to find out the Lead on Tuesday...
CANCER 6/22-7/22: Appropriate name. You are an unwanted growth...
LEO 7/23-8/22: Your beauty makes everyone shiver with delight...
VIRGO 8/23-9/22: (And Scrub) No, you don't deserve one.
LIBRA 9/24-10/23: We don't even want to write a horoscope for you...
SCORPIO 10/24-11/22: Your week will be like a trip to the dentist...
SAGITTARIUS 11/23-12/21: Imagine the most disgusting, putrid, rotten person you possibly can. This is your week...
CAPRICORN 12/22-1/20: If [illegible] you look more like Sinead O'Connor than you would like to...
AQUARIUS 1/21-2/19: Your week will be full of...
PISCES 2/19-3/20: If Washington College were a country...
SKORUSKI 7/20-7/30: You're probably one of the most miserable people on this campus...
Dear Sweetie, I'll always be your Secret Weapon. Love, Lisa
Dear Lisa, Thanks for the support. Love, Sweetie
Dear Sweetie, Thanks for the support

SGA Dorm Senators were elected Thursday, September 17

All Washington College students are members of the Student Government Association, and they elect Dorm Senators to represent their voice in SGA proceedings. The number of Senators per dorm is determined by the amount of students living in each dorm; off-campus students are given five representatives. Issues which students wish to bring to the attention of the SGA should be directed to their Dorm Senator(s). Dorm Senators are responsible for posting minutes of SGA meetings and for polling residents for opinions regarding SGA resolutions.

EAST
Maria Jerardi

9A
Christine Smith
Susan Czechowski

KENT
Mary Holmes
Kevin Lawner

CAROLINE
Sonja Wilson
Mike McDermott

WEST
Chris Rummell

MIDDLE
Ken Pipkin

SOMERSET
Matt Murray
Bill Dudtch

MINTA MARTIN
Megan Ward
Nancy Millhouser
Allison Worrell

REID
Eve Zartman
Kris Phalen

TALBOT
Doug Peterson

WORCHESTER
Skip Gibson

WICOMICO
Johni Savage

CECIL
Jamie Baker

DORCHESTER
Than Parker

CARDINAL
Greg Giobbe
Bill Ball

OFF CAMPUS
Jane Kennedy
Sara White
Melissa Harmeyer
Ivette Gormaz
Julia Scheid

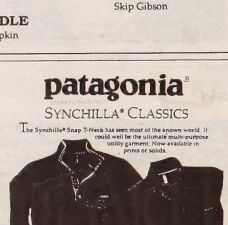
Search for Best Students

USA Today, in cooperation with four higher education associations, is beginning its annual search for the nation's best college students.

60 students will be named to the1993 All-USA Academic Team. The students selected to the first, second and third teams will be featured in a special section of USA Today planned for February 5th of next year.

The 20 first-team members will be invited to receive their awards at a ceremony in Washington, D.C. Each first team member will receive a $2,500 cash award. Any full-time undergraduate is eligible.

Each nomination must be signed by a faculty member familiar with the student's work and an administrator.



Winners will be selected by a panel of educators, chosen in cooperation with the co-sponsors. The criteria are designed to find students who excel not only in scholarship but in leadership roles on and off campus.

The primary measure for the judges' evaluation will be a student's outstanding original academic or intellectual product. The judges will be influenced by the student's ability to describe that outstanding endeavor in his/her own words. They will not read a poet's work, see an artist's painting or hear a composer's music. Judges will rely solely on the student's ability to describe the effort in writing, supplemented by recommendations from a nominating professor and up to three other persons of the nominee's choice. Students may nominate themselves.

Criteria for the team were developed in consultation with USA Today co-sponsors, the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities (NAICU), the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges (NASULGC), the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education(AACTE) and the Council for Advancement and Support of Education(CASE).

For more information, call Carol Skalski at (703) 276-5890. Nomination forms are available at the ELM office in the basement of Reid Hall.

patagonia
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap-T-Neck has seen most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.

10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442
"the patagonia place" and other wonderful things
NOT TO SCALE
We' re Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

Another Time II
Fine Furniture, Collectibles & Antiques
•housewares, lamps & decor•
10 percent discount with College ID
819 High Street Extended
Chestertown
778-6525

Andy's
337 1/2 HIGH ST.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9.pm
FRI 25 BITTER CREEK Simply Great Bluegrass
SAT 26 JENNIFER FERGUSON & SCOTT SMITH
Acoustic/Electric rock from two very talented musicians
778-6779

Attention
All Students!
Practice your bowling
Ten-pin and Duckpin
Monday through Friday
3 - 5 p.m.
Only $4.00 with college ID! (Price includes shoes)
Queen Anne's Bowling Centre
Rt. 213 South of Chestertown
778-5800

Drop-Off Laundry
We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service
Laundromat Dry Cleaning
Kent Laundry
607 High Street
778-3551

From "Zartman," pg. 3

party. That is why I align myself with them. I do not agree with everything the Republican party has in its platform, but who in your life do you agree with about everything?

"Don't ever judge a book by its cover" is a motto we have all heard at least once from our English or Philosophy professors. You can only discuss the issues once you've taken that book and have read it, torn it apart, analyzed it and formed your own opinions. Do the same with the upcoming election. Do not let your first opportunity to use your constitutional right to vote in a presidential election go by. And my own personal plea to all the Democratic party members who see Republicans as the "evil other" as well as all to those who haven't made up their minds as to which political party they affiliate themselves with: do not give up on the Republicans simply because of one man's opinion.

You would be surprised by how many moderate Republicans are coming out of the closet and starting to voice their opinions.

From "Germany," pg. 4

related to Winchester, all were intriguing. They dealt with "marriages, divorces, illegitimate children, abortions, confronting sexual identity, failed careers, successful careers and making ends meet." However, when she asked these German women if they were feminists or if they had any female mentors, many of them replied in the negative.

Life reflections and role shaping were also the topics of Tina McCuen's interviews. She chose to interview men between the ages of 20 and 80 from different areas of Germany. She was primarily interested in how the rapidly changing political climate changed the situation of men and their roles.

One of the men she interviewed was over eighty who spoke of serving under the Third Reich. Two other men she interviewed were homeless and felt that their roles in society were partially determined because their fathers were killed in World War II. Both of these men felt they couldn't fit into any role in society because they had no example except for the one society put forth. Ultimately, these men attributed their hopelessness to leaving their wives because their families would survive better without them being present.

McCuen found that interviewing men was a difficult process because she was often perceived as a young, inexperienced American female. In fact, she stated that during several of the interviews, the men would not address her in their reply, rather they would turn to another male in the room and direct their answer to him. Some of these men would go so far as to make jokes about McCuen and how she reminded them of an ex-girlfriend.

Aside from doing research, McCuen also took classes at Konstanz Universitat. These classes were conducted three hours a day, seven days a week through July and August. Although she only had five days off, the classes she took in German Civilization and German Literature and Culture were valuable in understanding the men she was interviewing.

McCuen is planning on using the information from her interviews as the starting point for her thesis. She doesn't view gender as a female problem anymore, because females "have chiseled a place for themselves, while men have lost their place because society won't allow them to chisel a new place."

Winchester eventually would like to transcribe the interviews she conducted and assemble them into an anthology.

Upon reflection of their trips, McCuen says that going to Germany was "the best experience of my entire life, being away from home and college I saw myself differently."

Winchester states that she learned about methods of interviewing and realized "I could not put women into methodological boxes. . .every one was powerful in their own ordinary way."

From "Police," pg. 1

tion of the entire community in their campaign.

"I encourage off-campus students to take this opportunity to meet the officers while they are patrolling their neighborhoods," said Jerry Roderick, Director of Security at Washington College.

From "Koon," pg. 3

proven to be far more resilient than most Marxists previously believed. Does this discredit Marx's thesis that capitalism "produces its own grave-diggers?" Not at all. What is needed is a careful re-evaluation of historical experience.

So far, capitalism has lasted for only two hundred years or so. Feudalism lasted far longer than that before the aristocracy was overcome by the bourgeoisie. With this in mind, socialists should remember that there is no such thing as a quick and easy end to any historical era.

This is not to say that capitalism is the end of historical development. The current readjustment of political and economic relationships in the world make a number of contradictions clear. Capitalism was developed within the confines of the nation-state structure, and yet it appears to try to overcome it. This makes our revolutionary task easier in some ways, as nationalism must be overcome to achieve truly internationalist socialism. As Luxemburg noted ". . . for the bourgeois classes, the standpoint of national freedom is fully subordinated to that of class rule."

What is happening in Europe today is exactly this phenomenon — the subordination of national freedom to class rule. Although this is intended to stabilize the capitalist system, the project to unify Europe has undergone severe difficulties from its inception.

The Danes have made it clear that they do not wish to participate. The French approved the EC union treaty by a margin of less than one percent. And the events of last week demonstrated that there are structural difficulties in the EMS.

If the trading blocs are to function effectively, they must serve a stabilizing function. It is most likely that they will succeed in doing so for a time. But ultimately they will be obsolete and meaningless. Ultimately they will serve to delay the down fall of capitalism. And due to the elimination of national boundaries, they will ensure that this downfall will be more sudden when it does occur. Ultimately, it will serve to eliminate the international class system which Engels described as being "established by violence and robbery, by deception and fraud. . ."

The Classy Closet
Consignment Shop
10 % Discount
With College ID
Benita Hyland, Owner
"We're Here for You"
204 High Street
Downtown Chestertown

Pip's Discount Liquors
Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER – CHILLED WINES
QUANTITY DISCOUNTS BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES
TELEPHONE 778-6128
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA, CHESTERTOWN

$5 off any service over $20 with ad (one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2695 Chestertown, MD 21620

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

BEER*WINE*LIQUOR*ICE*KEGS*SODA
Suds 'n Soda
RT.213 & RT.. 297
CHESTERTOWN, MD.
778-5077
OPEN 7 DAYS 6.a.m- 12 mid
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
NATIONAL BOH 12oz. CAN 12-pack $3.80+tax
CASE $ 7.49
WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS
YOU MUST BE 21 AND HAVE VALID IDENTIFICATION
TO PURCHASE ALCOHOL

Field Hockey Stunned by Catholic in O.T.

Reneé Guckert
Staff Writer

After a two-game winning streak, The Washington College field hockey team sustained a frustrating loss last Thursday to Catholic University, bringing their current record to 2-2.

nine minutes left to play in the game, Catholic's Jenn Keegan shot and scored their first goal. Battling an extremely physical Catholic defense, the Shorewomen were unable to beat Catholic to the ball to acquire a winning goal in the second half. The game quickly

Defensively, goalie and last week's Newt's Player of the Week Brigid DeVries acquired another ten saves in the game bringing her season total to twenty-eight. Eleanor Shriver commented that, "Defensively we knew that it was crucial to mark each player tight inside

Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

Marie Mohler, tied for the team's leading scoring position, fires another one past the keeper

Washington's only goal of the game was scored just under five minutes into the first half by center forward, Reneé Guckert and assisted by right wing Jill Schultz.

At half time, the score remained 1-0 in favor of the Shorewomen, but with twenty-moved into sudden death overtime where the Catholic squad ultimately emerged victorious 2-1.

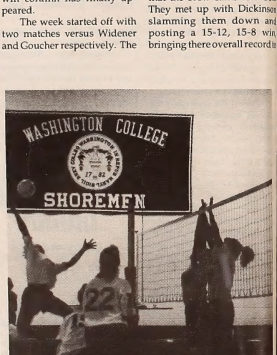
A team member revealed, "As much as we wanted to win that game, Catholic pushed harder, were more aggressive, and simply beat us to the ball. We dominated the entire first half and the majority of the second, but we just couldn't seem to push our offense close enough to the goal for another score."

the twenty-five yard line, but when the pressure was on, it just seemed easier said than done. I am confident, however, that marking is something the team will improve on in our next game against Albright."

The Shorewomen's next home game is tomorrow afternoon at 1:00 versus MAC rival Elizabethtown. That game and Wednesday's game versus Albright College, will be covered in next week's edition. BE THERE!

Volleyball Takes It to the Red Devils



Tyler McCarthy
Staff Writer

It has been quite a week for the Washington College Sho'women and through desire and hardship a slash in the win column has finally appeared.

The week started off with two matches versus Widener and Goucher respectively. The again by freshman Jen Dixo who has totalled 45 kill throughout the season follow by Julie Dill's 30. Michelle Chi has 56 assists and Diaz returne with 24 assists.

But Saturday was the da that the brew came to a boi They met up with Dickinso slamming them down an posting a 15-12, 15-8 win bringing there overall record

Julie "All Kills" Dill shows text book technique on this one

Sho'women posted a tough line-up but still succumbed to a 10-15, 6-15 loss to Widener and an 11-15, 9-15 loss to Goucher. Defensive star Beverly Diaz was still out with an ankle problem as Katina Duklewski filled in.

Freshman Jen Dixon had 11 kills to lead the Sho'women while senior Julie Dill closely followed. Freshman Michelle Chin was also on the scene with 20 assists.

As the week continued, the fire grew in the eyes of the Sho'women, but still they had trouble posting a win against Catholic.

The squad lost 8-15, 8-15 but things were definitely looking up. The team was led once

1-7.

The six starters wi Beverly Diaz, Julie Di Courtney Myers, Miche Chin, Jen Dixon, and Aman Barnes who filled in for Mini Jecelin. They played like seasoned and experienced t eran team with the solidity t have been looking for all seas The whole day was bump, s spike as the Washington C lege Sho'women showed th they were ready to play ba

The Sho'women remain busy meeting up wi Gettysburg this past Wedn day (covered next week) a will be facing Salisbury St away this weekend.

© Birkenstock

Fall Classic

When the weather turns chilly, it's still Birkenstock* time. Add a pair of your favorite socks and let the Original Contoured Footbed support and cradle your feet. Birkenstock*

The shape of comfort.™

Boston.™ in sizes of colors

Birkenstock

Paul's Shoe Store
227 High Street
Chestertown, Maryland
778-2480

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales

Park

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday

238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

SOCCER UNABLE TO SNAP STREAK

Dave Taibl
Writer at Large

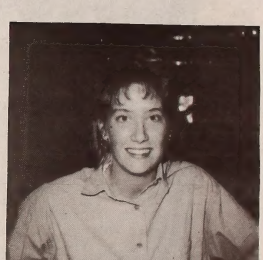
Washington College suffered yet another loss as they travelled to the campus of Catholic University this Sunday. The Shoremen bore the burden of a four-game losing streak into the game, and left empty-handed, the victims of a 4-0 decision.

Coach Helbling's squad once again felt the loss of junior forward Chris Graham's presence on the turf. The former Newt's Player of the Week has missed the past three games with a back injury, forcing more unexperienced players to fill his shoes on an already youthful starting team. Freshman Brian Rush rose to the occasion with several scoring attempts. The Seaford, Delaware native along with teammate Rory Conway kept the pressure upon the Catholic defense, but were unable to capitalize on their opportunities.

The Shoremen defense performed admirably, as they have in each game this season. Freshman goalie Bill Reigel recorded 9 saves on the days frustrating a veteran C.U. attack. The defense was able to contain them as well, but Catholic was relentless, finding the goal four times as a result of mental errors made by the wearied Shoremen backs. When the final buzzer sounded, Catholic University found themselves owners of a lopsided win, but in truth, a hard-fought victory.

This disappointment, the fifth of its kind in the past weeks, has aroused questions from the student body as to Coach Helbling's methods.

The Shoremen squad has seen several different lineups in the last four starts, and has lacked the communication needed to dominate the pace of game. According to team co-captain Charlie Linehan, these methods are not of chief concern. "This is still a young group," he stressed. "As soon as we are able to get the experience we need as a team, things will begin to come together."



As this issue went to press, the Shoremen were gearing up for their next contest versus Wesley College. The mood of the practices were competitive and optimistic, far from the "sinking ship" attitude expressed by last year's squad. The players continued to work together to bring up the confidence in their skills and level of play. "The Juice is loose!" cheered senior co-captain Chris Kleberg, looking towards Wednesday's match. A five game streak is a tough one to break, but this team is far from lying down and watching the season pass them by.

Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

Chris "Cracker" Graham, former Newt's POW, crosses one up from the left side

NEWT'S Player of the Week

Well, here we go, time to open up another can of WHOOP ASS! IN YER FACE! Redskins fans- we have to hand it to you, you cheer for one of the luckiest teams in the NFL. The real team of the weekend -- the TENNESSEE VOLUNTEERS -- rain and all!

But now, down to the important stuff -- THE ONE, THE ONLY, US! Psyche -- NEWT's POW FOOL! This week the ringer is volleyball studette Jen Dixon. Against Dickinson she displayed her versatility with a well rounded performance -- 9 kills, 1 ace, and 9 digs. She proved that she can handle both ends of the court, offensively and defensively. Nice job Jen!

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
"The Gun in Betty Lou's Handbag"
Friday & Saturday 7 & 9 • Monday-Thursday 7:30

Olde Towne Barbers
Flat Tops — French Braids
Frostings — Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

Soccer Continues to Struggle

See Article, pg.11

Coming Soon: Rec Wallyball

WC • ELM

Sports

Rugby Club Set To Begin

Field Hockey Goes .500

See Article, pg.10

Scores

Men's Soccer

Washington	1
St. Mary's	3
Washington	0
Catholic	4
Washington	0
Wesley	3

Field Hockey (OT)

Washington	1
Catholic	2

Volleyball

Washington	3
Dickinson	1

On Deck

Men's Soccer
UMES
Tue., Sept.29
4 p.m.

Field Hockey
Elizabethtown
Sat., Sept. 26
12 p.m.

Volleyball
W.C. Invitational
October 2-3

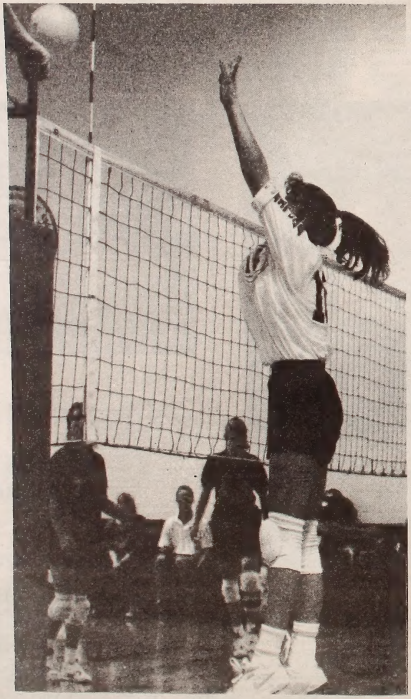


Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

Beverly Diaz, a Gaithersburg, Maryland protoge, skies for the defensive block. After recovering from a foot injury sustained last week, she returned for the Dickinson bout to aid in the 3-1 victory by tallying 6 kills, 4 aces, and 15 assists.

Jen Dixon: NEWT's Player of the Week

Volleyball Downs Dickinson

See Article, pg.10

100% USDA Grade-A Choice Lean BEEF!

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: sunny & pleasant
H mid 70s, SW wind 10-15 mph
Weekend: sunny days, fair nights H mid-upper 60s L upper 40s -mid 50s

Volume 63, Number Six • October 2, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Trout holds Open Forum

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Last Monday, WC President Charles H. Trout held an Open Forum for the student body. The Open Forum, Trout said, was initiated by former president Douglass Cater as a way of letting students know what was on the president's mind, and vice versa.

Trout began by discussing the merits of the class of 1996. "We worked very hard to get this class," he said. The size of the class, while adversely affecting living conditions in dorms, is a large improvement over last year's freshman class, which he said was under the enrollment goal for that year.

The study abroad program was addressed next. Both President Trout and Dean Gene Wubbels want to enlarge the program. "I really would love to see this college become more engaged in the study abroad program," Trout said.

Dean Wubbels apparently is interested in instituting a "Washington College experience" abroad, possibly London-based, and grounded in the humanities and social sciences.

Stock Photo

President Charles Trout

Trout added that study abroad is "not so good for natural science majors, since the curriculum is so vertically prescribed ... there are opportunities abroad for students majoring in science, but for right now we will address humanities and social sciences."

Alcohol use and abuse was Trout's next concern. He said that the weekly Security reports were "disturbing". From talking to some freshmen and parents of freshmen, he said, "I have gotten a sense of dismay and horror at the amount of

See "Trout," pg. 5

Taxi Service Off and Running

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

The Sophomore Class last weekend began operations of a free taxi/escort service open to all WC students.

According to Sophomore Class President Max Walton, any student can get a free ride from campus to downtown, and vice-versa, on weekend nights.

From 10 p.m. - 2 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights, students can call 778-7807 (ext. 7807) and speak to a dispatcher located in the Student Activities Office in Hodson Hall.

If taxi service is needed, the dispatcher will call the Chestertown Cab Company, who will pick up and drop off the student free of charge with valid student ID.

"This is basically a ride-home program," said Walton. Students can get rides to and from friends' residences; the main idea is one of safety. Hopefully the risks involved in walking alone or driving drunk will be avoided, he said.

Walton credits SGA Vice-President Christy Albright with the idea of bringing cabs to campus. He said that Albright had heard of other schools providing a similar service, and the sophomore class decided to institute a free taxi service at WC.

So far, said Walton, the taxi has been under-advertised and under-utilised. The service is on a one-month trial period. "If there's no interest, we'll have to scrap it," he said. "If after one month, people are using it, we'll keep it and and go on from there.

Students who need on-campus escorts can call Security or the dispatcher, and a Security Officer will accompany the student across campus.

Visiting Student Assaulted in Minta Martin

Jennifer Waldych
Staff Writer

A male high school student visiting a friend in Minta Martin Hall was attacked in the middle of the night on Saturday, September 19 in that dormitory.

The WC student and her visiting friend had attended a party that evening. He came back to her room early to go to sleep, with the understanding that she would knock to be let in when she came back later. He arrived at Minta Martin at 1 a.m. The main entry doors were not locked.

At 1:55 a.m. a resident of Minta Martin found him in the third floor bathroom with bruises, minor lacerations, and swelling on his face.

He told her that there had been a knock at the door. He opened the door, got punched in the face and was further assaulted. He says that the perpetrators were three white males, but he could not identify anything about them.

The surface slashes to his face are suspected to have been done with a women's disposable razor, because one was missing from a shower basket stored in the bathroom. However, there is no evidence to substantiate this.

At this point, two friends went to get the girl he was staying with, leaving him with others on the hall. When the three returned, Security had been called over to break up another fight in the building as well as to investigate this report. The doors were still open.

The victim of this attack did not need to seek medical attention for any injuries that occurred. He returned home the next day and is currently doing fine.

Jerry Roderick, Director of Washington College Security, maintains that the doors of Minta Martin were reported to have been locked at 10:50 that evening, and were secured again at 1:50. Security was having problems with the doors not latching correctly and also with finding them propped open. He says that while the victim declines to report anything, there is an investigation underway.

Security is now in the process of interviewing numerous people for information pertaining to the night in question. Roderick feels that this was definitely a targeted attack, and students should not become alarmed that they, too, are in danger of such an occurrence. In order to prevent any future trouble, please report any problems with faulty doors to Security immediately.

Inside

Expanded Letter Section This Week, pg. 2 & 7

Chester River Bridge to Close, pg. 5

Four New Members In Hall Of Fame, pg. 5

AIDS Awareness Month, pg. 9

Joan Ellenhorn, Educator, pg. 11

Sue Tessem's "Imperial" Art Exhibit, pg. 10

The Question of Anonymity

"The Anonymous Speaker has no True Voice" were the words atop last week's ELM flag.

Neither Hippolyte de Villemessant, nor Aristotle, Bob Woodward nor Ferris Bueller, nor any other of our heroes said these words. I made them up at the eleventh hour, because I needed the means to address a pertinent issue, while I had neither the space nor the time to explore it further in the paper.

That week, an unidentified person took it upon himself or herself to send, via student mail, certain cartoons and articles to the ELM, to GALA and its co-President Gehrett Ellis, and to Dale Adams Heritage Exchange Vice-President Zylia N.L. Knowlin.

What these two students have in common is the Open Forum column in the ELM, and what they further share is a willingness to address certain issues which make some persons or groups uncomfortable.

Gehrett was sent a cartoon making fun of people who treat homophobia as a serious issue. The last name of the cartoonist was whited out; the comic strip was "Chooglin'," by Steve .

Zylia was sent a reprint of an article from U.S. News and World Report on "Afrocentrism." It explained the dangers of exploring African-American heritage and history.

These two items and a third cartoon buffooning "political correctness" were sent to the ELM.

They were addressed by hand-feeding the Xeroxes through a laser printer, and such messages as "can't you see the dangers of GALA and PC?" were similarly mechanically produced, so that no handwriting could be identified.

What are they afraid of?

Perhaps these are issues that deserve to be addressed. After all, the First Amendment exists not only for "Liberals," but for everyone; however, the right to freedom of speech and of the press is robbed of its power if the speaker will not put his or her name with the opinion.

Several people have approached me and my staff, asking if we are a "left-wing newspaper" or a forum for homosexual issues.

As was stated before, the Open Forum and Letters columns are open to all members of the Washington College Community.

If the "Left" is the side which chooses to speak freely, then let them. I cannot generate letters which no one has written, or more importantly, signed.

These same people who see our paper as slanted were asked why they didn't write a letter themselves if they were concerned.

They all said they didn't want their names in the paper.

Oh, please.

You and I learned how to speak at around age one, and to write our names at around age five. And we learned in elementary school that we have the right to do both.

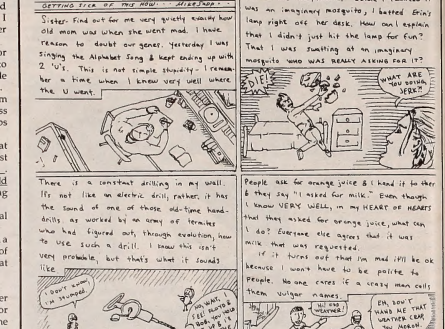
As for the anonymous letter in this week's paper, Read it. This is not a political letter, or a name-calling letter, or a letter denouncing the left, right, or middle. It's about a real person and her real pain, and her name has been protected by the first amendment, too.

Privacy and free speech both have limits. I have the tough job of deciding what those limits are within the ELM.

I will remind you that I can only print letters which I receive. I haven't been holding anything back.

However, I will only print letters which are signed, unless exposing your identity would hurt you (as it would "Alice").

In the case of the anonymous clip artist, your anonymity is what is hurting you.



Write back when you have something to say and a voice with which to say it.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddish
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8565.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

Leighty Demands Support for Rugby

To the Editor,

Last Saturday, September 26, the Washington College Rugby Club was supposed to have a match against Colombia Men's Club in Columbia, Md. The Thursday before the match, Dennis Berry informed our president that we are not allowed to play men's clubs. At that time he produced a letter, that our presidents, past and present, have yet to receive a copy of, that stated at the bottom in small print that the Washington College Rugby team was not allowed to play men's clubs. Mr. Berry then informed our president [Ciaran O'Keeffe] that we could go ahead and play, but our funding from REC sports would be revoked. This is, in my opinion, very wrong. If we were not allowed to play men's clubs someone should have informed us earlier than two days before the scheduled match. We have in the past played men's clubs without any problems, and were ignorant to the fact that we were no longer allowed to.

It seems to me that if the school refuses to let us decide who we can play then they should set up a schedule for us. To try and schedule games so late in the season is difficult, since most teams have already games through November.

The injustice does not stop with scheduling problems. The field that we were promised on campus fell through due to lack of funds. To begin with, the field was in terrible condition and we would be unable to play home games there; however, we have used it for practices. The question now becomes, where did the money go? Maybe for the second year's women's basketball clubs new coach? A coach is a luxury that Rugby Club cannot afford. We might be able to pay for a new coach if we did not have to pay for a field off-campus and five miles away. It is this expenditure that kept us from playing Columbia Men's club or any other men's club. We could not survive as a team without the money from REC sports to pay for the field.

I could understand the treatment we are receiving from the administration if the Rugby Club had committed some mischievous act at one time or another; however, we have not. In the three years the Rugby Club has been in existence, there has not been any complaints about the team or its members during any event it has sponsored. We have complied with the school regulations in every way, from giving up control of our money and bank account to REC sports to not playing men's clubs. In return we have received little to nothing in return. The club members provide their own transportation to away and home games, and they pay for their own uniforms.

I am not asking for anything more than a little respect and fair treatment. I do not think it is right that the school is holding our club hostage. I am sorry that the Rugby Club is not a drawing card for the school, this may be changing due to large number of freshmen who joined our club this semester, but there is a small minority on campus who enjoy the game.

T.H. Leighty

CORRECTION

In last week's article, "Gender and Germany," Tina McCuen was quoted as saying that females "have chiseled a place for themselves, while men have lost their place because society won't allow them to chisel a new place." The quote should have continued: "Along with feminism, the roles of men in Germany due to rapid political and social change need to be considered."

More Letters, pg. 7

Crisis

Scott Ross Koon

The tendency of early twentieth century socialist writers to overlook women's issues has prompted some to characterize Marxism as "feminist" or "anti-feminist." While this general situation has since been reversed by Radical Socialist Feminism, the former tendency of Marxists to dwell on economic issues at the expense of feminism and other humanist causes has caused one bourgeois feminist to write that "Traditionally Marxism has not been happy with a view on politics which focuses on gender relations and on reproduction."[1]

This criticism is invalid today. While it is true that the state ideologues of the former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics only paid lip service to the importance of the elimination of sexism, socialism is fundamentally a feminist philosophy.

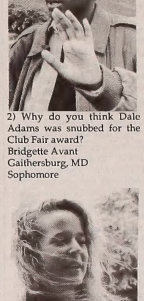
Socialist recognize that sexism is the most fundamental form of oppression because it is the precursor and progenitor of all other forms of class oppression. It was Engels who first arrived at this conclusion: The first class antagonism which appears in history coincides with the development of the antagonism between man and woman in individual marriages, and the first class oppression with that of the female sex by the male.[2] Contrary to the charges of bourgeois feminists, socialism does not relegate women's issues to the background but rather pushes them to the forefront of a revolutionary agenda which is all liberating.

Those who do not see that socialism provides the only real opportunity for the elimination of a tyranic phallocentric society, do not understand how essential oppression of women is to capitalism. Pat Buchanan, the official nonhumanistic ideologue of the Republican Party, recognized this when he said "The truth is that women's income, on average, will always be a fraction of men's, so long as America remains free."[3] Free for Buchanan means free from socialism, so this telling comment reveals how capitalist ideologues implicitly recognize that the inequality of women is integral to capitalism.

Radical Socialist Feminism recognizes that the only hope for the real liberation of women lies in the destruction of the seizure of surplus value through the wage labor system: "We would aim to eliminate the dependance of women and children on the labor of men, as well as other types of labor exploitation."[4] The only solution to the insufferable inequities of the capitalist system is one which eliminates the exploitation of all working women and men.

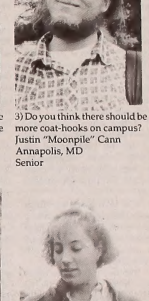
Yet bourgeois feminism fails to recognize this. The constituency of groups like N.O.W. is the well-paid, well-educated professional woman. The liberal feminist movement operates within the confines of the capitalist system. They propose not the liberation of all women, but rather the liberation of the "right" class of women. ". . . N.O.W. concen-

See "Koon," pg.

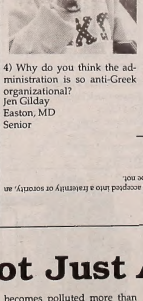


CAMPUS VOICES

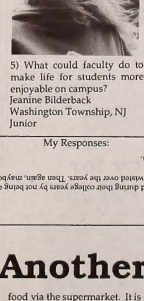
By Dude



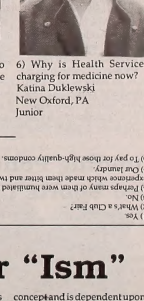
What do you think the question should be this week?



1) Should we have a rugby club?
Ciaran O'Keefe
Bucks, England
Junior



2) Why do you think Dale Adams was snubbed for the Club Fair award?
Bridgette Avant
Gaithersburg, MD
Sophomore



3) Do you think there should be more coat-hooks on campus?
Justin "Moonpile" Cann
Annapolis, MD
Senior

4) Why do you think the administration is so anti-Greek organizational?
Jen Gilday
Easton, MD
Senior

5) What could faculty do to make life for students more enjoyable on campus?
Jeanine Bilderback
Washington Township, NJ
Junior

6) Why is Health Services charging for medicine now?
Katina Duklewski
New Oxford, PA
Junior

My Responses:

1) Yes
2) Where's a Club Fair?
3) No.
4) Perhaps many of them were humiliated during their college years by being scorned into a fraternity or sorority, an experience which made them bitter and twisted over the years. Then again, maybe not.
5) Our laundry.
6) To pay for those high-quality commons.

Open Forum: Not Just Another "Ism"

Andrea Nolan, a sophomore, is president of Terra Firma, WC's environmental organization. She is planning on majoring in English with a concentration in creative writing. She is also a member of the Writer's Union junta.

Environmentalism. The word itself turns many people off. Just another one of those annoying politically correct "isms," right? Wrong. The current movement to save and restore the environment goes far beyond being simply a trendy movement. It is a movement that has been around for centuries, and it is a movement whose focus is universally important to everyone. While other political concerns depend upon people's personal investment in certain areas, environmentalism stands as a movement focused around something that concerns everyone, our home.

Andrea J. Nolan

In this world of concrete and steel we often forget about mankind's integral connection with the Earth. When a river becomes polluted more than just a few fish are affected. The effects of this dying river are felt world-wide. The indigenous people of North America, as well as those throughout the world, recognize the delicate rhythms of the earth. They call the Earth 'mother,' which is probably the most accurate description of our world. It is from our planet that we are fed, from which we receive oxygen, from which all life is spawned and nurtured.

In today's modern society, the average human works in an office building, drives to and from work, and buys all their food via the supermarket. It is no wonder that people loose touch with mankind's interconnection with the earth. People tend to view the environment as the place were you take the kids for a wholesome family vacation. They view environmentalism as a movement to save the scenery. They forget that the civilization that they live in is forged out of the environment, is dependent on the welfare of the environment, and effects the environment in everything they do.

Nearly everyone was taught of the food-chain in elementary school. It is a simple concept and is dependent upon common sense. Why is it then that as people age they forget about the food chain? Every day a species is going extinct. The majority of these species are insects or plants in the rainforests. People are quick to blow off these losses as something distant and unimportant in their lives. How could one be so blind? That insect fulfilled some purpose with its life, whether it was the food for some other animal, a natural pesticide, or a natural fertilizer. It is part of that elementary school

See "Nolan," pg. 12

SGA Report for September 29, 1992

Eve Zartman
SGA Reporter

The SGA had the exciting task of club funding approvals this week, which made for a marathon meeting of close to two hours — so know that your dorm senators are hard at work.

The meeting was called to order by President Jen Del Nero and the business at hand was taken care of. Business included the swearing-in of all class officers, with special introductions of the newly elected freshman class officers.

Tanya Allen presented a report about a task force delving into the problems at the Health Services. Anyone interested in helping Allen should contact her through student mail.

The next reports were from class officers. The sophomore class is working on the Blood Drive run for the spring as well as attempting to circulate cab service information.

The free cab service operates from the campus to downtown and back again between the hours of 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays. In order to receive a free ride, call 778-7807 and have a valid WC Identification Card ready.

The service is sponsored as part of an effort to stop DWI citations and protect students who are walking home alone and putting themselves at risk.

The junior class had no officers present, so it moved right on to the senior classes' party plans, the success of the last senior band/party at the CoffeeHouse and the upcoming ones — to be announced later and open to all students (not only seniors).

The meeting moved on to a report from the Academic Board, which held its first meeting this week and asked the student body for complaints as well as suggestions concerning academics at the college. Anyone with suggestions should contact Christy Albright.

Another role of business was the request for help and ideas concerning the CoffeeHouse. There was discussion of the possibility of turning it into the student center that it once was. Students interested in the future of the CoffeeHouse should call Jen Del Nero.

The rest of the meeting consisted of passing almost every one of John Phoebus' recomendations on how much funding each WC club should be allocated. Parliamentary procedure required each club to be read and passed seperately, so the process took quite a while.

Please get involved and talk to your dorm senators — the SGA is here to facilitate the students needs, so take full advantage of it.

Fall '92 SGA Club Funding Allocations

Amnesty International	500.00
Anthropology	500.00
Big Brothers Big Sisters	500.00
Business Writers Union	500.00
Campus Christian Fellowship	150.00
Dale Adams Heritage Exchange	300.00
Film Discussion Group	75.00
French Club	400.00
GALA	500.00
Gender Relations Awareness Alliance	235.00
Gender Studies Reading Group	300.00
German Club	350.00
Hands Out	400.00
Hillel	500.00
Historical Society	300.00
Interfraternity Council	450.00
International House	750.00
International Relations Club	350.00
Investment Club	625.00
Middle East Club	200.00
Newman Club	550.00
Omicron Delta Kappa	500.00
Otherworlds/Open Minds	200.00
Phi Sigma Tau	125.00
Pi Sigma Alpha	350.00
Printshop Club	275.00
Psi Chi	300.00
Psychology Club	225.00
Sane/Freeze	200.00
Sigma Delta Pi	375.00
Spanish Club	300.00
Target Tutoring	365.00
Terra Firma	500.00
Wac Happenings	1,000.00
Wm. James Forum	50.00
Writer's Theatre	13,550.00
TOTALS

Club Sports Funding:
Equestrian Club
Golf Club
Outdoor Skills
Rugby Club
Women's Soccer
Wrestling

Pending Allocations:
College Republicans
Margret Horsley Society
Visual Artists Union

Funding Policy for Rec Sports Changes

John K. Phoebus
SGA Treasurer

Due to the extremely large number of club funding requests this semester, the SGA has issued a new budget policy regarding club sports. Club sports will be eligible for SGA funding according to the amount of dues collected by a club sport. The more funds a club raises, the greater the SGA allocation will be.

Club sports will fall within one of three brackets, based on the amount of dues they raise. Clubs which bring in under $200 will receive SGA funding of 20% of this total. Clubs raising between $200 and $500 will receive an allocation of 25% of that total. The clubs receiving the most SGA funding will be those which can bring in over $500 in dues, and they will receive 40% of the amount collected with a maximum allocation of $300.

Clubs will be eligible for SGA funding after dues have been collected for the semester. To assist new club sports, the SGA will fund any new, first-semester club sport an additional $50 to cover organizational expenses.

This funding is not as great as it has been in the past, but the SGA cannot afford to continue to support club sports at levels of past years. We are very interested in the success of club sports and do not intend for this policy change to discourage the club sports program. Because the club sports program was initially an administrative effort, we will assist the club sports in lobbying to increase Athletic Department funding of the program.

From "Trout," pg. 1

have gotten a sense of dismay and horror at the amount of drinking that goes on in some dormitories."

He added that this echoed his own first-year experience when he began his undergraduate studies after growing up in a rural environment.

Trout said that the college has made "considerable progress in responsible drinking, responsible alcohol use, and responsible parties. ... The amount of non-alcoholic-based social events has increased exponentially ..." over the past year.

"I hope we are not going to slide back ... I just don't think you are achieving your purpose if you're hung over three days a week," he said.

Additionally, "drinking leads to other behaviors which are not great," he said, "such as assault and acquaintance rape. ... I don't mean to overemphasize this, but I am concerned," Trout said.

Trout is also concerned about AIDS. "The AIDS education programming planned for this semester is really very good," he said.

He then commented on the statistics reported by Dr. Ed Weissman and printed in the ELM [Issue Three]. Trout said that, especially regarding the fact that a large portion of the campus engages in unprotected sex with multiple partners, that the numbers were "really kind of scary."

The Honor Code was addressed next. "It takes a long time to develop an ethos in which an Honor Code is part of business as usual." He related that some colleges have, as their final examination period, self-scheduled exams. Students take exams when and where they are prepared for them, with the understanding that they have no outside help in writing the blue books.

"I hope some day that we will see [them] at this college," Trout said.

Trout feels that the college is moving towards an atmosphere of tolerance, "whether it be religious, racial, cultural, or political tolerance."

He said that in the current political clime that the latter sort of tolerance is especially important. He stressed that students should "exchange notions about where this country should go and listen to the other point of view with respect."

Trout spent the next several minutes discussing Daly Hall, the future academic facil-

See "Trout," pg. 6

BRIEF BEEF

Register and Vote

Today is the last day to register and vote. To register, or if you have any questions about the voting process and absentee ballots, visit the Vote America table in the cafeteria at lunch and dinner, or call 1(800)222-VOTE.

Volunteer Fair to Open Next Weekend

On Saturday, October 10, Kent County will hold a Volunteer Opportunities Fair. The fair has been organized to recognize outstanding volunteer contributions from both groups and individuals, to provide information for those who seek to serve the community and to compile a list of names and addresses of people who wish to volunteer for future projects in Kent County.

The fair is coordinated by the County's Community Service Program.

The Hands Out Program and the Target Tutoring Programs will be represented at the fair. There will also be workshops and registration for training sessions, and the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company's Aerial Ladder Display will be on view.

The Kent County Volunteer Opportunities Fair will be held from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. at the Chestertown Middle School. There is no admission charge, and refreshments will be served.
—Martha Kimura, Staff Writer

Club Fair Winner

The winner of the best table display award was the International Relations Club. Their display included posters, maps, music, and "UN Twister." The Fall 1992 SGA Club Fair was held September18.

Greek Games

The Greek Games held last Sunday boasted the same top winners as last year: Alpha Chi Omega sorority and Theta Chi fraternity. Other winners included Best Banner, Zeta Tau Alpha; Greek Goddess, Nora Garcia; and Greek God, Rory Conway.

Health Services Task Force Forming

A Task Force initiated by the SGA to evaluate the efficiency of the college Health Service program is currently forming. If you have any questions, wish to join the task force committee, or help in any way, you can contact Tanya Allen through student mail.

Freshman Officers Elected

Congratulations to this year's batch of Freshman Class Officers. The leaders of the class of 1992 include Melissa Omohundro, President; Andre Taylor, Vice-President; Debbie-Ann Robinson, Secretary; and Geoff Bley, Treasurer.

Repairs to Close Chester River Bridge

The State Highway Administration will begin work to repair the drawbridge on MD 213 which crosses the Chester River in Chestertown on October 5. The bridge will close to vehicle traffic from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m. Monday, October 12 through Saturday, October 17 and Monday, November 16 through Saturday, November 21. It also will close to marine traffic from 7 a.m., October 5 to 6 p.m., October 9; from 10 p.m. October 12 to 6 a.m., October 17; and from 10 p.m., November 16 to 6 a.m., November 21. Variable message signs will alert motorists of the closures and detour. The detour is MD Route 544 to MD Route 290 and MD Route 291. Covington Machine and Welding of Annapolis will make repairs as part of an area-wide bridge repair contract.
Reprinted by permission of the Kent County News.

College Hall of Fame Inducts Four New Members this Saturday

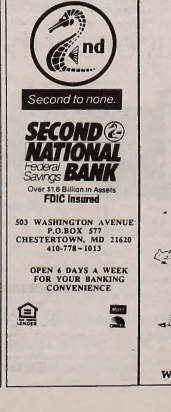
Jennifer Gray Reddish
A&E Editor

Washington College's Hall of Fame is making room for four new faces this weekend. Inductee Joesph M. Wilson, class of 1979, works as a lawyer in Springfield, Virginia, but is remembered by WC as a great leader and athlete, the third highest basketball scorer of all-time with 1,401 points. MVP three years in a row, Wilson was the first Washington College student awarded a National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) post-graduate scholarship.

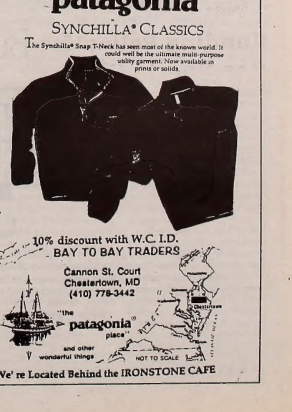
Other honors included post-season selection to the All-Mid-Atlantic Conference first team in 1976-77 and All-State honorable mention that year. In his senior year, he again made the first team All-MAC as well as the NCAA Division III All-American squad and the first team All-State.

Along with Wilson, former lacrosse mid-fielder Robert V. Shriver, class of 1973, will be honored as well. Shriver was an All-American and All-South Mid Atlantic All Conference performer in 1972 and 1973. In his senior year, he was selected to play in the annual United States Inter-Scholastic Lacrosse Association (USILA) North/South game. He was an alternate for the USA Team in 1974 and 1978. Playing for the Chesapeake Lacrosse Club in 1974, he was named "Rookie of the Year" and Club Lacrosse All-American.

Shriver now coaches lacrosse at Boy's Latin Preparatory School in Baltimore, MD, where he was selected as the Maryland Scholastic Association's "Coach of the Year" in 1984 and 1985.



Fellow inductee and former administrative officer with the National Institutes of Health-Public Health Service, John E. Fitzgerald of Silver Spring, MD was a dual sportsman in basketball and baseball his freshman and sophomore years. Hailed by Tom "Coach" Kibler as one the best first basemen to every attend the college, Fitzgerald was noted for his superior hitting and fielding abilities.



With the school's discontinuation of baseball during the depression years of 1931 and 1932 and the death of his father, Fitzgerald was forced to leave Washington College. He graduated from George Washington University in 1936 and played professional baseball for one year with a farm team belonging to the Washington Senators.

The fourth and posthumous inductee, Homer Smoot, graduated in 1895. A professional baseball player of 13 years, he is considered one of the Maryland's Eastern Shore's best hitters, ranked alongside Jimmie Foxx, Frank "Homerun" Baker and William Beck "Swish" Nicholson. He played with the St. Louis Cardinals from 1901-1908 and spent one season in Cincinnati before serving five years in the American Association at Toledo, Louisville, and Kansas City. In 1925, he managed the Eastern Shore League's Salisbury Indians.

Preceding the induction ceremony, a bronze statue honoring William Beck "Swish" Nicholson, a 1936 Washington College graduate and professional baseball player with the Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies, will be unveiled next to the Chesterton Town Hall at 120 N. Cross Street at 4:00 p.m.

Afterwards, a cash bar reception will be held from 5 to 6:30 p.m. at the BAJLFC. The reception will then move to Hynson Lounge at 6:30 p.m. for dinner and induction ceremony. The 1947 soccer team also will be recognized. Tickets are $20.00 and may be purchased at the door.

"Trout," from pg. 5

ity to be built behind William Smith Hall.

He discussed one of the primary motivations behind building a new structure, as opposed to renovating Ferguson Hall in addition to the scheduled renovations to Smith.

"Ferguson Hall serves as a place apart," he said. "[It] does not allow for the mixing of students and faculty which is supposed to be one of our great strengths."

Trout stressed the amount of space in Daly reserved for faculty/student lounges, which will be equipped with computers and additional work space for professors and students.

"If we succeed in raising the remainder of the funds for this building, we will have [created] the first structure for the social sciences, other than art and music and drama, since 1916."

He discussed at length the plans for Daly [see ELM Issue Three], and added that a "sculpture garden with a low wall" is being considered for the green outside of the Constance Stuart Larrabee Arts Center.

When asked if he could say when the entire $5.2 million dollar project of erecting Daly Hall and renovating William Smith Hall will be completed, Trout said "I pray." He said that if all goes well, "it is conceivable to break ground this coming summer."

SGA President Jen Del Nero asked President Trout to consider the placement of handicapped-access entrances in buildings on campus. Currently, she said, handicapped persons enter at the rear of buildings, and that seems to reflect the treatment those persons receive in everyday life.

President Trout responded that both in Daly and Smith, handicapped access entryways are conveniently situated near roads for easy drop-off capabilities. Elevators will be located near these entrances.

Trout also discussed future plans to build a ramp from the Cater Walk to Miller Library. No concrete plans have been completed for construction of such a ramp.

In addressing the size of enrollment of the college, Trout emphasized the improvement in atmosphere that would be gained along with more students.

"As we plan for the future ... these plans should assume that the ideal size of the college, by the year 2,000, is in the vicinity of 1,200 students."

Such a change, he said, would not occur until around 1995.

To accommodate the larger numbers of students, the college would "cycle in" dorms around 1995-6. "I'm certainly not opposed to a certain number of students living off campus," Trout said, "but we are primarily a residential school.

Trout feels that a "new vitality" will be gained, because to maintain the student-faculty ratio, more professors will be employed, increasing the opportunities for more fields of study.

With 18-22 new faculty, Trout said, some possible areas of study could include new languages such as Russian, Classics, Chinese, Japanese, or Italian; sciences such as geology and oceanography; and a broader study of the "Pacific Rim," including language, history, politics and philosophy.

However, he said, many of the staff departments would not have to enlarge with an increase of 300 students. For example, Trout said, "you would not need anybody in the Registrar's Office — I imagine with automation and computers being what they are today, you could even shrink that office."

Trout added that the college will not make concrete plans for a larger student body until the resources are available. "I don't think it's prudent to begin to enlarge the size of the college until the present demographic trough subsides, as it will in 1995, and it will subside very rapidly." He referred to the recent trend of lower numbers of college students being attributable to low birth years in America.

Tanya Allen, a junior English major, asked President Trout if he would address the improvement of the Health Care Services on campus.

Trout said these needs would have to be considered "whether we increase the size of the college or not." He mentioned that it is a difficult matter to decide how much of the cost of campus health care should be picked up by the operating budget, and how much should be paid for by the students.

David George, a sophomore active in the Campus Involvement and Activities program, asked President Trout to carefully consider trying not to diversify the campus too much in too short a period of time.

Trout is excited at the proposition of the college's joining the Centennial Conference athletic division in the 1993-4. He added that more students allows for the possibility of more sports teams, including women's soccer.

More students, he said, would also enrich the music program. "It pains me that we are not a singing school," he said.

Tanya Allen also brought up the question of "PR." She asked if measures are being taken to make Washington College known in areas outside of the Maryland region.

"Name recognition for Washington College is a problem and will remain a problem for years to come," said Trout. He said that it is being addressed by such things as a "handsome new viewbook" just produced by the Admissions Office.

Trout wrapped up the discussions by stating what a wonderful job he thinks Dean Wubbels is doing for the school.

Buy one of these.

Get all of these.

Get over $400 worth of preloaded software when you buy one of the Apple® Macintosh® computers shown above at our best prices ever. And if you are interested in financing options, be sure to ask for details about the Apple Computer Loan. But hurry, because student aid like this is only available through October 15, 1992 – and only at your authorized Apple campus reseller.

The Macintosh Student Aid Package.

For more information visit the WC Bookstore

Casey Academic Center or call x239

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo, and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Classic is a registered trademark licensed to Apple Computer, Inc. PowerBook is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc. The Random House Encyclopedia is a trademark of Random House, Inc. American Heritage Electronic Dictionary, Electronic Thesaurus, and Corrects® developed by Houghton Mifflin Company, publisher of The American Heritage Dictionary and Roget's II: The New Thesaurus. Corrects first underlying technology developed by Language Systems, Inc. Calendar Creator is a trademark of Power Up Software Corporation. ResumeWriter is a trademark of Bonzanza Software Company, Inc. All product names are the trademarks of their respective holders. Offer good on the Macintosh PowerBook 145 4/40 configuration only. All qualifying computers come preloaded with software and electronic versions of instructions. Disks and printed manuals are not included in this offer.

Lynch on Apathy, Ethics & Angels in America

To the Editor:

First and foremost in a journalist's mind should be the question of accuracy when recording information. In last week's issue of The Elm , an article concerning the play Angels In America appeared on the Arts and Entertainment page. The article contained numerous errors and omissions.

To begin with, the playwright's name was spelled incorrectly—his name is Tony Kushner. Two cast members were omitted from the list: Lionel Dyson, who plays Belize and Mr. Lies, and Polly Sommerfeld, who portrays Rabbi Isidor Chemelwitz, Hannah Pitt, Prior #2, Harry, and Ethel Rosenberg. The content of the play was also misrepresented: there is nothing whatsoever in the play which deals with the issue of equal employment, the play does contain a fictionalized Roy Cohn — but his life is not the single focus of the play, and not all of the characters are forced to deal with the issue of AIDS. It is not primarily a play about AIDS, but AIDS is dealt with in the play.

Also omitted from the article was the fact that Dale Daigle, Director, designed the set and the lights. Eve Zartman is our well-dressed stage manager, which was never mentioned in the article. I am briefly and rather monosyllabically quoted, entirely out of context. My name is not only Heather, it is, in fact, Heather Lynch. I am the Assistant Director, and I also read the stage directions (not a professional actress). It is disheartening to read an article concerning something I am personally involved in, only to discover that the press has stripped it (and myself, devoid of a surname, a blessing in disguise), and made almost a mockery of it in an attempt to define it in some way. When one form of expression slaughters another, there is something wrong somewhere. Maybe it was Reagan's fault. Maybe it was my fault. Who knows?

Angels In America is a play with a strong social consciousness. It is an important play, and one that deserves recognition as such. Perhaps if some of our student body can take time between trips to the keg to see it, it can change someone's perceptions of contemporary society a little. Apathy is pervasive at WC, as demonstrated by the disinterest of the faculty and community (with some exceptions) in student (and faculty) drama productions, President Trout's inability to attend dramatic productions, the recent history of the College's official newspaper (under Laura Hopper: plagiarism, a practice ELM, "bla, bla, bla?" — need I say any more?), specifically the utter lack of journalistic ethics in last week's A&E article.

And by the way President Trout, thanks for the form letter concerning my contribution to last semester's production of Pippin, since it took all of fifteen minutes of my time to buy chocolate pudding for that play. It is a shame that you missed the other, and in my opinion, more important plays last year — Bennett Lamond and Tim Maloney in Dale's Waiting For Godot were magnificent, and since Beckett studies at Washington College can be considered one of our most important contributions to the world of academia, it was criminal of you to have ignored it (and A Dream Play, Burn This, Cyrano de Bergerac, Antigone, and Seascape With Sharks and Dancer). Perhaps your attendance at drama productions (or art shows, on-campus lectures, athletic events, or music department productions) isn't part of your job description. Perhaps the only way to elicit your presence is to provide you with pockets from which to pick.

Heather Lynch '93
English major

Rugby Founder Tired of Run-Around

To the Editor:

This is the last straw. First, when I started this club, The Athletic Department, and Geoff Miller in particular, managed to put road block after road block in our way. We eventually had to go over his head in order just to raise money for ourselves. I should have known that the A.D., and G.M. in particular, would never give us any help when Miller bluntly stated "We don't want Rugby at Washington College." However, we pressed on, hoping that if we could move ourselves we would eventually get some support, if not respect. Promised that after two years of club status our situation would be reviewed, I naively believed the word of Miller. How foolish I was.

After two solid years as the biggest, best organized, and most active club on campus, Mr. Miller has proven in spades to be not only a liar, but a fraud as well. Not only were promises broken, but believe it or not, there is an active desire to snuff out the Rugby Club. Why is this? What else do we have to do to be taken seriously here at WAC? Get half our team busted for DUI? Illegally recruit players? Give out "Scholastic" scholarships to players? Engage in bench-clearing brawls? Geez, compared to the varsity teams, we're angels. All that we've done is manage 4 seasons, institute a highly successful President's Cup tournament two years in a row (incidentally, Pres. Trout hasn't ever bothered to show up at his own tournament), and generally manage ourselves in a manner much more mature than your average campus jock.

What do we get in return? SHIT UPON! Last year Mr. Miller offered us room on campus to practice — did I mention that we have to drive 5 miles and pay $500 just to have a field? — in the form of the space between the two practice fields, but only when no other teams were out there. This was about 15 minutes a day. We respectfully declined, under the false assumption that this year we would be moved onto campus, as Mr. Miller promised.

What happened? Well, first they decided to build a club sports field behind the Field Hockey Field. This sounded OK, even though the field would be crowded with Club Lacrosse, Club Soccer, Club Girls Soccer, etc. etc. Then we got a look at this field. The field was so uneven that if you stood at one end zone, you couldn't even see the other end zone. After all of the tires were pulled out of this miserable joke of a field, it was time to plant the turf. Well, don't you know that Mr. Miller decided that there wasn't enough money to finish our field. We should have known that he was lying.

Anyway, then this year they decided that our situation wouldn't be changed at all. We still pay $500 for the privilege of driving 5 miles to our rental field, and we still have no use of any locker room, training room or training facility. We still have no coach, no thanks to Mr. Miller. However, it is important to realize the method behind his lying. Mr. Miller knows that the longer we're left to dangle, the greater the chance that our club will just peter out. And that is exactly what is happening. When we heard that Girls B-Ball was being moved on campus, given a coach and access to Athletic Department facilities, we knew what was happening.

However, the last straw was still to come. Just to squeeze us more, the Athletic Department banned us from playing Men's clubs, one of the staples of our schedule. Since we get no help in scheduling our matches, and because we are not yet in our regional Rugby Union, we have to scrape together the best schedule pos-

See "Engel," pg 12

The author of the following letter has asked to remain anonymous. Due to the sensitive nature of its content, I have chosen run the letter without a name. —Ed.

To the Editor:
Some of them want to abuse you, some of them want to be abused.
—Annie Lennox

A few weeks ago, I slit my wrists with a disposable bic razor. No — I don't say that for shock value. On the contrary, it was stupid, lame thing to do — I got some laundry detergent on the cuts a little while later, very painful.

Why am I writing the editor about that? Well, last week's ELM spoke about the support group, For All Seasons. An explanatory piece, but not personal. No one wants to write about abuse with a personal touch. Who wants to reveal their personal hell?

After six years of mental abuse and three separate sexual assaults, I thought I was going to make a permanent trip to Laland. However, I have started to feel somewhat better — this week marks my third with For All Seasons. Their counselors [are] private, personal — demanding. There's no hedging the questions with these guys. If you think you're ugly — dammit, they want to know why. A veritable expose-your-past-to-me-for-your-own-good organization.

There's a myth to counseling — if you're abused and you talk about [it] — you'll feel instantly better. ERRRRR. Wrong answer. That works just about as well as instant coffee. When you're telling someone — especially an unbiased stranger — how this person and that person said you were nothing but a liar and a never-amounto-nothing, worthless human being — you don't let yourself feel much. It's as if you're telling the story of another person's life — but later, it all comes back for a visit, just like an old friend. How are you doing? Still feeling mighty small, are you not? Good.

For that price, you might ask if counseling is worth the trouble. Problems, Schmoblems, we've all got problems. Many people on this campus handle their troubles well — others drink themselves to oblivion, snort some coke, smoke some grass, fuck a few strangers and inhale cigarettes like air. Others bow to the miracle of antidepressants and uppers. Medicinal maintainers.

Know what happens when you stop taking the drugs? Besides withdrawal, you go down, way down. As for the rest, waking up half-drunk in a foreign place next to a stranger never solved much either (except underpopulation with the all the pregnancies that occur due to unprotected sex during binge-drinking.)

Oh, yeah. Abused people tend to let others manipulate them as well. Battered women tend to have failed romantic relationships — their partners most likely mirroring their original abuser. Rape and incest victims often times have more than one attacker throughout their lifetimes — as one counselor explained to me, "these women have a vulnerable air that alerts victimizers to them ."

To a rapist or a molester — that means "I know she won't tell." They're usually right.

Sound familiar? It does to me and it will to a lot of other people too. Even on this campus of prep-school graduates and million-dollar families. Don't be surprised. Until I went to For All Seasons, my romantic involvement, my social life, my job — writing, the only talent and pastime I truly enjoy — were all sliding down hill, a little at a time, very fast.

My conversations became a string of cruel sarcasms. The more the better. My sister stated the obvious, "You're such an angry person." Well, you better believe it. It sure felt better than playing use-me-as-a-doormat.

But anger only gets you so far — an illusion of control. Simply put: If you get away from the people who have fucked with your body and your mind, don't let them continue their domination in absentia.

First, to them, say — go fuck yourself. Then get on with your life.

For that, you'll need some help, believe me. That does not mean you're a weak person. It's better than allowing invisible ghosts and controlled substances take over your life.

Get help now, before you graduate, start families. Your marriage, your family, your children's futures — they depend on your mental health. Get it together now — waiting will just make the past more binding, more muddled.

"Alice"
Washington College Student

Week at a Glance

October 2 - 9

Friday 2, Sunday 4-Monday 5
Film Series: Antonia & Jane
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. †

Friday 2 - Saturday 3
Not for the Faint of Heart Dramatic Reading:
Angels in America
Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m.

Saturday 3

Alumni vs. Alumni Soccer Game
Kibler Field, 11:00 a.m. †

Alumni Crew Races
Truslow Boat House, 11:00 am. †

Alumni vs. Sho'men Field Hockey Game
Kibler Field, 1:00 p.m. †

Alumni Baseball Game,
Baseball Field, 1:00 p.m. †

Statue unveiling: William Beck "Swish" Nicholson
120 N. Cross St., Chestertown, 4:00 p.m. †

Athletic Hall of Fame
Reception and Dinner,
Reception, BAJLFC, 5:00 p.m.
Dinner & Ceremony,
Hynson Lounge, 6:30 p.m.
$20.00 admission
For information: 778-7812 †

Janes United Methodist Church
Jazz Festival
Wilmer Park, 12:00 p.m.
$5.00 admission †

Poetry Reading: Bad Poetry by Awful Poets
O'Neill Literary House, 8:00 p.m.

Phi-Delt/Theta Chi Concert
Band: Zambesi Express
CoffeeHouse, 9:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m.
$3.00 admission

Sunday 4
Gender Studies Reading Group
Organizational Meeting
O'Neill Literary House, 1:00 p.m. †

Monday 5
Film: The Allison Gertz Story
CAC, 7:30 p.m. †

Film Club Meeting
Fried Green Tomatoes
O'Neill Literary House, 9:30 p.m.

Tuesday 6
William James Forum
Agenda for the Year 2000: Issues and Priorities
Guest Speaker: Gibson Winter
Hynson Lounge, 7:30 p.m. †

Jazz Class
Dance Studio, BAJLFC,
4:30-6:00 p.m.

SGA Meeting
CAC, 9:00 p.m.

Wednesday 7
Yom Kippur

Internship Coordinator:
James F. Lawrence, Executive Dir.,
Bureau of Refugee Programs
CAC Commons, 3:00 p.m.

Performance Class
Norman James Theatre, 4:00 p.m.

Ballroom Dance Class
Dance Studio, BAJLFC,
6:00-7:00 p.m.

Snickers Comedy Club
Danny Sheehan
CoffeeHouse, 8:30 p.m.
$1.00 admission †

Thursday 8
Ballet Class
Dance Studio, BAJLFC
4:30-6:00 p.m.

Lecture: Discrimination
Guest Speaker: Barbara Spicer
Sophie Kerr Room, 7:00 p.m.
Sponsored by The Gender Relations Awareness Alliance †

College Community Chorus Rehearsal
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

GALA Meeting
CAC Commons, 7:00 p.m. †

Friday 9
Concert Series: Concerto Soloists of Philadelphia
Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m.

Coming Out Poetry Reading
O'Neill Litterary House, 8:00 p.m.

† see related article

Last chance to see Leonardo Da Vinci: The Inventions which will close today, October 2.
Renaissance Festival in Annapolis, Maryland will run until October 19.
Art Exhibit: Sue Tessem, The Imperial Hotel, through October 19.

Student Profile: Andy McKim

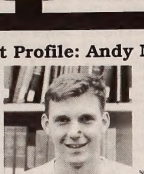

Photo by Andrew Stone

Going abroad is nothing new to Andrew McKim, a senior International Studies major and French minor. Andy has moved back and forth from Africa and his home town of Towson, MD since he was born. Since his father's service in the Peace Corps, his family has lived in Tanzania (where he learned some Swahili and experienced food shortages first hand) and has traveled all over the Eastern, Southern and Northern parts of Africa. His sophomore year of college, he went abroad a semester to Botswana. As he stated, "It's a long way from Towson suburbia to Botswana."

After finishing high school in the United States, Andy chose Washington College for its "easy going, small-school atmosphere" and its International Studies program. Since his arrival, Andy has stayed active in the college community. During his freshman year he worked extensively with the newly formed International House and its lecture series. The next year he lived in the I-House, running the lecture series with Professor Shivers and R. J. Eldridge.

Last year Andy served as an SGA dorm senator for East Hall and participated in the Model Organization of African Unity. Andy has participated with the swim team since his freshman year (known as the Swim Club until Fall 1990), specializing in the the breaststroke and free-style 100 and 200 yard races. He also is a fourth-year member of the French Club and International Relations Club.

Presently, Andy is a resident assistant on Kent second-floor north hall and is vice-president of Hands Out, a student volunteer organization. He also works as a supervisor at the Swim Center. As a member of the Society of Junior Fellows, an organization that provides grants for independent research for junior and senior members who have a cumulative GPA of 3.2 or higher, Andy interned with the Agency of International Development in Washington, D.C. this past summer.

Andy's academic successes in high school and in college have earned him the George Washington Scholar Scholarship for high school achievement as well as the Sir Oliver Wright Scholarship and the Sun Paper's Scholarship for outstanding senior International Studies majors. He is a Dean's List student and has a cumulative GPA of 3.63.

His summer internship mirrored his future career plans to work in African developmental issues. Next year, he plans to enter graduate school for International Studies, Development or African Studies or join the peace corps.

In his spare time, Andy confesses to being lecture series addict. An avid outdoorsman, he often goes camping. He enjoys travelling and experiencing different countries, which he does not get to do as often as he would like and towards which most of his savings are directed.

Andy's interest in African affairs has increased his study of environmental and developmental economics. With his French minor, he has developed a great appreciation of French West African literature and poetry.

AIDS Awareness Month

Still think AIDS can't happen to you? AIDS Awareness month hopes to inject a little reality into the Washington College community, if the statistics have not already.

The October campaign is sponsored by a campus organization coalition, including the Gay and Lesbian Association, the Student Activities Office, the AIDS Education Group, the Gender Relations Awareness Alliance and Health Services. Their main objective is to make students aware that AIDS can happen to them and that only they can protect themselves from HIV transmission, the virus that causes the syndrome.

As GALA President Gehrett Ellis stated, "I hope people realize AIDS is not just a gay disease. It's affecting all walks of life. Even if they go to just one event, every bit of information helps. The problem is not going away anytime soon."

Some of the events on the AIDS Awareness calender include Angels in America, which features a male character who suffers the physical, emotional and social effects of the fatal illness. Directed by Dale Daigle and student directed by senior Heather Lynch, the dramatic reading is part of the Not for the Faint of Heart series and will be in Tawes Theatre at 8:00 p.m., Friday and Saturday, October 2nd and 3rd.

GALA's Wednesday, October 8 discussion will focus on the Baltimore Sun Magazine's article chronicling the life of an AIDS victim from his diagnosis until his death and is written from the perspective of his nurse. All are welcome to attend the 7:00 p.m. meeting in the CAC Commons.

GALA then will host The Coming Out: Poetry Reading, at the O'Neill Literary House, Friday, October 9 at 8 p.m. An open reading, bring your favorite writings about and by gay men and lesbians.

That same weekend, the AIDS Quilt will be displayed in Washington, D.C. October 9-11. Thousands of different tiles, representing the many lives affected by AIDS, will create the quilt in the hopes to raise awareness and support in the fight against the syndrome.

A culture van field trip is planned to see the quilt Sunday, October 11. For those interesting in going, sign-up sheets will be posted in Health Services, the Miller Library and Student Affairs.

The final event of AIDS awareness month will be a lecture by Dr. Sylvia Silver, an assistant professor at George Washington University. Silver describes in plain English how HIV functions biologically to break down the immune system. Her talk features a slide presentation as well as up-to-date information concerning the search for a cure as well as new statistics concerning the disease's future. Dr. Silver will speak Wednesday, October 28 at 7 p.m. in Dunning Lecture Hall.

As GRAA President Lynn Clifford said, "Dr. Silver's talk will help raise the level of understanding of AIDS ... Everyone should come, whether or not they think they are at risk."

Workplace Discrimination

Discrimination seems prevalent in many lines of work these days. Even at the once prestigious law firm of Goldsborough, Cowdrey and Farnch in Easton, MD. A court investigation revealed that George Goldsborough disciplined his young female workstudy secretary by spanking her. However, the young secretary waited several years before reporting the incidents due to the embarrassing nature of the abuse. Though many people were aware of the lawyer's improprieties and the firm's nickname "Spanky and Our Gang," no action was taken to stop him until the past summer.

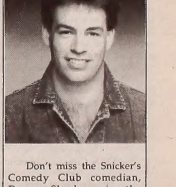
This incident raises question concerning the definition of on-the-job discrimination and harassment. Though there seems to be no question of discrimination in this case, there remains a gray area concerning many issues of discrimination. One such gray area is equal pay for women.

There does not seem to be much equal when comparing the differences in the earning power of men and women in the United States. A story by Marilyn Gardner told of a precedent setting court case in Everett, Massachusetts. The school cafeteria workers, all women, received almost 50 percent less pay than their all-male custodian counterparts, despite heavy manual labor and excellent work records. The women sued and won when the court ruled in their favor, entitling them to equal wages and back pay.

Seemingly a case scenario from the 1960s, the complaint was made in 1989 and the case decided this past year. As of now, women still make only 71 cents to each dollar a man earns, even though women played a substantial role in the work place since World War II.

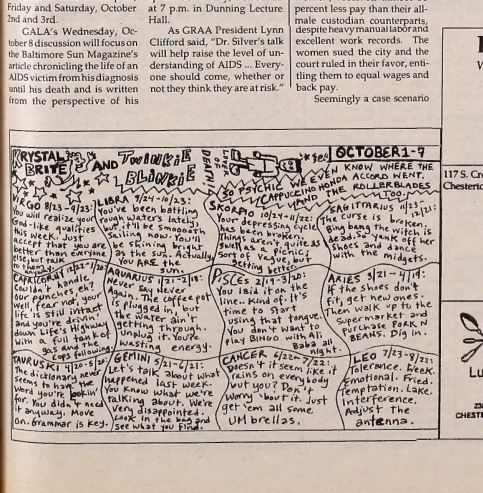
The idea that men should be paid more is an outdated ideal. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, women comprise nearly 6 million single working mothers in the United States. Of these, two million of them earned $20,000 or less.

Issues of discrimination will be the first topic of the Gender Relations Awareness Alliance lecture series. Formerly the Women's Issues Discussion Group, the alliance boasts a mailing list of over 70 people and a strong interest in exploring issues of miscommunication between the sexes.



Their guest speaker, Barbara Spicer, is a lawyer with the prestigious firm of Smith, Somerville & Case in Baltimore, MD. Her talk will be held in the Sophie Kerr Room, October 8 at 7 p.m. and will offer guidelines relevant to men and women entering the work force. Also, the more subtle, but still restrictive, aspects of discrimination and the legal options available to employees will be discussed as well as the biased laws still in effect.

Gender Studies



The organizational meeting of the Gender Studies Reading Group will be Sunday, October 4 at 1:00 p.m. in the O'Neill Literary House. The group will discuss and plan the reading agenda for the semester.

If you have any questions or are interested, but unable to attend, please contact Professor Audrey Fessler in William Smith 15 or Tanya Cunicin Kent 101.

Snickers

Don't miss the Snicker's Comedy Club comedian, Danny Sheehan, in the CoffeeHouse, Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

Drop-Off Laundry

We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service

Laundromat Dry Cleaning

Kent Laundry

607 High Street

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5 9

Mon. - Sat
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE

Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday

236 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620

778-0188

George Jamison Reviews Professor Tessem's Art

George Jamison
Staff Writer

I am not an Art major, have not taken an art course, and am not even in tune with the "popular" artists. When I was first assigned this article I was overcome with some paranoia and some doubts.

Who am I to say what is good and what is not? How can I be a critic of art when I do not know the subject? How would I feel if some no-talent English major told the rest of the world what he thought about my creations? Why me?

After the paranoia subsided, I thought about it. Why couldn't I critique another artist's work? I'm a fairly intelligent human with a basic knowledge of art. Hell, I've even dabbled in drawing and painting once. So why shouldn't I write this article?

I did find discover some background information about the artist. Dr. Susan Tessem was born in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, during the middle-forties. She was educated at the University of South Florida, the University of Michigan, and the University of Maryland. Her teaching positions have taken her to the University of South Florida, the University of Michigan, the University of Delaware, the University of Maryland, the summer workshops of Monchique, Portugal, and, finally, Washington College.

Her exhibits have taken place in many places along the Eastern Shore of the United States. Her collections have been purchased by the Westinghouse Corporation, in Washington D.C., the Honeywell Corporation, in Philadelphia, the University of Delaware in New Ark, the Embassy of Iran, in Washington, D.C., and by many private collectors in Germany, England, and the Netherlands.

Dr. Tessem's art exhibit at the Imperial Hotel, showing from now until October 19, is a must-see. Her artistry is astounding. Her pictures seem simple at first glance, but transcend the deceiving easy subject matter into the complex world of art as you examine them. The beauty of her paintings stems from their simplicity.

All of her current paintings on display contain some sort of natural scene. The paintings contain a mist that covers portions of the scenery. Through this mist comes a very clear portrayal of certain aspects of nature that become a motif in her paintings.

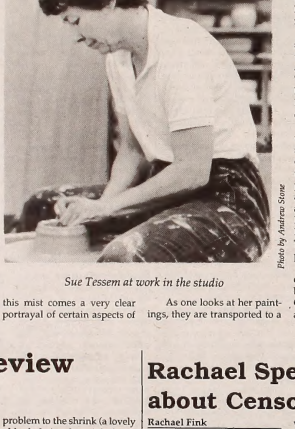


Photo by Andrew Stone

Sue Tessem at work in the studio

As one looks at her paintings, they are transported to a very familiar scene that they have in their memories. These paintings contain a certain element of familiarity that an individual experiences only after years of visiting a very special place. This familiarity, at first, scares away the viewer. But after a while, the viewer wants to take that painting home with him/her in order to relive the memories.

As I said, Dr. Tessem's art show is a must see. But along with her paintings, she also has an incredible knack for pottery. The art gallery that inhabits the little space below the Imperial Hotel contains a few examples of this eye-catching work.

Take my word, if you would like to escape this very small town, just take a walk down High Street and enter into the art gallery below the Imperial Hotel. It contains many art pieces from local artists, such as Washington College's own Kathy Wagner of the English Department and Mrs. Catherine Trout, our illustrious president's wife.

To quote one of the patrons of the Art Gallery: "It's a little bit of Soho right here in Chestertown". Imagine that for a pleasant surprise.

Scott and Dennis Review Jane & Antonia

Scott Graham &
Dennis Kelleher
AV Guys

The Plot:

This weekend the movie being shown in Norman James Theatre is the British film, Antonia and Jane. The main characters are two females who have been friends since the dawn of time and have a reunion once a year. We watch the movie through the eyes of the shrink that both women go to see to help them with their personal problems (yes, that's right, the same shrink!).

The women are struggling to deal with their problems of love, sex, careers, and each other. Antonia is a beautiful blonde who stole Jane's first and only love when they were in college. Jane believes that Antonia has a great career, always stands up for herself, and has the perfect marriage.

At the same time, Jane herself feels like she's always letting people walk on her and is struggling with her life. Antonia thinks Jane is a bouncy young person who is always changing and looking for the new experiences in life.

Scott:

The movie is about suffering through the insecurities of two women as they tell their problem to the shrink (a lovely older lady in a hot pink chair). To the point, the movie is boring. The two women have some pretty screwed up lives. One is in love with an escaped convict, the other is involved in sexual games with her son's house master.

Antonia and Jane need help and in the end they find help in each other (aww, isn't that sweet). If you're looking for something to do this weekend try masturbation. This movie is not worth the admission price (free).

Dennis:

Although I have to agree with Scott that the movie was fboring, there were some redeeming qualities to it. The difference between the self-image of the characters holds for the other were somewhat interesting. In addition, some of the scenes were fairly amusing, particularly the sex scenes with Antonia and her anonymous lover. Overall, however, the movie was not especially interesting.

The score for this film (out of 11) is: Scott: 1 / Dennis: 3

Another Time II

Fine Furniture, Collectibles & Antiques
•housewares, lamps & decor•
10 percent discount with College ID
819 High Street Extended
Chestertown
778-6525

Rachael Speaks Freely about Censorship

Rachael Fink
Staff Writer

Remember the old saying about opinions and noses? Well, it's true, we've all got a nose and more opinions than we know what to do with. And that's not surprising, seeing as there are a very limited number of things that one can do with any given opinion. You can keep it to yourself (in my opinion, that sounds like the best thing to do), you can make it known (depending on your medium, not a bad idea, in my opinion), or you can shove it down your neighbor's throat (and my opinion here is to not agree with your opinion as to what to do with opinions).

This last option is the cause of most of the problems concerning the media, art and entertainment these days. We have a long history of imposing our opinions on others and of removing the opposite opinion. It's called censorship, and whether you're talking about pulling down a poster that offends you here on campus or requiring record labels to post warnings about explicit lyrics, we're talking about the same mentality — that what "they" say isn't what "we" want "them" to hear. At the same time, "they" don't want what "we" say to be heard. And the winner is . . . The Ruling Majority (who ever that is). But the funny thing about The Ruling Majority is that you never quite know when the sides will flip.[1]

What's being censored today may be accepted tomorrow and then some other book gets pulled from the elementary schools. The point is that if you want to have the right to express yourself tomorrow, respect my right to express myself today.[2]

[1] O-Kay, fine, so the conservative right has been in power for more years than we would like to remember and the Moral Majority has no sense of humor, our time will come, really, it will.

[2] If you don't like what I'm saying — don't listen, if you don't like the music — change the station, if you don't call that art — don't go to the museum. And don't worry, I'll do the same to you and yours.

Jazz Festival

Want to jazz up your weekend? Then check out the Third Annual Janes United Methodist Church Annual Jazz Festival Saturday.

Scheduled to play are local legends Randolph "Jazz" Johnson's band and Kent County High School saxophonist, Ashley Harding. Some New York musicians are planning to jam as well.

There's no need to bring blankets or lunches. Lots of seats will be available along with plenty of food for sale. All music will be performed in the Lelia Hynson Pavilion.

Don't forget a little spending money for the $5.00 admission and arts and crafts exhibits. The festival begins at noon, October 3 in Wilmer Park.

Alumni Games

In yer face Washington College sports fans. Former Washington College Sho'men plan to decide who has the competitive edge. If you cannot attend the induction ceremony and dinner in the Hynson Lounge (see College Hall of Fame to Add Four!) be sure not to miss the afternoon action of the Alumni Games, Saturday October 3.

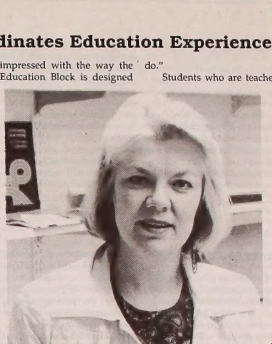
The games begin at 11 a.m. with the Alumni vs. Alumni soccer match in Kibler Field. At the same time, the Alumni Crew Races will launch from the Truslow Boat House. The Alumni vs. Sho'men Field Hockey teams will face off at 1 p.m. on the athletic field as the Alumni Baseball game gets started.

Ellenhorn Coordinates Education Experience

Amanda Burt
News Editor

While Rachel Scholz is on leave during the 1992-93 academic year, Dr. Joan Ellenhorn will temporarily replace her as Coordinator of Field Experiences for the Education Department.

As part of her responsibility in the department, Ellenhorn arranges for early education field students who are considering professional teaching to observe and tutor in area classrooms.



She also supervises both senior and graduate students who are teacher interns in local schools. "I see myself acting as a coach and mentor if needed," she noted.

Ellenhorn said the department has seen an increase in the number of students interested in Education. This year there are three teacher interns each in Math, English, Social Studies and Science, in addition to one German and one Art teacher.

She commented that the Education program here is rigorous and intense: "It's an unusual process at Washington College," she stated. "I'm very impressed with the way the Education Block is designed because I think it gives students many opportunities to be sure [teaching] is what they want to do."

Students who are teacher interns currently attend courses

See "Ellenhorn," pg. 12

Joan Ellenhorn of the Education Department

Photo by Andrew Stone

Ethics of the Future

In the past few years, political candidates and the media have pointed toward a downward trend in the moral values and in the ethics of the human race the past few years. There has not been much hope predicted for the future.

What exactly will the future hold? This question is the topic of the William James Forum this week entitled, Agenda for the Year 2000: Issues and Priorities. Reverend Dr. Gibson Winter, resident of the Chestertown community of Heron Point and Adjunct Professor of Social Ethics at Temple University in Philadelphia, will speak.

He has a unique perspective of morality for the future. A native of New Albion, NY, he received his BA and BD degrees from Harvard University and the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, respectively. After ordination, service in the Naval Reserve, and church appointments in Connecticut and Massachusetts, he returned to Harvard for his MA and PhD degrees.

Since 1956, Winter has taught social ethics in a number of theological schools, including University of Chicago and Princeton University. He has been a professor in the religion department of Temple University since 1987.

He is the author of numerous books, including Love and Conflict: New Patterns in Family Life, The Suburban Captivity of the Churches, The New Creation as Metropolis, and Being Free. His most recent book, Community and Spiritual Transformation, was published in 1989.

The lecture will be held in Hynson Lounge at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, October 6.

JBK's SERVISTAR® HARDWARE

WE CARRY A FULL SELECTION OF ART SUPPLIES

ART SUPPLY HEADQUARTERS

12 COLOR
ACRYLIC PAINTING SET

Contains 12 1¼" x 4"1 tubes of Acrylic colors, 3/4 oz of matte medium, 3/4 oz gloss medium for painting and glazing brushes and pamphlet, "The Art of Painting With Acrylics."

$14.39

STRETCHED
CANVAS

Finest quality cotton canvas mounted on seasoned, kiln-dried wood stretcher strips, primed ready for use with oils, acrylics or water colors. Film wrapped for studio storage

$4.39 - 12"x16"

#25-13-12"x16"
#25-15-16"x20"
#25-18-24"x30"

STUDENT
OIL COLOR PAINTING
SET

Beginner's set contains 12 (½ x 4") tubes selected oil colors, turpentine, boxwood oil, brushes and Hare's How-painting pamphlet

$15.19

JBK's SERVISTAR HARDWARE
Kent Plaza
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-9600
M-Th: 8-7 Fri:8-8;
Sat: 8-6; Sun:9:30-4

BRING THIS AD IN AND RECIEVE 20% OFF YOUR ART SUPPLY PURCHASE

From "Engel," pg. 7

sible. By refusing to let us play men's clubs, Mr. Miller has effectively killed our season this year.

Well, Mr. Miller, after two years of your lying, dishonesty, and distasteful actions, I have a few words for you. First of all, you can take your broken promises and your lies and you can shove them up your ass. Who do you think you are? You are here to serve the students, all of the students, not just varsity players. You obviously disagree, but that is not a surprise to me. You obviously care only about Geoff Miller and your own ass, as opposed to us poor schmucks who have to pay $18,000 a year to put up with assholes like yourself.

Therefore, I must respectfully resign from Washington College Rugby. I cannot continue playing for a school that doesn't want us, and more importantly, for an athletic department who doesn't deserve us. As for Mr. Miller, an old Rugby saying to you — Pogue Mahone!

Seth Engel
Founder, Washington College Rugby Football Club

From "Nolan," pg. 3

part of that elementary school chain. Scientists have barely touched the surface of the wide array of medical purposes that the vast amounts of different plants present. When a plant goes extinct they never will discover its attributes.

When people campaign to save some animal, do not blow them off as "bleeding-hearts." Recognize the right that animal has to its life and the role that that animal may play in keeping the environment in balance.

Another common prejudice against environmentalism is that it is the enemy of the economy, of industry, of progress. That simply does not have to be true. Currently, laws are far too lenient for companies to have any real incentive to change, thus the current laws are viewed as a annoyance. People are frightened that stronger environmental laws would cause job layoffs or the shut down of companies. How could that be if a new environmental industry is created? Oil is going to run out, and a new technology will be needed. That new technology needs to be created today. However, under the current system, the only future for scientists is in defense technologies. It is no wonder that Japan is not only the furthest along in basic technology, but is number one in environmental technology — they do not have fifty-two percent of their budget tied up in defense spending.

The Earth simply can not survive if we do not change. We really have no choice in the matter. Either we make the steps now to change our ways and to help the Earth heal from old wounds, or we wait until there is a major crisis that nobody can deny. However, by then it may be too late. Not everyone has to become an activist, crusading to save the planet, but everyone has the obligation as a citizen of this planet to at least change some personal habits to benefit the Earth. We cannot continue filling up landfills, creating waste that will never be destroyed, and killing species that might be part of a solution. If the word environmentalism bothers you, you can always use the label of common sense.

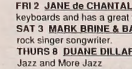
Math Department Gets Mixed Review

Sam Johnston
Staff Writer

In light of the emphasis given to the departments currently under evaluation by the external review process, the ELM spoke with the chairs of the three departments which have undergone the process: Psychology, Economics and Mathematics and Computer Science. The psychology and economics results will appear in upcoming issues of the ELM.

The Math Department was recently reviewed by an independent panel of observers in order to receive objective feedback on how to strengthen the curriculum.

The review panel consisted of colleagues from three other institutions, and included Stuart Herschfield from Hamilton College, Martha Siegel from Towson State, and Tom Tucker from Colgate College. As a team, they offered a number of ideas for possible implementation by the department, mostly concerning the orientation of the curriculum toward majors.



Courses for the major, which consume a tremendous amount of departmental energy, were recommended to be de-emphasized in favor of more service courses. While several classes were suggested for the curriculum, one course for Math majors was also listed as a possible new addition.

Professor Al Briggs of the Math Department said he agreed with certain suggestions made by the committee but added that they were unclear on just how to put the ideas to use. "The underlying question," he said, "is just how do you do all that?"

Other ideas such as updating the Math section of the College Catalog and expanding the Teacher's Education section to include classes in Computer Science and Math will most likely be employed, although the latter will have to receive State approval.

The panel was not without its own faults. They suggested that the placement exam currently used by the department be replaced with the MAA placement exam. The team apparently failed to notice that the MAA exam is the one currently used by the college.

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 2 JANE de CHANTAL Jane plays jazz-rock on keyboards and has a great voice!! No Cover!!
SAT 3 MARK BRINE & BAND Baltimore country-rock singer songwriter.
THURS 8 DUANE DILLARD & FRIENDS Jazz
Jazz and More Jazz
778-6779

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Tuesday - Saturday
Planning on Real
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Sandershoe)
Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0888

From "Ellenhorn," pg. 11

about classroom management once a week. They also observe instruction in their designated schools once weekly, and by the third week of October, they will begin daily teaching.

Ellenhorn said the interns are assigned to a cooperating teacher who has expressed interest in acting as as site supervisor. The interns are asked to do a considerable amount of planning with the cooperating teachers so that they learn every aspect of organizing course content and are able to relate the subject to students.

Teacher interns are also required to engage in microteaching, a process in which they teach course content to other fellow interns and learn to develop special instruction strategies in their own discipline.

Both Ellenhorn and Dr. Sean O'Connor, Chair of the Department of Education, will sit in the classrooms and observe the interns as they teach in an effort to monitor their progress and offer feedback.

Whether or not teacher interns want to instruct elementary, high school or college students, Ellenhorn believes that teaching experience on every level offers a better perspective on how the learning process works over time.

As a teacher for over thirty years, Ellenhorn has taught at all levels, beginning with elementary school. She said that the teacher's challenge with every age group is to encourage students to want to learn.

Ellenhorn added that the teacher must also make the material clear and interesting while ensuring that the students understand what they are learning.

"If you can be enthusiastic abut what you're teaching, that's half the battle," she said.

In her experience as a teacher, Ellenhorn has observed that there is a certain tradition that seeks women as elementary school instructors only, while men are given more opportunities to teach at the secondary and college levels.

She said that although more women have been integrated into high school and college level teaching in recent years, there is still more room for improvement.

"Those who love their subject, want to teach it and have the ability to communicate the subject will be successful," Ellenhorn stated.

She also noted that with respect to social studies, schools have become much more inclusive of contributions to society made by men and women from many cultures.

Although Ellenhorn has been at Washington College for only a month, she said she appreciates her time here. "In the month I've been with the faculty, I've been very much welcomed and I'm enjoying my job."

In addition to coordinating field experience for students, Ellenhorn teaches the Classroom Management Seminar for teacher interns as well as a course on the nature and nurture of intelligence for the Washington College Academy of Lifelong Learning (WC-ALL).

From "Koon," pg. 3

trates on the more superficial symptoms of sexism — legal inequities, employment discrimination and the like."[5] These issues affect all women, but clearly bourgeois women direct the agenda of these organizations. These issues are trifling when compared with the larger issue of the central obstacles to women's liberation — sexism and the exploitation of women through wage labor.

It took many years for the capitalist class to co-opt the mainstream feminist movement. In the twenties, when feminism and socialism were synonymous with one another, the capitalist propaganda machine sought to weaken the influence of the feminist movement by portraying it as being and instrument of the Soviet Union: "Moscow directs female communists here to obtain membership in women's clubs and organizations throughout the country, working with the ranks of their fellow club members for the eventual overthrow of Society, and of the United States Government. . . ."[6] Even the title of the journal where this was published in 1923 suggests a strong link between feminism and socialism. The publication was called the Woman Patriot and was subtitled "Dedicated to the Defence of the Family and the State AGAINST Feminism and Socialism" (capitalization present in the original).

Since World War II, the American ruling class has better learned how to subvert the socialism inherent in feminism. They have done so by incorporating aspects of feminism into the popular culture while simultaneously acting to limit the gains of the women's movement. Their primary stratagem is to co-opt individual women into active roles at the managerial and professional level.

Limited economic gains and the opportunity for professional success without societal reforms to eradicate sexism constitutes the agenda of bourgeois feminism. The phenomenon of tokenism has been evident for some time as a method of ensuring that sexism and racism maintain their economic utility for the capitalist class. Tokenism extends to the highest levels of the patriarchal capitalist hierarchy — even up to the Supreme Court. By offering upward class mobility to individual women, capitalism staves off the more dire threat of the collective liberation of womankind.

Another way that capitalism deals with the threat of feminism is through careful control of the media. Advertising dollars constitute an effective means of control for both print and broadcast media. In her 1991 book The Beauty Myth Naomi Wolf noted that a women's magazine ". . . must pay for its often serious, prowoman content with beauty backlash trappings; it must do so to reassure its advertisers, who are threatened by the possible effects on women's minds of too much excellence in women's journalism" (71).

Recently, Ms. magazine eliminated paid advertisements. While this is laudable, Ms. essentially preaches to the converted. The prime print media which serves to brainwash and indoctrinate American women are fashion magazines, particularly those whose target market consists of young women in the 16-25 age range.

These magazines often include articles on women's' issues which might be characterized as belonging to the Cosmopolitan school of feminism. Also, these magazines often include articles which deal with white-collar workplace issues, which recalls the earlier reference to the co-option of women by the former all male professional caste. Such magazines also incorporate articles and photographs which serve to undermine women's self image and create new stereotypes of what constitutes a man today.

I occasionally peruse these magazines to observe these phenomena firsthand. It is interesting to analyze these articles in this context, but for reasons of brevity, I will confine myself to observations of the titles of articles in recent issues of Glamour magazine.

Many of these articles promote the insecurity of women about their physical appearance. Such articles include "The new message of a good body," "Is your skin care aging your face," "Feel-Good Makeup," and "for a firm, flat stomach." Note that the opposite of a good body is a bad body, or even an evil body. Note also, the potential for rapture offered by "Feel-Good Makeup," the positively disastrous effects of the aging process, and the possibility of acceleration thereof through improperly managed "skin care." (I personally don't take care of my skin at all. I just bathe, and my skin looks after its own affairs quite nicely, thank you.)

Glamour asserts to its readers that the inner workings of a person's psyche can be determined entirely through the simple observation of physical phenomena as implied by "What your walking style says about you." Achieving the standard created by Wolf's Beauty Myth is not a part time job but a quest of epic proportions. Aren't we all lucky that this quest has yielded such great benefit to society? Note also that, in the attempt to prolong adolescence through the elimination of pubic hair, electrical cauterization of hair follicles is presented as a viable option, whereas the laissez-faire approach is not.

Glamour is written at about the sixth grade level; it is not intended to provide intellectual stimulation. That would be too dangerous. Instead it offers up articles such as "Safer Sun — you can outsmart the sun." Of course, it is no epic task to outsmart the sun. It is, after all, essentially a huge, naturally occurring fusion reactor, utterly devoid of any intelligence.

As any number of skin cancer patients will stoutly confirm, the sun can be dangerous. Indeed, the whole world is dangerous to the Glamour girl as observed in the article "STALKED! Why no woman is safe." Such articles serve to sensationalize the very real dangers of rape and sexual assault — without expressing any sort of rage against the patriarchal society which actively promotes sexual aggression by strongly affirming the "natural right" of men to assert their power over women at any time, in any way.

Of course, Glamour also attempts to help its readers understand men, that most perplexing opposite specie. Glamour tells us all about "Zipper Control: A lesson men are struggling to learn." (personally don't quite get the point of this one. A zipper is a rather easy thing to control, you just pull it up and pull it down. Perhaps Glamour is implying that if you are "STALKED!", it is probably because a man hasn't learned the lessons of "Zipper Control", or perhaps it is because he misinterpreted "What your walking style says about you." On this topic, Glamour's editorial position may be "Why Resist? (Six reasons to love a dress)."

Men are essentially animal scum who are not to be trusted. You can find out why this is the case by reading "Why men lie and why we believe them. (Of course, we lie too, but when it comes to love men corner the market on untruths)." Undoubtedly Glamour hired the Oracle of Delphi to write that one. Glamour is all-knowing, all-seeing. Why, Glamour can even inform you on "What men don't know about their own sexuality." I'll admit, I bit on that one. I read it, anxious for the truth, but I wound up wasting ten minutes on pop psychology/physiology. I was so disgusted that I didn't even bother with "MAN OF MAN (how real men relate to women now)."

All of this reflects a concerted effort by the ruling class to use the traditional hierarchical system of sexist oppression to keep both men and women confused, antagonized, deluded and ignorant. Eventually the decline of the capitalist economy will increase women's consciousness their status as an oppressed class. This will give rise to what Engels termed:

> . . . a generation of men who never in all their lives have had occasion to purchase a woman's surrender either with money or any other means of social power; and a race of women who have never been obliged to surrender to any man out of consideration other than that of real love, or to refrain from giving themselves to their lovers for fear of the economic consequences. Once such people appear, they will not give a rap about what we today think they should do.[7]

[1] From Feminism and Political Theory. Tusscher et al. 1986, Sage, London. 73.
[2] From "The Origin of Family, Private Property and the State." Quoted in Bolsheyik Feminist. Barbara Evans Clements, Indiana University Press, Bloomington, 1979.
[3] Term borrowed from Mary Daly.
[4] Quoted in The "Natural Inferiority" of Women. Tama Starr, 1991, Poseidon Press, NY. 191.
[5] The Dialectic of Sex. Shulamith Firestone, 1970, William and Morrow, NY. 271.
[6] Ibid., 36.
[7] Quoted in Women Together. Judith

J & M'S FAMILY RESTAURANT
JOIN US FOR A PIZZA & AN ICE COLD DRAFT BEER
Soft Shell Crabs • Homemade Crab Cakes
Steamed Crabs • Hoagies • Philly Cheese Steaks
FRESH ROCKFISH PLATTER
Dinner Served Daily 4 - 8pm • Breakfast Served All Day
Open 6am-10pm • 7 DAYS A WEEK
1 1/2 mi. S. of Chester River Bridge Next to Emily's • 778-5881

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

Volleyball Falls to Gettysburg, Stuns A Few At Gull Classic

Tyler McCarthy
Staff Writer

The Washington College Sho'women still continue with their problems but are slowly evening out their win-loss record.

The week was a tough one as the Sho'women started up Salisbury State tournament. On night one, Friday, the unit walked all over their first formidable opponent, Scranton.

On night two, Saturday, the Sho'women continued their route of the competition and repeated their victorious performance a few times as they met up with Catonsville and Allentown, winning both contests handily.

With these wins came entrance into the semi-finals versus Catholic University. It was a valiant effort and a heroic attempt as it was carried into extra point play of the final match. But WC was eventually edged out 3 games to 2 with the score of the last game being 17-15.

Once again, Diaz stated, "In this one we came together as a team and really started to communicate within the squad which we proved in our overall performance."

The improved Washington College Sho'women's record of 4-9 gave them a boost heading into last Tuesday's match-up against Swarthmore College (covered in next week's issue) and hopefully will carry them into this weekend where they will host the Washington College Invitational. Teams present will include Scranton, Wilmington, Gallaudet, Salisbury State, and Haverford. BE THERE TO CATCH ALL THE ACTION!!

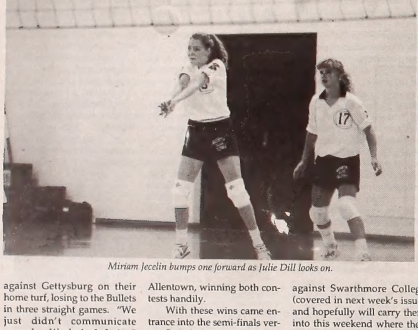


Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

Miriam Jecelin bumps one forward as Julie Dill looks on.

against Gettysburg on their home turf, losing to the Bullets in three straight games. "We just didn't communicate enough. We lacked desire," said Beverly Diaz, a sophomore starter.

Looking onward and putting the Gettysburg match behind them, the young squad shortly bounced back in the

Soccer Goes The Distance Versus UMES

Jason Ronstadt
Staff Writer

Since their uplifting season opener at Lebanon Valley, the Shoremen have continued their struggle on what has been a long hard road back to the win column. On September 23rd the squad hosted Wesley College. The two teams played a fast paced, evenly matched game. Sophomore Goaltender Greg Miller, who has turned away 55 shots on goal to date, was brilliant in net for the Shoremen. But neither he nor any of the other Shoreman defenders could hold back the relentless Wesley attack from capitalizing on rebounded shots and what can only be described as junk goals. The final tally was 3-0 in favor of Wesley a score which in no way reflected the evenly played match that took place out on Kibler Field.

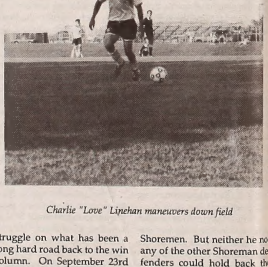

Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

Charlie "Love" Linehan maneuvers down field

This past Wednesday the Shoremen moved one step closer to that elusive victory by tying the University of Maryland at Eastern Shore 1-1 in a game that remained deadlocked even at the end of the overtime period. Junior forward Rory "she's just another goal" Conway added another notch on his belt by intercepting the opposing goaltenders punt and singlehandedly scoring his third goal of the season. This tie for Washington brings their current record to 1-6-1 but the team is not getting down on themselves, they know their squad is talented enough to pull out of this slump. W.C. faces Swarthmore tomorrow at 1:30 on the Kibster. See ya there!

Suds 'n' Soda
Rt. 213& Rt. 297
1 1/2 Miles North of Campus
Chestertown, Md.
778-5077
To Celebrate Kent County's
First Sunday Liquor Sales
One Day only Specials
10/4/92
OPEN 7 DAYS
6AM UNTIL MIDNIGHT
Jim Beam 750ml $6.99+tax
Seagram's Gin 750ml $5.99+tax
This Week's BEER SPECIAL
NATIONAL BOH 12oz cans
$3.79 12pk
$7.49 case
WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS
YOU MUST BE 21 AND HAVE VALID
IDENTIFICATION
TO PURCHASE ALCOHOL

Park
778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

SNACK SHACK
OPEN 7 DAYS
RT.213 & RT. 297
CHESTERTOWN, MD
778-4230
MON-THURS: 10AM-7PM
FRI-SAT: 10AM-9PM
SUN: 12-7
LOCATED ABOVE SUDS 'N' SODA
$1.00 OFF LARGE CHEESESTEAK SUB
.50 OFF SMALL CHEESESTEAK SUB
-COUPON-

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
PET SEMETARY II
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

Field Hockey Continues With Even Tempo

Reneé Guckert
Staff Writer

The Washington College field hockey lost their first MAC game last week to Albright College, 3-1. Washington's only goal occurred in the first six minutes of the game when Eleanor Shriver took a direct shot on off a penalty corner, and Reneé Guckert redirected the shot past Albright's goalie for the score. But Albright's Cecilton resident, changed the damaged van tire with precision and skill (yet not in record time, for those of you who know what that means!)

Despite the events of that day, WC field hockey fired up to take on another MAC contender and win. Determined not to let another victory pass them by, Washington College stomped Elizabethtown last Saturday with a 2-0 shutout. The score remained 0-0 at the score. With fierce aggression, halfbacks Peggy Bowman, Alicia Carberry, and Shannon Metcalf were unstoppable on free hits and on snatching the ball from the clutches of a baffled Elizabethtown team. Brigid DeVries once again was stellar in the goal, recording an amazing twenty-one saves and her third shutout of the season.

"Beating Elizabethtown came on our fourth try (in four years)," stated senior Eleanor

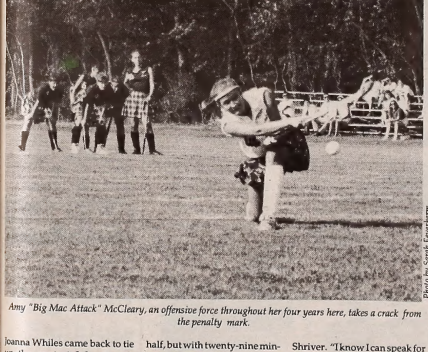

Photo by Sarah Engelhorn

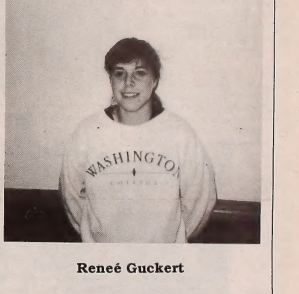
Amy "Big Mac Attack" McCleary, an offensive force throughout her four years here, takes a crack from the penalty mark.

Joanna Whiles came back to tie up the contest 1-1 approximately eight minutes later.

By the end of the first half, Albright had scored again when an unmarked attackman fired another shot past the Shoremen defense, making the score 2-1. Although Washington's squad worked hard individually, they found it difficult to come together as a team against an aggressive Albright squad, losing a disappointing 3-1. Assistant coach Lacy Frazer remarked that "I think we played well against Albright, but two major components kept us from winning that game: defensive marking and conceding the ball to the other team."

The "perfect end to the perfect day" (NOT) occurred on the team's ride home from Albright College. Approximately twenty-five minutes outside of Chestertown, one of the team vans hit something along the road, causing sections of the right rear tire to be torn off. The WC squad gathered in front of a dark corn field and looked on as Bill Bailey, a half, but with twenty-nine minutes remaining in the second half, Reneé Guckert scored the first goal of the game in the midst of a crowded offensive circle. Later, Marie Mohler on a fast break down the right side of the field, made a picture-perfect cross to Guckert who slammed the ball past an unsuspecting Elizabethtown goalie, bringing the final score to 2-0.



Even though the ball appeared to spend fairly equal amounts of time in both offensive ends, the WC defense maintained position and stuck to their opponents tight, denying them the opportunity to Shriver. "I know I can speak for the seniors when I say, thank you to the rest of the team because it is this type of win that will be remembered long after we are gone."

The MAC standings as of September 26 were as follows: in first, Haverford College with two wins, Widener University with two wins, one loss, and tied for third, Albright and Washington College each with one win and one loss. The Shoremen take a break from MAC competition tomorrow to take on the Washington College Alumni. Come out and see the battle of the old versus the new at 1:00!

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists' Materials
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
RD Box 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

Reneé Guckert

Week Five and still going strong. We're here and as far as your face, we're in it. IN YER FACE! Hey Redskins fans. . . never mind. Ladies & gentlemen, for the Bleacher Creatures, would you do us a favor and make sure you tune into ABC for the Dallas-Eagles match-up Monday Night. You may just catch us on the big screen, WASTED!

And without further adieu, the Newt's POW is. . . Nope, not even close. Try Renee "The Guck" Guckert. As far as the field hockey unit is concerned, she's considered the unstoppable offensive juggernaut! Accumulating 5 goals, two of which came against E-town this past week, she has only gotten better as the season has progressed. Nice job Guck, and the writing isn't so bad either.

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Curling
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist
Enthrivium - Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal
Electrologist -
Louise Leaverton, L.E.

Soccer Breaks Stride, Ties UMES

See Article, pg. 10

Theta Chi Fall Classic
Sign Up For This Weekend!

WC • ELM

Sports

Attention: CASH FAST! Help needed for Soccer's last 4 home games. Call ext. 7240

Field Hockey Keeps Record Even

See Article, pg. 11

Scores

Men's Soccer (OT)
Washington 1
UMES 1

Field Hockey
Washington 1
Albright 3

Washington 2
Elizabethtown 0

Volleyball
Washington 3-1
SSU Gull Classic

On Deck

Men's Soccer
Alumni Game
Tomorrow
11:00 a.m.

Swarthmore
Tomorrow
1:30 p.m.

Field Hockey
Swarthmore
Thu., Oct. 1
4:30 p.m.

Volleyball
W.C. Invitational
This Weekend

Good Seats Still Available!

Photo by Sarah Eggerkorn

At center, Chris "Little Dutch Boy" Kleberg, goes for broke, turning one away from a flabergasted opponent. Mr. Kleberg, a native Texican, brings his southern style of play and leadership abilities to W.C. as he is the co-captain of this year's squad. He has repeatedly proven his worth in the backfield as well as upfront, topping the Soccer unit in overall points.

Renee Guckert: Newt's Player of the Week

Volleyball Gets Set for W.C. Invitational

See Article, pg. 10

Speak when you are spoken to.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: cloudy, showers (70% chance)
H mid 70s, SE wind 10-15 mph
Weekend: partly sunny, chance of rain H low-mid 70s

Volume 64, Number Seven • October 9, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Former Senator Eugene McCarthy To Speak On Citizenship

Eugene J. McCarthy, former United States Senator, will speak at WC on Tuesday, October 13th. The address, called "The Unalienable Duties of Citizenship: Participation, The Burden of Finance, and Military Service," begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Hynson Lounge.

In addition, McCarthy, now an active creative writer, will have lunch with Writers' Union members at noon on Tuesday. Interested members should contact Robert Day.

Senator McCarthy, a liberal Democrat from Minnesota with the insight and veracity of a poet, ran his grass-roots Presidential Campaign in 1968 largely with assistance of young, idealistic college students as volunteers. Even in defeat (he conceded to Hubert Humphrey at the Democratic Convention), McCarthy helped move the United States towards peace in Vietnam, engaged a new generation in politics, and ushered in a large era of political reform.

Lyndon Johnson's decision not to seek re-election in 1968 is attributed in large part to McCarthy's strong showing as an anti-war candidate, first in the New Hampshire Democratic primary and then in others.

McCarthy's political career began in 1948 with his election to the House of Representatives. Here he compiled a liberal, pro-labor voting record and was named to the Ways and Means Committee in 1953.

McCarthy entered the Senate after winning an upset victory over a Republican incum-

See "McCarthy," pg. 9

WC Alum Immortalized on Cross St.

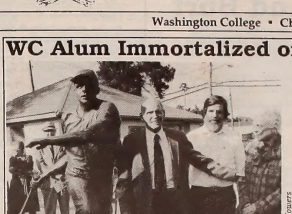


Photo by J. Tarin Towers

Bill Nicholson stands next to his newly-unveiled statue, along with John Phillips of Phillips Casting Company and Mrs. Robert Downes, one of the patrons. Not pictured is Ken Herlihy, the sculptor.

A new statue was unveiled Saturday at 120 N. Cross Street in Chestertown. William Beck "Swish" Nicholson, a 1936 graduate of Washington College, now has his likeness immortalized in the posture that most people remember him for: playing baseball.

Nicholson was born in Chestertown and graduated from Chestertown High School in 1931. During his years at WC, he excelled at both baseball and football. He was signed to the Philadelphia Athletics in 1935 and went to Philly after graduating from WC.

From there, Nicholson enjoyed a 17-year career in league baseball. Over the next several years, he played at Williamsport, Portsmouth, and Chattanooga before he was signed to the Chicago Cubs in 1944. He played with the Cubs until 1948, was third-place MVP in 1943, and lost MVP by one vote the following year. He batted in the All-Star Game four different years and finished his career back with the Philadelphia Athletics.

The unveiling of Nicholson's statue was attended by about 400 people, according to the Kent County News. Those in attendance included Maryland Governor William Donald Schaefer, Chestertown Mayor Elmer Horsey, WC baseball coach for 25 years Edward L. Athey, and the man himself, Bill Nicholson. H. Hurtt Deringer, Editor & Publisher of Kent County News, was master of ceremonies.

Pegasus Editorship Vacant
Bookless Year May Be in Store

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

At the October 5 Faculty Meeting, Dr. Richard Striner, Chair of the Board of Publications, announced that the salaried Editorship of the Pegasus, WC's yearbook, was still vacant after Sue Czechowski's resignation at the end of August.

Czechowski, an RA in Queen Anne's House, was co-editor of last year's book along with Heather Scholz. She resigned because her work load was too heavy.

Striner said that he had spoken with Meredith Davies-Hadaway, Director of College Relations and Faculty Advisor for the Pegasus, about the possibility of her office taking over the Pegasus as a last resort. He said that there was a precedent "about five years ago" for an administrative yearbook.

President Charles H. Trout was opposed to the idea. He said he preferred no yearbook at all to an administration-produced book.

At a meeting of the Board of Publications the next morning, Hadaway said she knew of no precedent for an administration-produced book, but that in 1983 there was no Pegasus.

Publications board member Richard DeProspo said that in 1977, the yearbook editor had a "breakdown" and the job was finished by the Director of College Relations.

Trout Wednesday further explained his feelings on the situation to the ELM. "I hope that we have one," he said. "I think it would be a shame not to have one. I think this class wants to be remembered. I think we'd be poorer as an institution with this kind of gap in our historical record."

However, Trout expressed reservations about having a non-student-produced yearbook. "At the same time, comma, I do not think that it is the institution's responsibility to bail out the Class of '93."

"One could say, 'what kind of lesson are we teaching if you're saying we are going to come to their rescue.' ... I don't think that's our responsibility," he said.

"My overwhelming instinct is that it's absolute craziness to do this [to have an administrative yearbook]. ... I guess it tells us something, that students don't think a yearbook is important," he said.

Trout shook his head. "I hope very much to see a yearbook."

Hadaway told the ELM Tuesday that she had not offered to produce the book in its entirety, but that she had offered the support and expertise of herself and her staff.

Striner reports that the board has received one application for the position. Any other interested applicants should contact Striner in writing as soon as possible.

Inside

Kent County to Sponsor Volunteer Opportunities Fair Tomorrow, Page 5.

Deficit Discussed at October Faculty Meeting, Page 5.

Matt Shields Reviews Night on Earth, Page 4.

Economics Department Reflects on Review, Page 8.

There will be no ELM next week due to Fall Break

Editorial by Towers and Burt

TOWERS shakes her head in disgust. "I didn't say that! How could anybody confuse a 'slick swift fuck' with a 'stick shift truck'?"

BURT enters, raising one eyebrow. "What's up, Big Guy?"

TT: "You actually wrote this? I thought you took Professor Richard Harwood's American Studies 411, The American Journalist!"

AB: "All right. What's the problem? Who did I misquote this time?"

TT: "Me! You may have thought it was great fun to split Lamond's infinitive, or to dangle Cousineau's participle, but this time you've gone too far!"

AB: "But ... Tarin ... These weren't just anonymous speakers with no true voices, these were real people that I quoted! I wrote it down! Besides, I was right in saying that these women like the power, control and endurance that comes with a big ... truck."

TT: "Look. I was talking about the preponderance of females at WC with four-wheel-drive vehicles, and you make me sound like I'm saying the girls here are sluts! I'm ruined!" [TOWERS wrings her hands in despair]

AB: "I have a Bronco, too. And so does my roommate. And we're not sluts — we went to the Skip Barber Advanced Driving School!" [BURT proudly reveals her graduation certificate with Skip Barber's genuine signature.]

TT: "I know, you red-headed numbskull! That's why I wanted you to interview me! We have to make the news around here somehow, and an article about 'The WC Neo-Woman of the '90s' is just not pertinent if we call the 'neo-women' 'neo-sluts'!" [They pause to consider the amount of exclamation points in the previous sentences.]

AB: "Coming from you, this is something I would both expect and laugh at."

TT: "This is no laughing matter! Just the other day at the Faculty meeting, I was publicly accused of leaving the 'humanities' out of Trout's Daly plan. He did that on his own, but I have to answer for it!"

AB: "It's their word over yours. You're just a rinky-dink journalist who can't do anything right. They expect us to misquote everything."

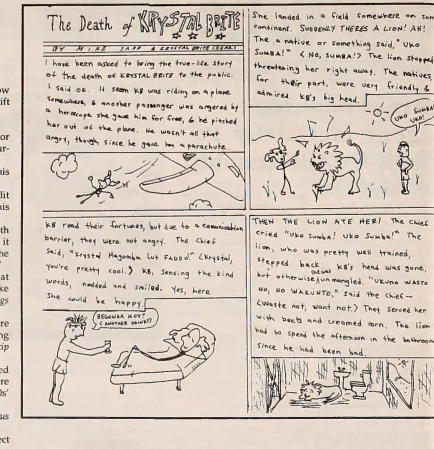
TT: "Oh, Christ. When are they going to realize that we take our jobs seriously? That we can write really fast? That we don't need to misquote them — they say enough goofy stuff on their own."

AB: "I, comma, too, comma, hope so. I think we should make it a policy to bring tape recorders to every interview. I think this would be a welcome change. I think it would be beneficial to protect ourselves. Don't you think?" [BURT by this time is banging her fist on the table and wildly waving her Driving Certificate in TOWERS' face.]

TT: "You took the words right out of my mouth — for a CHANGE!"

AB: "Nope, sorry. All I have is a five."

TT: "Shit."



A proverbial question mark rises over BURT's head. The lights fade as the garbage truck rolls onto campus. A lone voice plaintively cries: "Can I have y'all's trash?" All the campus sleeps. All that is, but the ELM staff.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddish
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Ben Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8265.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

To the Editor:
Dear "Alice,"

I was deeply touched by your article, and I wish you good luck. I understand your struggle to stay above water because I almost drowned myself.

I am a recovering bulimic, and I came pretty close to ruining my body by rupturing my stomach and esophagus, causing myself a heart attack or stroke, rotting my teeth and even losing my hair. Yes, folks, bulimia is a destructive and sometimes deadly game, and even though I broke the cycle, I still remember the evil game. For many years I pretended that it was all going to go away by itself — that I was going to wake up one morning and never even want to throw up again.

I even thought, upon finding out that my friend, Ona, was found in her apartment in Richmond, lying in her excrement, in a coma, leaving her with permanent brain damage, with no hope of regaining her 23-year-old self again past the third grade level, that I was going to get better for Ona. Well, that didn't work either. It took me many years, in which time I continued to throw up, and I discovered many other addictions such as smoking, drinking, sex and drug use before I understood that my battle had to be fought for ME and not for Ona or anyone else.

I applaud your courage, "Alice." Your words of wisdom still bring tears to my eyes, even though I consider myself O.K. now. It's been a reality check for me reading your letter. You see, it's been many years now since I've had my eating problems. I've been back in school now for two-and-a-half years and I think I'm even going to graduate this May. Four years ago I was a mess, and today I am writing to you, whomever you may be, about very painful memories that still make me cry. Thank you, "Alice." If ever meet you, I'd like to give you a hug.

Heidi Widrick
Senior

Letters Policy

Letters to the Editor do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM Editorial Staff. No unsigned letters are accepted except for reasons of personal safety. Letters should be sent through campus mail or dropped off in the ELM office in the basement of Reid Hall no later than 6 p.m. Wednesday to appear in that Friday's issue.

To the Editor:

Last week Jennifer Waldych wrote an article on an assault that occurred in Minta Martin. The article was well written and brought out a concern for which we should all be alarmed. She reported the building doors were found unlocked an several occasions during the night. Residents I have interviewed have echoed the same problem. Interesting enough, this concern surfaced only after a serious incident occurred in the building. My staff reports keeping the building doors locked has been a full-time assignment.

How often do you enter your dormitory through an unlocked or "propped" door after hours? Have you ever held a door open for an unknown person to gain access to your building? These are questions you should ask yourself and evaluate what level of responsibility you want to take for your own security as well as that of your fellow residents. I am seeking your assistance and input to help us resolve this problem. Together we can make our residence halls a safe environment in which to live.

Jerry Roderick, Director
WC Security

Crisis

Scott Ross Koon

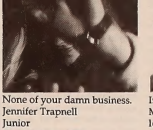
The American presidential election is now less than a month away, and despite the reentry of Ross Perot into the race, the outcome seems clearer than ever before. Although much attention will be paid to this Sunday's presidential debate, it will have little bearing on the final result of the election. Unless some sort of major scandal hits the Clinton campaign, the outcome of the election is not in question. With the decline of Bush's approval rating and Perot's loss of credibility as a candidate, the Clinton campaign must be rejoicing at their good fortune.

Over the course of the past several weeks, I have given a tacit endorsement of Clinton in this column. I must add that this endorsement is not entirely wholehearted. Despite the propaganda put forward by the Bush campaign, Clinton is in no way a socialist candidate. He is actually the opposite; he is the candidate of the section of the ruling class which believes that it can stop the decline of the capitalist system through moderate political and economic reform.

In The Origin of the Family and the State Frederick Engels noted an obvious fact which is not supported by those who are actually idealistic enough to buy into the outrageous fallacy that the political system of the United States is a real democracy: namely that political power always belongs to whomever controls a given society's wealth (209). In a passage that seems particularly relevant today, Engels wrote that:

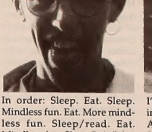
> "The highest form of state, the democratic republic, knows officially nothing of property distinctions. . . In such a state, wealth asserts its power indirectly, but all the more safely. This is done partly in the form of direct corruption of officials, after the classical type of the United States, or in the form of an alliance between government and bankers which is established all the more easily when the public debt increases. . ." (210).

Although Origin was first published in 1884, he seems to exactly describe the functioning of the American political system over a century later. If anyone doubts that the government acts in the interests of large banking and industrial concerns rather than those of taxpayers, they need only look to the savings and loan bail-out to observe that the interests of individual taxpayers are secondary to those of Washington's real constituents.



Most Americans regard the Democratic Party as the party of the working class and the Republican Party as the party of businessmen. In reality, both the Republicans and the Democrats support the interests of businesses, and the interests

See "Koon," pg. 9



CAMPUS VOICES

By Dude

What Are You Going To Do This Weekend?

None of your damn business.
Jennifer Trapnell
Junior
Federalsburg, MD

In order: Sleep. Eat. Sleep. Mindless fun. Eat. More mindless fun. Sleep/read. Eat. Mindless fun. Sleep (briefly).
Steve Brown
Junior
Morrison, CO

I'll be at the AOΠ/ Theta party in Dorchester.
Alexandra Moringiello
Senior
Garden City, New York

I guess I'm going to be working. There's nothing going on.
Tammie Michener
Senior
Pittsburgh, PA

We're going to the AIDS quilt in Washington, DC on Sunday. Saturday we're hosting kids from some high school in Baltimore City, I think.
Namala Moss (left) and Tina Balin
Freshmen
Prince George's County, MD and Bethesda, MD

I'd say I'm going to the Farm Party to become intoxicated, and hopefully meet a nice girl.
Kevin Lawner
Junior
East Brunswick, NJ

Open Forum: Tanya Doesn't Drink

Tanya Allen

Tanya Allen is a junior majoring in English with a concentration in Creative Writing. She is a member of the Writer's Union and head of the Health Service Task Force. Allen has hypoglycemia, a medical condition which prohibits the consumption of alcohol.

I am a non-drinking Washington-College student, and I have a life. (Sort of).

Being a non-drinker and having a life here is difficult, since this is a small college, in a town which is at least an hour away from any major city. There really isn't much to do on weekend nights except party, or go bowling. Since this isn't a large enough campus to make "substance free" dances and parties into something other than events that most students wouldn't be caught dead at, most WAC parties involve alcohol. This sometimes makes non-drinkers feel alienated.

I wanted to do an Open Forum on this subject because of a conversation I had with Dawn Nordhoff—the Assistant Director of Health Services. She mentioned that a number of freshmen speak to her each year about the problems of being non-drinkers at a party school. Many of these people have problems fitting in at WAC, and sometimes feel so out-of-place that they end up transferring to other colleges.

After talking to Dawn, I became interested in finding out how other upperclassmen non-drinkers handle the situation. I interviewed eight students who are either occasional or non-drinkers, some of whom go to parties, some of whom find other things to do on weekend nights.

Most of us agreed that one of the hardest things that we have to deal with is being hassled. People who don't drink are often stereotyped; it's assumed that the reason we don't drink is that we feel we're "above it," that we're making a moral judgement on those people who drink. Although it's true that some of us do have moral reasons for not drinking, the majority of us have other reasons such as: being allergic, having alcoholism in our families, having already "done it all" at an early age, or just having previously decided that it's not our thing.

People often tell us we should try it a couple of times "just to find out what everyone else is doing." One sophomore woman I spoke to says one of the reasons she doesn't drink at parties is to find out what everyone else is doing. It's sometimes fun to be the only sober person at a party, because one can watch everyone else make fools out of themselves. Manipulating drunk people is also enjoyable—playing mind games, saying utterly sarcastic things to them and having them believe you.

"You don't need to be drunk," the sophomore said, "to experience the exhilaration of a party." Another non-drinker says that when he is at parties he gets high off of everyone else—parties give him an adrenaline rush. The only difference between him and those drunk is that he will remember later what went on. He added that if it's a good party to begin with, alcohol isn't a factor—alcohol only adds to it. "If you need to rely on alcohol to have a good time," he says, "you're not really having a good time."

For those of us who are in-

See "Allen," pg. 9

ElvisMatt Shields' Night on Earth

Matt Shields
Staff Ispep

Word of advice: go see Night On Earth, it's FREE this weekend in Bill Smith. I saw it this past summer at one of those shmancy little micro-theaters tucked away down some urine-scented alley way in the District and paid $6.50. It's FREE at the school this weekend and you don't have to deal with the attitude of one of those 1-wear-black-all-the-time-because-I-went-to-art-school types behind the ticket counter. There is no counter! It's FREE and it's far more entertaining than watching a bunch of Beast-buzzed Sigs pitching bottle caps. Here's what you get for FREE:

The movie starts out in a taxi cab. Not just any taxi cab - - Winona Ryder's taxi cab. Yes, Winona 'SuperFox' Ryder. The same Winona Ryder that trampled Johnny Depp under-foot. The Same Winona Ryder that did that shower scene in Heathers, you remember, with that tight black dress clinging to her wet skin. Fox! Anyway, she plays one of those stereo-typical bubblegum popping tomboys that knows more about V-6 torque differential than Versace couture. I must admit the smudge of motor oil on her face isn't very sexy but somehow the fox underneath pokes through and puts on a dazzling performance. If I had directed the movie, I would have made Winona the passen-ger and the other lady the cab-bie. Well, Winona's role only lasts, say, twenty minutes and we come to the end of the first vignette.

Director Jim Jarmush has done something unique with Night On Earth. He has seamed together five short stories. They all take place simultaneously in different cities of the world in taxi cabs. So when we leave the sexy lovely and presumably nubile Winona in Los Angeles, Jarmush turns back the clock to the very minute the first vi-gnette started and dumps us off in a different place. Kind of like Tales From The Crypt, but syn-chronized.

The next stop after "Winonaland" is New York City. The cabbie in this seg-ment is not in the least foxy. He's a Polish immigrant that doesn't know how to drive; he used to be a circus clown (I suppose this could be true see-ing that forty clowns can stuff into any car — you only need one clown in forty to drive). There are some cute scenes be-tween a take-no-shit New Yorker and the ex-commie clown, but then mega-bitch Rosie Perez (Do The Right Thing) gets in and strains your ears with her incessant whin-ing. The story's ending attempts to leave a lump in your throat but falls a little flat.

Paris is where we go for part three and the subtitles start, and this is a super cool story! The cabbie is an African immi-grant (from the Ivory Coast if I remember correctly) and his first passengers are also Afri-cans that take an instant dislik-ing to him. The feelings are mutual, he dumps them off in a real nasty neighborhood and picks up a total goddess. If you ever saw Betty Blue you'll rec-ognize her (she played Betty)-major French babe! Miss Blue plays a blind fox. She could have just sat in the back of the cab smoking and I wouldn't have minded, but the conver-sation between her and her driver is far from dull. Lots of innuendo. I won't tell you all that happens but she looks re-ally good even without pupils.

Then we go to Rome. This story sucked. The cabbie drives around Rome singing to him-self and acting stupid until he picks up a priest. The cab pre-dictably becomes a make-shift confessional for the two. The cabbie rants and raves about his intimate affairs with barn-yard animals. The priest says few more than two words. The cabbie's silly monologue quickly grows tiresome, espe-cially having to read the sub-titles.

At this point in the movie you'll have noticed curious similarities between the vi-gnettes that hint at a common thread. The obvious ones: the Coliseum in Rome and the Olympic Coliseum in L.A., the foxy babe in L.A. and the sexy fox in Paris. Many of the paral-lels are more subtle. I will leave them up to you to notice.

Finally we end up in Helsinki! This is worth the whole movie. No foxes either, just three liquored-up leather-faced Fins and a grieving cab-bie. The cab ride is a duel of sorrows of which you'll feel every word in your gut. I wanted to go to Finland after I saw this. I can't tell you how cool this segment was. Of course, of all the people I've talked to about this story, I'm the only one that even liked the Helsinki bit. I don't know, judge for yourself.

Even if you hate the Helsinki story, you'll find at least two stories among the five you do like. And it's FREE! Go get drunk after the movie, your chances of hooking up are greater in the late hours any-way. And if you really dig Night On Earth, check out other Jarmush films: Mystery Train, Stranger Than Paradise, and Down By Law. If you dig funky experimental films check out Slackers. Oh, yeah, definitely see Betty Blue and Heathers. You gotta see Harem Scarem too; it's got both Elvis and Billy Barty. Can you believe it? If you're too busy to do all this, drop out of school, kill your parents and live off the inheritance for a while, so you have time. A-B-C-ya!

They're Some Jolly Good Fellows

Rachael Fink
Staff Writer

In its third year, the Society of Junior Fellows has become a major fixture in the finance world of Washington College.

Quite a few students re-ceived money from the society and more are applying for funding this year. The curator of the society, Davy McCall, is now accepting applications for membership, which is limited to 40 students.

To be considered for mem-bership into Junior Fellows, a student must be a rising junior or senior, have a cumulative GPA of at least 3.2, be active in student activities (leadership positions are suggested), and participate in extra-curricular activities such as community service.

As a member of Junior Fellows, a student may apply for funding for an internship or research project, as well as volunteer work and research-related travel.

Several students who re-ceived financing for the Spring and Summer of 1992 talked with the ELM about their internship experiences.

Jennifer Del Nero received money to work at the Easter Seal's camp in California. As head counselor of the camp, which is a recreation facility for mentally and physically handicapped children and adults, she was in charge of crisis management, public re-lations and personnel as well as many other things.

Activities at the camp in-cluded horseback riding, arts and crafts, and swimming, which Del Nero says is "liber-ating" for most handicapped. She remarked that working with the disabled is "very hum-bling. It gives you a new per-spective."

Another student who was in California this summer thanks to the Junior Fellows program is Charles Linehan. He worked for a month as an assis-tant gaffer (lighting tech). He was part of the staff to do films for Family Theater Catholic Church in Hollywood.

He and the crew then went on to do a spec film for a per-spective movie. Linehan fin-ished off his summer by work-ing on an HBO feature staring Holly Hunter and Bo Bridges.

Tindy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At Approx. 9pm
FRI 9 & SAT 10 PETE KENNEDY Two new al-bums-Double the fun!! The guitar wiz is better than ever!!
TUES 13 DERRYBERRY AND ALAGIA
SPECIAL APPEARANCE
THURS 15 MIKE GARRIS & DODIE McMILLAN
Country, rock,bluegrass, folk- They do it all!!!

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

FAMILY BOOKNOOK
All "in stock" Books DISCOUNTED!
Hard Cover Books - 15% Off
New Paperback Books - 10% Off
Pre-Read Paperback Books - 50% Off
Discover our Pre-Read Paperbacks, Credit for Your Gently Read Paperbacks - BROWSERS WELCOME!
Washington Square Shopping Center - near Super Fresh

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap T-Neck has seen most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.

10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442
"the patagonia place"
and other wonderful things
NOT TO SCALE
We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

1st Annual Volunteer Fair at Middle School Tomorow

Martha Kimura
Staff Writer

On Saturday, October 10, Kent County will sponsor its first Volunteer Opportunities Fair at Chestertown Middle School from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The fair was designed to provide an opportunity for potential community service volunteers to meet with groups that need people, recognize the volunteers who have already responded to the needs of the community, and create a system by which volunteers can be contacted when their services are needed.

Beryl A. Friel, the Community Service Coordinator, said the fair will broaden the base of Kent County's volunteers. "The students at Washington College have been an important part of the community, and I hope that many of them will come to the Fair and realize how many volunteer opportunities Kent County has."

Many Washington College students already participate in volunteer programs such as Big Brothers and Big Sisters, Target Tutoring, and Hands Out. These groups and many others will be represented at the Fair. There will also be workshops by the Red Cross, in addition to several video presentations.

The Volunteer Opportunities Fair is based on a Governors' Office Program that was started four years ago, and Friel has adapted the fair to the area. "We modelled the fair after the Hands Out program. We are hoping that people will come to us with ideas and plans, and we will be able to give them a list of people who have expressed an interested in volunteering."

Red Ink and Smoking Addressed at October Faculty Meeting

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Professor Steven Cades of the Faculty Finance Committee announced that the College has been hard at work to reduce the current $1.1 million budget deficit. Revenues are up at the Bookstore and the WC Deli, he said.

In addition, the State aid budget cuts, estimated to be $232,000, will instead be $115,000.

"This leaves a significant balance to be reconciled," Cades said.

The plans for further reducing the deficit are as follows:

- A 5 percent across-the-board cut in the general operating budget (not including such funds as Student Activities Fees)
- $50,000 as-yet-unspecified targeted cuts (not to affect academic departments)
- Elimination of $150,000 left in equipment replacement fund

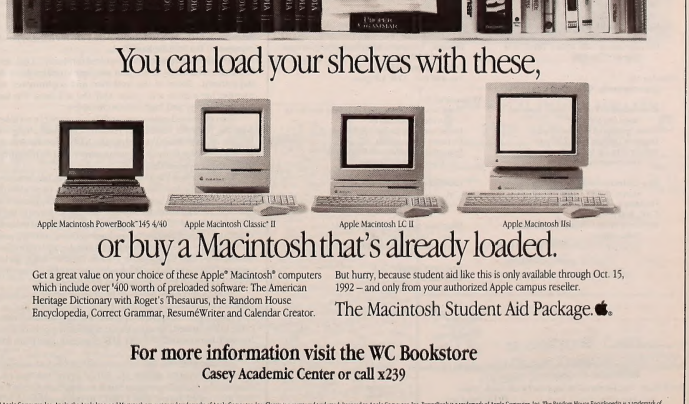
Cades also added that this is a 26-paycheck year (rather than 27, as in some years), which will help. After these reductions, there is a $160,000 gap to be reconciled.

In other business, Dean Gene Wubbels addressed "the intense problem of differential flows between academic majors. Certain departments are vastly oversubscribed for the resources they have, whole certain departments are vastly undersubscribed for the resources they have," he said.

"Each has its own problems," he said. "Do you build on strengths? Do you shore up the areas that need help?"

Wubbels said that "faculty initiatives" are important, such as continued research.

"We need to get some snazzy things going on in some areas of the college that are underpopulated."



One change which Wubbels wants to institute is a more active summer program, "including more student/faculty research (or other comparable activities)," he said.

"Summer programs will never enrich anybody very much, but they will be adequate , so you feel like you're doing something more worth while than painting your house."

Other matters:

- The faculty adopted the new Mission Statement for the College, which will appear in the next ELM.
- Professor Rosemary Ford of the Athletic Committee reported the comparative GPAs of sports-team members and the non-athletes: Male athletes, 2.49; other male students, 2.682; female athletes, 2.877; other fe-

See "Faculty," pg. 8

You can load your shelves with these,

Apple Macintosh PowerBook 145 4/40 | Apple Macintosh Classic II | Apple Macintosh LC II | Apple Macintosh IIsi

or buy a Macintosh that's already loaded.

Get a great value on your choice of these Apple® Macintosh® computers which include over $400 worth of preloaded software: The American Heritage Dictionary with Roget's Thesaurus, the Random House Encyclopedia, Correct Grammar, ResuméWriter and Calendar Creator.

But hurry, because student aid like this is only available through Oct. 15, 1992 – and only from your authorized Apple campus reseller.

The Macintosh Student Aid Package.

For more information visit the WC Bookstore
Casey Academic Center or call x239

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo, and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Classic is a registered trademark licensed to Apple Computer, Inc. PowerBook is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc. The Random House Encyclopedia is a trademark of Random House, Inc. American Heritage Electronic Dictionary, Electronic Thesaurus, and CorrecText® developed by Houghton Mifflin Company, publisher of The American Heritage Dictionary and Roget's II: The New Thesaurus. CorrecText underlying technology developed by Language Systems, Inc. Calendar Creator is a trademark of Power Up Software Corporation. ResuméWriter is a trademark of Bonware Software Company, Inc. All product names are the trademark of their respective holders. Offer good on the Macintosh PowerBook 145 4/40 configuration only.

Week at a Glance
October 9 - 22
No ELM next week -- Happy Fall Break!

Friday 9, Sunday 11-Monday 12
Film Series: Night on Earth
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. †

Friday 9 - Saturday 10
Band: Denise and the Second Offenders
The Village Tavern
High Street, Chestertown
For information call: 778-6413

Friday 9
Concerto Soloists of Philadelphia
Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m.
The Washington College Concert Series †

Dr. Eugene Hamilton, One-man Band
CoffeeHouse, 9:30 p.m.-1:00 a.m. †

Saturday 10
Volunteer Opportunities Fair
Chestertown Middle School
10:00 a.m.-2:00 p.m.
For information call: 778-7403

Folk Singers: John Fahey and Cliff Eberhardt
Church Hill Theatre, 7:30 p.m.
Admission: $17.50
For information call: 778-1331

Dale Adams Heritage Exchange House Party
CoffeeHouse, 9:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m.
Admission: $2.00 WC students, $3.00 non-students

Sunday 11
AIDS Quilt Trip
Departure: 9:00
Sign-up: Health Services, Miller Library, Student Affairs
For information call: Elisa (778) 8758 or Gehrett (778) 8749

Monday 12
Quincentennial Columbus Day

Conservation in Tropical South America: Issues and Solutions
Guest Speaker: Dr. Stuart Strahl
Dunning Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m.
Sponsored by the McLain Program in Environmental Studies †

Afro-Centricity and the American Educational System
Dr. Molefi Asante
CAC, 8:00 p.m.
Sponsored by the Goldstein Program in Public Affairs

Tuesday 13
Internship Coordinator:
Jenifer Woody
East Asian and Pacific Affairs, Department of State
CAC Commons, 4:00 p.m.-5:00 p.m.

The Unalienable Duties of Citizenship: Participation,
The Burden of Finance, and Military Service
Eugene McCarthy
Hynson Lounge, 7:30 p.m. †

Wednesday 14
The Influence of the Art of the Slave Narrative on the Development of the American Literary Canon
Sara Ducksworth
CAC Seminar Room 1, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday 15
Internship Coordinator
Julie Arrighetti
Bureau of Near East and South Asian Affairs, Department of State
CAC Commons, 4:00 p.m.-5:00 p.m.

Rehearsal: College Community Chorus
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

Friday 16
Fall Weekend
No Classes

Sunday 18
William James Forum
The Literary Impact of The Satanic Verses in Egypt
Guest Speaker: Roger Allen
Sophie Kerr Room, 7:30 p.m.

Monday 19
Monday Series: Sh'ir Nan Arabi Wa Farsi Bil Trajummah
Readers: Professors Janet Kestenberg-Amighi and J. Wright
O'Neill Literary House
Tea 4:00 p.m., Talk 4:30 p.m.

Wednesday 21
Two Cultures: Interactions of Science and Policy in the Coastal Ocean
Guest Speaker: Donald F. Boesch
Dunning Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m.
Sponsored by the McLain Program in Environmental Studies

Laurence of Arabia
CAC, 7:30 p.m.
Middle East Week

Hesperus, Spain in the New World
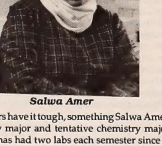
Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m.
The Washington College Concert Series



Snickers Comedy Club
Billy Garan
CoffeeHouse, 8:30 p.m.

† see related article

Renaissance Festival in Annapolis, Maryland will run until October 19.

Art Exhibit: Sue Tessem, The Imperial Hotel, High Street.

Student Profile : Salwa Amer

Salwa Amer

Science majors have it tough, something Salwa Amer, a junior pre-med, biology major and tentative chemistry major, knows personally. She has had two labs each semester since her freshman year. Unlike distribution science courses, the laboratory sections of upper level courses can last as long as six hours. Even then, the lab may not be finished, requiring return visits.

Salwa's schedule this semester again is challenging, including integral calculus and comparative anatomy, courses few students at Washington College willingly take. She almost has completed her major, which requires four semesters of chemistry, two semesters of calculus and two semesters of physics. She already has begun her search for medical schools in the United States.

Despite her busy schedule, Salwa's easy-going personality makes her a natural leader. She is vice-president of the International Relations Club, for which she served as president last year. She is a member of the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange, which encourages multi-cultural interaction, and the Society of the Sciences, which she and Monita Airen are reviving. She also is a member of the Middle East Club.

Her freshman year, Salwa worked for the WC Deli, formerly Ms. Dee's, and in her junior year was employed by the chemistry department. Some of the freshman and sophomores may remember her as their tour guide, a job she still does. She has even tutored biology and high school chemistry.

She conducted cancer research last summer in an internship with the National Institute of Health. This year, along with her RA job on first-floor Wicomico, she has somehow managed to handle working in the computing center and in the admissions office on the weekends.

Though Salwa has a hectic work schedule, her first concern is academics. She has over a 3.0 GPA and has been awarded the George Washington Scholar Scholarship and the Frederick Douglas Award. Fall semester last year, she participated in the Model NATO (National Alliance Treaty Organization) and in the BUILD (Building Understanding in Leadership Development) program, which teaches the skills needed to be a leader and is conducted by instructors from Camp Echo Hill in Fairlee. Last spring, she received two outstanding leadership awards for her involvement in BUILD and in the International Relations Club.

Salwa's successes are more impressive when one learns that Swahili, the official language of her home country, Kenya, is her first language. Along with English, She also knows Arabic. She came to the United States for the educational opportunities and to live with her aunt in Columbia, MD. She graduated from Atholton High School.

An active person, Salwa enjoys exercise and was a member of the WC Crew team during the fall of 1991. She has travelled extensively, including trips to Saudi Arabia, East Africa, England and the United States' East Coast. In the summer of 1991, she completed a hajj, or pilgrimage to Mecca, one of the five pillars of Islam. This summer, she hopes to journey with her family to Egypt.

Ducksworth Criticizes Literary Canon

Conversation in fiction grabs the reader and pulls him into the story. Different speech patterns and rhythms of various ethnic and racial groups have influenced the narrative styles of many authors. For example, the narratives of Toni Morrison and Mark Twain have been related to American slave story-telling.

The Influence of the Art of the Slave Narrative on the Development of the American Literary Canon is the subject of this week's lecture series. Guest speaker, Dr. Sara Ducksworth, professor of English at Kean College in New Jersey, will speak.

Ducksworth has a great grasp of English Literature. She graduated valedictorian from Tougaloo College in 1965 with a B.A. in English. She received her Master of Arts in 1979 from Montclair State University in New Jersey and her Doctorate in English Education from Rutgers University in New Brunswick.

A teacher with over twenty years' experience, Ducksworth taught in the New York City Public School System until 1982. Since then, she has worked at several colleges, including Montclair State University, Rutgers University at New Brunswick, and Middlesex County College.

Ducksworth will speak in CAC Seminar Room 1 at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, October 14.

Stahl Talks on Mammals and Birds of South America

Emily Moser
Staff Writer

The McLain Program, established to promote and encourage environmental studies, in the past has had speakers such as David Archambault, Director of the American Indian College Fund, discuss the connection between native Americans and nature. Other notable speakers, such as Edward Hoglan, have lectured as well.

Once again, the program is presenting a timely lecture, entitled Conservation in Tropical South America: Issues and Solutions. Dr. Stuart Strahl will speak.

Strahl, a graduate of Bates College, received his doctorate in tropical ecology from New York State University at Albany. He has spent five years in South America, working in bird and mammal zoology and conservation. His first-person experience should bring an element of urgency to the seemingly distant, yet immediate global dilemma.

Currently the Executive Director of the nearby Pickering Creek Environmental Center, Strahl also works as Adjunct Conservation Scientist for Wildlife Conservation International. His lecture will be Monday, October 12 in Dunning Lecture Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Concert Series Premier

Tired of the same old, boring Friday night? The concert series has come to the rescue, bringing talented performers from around the world to the small town of Chestertown.

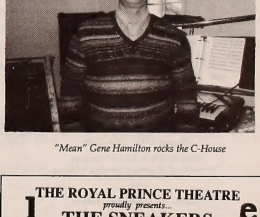
The first concert will feature the Concerto Soloists Chamber Orchestra of Philadelphia. First appearing under the baton of music director and conductor Marc Mostovoy, their structure is modeled after the orchestras of Bach and Mozart. They specialize in a wide range of Baroque and Classical music. The ensemble also seeks out worthy but lesser known compositions of the 19th and 20th centuries and each year premieres works by contemporary American composers.

Extremely talented, the musicians excel in both solo and ensemble performance, alternating between starring and supporting roles during the concert.

Be sure not to miss the Concerto Soloists of Philadelphia, hailed by The New York Times as "... the most impressive small ensemble to come through Carnegie hall in quite some time," on Friday, October 9 at 8:00 p.m in Tawes Theatre.

Dr. Hamilton Gets Down

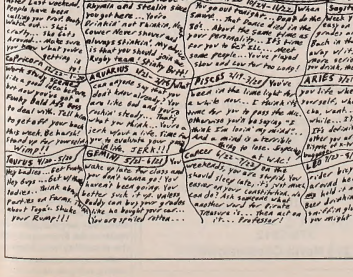
Dr. Eugene Hamilton is not your everyday mathematics and computer science professor. He has played the piano since age twelve and later worked professionally as an organist. However, since the late 1970s, Hamilton has begun a collection of musical equipment that has enabled him to become a one-man band.



An elaborate act that includes eight synthesizers, a drum machine, computers, sequencers, a digital delay, a compressor, a noise gate and a feedback eliminator, Hamilton's repertoire features 400 songs including classic rock, reggae, jazz and country.

The most impressive aspect of his show is his ability to sing in four-part harmony with himself. As his voice enters the microphone, his equipment is able to replicate each note at different pitches.

Hamilton first played the Coffeehouse with a much simpler version of his music system. Since then, his system has grown, allowing him to perform at weddings and various hotels and bars, including Holiday Inn in Crownsville, MD and The Village Tavern and Newt's in Chestertown.



His set-up this Friday will feature his new PA system. The sound is better than compact disc quality and the bass literally vibrates the floor.

Get to know a different side of a WC professor tonight from 9:30 p.m.-1 a.m.

"Mean" Gene Hamilton rocks the C-House

Photo by Constance Hamilton

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
THE SNEAKERS
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown
gallery 5Q
Mon. - Sat
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
236 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

Econ Department Evaluation

J. Tarin Towers
Editor in Chief

In light of the emphasis given to the departments currently under evaluation by the external review process, the ELM spoke with the chairs of the three departments which have undergone the process: Psychology, Economics, and Mathematics & Computer Science. The Economics results are the second in a series of three articles on the departments that were reviewed last year. The Psychology results will appear in an upcoming issue of the ELM.

Economics was the first department at Washington College to undergo the external review process instituted by President Charles H. Trout as a means of self-improvement at the college.

In the Spring of 1991, a team of two economists was selected by the department and the administration to evaluate the program.

Michael Bradley of the University of Maryland at Baltimore had done a similar evaluation at Colgate, and President Trout recommended him to Chair Davy McCall. John Cumberland of the University of Maryland at College Park was well known to McCall as one of the founders of the branch of environmental economics. (Cumberland taught a course in this field at WC last spring).

"We didn't have too much time to organize it," said McCall, as they were the first department involved in the process, which was still being formulated.

Professor Michael Malone was leaving for Ghana, and McCall was departing in June, so they went ahead with the review as soon as they could, so that it would be completed in time for the end of the academic year.

"One of the things that was to be addressed was that I am retiring," said McCall. "I was supposed to retire in the spring of last year, and we wanted to talk about that."

The team recommended that the department undertake a national search for a chair. "Michael Bailey is unable to chair the department for medical reasons, and Michael Malone is of course being considered, but they recommended we do a national search."

A similar suggestion was for a large "PR" effort, to make the department well-known in and outside of the college. A brochure, similar to that put out by other departments, will be developed for use by Admissions. "We also want to try to get some name speakers," said McCall.

Other changes in the department include participation in the fledgling Chesapeake Bay Studies program, which had not been an available option at the time of the review.

The review was fruitful for the department, and McCall added there were many other issues addressed by the committee's report which are being instituted.

"I thought these were positive suggestions," said McCall, "and it was very useful to talk over some of these things with the outside people, for example, the International Economics course has been called too easy for Econ majors and too hard for International Studies Majors.

"The Economics Department is a major service department to Political Science and Business Majors. We don't usually have a large number of majors, but they tend to be good students."

In this regard, the report of the external review team will benefit not only the Economics Department, but other related programs.

From "Allen," pg. 3

troverted, parties are often unappealing. Another sophomore attends sports events for recreation, goes home every other weekend, and uses her extra time to get ahead in her classes. People ask her, "How do you get all your work done?" and she just smiles. Weekend nights are also great for non-drinking writers, artists, and musicians, because we can use the hours to write, paint, and practice. Usually none of our friends come by to disturb us during that time, because they're all out getting smashed or pleasantly inebriated.

One junior says she often watches movies with one or two other friends on Friday and Saturday nights, and organizes her own social gatherings during times that drinking is not expected—non-peak party hours such as weeknights or during weekend days. She tries to find things to do to fill her weekend nights so that she doesn't have to say to people, "I'm not going with you because I don't drink." This way she can avoid the parties she doesn't want to go to, and still gets to see her friends.

This student, who is allergic to alcohol and is "scared to death" of what will happen if she is given some by accident, has the trick of bringing her own drinks with her when she does go to parties—Sundance Fruit Coolers look very much like wine coolers when one hides the label with one's hand. This is also a good way to avoid being hassled.

When asked to give advice to other non-drinkers most people say that if you don't think you want to drink, make a conscious decision not to, and hold yourself to it. Don't be wishy-washy. If you're not absolutely sure whether or not you want to drink, someone will probably push you into doing so. One student said, "If you can't answer for yourself, then someone else on our campus will answer for you."

But remember that most people won't mind that you don't drink, as long as you don't pass judgement on them for drinking. And it often is fun to be around people who are drunk, because they're usually relaxed and amusing.

And to those who do drink: don't hassle non-drinkers, or try to make them drink when they don't want to. Be open-minded. As one student says, "I'm not going to judge you for drinking, so don't judge me for not drinking." She adds that it would be nice if sodas were offered more often at parties, as sometimes alcohol is forced on people just because there's nothing else in the room to drink.

Most of all, remember "Non-drinkers are the ones who the majority of the time drive you home, clean up your puke, are the good friend and the voice of reason..." who will tell you "Uh, buddy, you're engaged to Maria. So...maybe you really shouldn't sleep with that Muffy-chick who is probably wearing a venereal disease under her short-short-short cut-offs?" Treasure your non-drinking friends. They might save you from doing stupid things someday.

There aren't that many non-drinkers on this campus, but we do exist, so respect our decision to stay sober. There are a few of us here who have found that, although it's sometimes difficult, it is possible to not drink and still have a life at Washington College. (Really.)

From "Faculty," pg. 5

male students, 2,921.

- Dean Maureen Kelley McIntire of the Fringe Benefits committee reports that the committee has been asked to look into a campus-wide policy on smoking.
- Dean Wubbels of the Academic Affairs Committee named several items currently being examined: the independent study program, senior obligations, the four-course plan, the possibility of a common freshman-year course, and the writing comment.

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal Electrologist – Louise Leaverton, L.E.

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

$5 off any service over $20 with ad (one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2686 Chestertown, MD 21620

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

From "Koon," pg. 3

of the capitalist class are by definition at odds with those of the working class. Last week's Washington Post National Weekly Edition reported that the Clinton campaign has published a list of 400 executives who publicly support Clinton. This is a clear example of how the Clinton camp is attempting to reassure the capitalist class that they are going to implement whatever practices capitalist interests advocate.

As the list of pro-Clinton executives illustrates, Clinton's campaign has been successful in this effort. It is certain that many elements within the capitalist class are sick of divided government and also feel betrayed by Bush, who they may perceive as having failed in his efforts to promote economic growth. These capitalists hope that the Clinton presidency will somehow address the national debt and increase consumer spending.

These capitalists realize that cuts in military spending and increases in taxes will be necessary to do this. Bourgeois economists assert that government borrowing reduces the supply of capital and therefore reduces the amount of capital available to stimulate economic growth. What they fail to understand, however, is that this artificial reduction in the supply of capital has been necessary to shore up an insufficient demand for capital. This insufficient demand for capital is a result of the fact that a mature capitalist economy grows at a slower rate than a developing one.

American capitalism today grows more slowly than it did in the recent past. This is because the infrastructure has already been expanded to serve the basic needs of most Americans. This is the source of the contradiction that a huge amount of financial capital has been accumulated for which there is no profitable market. The slow rate of growth is intrinsic to the process of accumulation and is not a result of the public sector "crowding" the private sector out of the capital market.

This becomes evident when one observes that although interest rates have been lowered dramatically, consumers are not increasing their spending, and therefore, the main economic engine of the mature capitalist economy finds itself without fuel. Debt levels are too high to support any more demand by consumers, and both private industry and the public sector are in a similar situation. There is only one way to increase consumption at this point, and that is to increase the real income of the majority of Americans.

This (along with the high likelihood of victory in November) is why more businessmen are beginning to support Clinton. They realize that the concentration of wealth in America has grown to an extreme, and they are willing to decrease this concentration in order to promote economic growth and stability. They are willing to support more progressive taxation to achieve this end, and they believe that reducing military spending will result in a corresponding reduction in the national debt. They further believe that the decrease in borrowing in the public sector will stimulate the economy by freeing up capital for the productive sector of the economy.

This will not happen. What will happen instead is that industry and individuals will remain reluctant to borrow. Consumer spending and housing starts will remain low. Unemployment will actually increase as businesses tighten their belts further. This will correspondingly reduce real income, and this will reduce consumption, and the whole cycle will continue.

There is only one way to strengthen the American economy under capitalism, and that is to provide massive aid to the Un-Ion of Soviet Socialist Republics. This will solve the problems posed by low demand for capital and goods by providing rapidly expanding markets for both. The same is true of the developing countries in Asia, Africa, and Latin America, but the Republics have a short term advantage in that they already have the prerequisites for rapid economic growth; all they lack is the capital. This would prove very beneficial to American capitalism. But the American government is far too short sighted to take this approach.

Neither Bill Clinton's plan of tax increases for the wealthy and tax decreases for average Americans nor George Bush's plan to provide tax credits to first time home purchasers will succeed in preventing the current economic difficulties from broadening into a full-scale disaster. This is why I feel comfortable voting for Clinton; although I disagree strongly with his attempts to strengthen the capitalist economy, I realize he will be unsuccessful. Ultimately, I am voting for him on humanistic grounds, and because like most Americans, I am sick and tired of the past twelve years of naked fascism.

From "McCarthy," pg. 1

bent in 1958.

He gained national attention in 1960 with his speech for Adlai Stevenson and then campaigned vigorously for Kennedy following JFK's nomination. In the Senate, he voted for school aid, medical care for the aged, and other social reforms of the Kennedy Administration. His most sustained efforts were in the areas of unemployment and migrant farm worker legislation.

A member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he also was an early advocate of closer congressional oversight of U.S. intelligence agencies.

He retired from the Senate in January 1971. In 1976 and again in the spring of 1992 he ran as an independent presidential candidate.

McCarthy, 76, is the author of several books, including The Limits of Power (1967), The Year of the People (1969), The Hard Years (1975), and his memoirs, Up 'Til Now (1987). His visit to Chestertown is sponsored by the Louis L. Goldstein Program in Public Affairs and is open the public.

—courtesy of Washington College News Bureau

Closer to home, the Junior Fellows program helped to fund Nancy Whiteman's internship at the ALCU office in Delaware. Whiteman commented that working for the ACLU was great preparation for law school. She spent most of her summer in the law library researching cases, and gathering information on issues of concern to the ACLU.

She worked for the ACLU from June through August and plans to continue working for them during holidays and vacations.

Another student who held an internship position, but of an entirely different nature, is Samantha Clements. Clements was in Atlanta at Georgia Tech doing an internship in analytical chemistry. She worked with Professor R. F. Browner and a graduate student, Matt Tarr.

Clements also co-authored an article to be published in the spring by a major experimental chemistry magazine.

Eligible students for membership in the Society of Junior Fellows should contact the Department Chair of their major. Applications to be considered for the Fall 1992 term should be submitted to Davy McCall by October 15.

JBK's SERVISTAR® HARDWARE

WE CARRY A FULL SELECTION OF ART SUPPLIES

JBK's SERVISTAR HARDWARE
Kent Plaza
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-9600
M-Th: 8-7;Fri:8-8;
Sat: 8-6; Sun:9:30-4

BRING THIS AD IN AND RECIEVE 20% OFF YOUR ART SUPPLY PURCHASE

Soccer Goes 1-7-1

Jason Ronstadt
Staff Writer

There are a wealth of negative words a fan can use to describe a team when he or she is disappointed with the results of a game. In the case of the Shoremen Soccer squad last Saturday, "Heartless" was definitely "Not" one of them. On Homecoming day last weekend a large number of students and alumni turned out to see the Shoremen fight and scrap their way through a game against old rival Swarthmore. The play was fast and physical, forcing the referee to hand out three yellow cards in a contest which was about as evenly matched as the toss of a coin.

Washington's defense, anchored by players like Tad George, Shawn "Colonel" Clink, Gibby Semmes, and Co-Captain Charlie "Love" Linehan, pulled together allowing few easy scoring opportunities on goal. The Shoremen Defense was strong, but the Swarthmore attack proved to be like a patient assassin, firing two hard shots in the net when the opportunities finally arose.

Meanwhile at the other end of the field the Shoremen offense ran into a pesky opposing defense which stifled all of the home team's attempts to score. Said forward Rory "God to all Greeks" Conway of the team's troubles in the offensive third of the field, "We built up our offense really well all day long. We just had trouble capitalizing on the opportunities we made for ourselves."

When the final whistle blew the result was a 2-0 loss in the team's first MAC Sectional contest. The next sectional match pits the Shoremen against Ursinus, but immediately on the horizon awaits Western Maryland. Coverage of this game, and possibly even more, next time you read the ELM! (Ha, Ha Ronstadt)

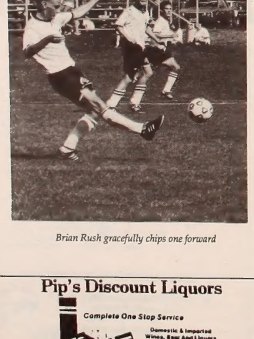

Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

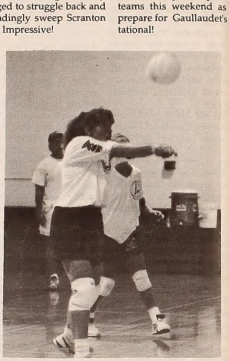
Brian Rush gracefully chips one forward

Volleyball Grabs 3rd Place



Tyler McCarthy
Staff Writer

Washington College Volleyball came a notch closer to .500 this week, but not before dropping a heartbreaker to Swarthmore. Traveling to Pennsylvania for the showdown, they came out displaying aggression on both the offensive and defensive sides of the net. Yet, even with Beverly Diaz and Julie Dill showing great leadership, the young squad couldn't quite hold on, losing in three straight games. This loss brought their record to 4-10.

The real action, however, came last weekend at the third annual Washington College Invitational. After rebounding from the tough loss to Swarthmore, and following almost a week of preparation, the Sho'women geared up for their five upcoming matches of the tournament. The first two contests came on Friday evening against Haverford and Scranton, while the remaining three against Wilmington, Gaullaudet, and Salisbury State were completed on Saturday. The team played well against all their competitors as they came away with a third place finish, moving their overall record to 8-11.

Right from the outset the action was outstanding with the highlight of the weekend being the Scranton-WC match-up Friday night. With WC down 14-3 in the third game, they managed to struggle back and resoundingly sweep Scranton 16-14. Impressive!

The Sho'women travel away to face Johns Hopkins past Tuesday which, due faulty equipment, had to be scheduled. They will, ho ever, meet up with quite a fe teams this weekend as th prepare for Gaullaudet's in tational!

Courtney Myers concentrates on her bump attempt

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred

A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Janie Thomason
(301) 778-0898

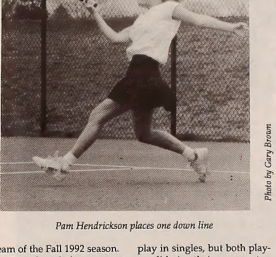
Olde Towne Barbers
Flat Tops — French Braids
Frostings — Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

Pip's Discount Liquors
Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER – CHILLED WINES
Quantity Discounts Below Our Regular Low Prices
TELEPHONE 778-6126
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA CHESTERTOWN

Another Time II
Fine Furniture, Collectibles & Antiques
•housewares, lamps & decor•
10 percent discount with College ID
819 High Street Extended
Chestertown
778-6525

Second to none.
SECOND NATIONAL Federal Savings BANK
Over $1.6 Billion in Assets
FDIC Insured
503 WASHINGTON AVENUE
P.O.BOX 577
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
410-778-1013
OPEN 6 DAYS A WEEK FOR YOUR BANKING CONVENIENCE
EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

Tennis Plays Rolex Tourney



Lizzy O'Hara
Staff Writer

The Washington College Tennis teams did not gain any overall victories in their openers for the season, but there was individual improvement and great potential was quite evident in the performances of both the teams.

Last Tuesday, the Women's Shoremen Team opened their season to a loss to Salisbury here at Washington College. The top three players, Pam Hendrickson, Jen Sloan and Diana Prettyman were all victorious. Hendrickson and Sloan were also victorious in the doubles. While the number two and three doubles could not claim the same, they did show potential and a great amount of desire to win.

This past weekend, the women went south to participate in the Rolex Regional Invitational Tournament held at Mary Washington College in Virginia. Pam Hendrickson, seeded second, made it to the semi-finals and Diana Prettyman, who "played an incredible tournament," according to Jen Sloan, made it to the quarter-finals. Tina Lennon and Jen Sloan both lost in the first round of singles action, but went on to gain a round each in consolation play. Pam and Jen, who were seeded second for the doubles round, cleaned up the consolation bracket by winning three more matches after a three set loss in the second match of play in the first round. Jen Sloan was quoted as saying, "Pam and I haven't played together long, and I was very happy about the consolation round and the way Pam and I were able to work together."

The Rolex Regional Invitational at Washington and Lee was the scene for the first round of play for the Shoremen Men's Team of the Fall 1992 season.

Pam Hendrickson places one down line

Photo by Gary Brown

Even though there was not an overall victory for the Shoremen, there was a great amount of effort put in by all the players, especially the top two players, Emilio Bogado and Trevor Hurd. Hurd, who was seeded first in the tournament, made it to the semi-finals. Emilio Bogado, seeded fifth in the tournament, swung his way into the quarter-finals. Together, this first seeded team made it to the semi-finals in the doubles competition. Deepak Raja and Carlos Nuno did not make it past the first round of play in singles, but both players did give their opponents a run for their money as doubles partners.

Judging by the results both teams posted in the team's respective tournaments, Washington's opponents are in for a long spring campaign.

Field Hockey Loses MAC Bout

Reneé Guckert
Staff Writer

Last Thursday, the Washington College field hockey team suffered their second MAC loss to Swarthmore College 4-3. Liz Olivere scored the Shorewomen's first goal of the game off a cross from the right by Marie Mohler with 18:35 remaining in the first half. Swarthmore's leading scorer Melissa Bonder, however, retaliated unassisted approximately four minutes later. The score remained tied 1-1 at the end of the first half, but it was clear that the Shorewomen dominated, keeping the ball in their offensive territory and outshooting their opponents.

As the second half got under way, Washington's squad let up on their transitions from attack to defense, allowing Swarthmore to pull ahead by two goals. With 29:58 remaining in the game, Kate Jones scored for Swarthmore, followed again by Melissa Bonder at 19:38. But the Shorewomen had not given up hope. Following a heated time out called by Washington soon after Swarthmore's third goal, WAC got fired up and scored not once, but twice in the course of fifteen minutes. Liz Olivere rushed the cage once again to score her second goal of the game and assisted yet another goal belonging to freshman Jill Schultz. The game was then tied at 3-3.

Liz Olivere "juices" a defender

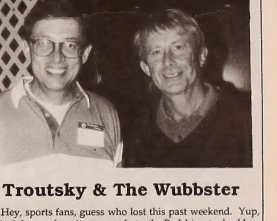


Photo by Sarah Fyerberm

Feeling as though victory was in their grasp, Washington let down their guard. With 1:38 left to play, Melissa Bonder fired at the cage once again, this time off a fast break down the field, ultimately giving Swarthmore a 4-3 win over the Shorewomen. Although Washington outshot Swarthmore 43-22, WC was unable to push their aggression to a high enough level to capture the victory.

The Shorewomen travel to Randolph Macon College this weekend, and the results of that game, in addition to the game against Haverford, will be covered in next week's issue. The Shorewomen do, however, take on rival Johns Hopkins University here at the WAC this Wednesday at 4:00 p.m. So be there and don't miss any of the action!!

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

Troutsky & The Wubbster

Hey, sports fans, guess who lost this past weekend. Yup, that's right, our favorite team to hate, the Redskins, took a blow from the oh-so-powerful Phoenix Cardinals on Sunday afternoon. Oooooo, IN YER FACE! And don't worry, we already know about the Dallas game.

But seriously now folks, it's time for the real athletes of the week. With the help of our crack Newt's POW staff, particularly Pat Trams in the Alumni office, we were able to come up with something, our oldest and most unique Newt's POWs ever. These would be President Chuck Trout, member of the PGA (Presidential Golf Advocates) and Dean Gene "The Wubbster" Wubbels, who played 18 holes last Friday in the 3rd annual Alumni & Friends Golf Tourney. The president was quoted as saying, "It's a tough job, but somebody's got to do it." Their good sportsmanship at the tourney helped raise alumni spirits and $2,400 to benefit the endowment of the Benjamin A. Johnson Lifetime Fitness Center. The president's and the dean's collective handicap is the 1992-93 Financial Aid deficit. These gentlemen might be well advised to heed the sage counsel of Bill Williams.

Soccer Falls To Swarthmore, 2-0

See Article, pg. 10

ICE HOCKEY CLUB BEGINS! CONTACT DAVE EXT. 8832

WC • ELM

Sports

Women's Soccer Ties St. John's in Season Opener 2-2

Field Hockey Loses in Closing Minute

See Article, pg. 11

#7 Peggy Bowman, a member of the class of '95, pushes one down field. Coming to us from Kent County High, she has been a tremendous force in the back field for this year's Field Hockey squad. And with two more years of eligibility still in front of her she should become one of W.C.'s premier defenders.

Photo by Sarah Fourtherm

Scores

Men's Soccer
Washington 0
Swarthmore 2

Field Hockey
Washington 3
Swarthmore 4

Volleyball
Washington 3-2
W.C. Invitational

Rugby
Washington 7
Salisbury St. 20

On Deck

Men's Soccer
Ursinus
Tue., Oct. 13
4 p.m.

Field Hockey
Johns Hopkins
Wed., Oct. 14
4 p.m.

Volleyball
W. Maryland
Wed., Oct. 14
7 p.m.

Women's Soccer
Villa Julie
Tomorrow 1:30

Trout & Wubbles: Newt's Players of the Week

Tennis Competes Down South

See Article, pg. 11

THIS ISSUE IS DEDICATED TO THE MEMORY OF ED.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

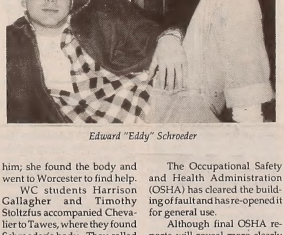
Weekend Weather
Friday: sunny & pleasant H 65, light winds
Weekend: excellent fall weather ; H mid-60s, L 40s sunny & breezy

Volume 64, Number Eight • October 23, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Schroeder Killed During Fall Break

Accidental death attributed to faulty electrical cord

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief



Senior Edward A. Schroeder, 22, of South Salem, New York, died Friday night in a fatal accident on the second catwalk in Tawes Theatre. Chestertown Police have determined that Schroeder's death was accidental.

Apparently, Schroeder had been working on a chandelier to be used in his senior drama thesis, a production of his own play, Bagels From the Lower East Side.

An article in the Baltimore Sun yesterday indicated that it was unclear if Schroeder was an employee of the college and that the incident may have been work-related. They continue by incorrectly stating that Schroeder's 'unpaid' drama work did not include wiring.

Schroeder was employed by the Drama Department as Lighting Assistant; however, the work he was doing on Friday was personal and not work-related. Schroeder had been working with lights for years and had re-wired instruments before.

Doreen Chevalier, also a resident of South Salem, was Schroeder's girlfriend, and was residing in Chestertown until early this week. She went to the theatre to find him when he was late for a planned date. She was alarmed when he would not respond to her calling him; she found the body and went to Worcester to find help.

Edward "Eddy" Schroeder

WC students Harrison Gallagher and Timothy Stoltzfus accompanied Chevalier to Tawes, where they found Schroeder's body. They called 911 at approximately 10:45 p.m. and Chestertown Police and WC Security both responded to the call. Schroeder was pronounced dead at 11:00 p.m., possibly of electrocution.

The autopsy report had not been released at press time.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has cleared the building of fault and has re-opened it for general use.

Although final OSHA reports will reveal more clearly the exact nature of the accident, the general circumstances have been informally released, and the piece of equipment appears to have caused the accident.

The chain of the chandelier was wrapped around the catwalk guard rail to take up slack, and the cord was also wrapped a few times around the railing. The power cord is speculated to be the cause of the accident. It appears faulty and was also spliced to a piece of cording that would enable the lamp to be plugged into the 'twist-lock' circuitry of the catwalk. The catwalk was apparently electrified when Schroeder plugged it into the socket.

Funeral services were held in Ridgefield, CT on Wednesday. Schroeder's family has asked that in lieu of flowers, donations be sent to his high school where a drama scholarship fund has been set up in his name. There is a strong possibility that a similar fund will be set up at Washington College.

Classes will be canceled on Monday at 2:30 p.m. so that all students and faculty can attend a memorial service at Martha Washington Square (in front of the CAC).

Roderick, SGA Address Security Issues

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Security issues and the new alcohol policy were at the top of the SGA's agenda last week. The Resident Assistant staff was requested to attend the October 13 Student Government Association meeting to discuss these two issues which affect all resident students. The alcohol policy is discussed on page 5.

In light of several recent violent incidents on campus, Jerry Roderick was asked to address dorm senators and RAs to discuss campus security issues.

"The responsibility of the security department is to enhance campus security," said Roderick. We all have the responsibility for our own security, and we need everybody's participation." Roderick stressed the need for cooperation between dorm residents, both with each other and with

See "Security," page 9

The Connells are Coming

The Connells

Recently exploding from the Raleigh, North Carolina alternative-rock scene where they formed in 1984, The Connells have captured the attention of the music industry.

The Connells came to life when guitarist Mike Connell and his bass-playing brother decided to begin a band. Eight years later, the group now features Peele Wimberley, the highly-acclaimed drummer for the popular Raleigh punk band, Johnny Quest, as well as lead-singer Doug MacMillan and guitarist, keyboardist, and back-up vocalist George Huntley.

The band's unique style grabs people's attention. As Stereo Review describes them, "The Connells ... mumble more

See "Connells," page 9

Inside

Fred Wyman Attacks Athletic Department, page 4.

WC Student and KCHS Student Involved in Auto Accident, page 5.

College Adopts New Mission Statement, page 5.

WC Alcohol Policy, page 5.

Psychology Review Indicates Need for Changes, page 8.

Bagels and da Blues

That article you see on the front page is the hardest thing I have ever written. I would rather have written thirty art history papers and taken them all to the Writing Lab than have had to write that piece.

How can I be objective about a man who most people remember as Eddy?

I can't be objective in real-time, and so this is my tribute to Ed. Second semester my freshman year, living with lots 'o' drama majors on second floor Caroline, the first gossip I heard when I returned from break was, "Guess who's back?" "Who?" "ED." "Who's Ed," I innocently asked. "You'll find out," they said, and they were right. I found a friend, a guy who was one of the nicest, most dedicated, weirdest, funniest people I have ever met.

I have been involved in some way in every WC drama production since I've been here, even if it was only at Strike (taking down the set). What you hear about the Drama Department is probably only true in the one basic, most important way: It is a family.

People ask me if I knew Ed. I just look at them. What can I say? Of course I knew Ed, everyone knew Ed. You saw him in a play or you had a class with him or you played Rec Softball with him or you saw him sitting at the back table in the dining hall with forks sticking out of his hat . . . Perhaps I'm just a second cousin to the drama family. But that doesn't mean I miss him any less. . .

I always picture Ed in a long blond wig and dark sunglasses. I assistant-stage-managed the Pirandello One-Acts my freshman year, and that production was the birth of the "World's Most Dangerous Sound Crew." Ed had crazy tie night, and crazy wig night, and crazy hat night. . . Ed always wore something. Especially accents. Italian mobster and old Jewish man were his favorites. I'm not sure if the bagels came first or the accents.

How do I describe Ed to someone who didn't know him? Yeah, he was a great guy. He had a funny laugh and wore wigs a lot. He was really into the theatre. He always stood behind the bar at cast parties, ready with a beer and a big smile for you. As Drama Prof Dale Daigle said the other night, "You can't help but smile when you think of Eddy."

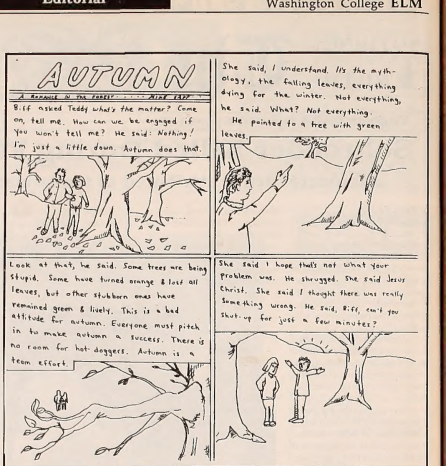
I think of Ed wearing sweatpants rolled up to his knees, that wig again, and talking in a Robin Williams-esque little baby voice, running on stage carrying a little plastic duck. "Pippin!" he squawks. "Pippin!"

I think of Ed dancing when he thought no one was looking, and smiling when he knew they were. I think of Ed walking into the Green Room during those horribly female conversations we drama-types were always having about sex, he'd walk in as if on cue to hear "Penis!" or something. "DOH!" he'd say, and run out faster than he could tapdance.

Ed told Dale once that if he died, he didn't want anyone to be sad, he wanted to them to throw a big party, with lots of bagels. A bagel party. So we're having a bagel party. Saturday. Wear a hat. Wear a wig. Wear an accent.

But most important, wear a smile. Because that's why we miss Ed.

STRIKE IS OVER



I hope there's bagels in heaven, Ed.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddiah
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Joes
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Opinion, Features, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 9 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over QuickMail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8346.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

To the Editor:

I am writing in an attempt to express to you the feelings I felt as I left your campus on the weekend of October third. I left with a very dismal view of your school. On Saturday night I went to a "farm party" at which students left on a rented bus to return to campus. On this bus ride I was appalled to hear a student yell at the African-American bus driver: "Get this jungle music off — CHIMP!" Never in my life have I seen or heard such behavior and words cannot begin to express the anger I continue to feel toward such a hate-filled act. I was embarrassed to be on the bus, embarrassed to be a part of the group, and embarrassed to be white.

To the young man who made the comment: you are disgusting and you are grossly ignorant. I cannot even feel sorry for you as you are certainly old enough and educated enough to know better. There is no excuse for you, your feelings, or your actions.

To the students who did nothing to dissuade their peer: you are to blame as well. Ignoring such actions will only add to the strength of such racist sentiments. By not expressing your disapproval it seems that the views of one student reflect the views of the entire student body, and I refuse to believe that this could be the case.

To me, such a statement is intolerable. If a student has the right to make statements like this, then you are more than correct to attack him for it. Had I known which young man had made the comment, I would have told him then what I have told him in this letter. I think that he and students like him have a hell of a lot to learn about a race which they will share this planet with for the rest of their lives. I cannot convince a racist that racism is wrong in this letter, that person's ignorance runs too deep to be countered in just a few lines. It is the responsibility of the rest of the student body to create an intelligent, open-minded climate where racism is not accepted.

This horrible act would never have occurred at my school, and it certainly would NEVER have been tolerated.

Your education extends way beyond the classroom. You are wasting money and years of your life if you allow this to continue. It is entirely in your control, and I hope that measures are taken to change it. My views are my own and do not reflect the views of anyone else. I will not impose them on you, but I felt it necessary to tell you how upset I have been by what I saw at your school.

Tracy Stoer
Hamilton College
Clinton, New York

To the Editor:

We are two non-drinking WC freshmen who would like to thank you for the article by Tanya Allen. However, we had a problem with the article's suggestion that non-drinkers "pretend" to drink ("Sundance Fruit Coolers look very much like wine coolers when one hides the label with one's hand."). Our basic idea is that if someone is unwilling to accept the fact that you don't drink, FUCK 'EM, they aren't worth your time. By the time a person reaches college, they should be secure enough in their identity not to have to conform to another's idea of a good time. Perhaps, instead of behaving like clones and drinking to fit in, these people should attempt to be different (horrors upon horrors) by being themselves. It isn't the worst thing in the world not to fit in ... in fact, in some cases it's a hell of a lot better.

Mary Saverino and Angela Williams
Freshmen

See Fred Wyman's letter, page 4

Next Week: Election Special

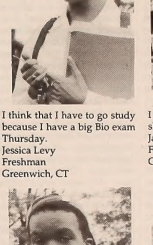
Crisis

Scott Ross Koon

Before I begin the political part of this week's column, I would like to offer my most sincere condolences to the family of Ed Schroeder. Many people in the community here had warm feelings for Ed, and the injustice of his sudden death has stunned and saddened everyone who had the pleasure of knowing him. We will all miss Ed's boyish smile, his off-beat sense of humor and his genuine concern for the feelings of others. Ed seemed to desire to be well loved by all and to make people happy. He succeeded on both counts, and I know that my life was a bit more mirthful and joyous during the time I knew him. Because he died so young, we will never know if Ed would have achieved the kind of greatness which preserves individuals in the memory of history forever. But Ed was great in at least one respect, and that is that he was unmarred by the pettiness and spitefulness which blemishes most people.

If there can be any consolation in the face of such tragedy, we should take it in the fact that Ed died in the theater, doing what he loved to do, and in that at least he did not suffer. He will be long remembered for his good humor, his kindness, and his innocence. All who knew him grieve, and as we grieve, we should also express our heartfelt sympathy to Ed's family whose sense of loss must be immeasurable.

Everyone has by now seen all the signs and bumper stickers regarding question six on the Maryland ballot. If approved by a majority of Maryland's voters, question six will ensure that abortion remains legal in Maryland if Roe vs. Wade is overturned by the Supreme Court. It also will require parental notification by minors before an abortion.

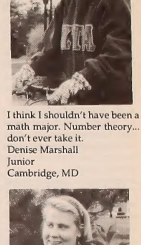


Question six stinks to high heaven. It is an unacceptable compromise which imposes restrictions on abortion which the "right to life" groups could never get passed in Annapolis. Yes, it will ensure that women 18 and older will have reproductive freedom but only at the expense of those under 18.

Moreover, it is unnecessary. Bill Clinton will win the presidency in November, and this means that the Freedom of Choice Act will be passed, and Bill Clinton will sign it into law. This will protect women of all ages from the fascist jurists in Washington. The Supreme Court, bound by its ideology of judicial restraint, will be unable to rule this law as unconstitutional. The only result of overturning Roe would be to turn the abortion issue over to the states. In the context of a federal law, however, the Benquist court's hands would be tied by its own precedents. The only way to protect reproductive freedom for all of Maryland's women is to vote no to question six and to vote yes to Bill Clinton.

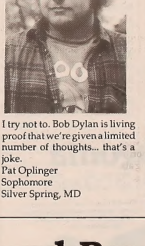
CAMPUS VOICES

By Dude

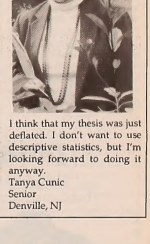


What do you think?

I think that I have to go study because I have a big Bio exam Thursday.
Jessica Levy
Freshman
Greenwich, CT



I think it's cold. I'm wearing shorts.
Janet Hutzel
Freshman
Grantsville, MD



I think I shouldn't have been a math major. Number theory... don't ever take it.
Denise Marshall
Junior
Cambridge, MD

I think midterms are a bad idea, considering I'm a freshman, and they take my grades. I think it's kind of unfair. It's more of a high school procedure.
Steven Dashiell
Freshman
Easton, MD

I try not to. Bob Dylan is living proof that we're given a limited number of thoughts... that's a joke.
Pat Oplinger
Sophomore
Silver Spring, MD

I think that my thesis was just deflated. I don't want to use descriptive statistics, but I'm looking forward to doing it anyway.
Tanya Cunic
Senior
Denville, NJ

Open Forum: Eat Meat and Prosper

Matt Shields is a senior art and English major. His interests include the Beastie Boys, watching movies, and cutting hair.

There was a time when I could have been considered naive about the finer points of Vegetarianism. I used to think this subculture merely consisted of drippy dope smoking dirt balls eating tofu, couscous, sprouts and falafel. And for the most part I was right.

Now things have changed. People you wouldn't suspect (policemen, firemen, priests) are all munching grass and birdseed three meals a day with false hopes of living healthy. Maybe I'm hasty to use the foods "grass" and "birdseed" to characterize the vegetarian diet. Actually the plotters of this movement have devised enticing "meat-like" recipes to pull in new recruits. You've all heard of Nature's Burgers: grain pulp smushed together to look like hamburger. There are Not Dogs: a despicable little creation that looks like a hot dog and smells like a hot dog (Doesn't really taste like a hot dog). Even the name sounds like "hot dog"—Not Dog, how clever. I've even heard of Veggie Back Ribs: wheat gluten craftily sculpted into fatty stuff and boney stuff, covered with a hearty sauce.

Matt Shields

Their angle is terribly clear: one can take up vegetarianism and not give up a thing. They're making it easy for the meat eater to convert. Imagine for a minute how ludicrous this little plan of their's is. Vegetarians are dressing up fruits and vegetables to look like, to act like, and for all intents and purposes to replace meat. Rest assured you'll never see carnivores in the kitchen molding ground beef into the shapes of their favorite fruits and vegetables. This is only one of the reasons why I am sure this is all a twisted plot.

I've talked with vegetarians. They tell me one can satisfy all of one's nutritional needs without eating meat and live healthier. If it's so healthy, I ask them, why do they look so pale and gaunt? And what about the Eskimos, I say, if it weren't for baby seal livers the Eskimos would have all died from scurvy centuries ago. The survival of many cultures has always been dependent on the harvesting of animals. "You and I are not Eskimos," they insist, then they take note to send lemons to Canada.

They tell me that farm raised animals live a lonely and depraved existence, always sensing and smelling death. One consumes that animal's fear every time one eats meat. I tell them fear must be that little something extra that makes a prime rib taste so damn good, or is it the stuff I have to scrape off the grill after a barbecue. No, fear is the stuff that makes a hot dog taste so much better than a Not Dog, I've decided.

The best is when some patchouly wearing PETA activist pinko tells me, "It's a dominance thing." Well, I guess I wouldn't understand, would I? No, my penis proves me guilty. For millions of years, they tell me, man has dominated woman; man has dominated nature; man has dominated cute-as-a-button kitty cats and moist-nosed puppy dogs. Nature is pure, they tell me, nature is cyclic. If squirrels eat

See "Shields," page 4

Athletics Controversy

To the Editor:

Seth Engel's letter to the Editor ("Rugby Founder Tired of Run-Around" Oct. 2) confirmed what I had feared: Things are not getting any better in the Washington College Athletic Department.

Seth's plight is similar in many respects to the problems I encountered with Athletic Director Geoff Miller during my tenure as the college's men's tennis coach. The situation reached a climax in May, 1992 when Miller arbitrarily decided not to renew my coaching contract or the contract of women' tennis coach Holly Bramble.

Initially, Miller and President Trout tried to use a 1988 self-study as justification for not reneging our contracts. This unpublished — and unreviewed — study claimed: "The students would be better served by full-time coaches who have a complete investment in the college."

That rationale, of course, did not stand up to scrutiny for a number of reasons. Both tennis teams were successful on the court (6 straight NCAA Tournament Appearances, 7 MAC Championships, 11 All Americans, Washington College's only National Champion, player of the year in Divi-

See "Wyman," page 9

From "Shields," page 3

all the acorns one season, then fewer acorns will be around the next year to meet the increase in squirrel population. So, the squirrels will starve until the next year when more acorns will grow because of the shortage of squirrels, and so on, and so on, and so on.

Alright already! I had eighth grade biology, I tell them, I can understand a vicious circle. But they continue, telling me every beast has a predator, except for man. Man kills senselessly, they preach, man kills needlessly. Man is the corrupter in a beautiful natural balance. Man feels he is above nature because nature doesn't kill man.

Tell that to the folks in Somalia, you Amy Carter wannabes. Tell that to the thousands devastated by the hurricane in Florida. Tell that to the mailman with the pitbull dangling from his ankle. Let me toss you in a lion cage around feeding time and have you tell it to my buddy Leo. Nature kills people, okay?

Let's go back to this "dominance thing." What these flakes are saying is, man equals all that is bad in this world (Man=Bad). Dominance is bad because it gives one party an unfair advantage in the vicious circle. See folks, man isn't a part of nature in the vegetarianist manifesto. They believe that man, after being introduced to the earth by allens, has become a great disturbance to the natural ecosystem of the planet. Thus, man is an evil alien force from outer space. Okay, now you're thinking I'm totally whacked but this is what vegetarianism is all about. Really, I've done research that'll back this up.

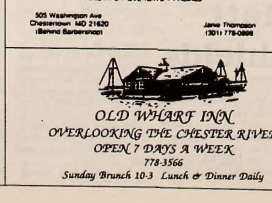
For instance, let me start at the top of the heap with the ones that don't eat yeast or dairy products, the full blown orthodox vegetarians that refer to themselves as "Vegans." Sure, you say, the root word of Vegan is vegetable. Wrong! Vegans claim, in secrecy (only amongst fellow Vegans) to be from Vega (As an American claims to be from America, African—Africa). So where is Vega, you ask? And they're not talking Vega, Texas, pal! Go out on a starry night and you can see Vega quite clearly. It is the brightest star in the constellation Lyra. Think I'm wacko now? Of course not, it's right there in the sky for everyone to see. By trying to conform to the planet Earth's natural balance they are admitting to a fear of little blue men from outer space. Keep in mind that a lot of this isn't told to beginner vegetarians; I don't want you to think that all followers of vegetarianism are running around shitscared of UFOs. It's not as simple as a fear of spacemen. Their fear is far more powerful than that. This is the fear of a pagan god they're dealing with.

I hope you're following me; it's no accident I said "little blue men" in the last paragraph. Yes, they're blue. I'm sure all of you have met one of those watered-down, bottom of the heap, quasi-vegetarians that says, "Oh, I'm not really a vegetarian. I just don't eat Red Meat." Who else doesn't eat red meat and is shit scared of a blue man? Yep, you got it, Hare Krishnas! The Hindu god Krishna is blue and doesn't allow his followers to eat cows.

You must see it now: like Mount Shasta, the star Vega also gives off cosmic energy and that is why the inner circles of the Order of Vegetarianists Uniting Mankind chose the star as their Mecca, and Krishna is their god.

I'll interject here for a second to clarify my reasoning a bit more. Pork products aren't Kosher. Now if the Jews thought God was blue, then I might think they were pig worshippers. But this is a totally different matter. Jews, as far as I can tell, don't much care for pigs. Hindus, however, like to dress cows up like people and talk to them, really. This friend of mine who studied Eastern religions at BYU told me about it, pal. Xenophobic I am not.

Suzanne Vega isn't innocent either. It's like being named Suzanne Krishna or even Suzanne Satan. This shouldn't be taken lightly. The woman is evil. A song like "Luka" is much like a Not Dog: phony, stupid and leaves a bad taste in your mouth. And just what is Luka? The planet orbiting Vega? Keep an eye on this dame, pal, it might just save your life.



Here's the clincher, though. I'm about to let you in on why some Eastern god doesn't want you to eat meat, why vegetarians use extremist tactics to convert thousands to Vegetarianism, and why from the center of Hinduism, faux meat products were formulated to be a baited hook to profoundly affect the lives of thousands. I risk death exposing this atrocity much in the way Salmon Rushdie did before me. For this is the sickest and most totally demented conspiracy ever to surface in print (and it's true by the way): if you take a minute to think about what kinds of meat humans do eat, you will realize that for the most part we only eat the flesh of herbivores, cows, rabbits, chickens, horses (Yes, people eat horse.). Only in backass third world countries and a few oriental restaurants, do they serve the flesh of carnivores such as cats and dogs. Herbivores taste better than carnivores. I'm sure you're following me now.

The plight of vegetarians the world over is TO MAKE HUMAN FLESH TASTE BETTER! This is the honest truth! I'd be an idiot to put my life on the line like this if it were a hoax. I don't need some psychopathic, shaved headed, robe and sandal wearing religious fanatic coming at me with a poisonous flower or an explosive tambourine willing to die to protect his god's dirty little secrets. The high-ups in the Vegan cult promise these disillusioned followers a position of power in the next life. I will return as a slug or something, of course. Religion is scary these days, folks. And remember, in risking my own life I'm trying to save yours.

Today thousands of Krishna-Vegans have interspersed with the population and are spreading their twisted teachings to the unsuspecting. For example, as my associate Rich Linklater pointed out, television programs such as the Smurfs are desensitizing our nation's youth to the prospect of blue people (Note: the Smurfs don't eat meat.). As you read this the flesh of each and every vegetarian grows more tender and succulent to the alien tastebud. The spaceships are on their way, pal. You must renounce Krishna-Vega today and begin leading a full life again out from under the oppressive hoof of a false deity. And you must do all that you can to prevent other good fine people from getting sucked into the undertow of this surging tsunami.

I hope I have been able to shed light on the dangerous links between Vegetarianism, Hinduism, and winding up with an apple stuffed in your mouth on the plate of some eight armed spaceman. Remember, no matter what the Hindus may tell you, you only live once. Enjoy life while you're here, don't make it hard on yourself when you go to the refrigerator. Don't fall for those "meat-like" placebos that come straight from the heart of a cult devoted to spreading Vishnu's worship and filling his belly with tasty morsels of human flesh. Toss those Nature's Burgers in the trash and spit that carrot out. Don't become livestock. Slaughter livestock. Dominate. Eat meat.

WC Freshman Involved in Collision

Amanda Burt
News Editor

A Washington College freshman and a Kent County High School Senior were injured last Saturday in a head-on collision that occurred on Route 213 North of Chestertown.

Heather Adams, a 1992 graduate of KCHS and current freshman at WC, and Todd Gsell, a Senior at KCHS, were planning to attend homecoming at the high school. The accident happened at approximately 8 p.m. while the couple was en route to Gsell's parent's house in Kennedyville before the dance.

According to the Kent County News, Carey Jennings Winters, a 71-year-old Kennedyville resident, was traveling south on Route 213 near Shrewsbury Church Road when her car veered across the center line and struck Gsell's truck head-on in the northbound lane. The truck swerved off of the road and flipped once, while Winters' station wagon spun around clockwise and then stopped in the southbound lane.

Adams was transported to the University of Maryland Shock Trauma Center, where she was treated for facial lacerations and later released on Sunday. Gsell, who fractured his pelvis and severely broke his left foot, was first taken to Kent and Queen Anne's Hospital before being transferred to Shock Trauma. He was released Wednesday.

Winters was pronounced dead at the site of the accident. Maryland State Police did not say whether she died before losing control of her car.

Alcohol or drugs were not a factor in the accident.

"We are so fortunate that these kids are still alive," said Linda Adams, the WC student's mother. She added that the doctors and staff at Shock Trauma were extremely supportive and considerate.

Because the students were worried about each other after being separated at the scene of the accident, the nurses wheeled Adams into Gsell's hospital room so that the two could see each other. In addition, the helicopter pilot that transported Adams to Shock Trauma visited her while she was recovering.

Adams will be out of school for an indefinite amount of time while she fully recuperates at her home in Chestertown.

Alcohol Policy

WC's Administrative Executive Council met recently and adopted a new alcohol policy. The policy was presented at the October 13 SGA meeting, where RAs were present.

The policy marks a few changes to the one previously employed by the college and its current state is contingent on behavior by the student body.

Under review at the end of the spring term is the college's club liquor license, which includes the grounds of the campus, Wilmer Park, and Hynson-Ringgold House. The review will determine any future alcohol policy; certain areas of the college may be removed from the umbrella protection of the license.

Students' behavior in relation to use of alcohol will determine the outcome of that portion of the review. In other words, campus housing may be considered legally "dry" if many more alcohol-related incidents occur this year.

The revised college alcohol policy is as follows:

- Only beverages purchased in the WC Deli will be permitted in Hodson Hall. Student groups no longer will be able to provide beverage service in the dining hall, Hynson Lounge or the CoffeeHouse. Beverages may be taken from the Deli to other areas of the building. Only two alcoholic beverages may be purchased at a time.

This statement does not cover private events which are contracted through Dining Services.

- The sponsor of any all-campus event in Hodson Hall will be required to hire an outside 'monitor' to assist at the event. A list of available 'monitors' will be maintained by the Security Office. The monitors will be responsible for registering non-student guests, for helping to enforce alcohol policy, and for helping to resolve any problems that surface during the event. They will not be responsible for 'carding' of students; 'carding' will be the responsibility of the Deli staff.

This rule is designed to keep high school students and other non-WC-students from 'crashing' events held in Hodson Hall. The monitor will be an impartial townsperson hired at the rate of $12 per hour. He or she will check College ID only; they will not check for age. Guests will be registered at the door.

- All student social events must be registered with the Director of Student Activities. Students no longer will be required to register the amount of alcohol, if any, to be served at an event. Instead, they will be reminded of the Maryland State Law in regard to alcohol consumption.

Teri Turmel's office is in the Student Lounge in the basement of Hodson Hall. The change of procedure puts the responsibility for control of alcohol back in the hands of the students.

- Each social event must have three student sponsors. If alcohol is to be present, one of these sponsors must be 21.

See "Alcohol," page 8

New Mission Statement

At the October 5 Faculty Meeting, the following Mission Statement was adopted by the faculty.

Washington College aspires to stimulate men and women to think deeply, imaginatively and creatively about past and present civilizations, and to know and evaluate their accomplishments. To this end, the College seeks to develop in its students the habits of analytic thought, aesthetic insight, ethical sensibility, and clarity of expression. We wish also to enhance those capacities that will be the most rewarding in public and private life. Among them are imagination, openness and flexibility of mind, integrity, initiative, and respect for self and others.

The College offers a rigorous education in the liberal arts through the study of the humanities, the social sciences, and the natural sciences. We ask our students to explore a range of disciplines, to concentrate on a major academic program, to complete a significant independent project, and to participate broadly in activities outside the classroom. We believe that this education is enriched by the study of diverse traditions and cultures both within and beyond our nation's borders.

The qualities Washington College seeks to nurture are the products of teaching, experience, and often friendship; they can neither be cultivated hastily nor accumulated merely as credits for classwork. Unhurried conversation and personal associations complement instruction and study. Thus, the College affirms the importance of its residential tradition with its opportunities to engage in arts, athletics, service, and social activities—both on campus and in the community—in the company of people of varied backgrounds, experience and interests.

Washington College seeks to prepare students for further education, responsible citizenship, productive careers, and satisfying leisure. In an era of complexity and interdependence, we endeavor to ensure that our graduates will be prepared to pursue goals that contribute to their own welfare, and to that of their families, communities, and the world.

Playwright Festival

The Baltimore Playwrights Festival is now accepting submissions for their twelfth summer of original plays. The Festival's member theaters will present full productions of several plays during the summer of 1993 as well as deliver staged readings during the 1992-93 theater season. Both one-acts and full-length plays are accepted. The festival is open to any playwright who is a current or former residents of the state of Maryland. For full submission guidelines, please send an SASE to:

Baltimore Playwrights Festival
c/o Fells Point Corner Theater
251 S. Ann Street
Baltimore, MD 21231

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist — Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal — Electrologist – Louise Lawerton, I. E.

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 23 CHESAPEAKE RETRIEVERS Traditional & progressive bluegrass, swing...These guys are hot!!
SAT 24 THE HULA MONSTERS Western Swing & Oahu music- P.S. Wear your Hawaiian shirt, skirt...
THURS 29 JULIE HOWARD Great voice, great tunes, NO COVER!
778-6779

Week at a Glance

October 23 - 29

Film Series:

Clean and Sober

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

23 Friday

Women in the Middle East
Guest Speakers: Evelyn Accade, Mary Schmidt, Gerrine Bird
CAC, 2:30 p.m.-4:00 p.m. Sponsored by The Middle East Symposia

24 Saturday

I'm sure there's a party, Somewhere, Tonight.

25 Sunday

Brunch, Hodson Hall, 12:00p.m. Guest speaker: Captain Dining Hall

Finish reading the ELM, Your room, After Brunch.

Do some homework maybe, Library, After Dinner.

Go to Miz D's, Hodson Hall, 10:00 p.m.

26 Monday

Memorial Service for Ed Schroeder, Martha Washington Square, 2:30 p.m.

Charlotte Mary Yonge Victorian Novelist:
The Burden of a Conservative Legacy
Guest Speaker: Audrey Fessler, O'Neill Literary House
Tea, 4:00 p.m. & Talk, 4:30 p.m. Sponsored by the O'Neill Literary House Monday Series †

Top Hat , CAC, 6:30 p.m. Sponsored by The Dance of Film Series

Symposia on Africa: Conflict Resolution in South Africa, Somalia and Liberia,
Guest Speaker: William Zartman
Democratization Trends in Africa, Guest Speaker: Donald Rothchild
The Economic And Social Conditions in Central Africa,
Guest Speaker: Wintham Leslie, Hynson Lounge, 8:00 p.m.
Sponsored by The Goldstein Program in Public Affairs †

27 Tuesday

Class: Jazz, Dance Studio, BAJLFC, 4:30 p.m.-6:00 p.m.

SGA Meeting, CAC, 9:00 p.m.

28 Wednesday

Performance Class, Norman James Theatre, 4:00 p.m.

Senior Class Dinner, Hynson Lounge, 6:00 p.m.

Class: Ballroom Dance, Dance Studio, BAJLFC, 6:00-7:00 p.m.

Understanding HIV/AIDS, Guest Speaker: Sylvia Silver
CAC, 7:30 p.m. Sponsored by Gender Relations Awareness Alliance

29 Thursday

Class: Ballet Class, Dance Studio, BAJLFC, 4:30-6:00 p.m.

Rehearsal: College Community Chorus, Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

William James Forum: The Burning Times: The Feminine Holocaust
CAC, 7:30 p.m.

† see related article

William Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida will be at The Shakespeare Theatre in Washington, D.C. until October 25. Coming Soon: Shakespeare's Hamlet , November 17-January 10.

Buy tickets today and monday for
The Connells
$8 for students $12 for non-students
November 6 - Live in the LFC

Student Profile: Monique Ware

Monique Ware, a Humanities and Spanish double major with a concentration in Latin American Studies, seems to constantly be in a good mood. Originally from Washington, D.C., she now lives in Silver Spring where she graduated from Albert Einstein High School (not the New York medical school). Though she applied to nine other colleges, she chose Washington College because "there were lots of bricks, columns, trees and green grass. It seemed like the perfect learning environment for me."

Monique's ultimate goal is to work in an embassy and hopefully become an ambassador. However, she also would like to enter International Development. Surprisingly, she added that even if her plans did not work out, she would not mind "working on a farm. It's been a great hobby of mine and I love animals."

Last year Monique studied in Spain at the Universitas Nebrissensis where she took a full-load of courses concentrating in language, culture and economic development. Fluent in Spanish, she lived with a host family in Madrid. During her stay there she was an English tutor and realized that Spain was "not just a country of bullfighters and flamenco dancers. In fact, many of the young people hate bull-fighting."

She also had the chance to travel via Euro-rail around Spain as well as to France, Italy, Switzerland and Morocco. As she stated, "I learned to function on three hours of sleep because my class schedule did not allow time for a siesta [a mid-day nap] and it is custom to be out from 8 a.m. to 4 a.m. Most of all, I learned how to live on vino tinto and ir de tapas which is a glass of wine or a beer with a free appetizer—such as tuna on bread or a potato omelet or olives."

A self-proclaimed "behind the scenes" person, Monique is on the Lectures Series and Modern Language Department Standing Committees of the Faculty. She also is a member of the Spanish Club, the International Relations Club, the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority and the Spanish honor society, Sigma Delta Pi. In the past, Monique served as a dorm senator for East Hall (International House) and participated in the Freshman Colloquy. Presently, she is a resident assistant for International House and works in Health Services.

Monique has excelled academically as well as socially at Washington with a GPA over 3.00. A Dean's List student, she is a George Washington Scholar and also has a Senatorial Scholarship.

Most of Monique's free-time activities involve food. A dedicated vegetarian, she admits an addiction to vegetables and icing. An avid fan of different cultures and travelling, she especially enjoys trying food from different countries. Her favorites include Spanish, Ethiopian, Lebanese as well as Japanese sushi.

From "Connells," page 1

than yell, yet album by album they extend their public outreach a little further without surrendering their brainy, delicate emotionalism."

The band has toured a great deal the past few years, gaining a reputation as one of the South's hardest working bands. When asked how The Connells handle the pressures of the road, Doug MacMillan replies, "We take the Bonnie Franklin/One Day at a Time" approach.

In summer 1990, The Connells toured in Europe, heading to London to record their last album, One Simple Word which features "Another Souvenir" and "Waiting My Turn." One of the strongest independent releases that year, the album spent 20 weeks the Billboards Top 200 and was in the Top 5 on Gavin, CMJ, Rockpool, Hard Report and Album Network.

A favorite of the popular Washington, D.C. and Maryland alternative music station WHFS and of college campuses across the United States, The Connells will storm WC November 6th at 7:30 p.m. in the BALFC. Ticket sales for students, faculty and staff will be in the Coffee House Friday October 23 and Monday October 26. Cost is $8.00 and may be charged to one's I.D. number. There is a limit of 2 tickets, additional passes available for $12.00.

Tickets for the general public will be available for $12.00 to those 18 years or older from October 27-October 29. Though tickets will be available at the door the night of the concert, they are expected to quickly sell-out. Be sure to buy your tickets early.

Symposium: Africa in Transition

Pat Geissel
Staff Writer

Africa today understands the phrase "growing pains" more than any other continent. After the long struggle to oust Colonial rule, the new countries are expected to create nation states in less than 50 years. African borders created on paper during the Colonial era did not take tribal territories or natural boundaries into account. Imperialism concerned itself with commerce, not the indigenous population. The infrastructure left behind did not connect cities and villages for travel, but rather factories and ports to export goods.

The Imperial powers exported the natural resources and the wealth of each country, creating an agricultural community whose land was ruined by cash crops and whose people are plagued by famine today.

The "growing pains" of Africa will be addressed in the second annual African Symposium. Featuring three guest speakers, the lectures will examine examine in detail the reasons behind Africa's troubles.

The first speaker, Dr. William Zartman, will speak on the Conflict Resolution in South Africa, Somalia and Liberia. Director of the African Studies Program at the Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies, Zartman has been a consultant to the United States State Department since 1961. He has received numerous research grants in political science, including one from the Social Science Research Council to study Tunisian succession and democratization.

He has served on various editorial boards, and is presently working with Negotiation Journal. A prolific writer, his most recent book, Mediation in Middle East Conflicts, was published in 1987.

The second speaker, Professor Donald Rothchild of University of California at Davis, will talk about Democratization Trends in Africa. Rothchild is president of the African Studies Association at the Bookings Institution and has served as a faculty member at universities in Uganda, Kenya, Zambia and Ghana.

He has written and edited several books concerning race and politics in Africa, his latest work entitled, Politics and Society in Contemporary Africa.

The final speaker will be Dr. Winsome Leslie. An African Studies professor at Johns Hopkins University, School for Advanced International Studies, Leslie also is a professor of political science and international relations at American University, School of International Service and School of Public Affairs. His talk will cover The Economic and Social Conditions in Central Africa.

Since 1985, Leslie has been a consultant to the African Development Foundation and AMEX International.

The talks will be held consecutively and will begin at 8:00 p.m. in the Hynson Lounge.

Fessler Explores the Victorian Woman

During the Victorian age, many writers were influenced by the iron morality of that time. Perhaps Charlotte Mary Yonge's work best represents the time period with her strict adherence to strict religious morales. Yonge's writings are the focus of Professor Audrey Fessler's talk Charlotte Mary Young, Victorian Novelist: The Burden of a Conservative Legacy for the October 26 Monday Series at the O'Neill Literary House.

Fessier describes Yonge with great respect, saying, "she was an interesting literary figure. She was a women of great intellectual capacity and energy and devoted much of her time to publishing and writing her work."

A devoted Anglican, Yonge was the personal pupil of John Keble, a leader of the Oxford Movement which campaigned for the return of the Anglican Church to its Catholic roots. Though his conservative ideals of a patristic hierarchy in the church and strict male dominance in greater society had become dated by the time Yonge was born, she still identified with his cause. She embodied Keble's ideas in her writings, especially in her earlier works. However, as time passed and the Oxford Movement ended, Yonge's female characters steadily gained greater personal autonomy and intellectual freedom.

Yonge's canon consists of 200 volumes and includes a history of Christian names as well as a plethora of novels and children stories. The daughter of strict Anglican parents, she only was allowed to publish her work anonymously and had to donate all proceeds to church causes. Her first novel, The Heir of Red Cliffe, had a distinct Christian ethos and was a favorite of troops in the Crimeran War.

Yonge's popularity as a writer dwindled as the Victorian era came to a close. Towards the end of her career, she recognized that her ideas had become dated and her writing had grown increasingly sentimental for the "old days" of conservatism. Ironically, Yonge's death was in 1901, the same year as Queen Victoria's, which marked the end of the Victorian Era.

The conservative themes in Yonge's novels The Daisy Chain, published 1856; The Clever Woman of the Family, published 1871; and her last novel, The Modern Broods, published in 1901, will be examined in detail at the lecture which will begin at 4:30 p.m., preceded by tea at 4:00 p.m.

BE WARNED:
Next Thursday is the 3rd Annual NEWT'S CAPS
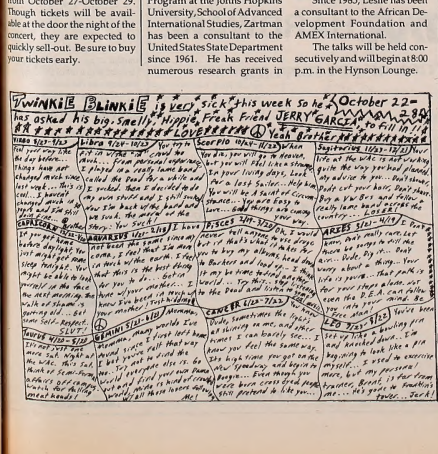
Tournament
Be on the lookout for further details!

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown



gallery 5Q

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

Another Time II

Fine Furniture, Collectibles & Antiques
•housewares, lamps & decor•
10 percent discount with College ID
819 High Street Extended
Chestertown
778-6525

Psych Department Discusses Neuroscience Program

Review Reveals Need for Two More Faculty Members

This week's article on the Psychology Department concludes our three-part report of the departments reviewed last year.

The Psychology Department, cited by Rugg's Recommendations as a selective major at WC, was reviewed in March of 1992. Although the review itself only lasted about two days, the preparations for it began nearly a year earlier, during the previous summer.

Dr. George Spilich, Chair of the department, was informed by the Dean's Office (headed by John Taylor at the time) that their department could expect an evaluation. Spilich met with the Dean and formulated ideas with him about the format of the review. The college was still devising the format at that time, said Spilich.

One of the first and most important steps in the process was to choose the evaluation team. The department worked with Dean Taylor and President Charles H. Trout in choosing the team.

"The idea was that the department would suggest some names and the administration would evaluate that list," said Spilich. "We all agreed on a bias towards liberal arts people."

In other words, a professor from a college or university "whose psychology department is larger than our entire faculty," said Spilich, wouldn't be much help in examining WC.

"A Department should see a problem, see something they want to work on, and view this [the evaluation process] as a free consultation," said Spilich.

The department had been considering the possibility of a concentration in behavioral neuroscience for quite some time, and the addition of Michael Kerchner to the psychology faculty was pointed out by President Trout to the Board of Visitors and Governors (at their September 11 meeting) as a step in the right direction.

After considering a list of about 10 candidates for the team based on the above criteria, the list was narrowed down to Don Tyrrell of Franklin & Marshall, Charles Sorenson of Amherst, and John Nyby of Lehigh.

President Trout suggested the first two candidates, "and we viewed these suggestions with interest," Spilich said. Trout had undergone a review of the neuroscience program at Colgate (his former school) and had worked with and been impressed by these two men, said Spilich.

The process outlined by the Dean's office included compiling the course lists, faculty vita, and representative syllabi beforehand and mailing these documents, along with a copy of the college catalog, to team members about a month before they were to arrive on campus.

Also included with these documents were the results of a self-study put together by the psychology department. The Dean's office provides the questions, which include what Spilich terms "current process" information and "outcomes" information.

Current process data involves the curriculum (how is it working, and how does it fit in with the liberal arts education?) and personnel problems (are there enough faculty in the department, and do the current professors meet the needs of the students?). Outcome data involves alumni.

There was a third document included which was not only not required, but above and beyond the call of duty. "It's hard to know what's appropriate for a department when you're within the department itself," said Spilich. For example, such statistics as average class size and budget for the psych library are relatively meaningless unless they are compared with other schools, he said.

Toward this end, during the fall semester of last year, Spilich and the other psych faculty designed a questionnaire sent to 96 "good, small, liberal arts colleges."

These colleges were chosen by using the Oberlin Report on Excellence in Science as a source, supplementing that list with other 2/B Group schools, those which compare to WC in salary, financial aid, and other considerations.

Spilich received an 80 percent response to the survey, finding out what other psych departments nationwide were doing in such areas as teaching load, equipment funds, and types of labs.

"In some places we were doing much better than the average, while there were some places we were far, far behind," he said.

Both the evaluation team and the administration got the results before the review, said Spilich. He is currently working on an article about the results of this survey.

On the first day of the team's arrival in March, the department met the team and showed them the facilities in and outside of Dunning. The team decided what their focii would be, and prepared for the next day.

Day two consisted of interviews. Evaluators met with Dean Taylor, President Trout, and various committees; they interviewed each faculty member separately without the department head or any administrators present, and they attended classes.

The psych department also added a component they considered to be just as important as any other: meetings with students, again with no administrators and no faculty present.

Two exit interviews occurred the next day, with the Dean and with Psych Chair Spilich, and the report arrived about a month later.

One of the strongest considerations was that of the neuroscience program; however, the department is reviewing its entire curriculum. "We think we can simplify and streamline it," said Spilich.

Another concern was the personnel problem, not in quality, but quantity. "To serve the current student body, no even allowing for an increased size, we need two additional faculty," Spilich said. "In these times, it is difficult — I would say the odds are zero.

"We've been asking for faculty for the last five years. The administration has come to the point of saying, 'we see your problem, but these are hard economic times.'"

From "Alcohol," page 5

• No multi-quart containers (e.g. kegs, partyballs) will be permitted in residence halls.

This rule has not changed.

• The number of guests permitted at residence hall parties is limited to two times the number of residents in the building.

Only two guests per resident are allowed at any function in a dorm. This rule is based on State Fire Codes.

JBK's SERVISTAR HARDWARE

WE CARRY A FULL SELECTION OF ART SUPPLIES

ART SUPPLY HEADQUARTERS

12 COLOR ACRYLIC PAINTING SET

Contains 12 (½ oz. tubes of Acrylic paint, set of matte, medium and gloss mediums for mixing and glazing, brushes and pamphlet "The Art of Painting With Acrylics"

$14.39

STRETCHED CANVAS

Finest quality cotton canvas mounted on seasoned, kiln-dried wood pyrolyzer strings, primed ready for use with oils, acrylics or water colors. Foil wrapped for studio storage

$4.39 - 12"x16"

#25-13 12"x16"
#25-15 16"x20"
#25-18 24"x30"

STUDENT OIL COLOR PAINTING SET

Beginner's set contains 12 (½ oz.) tubes selected oil colors, turpentine, linseed oil, brushes and "Here's How" painting pamphlet

$15.19

JBK's SERVISTAR HARDWARE
Kent Plaza
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-9600
M-Th: 8-7; Fri: 8-8;
Sat: 8-6; Sun: 9:30-4

BRING THIS AD IN AND RECIEVE 20% OFF YOUR ART SUPPLY PURCHASE

WANTED:

"Coppertone Spring Break Trip" student representative to promote trips to Cancun, Nassau, South Padre Island, Jamaica, Daytona and Orlando. Best programs available ANYWHERE...earn cash, free trips, plus more. You handle sales, we will handle bookkeeping. Call for more information (9a.m. to 5p.m.) 1-800-222-4432

GREEKS & CLUBS

RAISE A COOL $1000
IN JUST ONE WEEK!
PLUS $1000 FOR THE MEMBER WHO CALLS!
No obligation. No cost.
You also get a FREE HEADPHONE RADIO just for calling
1-800-932-0528, Ext. 65

From "Security," page 1

security officers.

"Dorms are secured in the evening hours," said Roderick, between 10 and 11 p.m. on weeknights and between 11 and 12 on weekends. "It has become a full-time job for the staff to secure buildings ... within 15 minutes, the doors are propped."

"Is locking outside doors important or not?" Roderick asked. "We like to think of dormitories as houses — not many people go to bed with the front door wide open."

Several crimes have occurred this year after doors were locked, Roderick said. "How many times have you propped a door open, or passed by a propped door without [closing it]? How many times have you held a door for someone you do not know?"

Attacks often involve propped doors and unlocked room doors. Roderick briefly detailed a few recent incidents (from the past several years) which involved violent assaults.

In 1980 a violent rape occurred on Caroline third floor. The attacker was apprehended and sentenced to 50 years in prison. He entered through a propped door.

An attempted rape occurred on third floor Minta Martin in the Fall of 1987. The man was in the building as a guest of a resident of first floor.

In the third, the attack occurred at 6 p.m. In 1990, a man who was drunk and "high on some controlled substance," said Roderick, entered first floor Wicomico and began to pick fights with the residents. When the RA appeared, the man assaulted him and was then apprehended by Security.

Thefts of money, bikes, stereos, etc. are also common where rooms are frequently left unlocked. Potential attackers or thieves will often enter a building through a propped door and then try all the doors on a hall until they find one that's open.

"Our first line of defense is the outside doors and the locks on those doors. When they are not utilized, we become vulnerable," Roderick said.

He added that he hopes one day to install electronic devices which would allow access to residents only.

Comments from those present:

• Eve Zartman, sophomore class president, suggested a student watch, wherein groups of four students patrol campus on weekend nights.

• Kevin Lawner, Kent Dorm Senator, suggested a page system in girls' dorms. There would be electronic monitors, and students would be paid to man main entrances.

• Social Chair Sam Clements suggested phones be installed outside residence halls to allow visitors to call the resident of the dorms and ask to be let in. (It would also allow people who were locked out of the building to call security).

• Eleanor Shriver, RA on third floor Reid, added that "it is not the Security's responsibility 100 percent ... to continue to spend a good deal of their manhours picking up after who are lazy. It's already a big problem and it can only get worse."

• Several RAs mentioned outside doors that simply do not lock correctly.

• SGA Vice-President Christy Albright reminded dorm residents to lock their room doors "there you have total control over your room when you go to sleep."

• Off-campus senator Jane Kennedy stated that there are a few dorms which have room doors that can be "carded." "I never carried my room key. I carried my ID card," she said.

• Faculty Advisor J. David Newell suggested installing chains on these doors to ensure residents' safety at night.

• Senior Class President Whitney Myrus suggested making certain doors, such as those on the ends of Kent House, alarmed fire doors which can only be used as exits (and therefore could not be propped).

• Sophomore Class President Max Walton asked what's being done to keep non-WC students off campus.

"Although we are on private property, said Roderick, we're open to the public. ... We restrict access to the dormitories to residents and their guests, but often it is difficult to tell who's a guest and who is not."

SGA President Jen Del Nero added that if it looks suspicious, it probably is suspicious, and to call Security at 778-7810 or ext. 7810.

A reminder: at night, there is often only one guard on duty. When calling, you should allow seven rings before the office phone switches to the walkie-talkie, and a few more before the guard can answer it.

See Alcohol Policy, page 5

From "Wyman," page 4

sion III tennis, and a combined record of 233-63) and in the classroom (3 Academic All Americans and a team GPA above 3.0). And both of us certainly had "a complete investment in the college." I have been a member of the Chestertown community for over 20 years, am a parent of a Washington College student and was a member of the 1782 Society. Mrs. Bramble is a Washington College graduate, served on the College's Hall of Fame Committee and also has been a resident of Kent County for 22 years.

When the validity of the self-study was found to be wanting, Miller then restored a totally baseless self-report of the tennis programs to the NCAA as a pretext for the termination of our contracts. The Athletic Director ignored evidentiary standards and due process requirements in formulating a case based upon hearsay rather than documentation.

Miller's conclusions that NCAA violations occurred were unsubstantiated, untrue and formulated only to use as an excuse for my termination. As Miller once told me, "what people perceive to be true is more important than the truth." If rugby was an NCAA sport, I am sure Miller would fabricate some violations.

It should be noted that despite all the inferences, rumors and innuendoes, there were no penalties or sanctions imposed by the NCAA upon any player or the institution. As S. David Berst, the NCAA's Executive Director for Enforcement wrote to me on July 1, 1992, "the NCAA received the College's report and elected to take no further action."

It appears obvious that Miller simply did not want me as tennis coach just as he apparently does not want rugby as a collegiate sport. His private agenda concerning rugby is hauntingly similar to the private vendetta he carried out against Mrs. Bramble, myself and our programs. The College's legal counsel admitted Miller began keeping a file on me two weeks after he became Athletic Director in 1987.

Mr. Engel seemingly put considerable time and effort into making rugby a success, just as I did with tennis. Unfortunately, as Board member Betty Casey wrote to me during the tennis controversy, "no good deed goes unpunished" with Miller in charge.

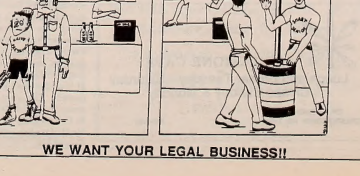
Our best hope for restoring the integrity of the Washington College Athletic Department would seem to lie with the removal of Mr. Miller. Of course, with his record of controversy and double-dealing, who would hire him?

Fred Wyman
Men's Tennis Coach 1985-1991

The new Cheerleading squad:

Co-Captains
1. Brenda Stanley
2. Denise Coleman

Cheerleaders
1. Suzanne Basel
2. Traci Castello
3. Caron Woodward
4. Heather Coursey
5. Ann McDermott
6. Shane Erin Dwyer
7. Robin Diamond
8. Shrylnee Johnson
9. Tammie Michener



Good luck girls!!

$$ FREE TRAVEL AND RESUME EXPERIENCE$$
Individuals and Student Organizations wanted to promote SPRING BREAK, call the nation's leader.
Inter-Campus Programs 1-800-327-6013

Park
778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists' Materials
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
P.O. Box 402 311 High Street Chestertown Maryland 21620

Suds 'n' Soda
"Your Store for Convenience"
Rt. 213 & Rt. 297
Chestertown, MD.
1 mi. North of Campus
778-5077
OPEN 7 DAYS
6 a.m.- 12 mid.

WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS!!

Soccer Takes Two in a Row

Jason Ronstadt
Staff Writer

After an extended hiatus, the Shoremen soccer squad has returned to the win column in dramatic fashion. Since the last issue of the ELM, the Chad "I have no nickname" Wheatly, and Rory "Why yes, they are Guess jeans" Conway. Although these four goal scorers played an integral part in the team's victory, it would be spitting in the face of one hundred years of soccer tradition if

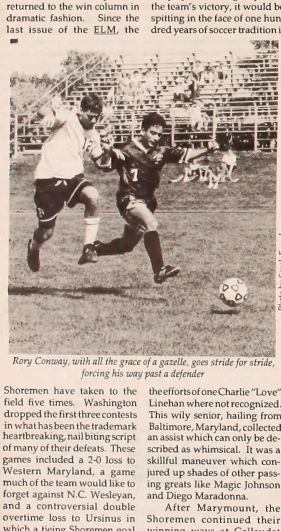


Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

Rory Conway, with all the grace of a gazelle, goes stride for stride, forcing his way past a defender

Shoremen have taken to the field five times. Washington dropped the first three contests in what has been the trademark heartbreaking, nail biting script of many of their defeats. These games included a 2-0 loss to Western Maryland, a game much of the team would like to forget against N.C. Wesleyan, and a controversial double overtime loss to Ursinus in which a tieing Shoremen goal with two minutes left to play was disallowed due to a shaky offside call by the referee.

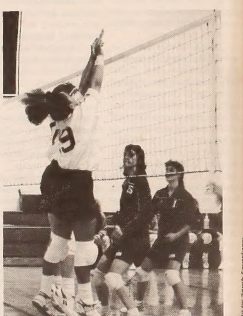
But while heartbreaking losses have been a trade mark for this year's team, so has intestinal fortitude. The very next game the Shoremen bounced back, beating Marymount College 4-2. Goal scorers included Cliff "That guy's a " Howell, Shawn "The Colonel" Clink, the efforts of one Charlie "Love" Linehan where not recognized. This wily senior, hailing from Baltimore, Maryland, collected an assist which can only be described as whimsical. It was a skillful maneuver which conjured up shades of other passing greats like Magic Johnson and Diego Maradonna.

After Marymount, the Shoremen continued their winning ways at Gallaudet University. The victory came in dramatic fashion from the foot of freshman Jonathan Johnson, who fired home a pass from Chris "Flea" Kleberg near the end of overtime. Rory Conway added the other two goals as Washington collected its second straight victory. The Shoremen face Widener on the 21st of October, and host Goucher on the 24th.

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0168

Volleyball Picks Up Another Win

Tyler McCarthy
Staff Cheeseball



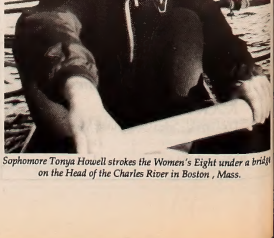
The W.C. Slammers recently suffered a tough loss to MAC rival Western Maryland last Wednesday evening, bringing their overall MAC record down to 1-3. They still, however, have high hopes of improving their conference standing and quite a few opportunities remain to do so as Franklin & Marshall, Haverford, & Johns Hopkins lie ahead.

Following this tough bout, the Shorewomen got back on the right foot and began a season-ending homestead this past Tuesday night when they met up with Wilmington, the first of eight straight home games, and won by a score of 3 games to 2. In game one, they started out with a 14-7 deficit as Julie Dill stepped up to serve. Dill served up an ace on her first attempt and then continued to romp on her opponents scoring 8 straight points. Beverly Diaz was fast on the scene as well, scoring 4 unanswered points to win the game 18-16.

The Sho'women fell in the second game 15-7, but were quick to recover in the third, winning 15-13 and improving their overall record to 8-17.

Key players for the Sho'women were Jen Dixon, who leads the team with 125 digs and 225 kills; Julie Dill, who has grabbed 121 digs and 115 kills; and Beverly Diaz, who has 240 assists on the season.

The Sho'women hosted St. Mary's yesterday (to be covered next week) and are involved in a quad match at home tomorrow. Distinguished guests include Haverford, Marymount, and Catholic. Matches will begin at 1:00 p.m. so be there!



Michelle Chin attempts to thwart an opponent's spike

Crew Hits Boston

Tim Reardon
Co-Sports Editor

This past weekend the Washington College crew team headed north to compete in the prestigious Head of the Charles Regatta. The women's varsity team and the men's lightweight single were scheduled to race. The women's squad competed in a field of 32 collegiate teams and rowing clubs. The teams represented were from all over the country. The Atlanta RC, Baltimore RC, and Bucknell University were just a few. Washington finished an impressive ninth out of thirty-two with a time of 18:29. The overall winner was Connecticut College with a time of 17:58. Also racing over the weekend was Ray Herndon in the lightweight single division. He raced against the top thirty-five singles in the nation. The results of that race have not yet been posted. The team returns to action tomorrow as they travel to Philadelphia to race in the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta. Good Luck!

Sophomore Tonya Howell strokes the Women's Eight under a bridge on the Head of the Charles River in Boston , Mass.

Field Hockey Rounds out Season Tomorrow

Renée Guckert
Staff Writer

Washington College field hockey faced a difficult two weeks of play recently, emerging victorious in just one out of four games. The first of four attempts at victory came at Haverford College, a strong contender for the MAC playoffs. The teams appeared evenly matched at half time with the ball traveling to both offensive ends and a score that remained tied 0-0. In the second half, however, Haverford outshot Washington 9-4, scoring three goals versus WC's lone goal deflected into the cage by freshman Kouri Coleman and assisted by Marie Mohler.

Amy Barrell waxes a defender and makes faces in mockery of her "chump-like" opponent

Photo by Trish McGee

Things began to look up for the WC squad as they traveled a few days later to Randolph Macon College and secured a 1-0 win. Despite the effects of a slow field, Washington played a passing game using their links as options to send the ball across field and shooting with every chance they had. Once again, the teams were tied 0-0 at the half, but WC came back, outshooting Randolph Macon 14-5 in the second half. Junior Liz Olivere scored unassisted for the Shorewomen with 7:36 left in the game.

Long time rival Johns Hopkins University emerged victorious last Wednesday with a score of 2-1 against the Shorewomen. Liz Olivere came through once again for Washington, securing her fourth goal of the season. Goalie Brigid DeVries acquired seventeen saves in the contest against the Blue Jays. DeVries' raw instinct and experience shined through that day, blocking more than a handful of powerful shots by the Blue Jays.

As WC hockey traveled to Mary Washington last Saturday, their hopes were high, but Mary Washington's skill and determination overpowered Washington's players. The Eagles scored twice in the first half and outshot the Shorewomen 12-2. Realizing that they were playing too much defense and not enough attack, Washington pushed its forwards down the field with the help of center link Amy McCleary and halfback Jen Hanifee. Renée Guckert took a drive in the circle off a back pass from Liz Olivere, scoring for the Shorewomen with 30:09 left in the second half. Mary Washington scored again, however, with 8:42 left to play, giving them a 3-1 win.

The Shorewomen face their final challenge of the '92 season tomorrow at Western Maryland at 1:00. Wish the team luck against their final opponent and look for the results of that game and the match-up versus Widener in next week's issue.

Tennis Looks To Spring Competition

Lizzy O'Hara
Staff Writer

The last hurrah for the Washington College Netters took place at the Millersville Invitational in Pennsylvania this past weekend. The fall season for the team was quite short, but the matches prepared them for future action in their '93 Spring season.

The number one player for the Shoremen, Trevor Hurd, was seeded second for the tournament in Flight A. He was able to make his way to the finals, but did not come out on top, losing to the first seeded player 6-3, 6-2. Carlos Nuno was seeded second in Flight B and worked his way to the semi-finals where he let go and lost by a score of 6-1, 6-4. Deepak Raja had a good match with his opponent, but lost in the first round as did Emilio Bogado. Tom McLemore, however, was not ousted until the second round.

In doubles action, there was much tennis excitement as Bogado and Nuno paired up, but lost in the first round 2-6, 6-4, 6-2. McLemore and Raja, the second dynamic duo, also lost in the first round, 6-1, 6-4.

This abrupt but telling Fall season has allowed the Netters to compete at various levels, preparing them for the more crucial Spring season. There was much potential seen, and it will be quite evident when the Shoremen start out with a bang in the Spring.

Club Ice Hockey

Anyone Interested?

No Experience Necessary

14 Games Scheduled, Practice Tuesdays & Thursdays.

Contact Dave Pratt at 778-7242

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR

Trust Me

(410) 778-9819

Rory Conway

O.K., forget it, we give up on the Redskins. But, how about the Dolphins and the ever so agile Dan Marino. 6-0 BABY! IN YER FACE! Oh, and in case you were unaware the Bird Man recently had a B-Day, the big 2-0. Too bad, no drunkin' bar scene for you for a whoooole nother year. (at least not legally that is) Suck it!

Hey Conway, we gave you Newt's POW, happy now? We know you lead the team in goals, assists, and overall points but, honestly, we really don't care! But we must give credit where credit is due and Rory Conway by far surpasses all POW standards. This kid from Delaware skipped out on soccer play his freshman and sophomore year and has come on to lead in all offensive categories this year. He has been the offensive spark in the past two victories, improving his stats with a hat trick minus one versus Gallaudet and another stinger in the Marymount win. Good Job CHUMP! (P.S.- Isn't it cute we have you and your girlfriend all over this week's paper?)

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
THE MIGHTY DUCKS
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

Drop-Off Laundry

We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service

Laundromat Dry Cleaning

Kent Laundry

607 High Street
778-3551

Soccer Discovers Winning Edge

See Article, pg. 10

Theta Dawgs Get Lucky & Defeat High Street to Claim '92 ELM Bowl!

WC • ELM

Sports

Attention: Writers Needed for Senior Features! Contact Sarah Feyerherm Ext. 7238

Field Hockey Struggles in Final Stretch

See Article, pg. 11

Photo by Trish McGee

Once agin "Frigid" Brigid Devries (keeper at center), former Newt's POW, has stolen our attention in this action photo which captures the heart and soul of such a fine athlete. Devries has managed 137 saves over the teams past 12 games and maintains an unprecedented .873 save percentage. Nice job Frigid!

Rory Conway: Newt's Player of the Week

Scores

Men's Soccer

Washington	0
Western Md.	2
Washington	0
N.C. Wesleyan	3
Washington	0
Ursinus	1
Washington	4
Marymount	2
Washington	3
Gallaudet	2

Field Hockey

Washington	1
Haverford	3
Washington	1
Randy Macon	0
Washington	1
J.H.U.	2
Washington	1
Mary Wash.	3
Washington	3
Widener	2

Volleyball

Washington	2
Wilmington	1

Volleyball Ready: Intense MAC Bouts Ahead

See Article, pg. 10

Election '92: Who are YOU voting for?

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: cloudy, chance of showers, H in mid 50s
Weekend: cloudy, Saturday morning showers, H 50-55, L mid-upper 30s

Volume 63 Number Nine • October 30, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Library and Lit House Celebrate Saturday

John Barth to Read "Browsing" on Family Day

Tomorrow, Saturday October 31, is Family Day. This coincides with the Miller Library Celebration, celebrating the shelving of the 200,000th volume in the Clifton M. Miller Library.

Family Day events begin at 10 a.m. with a discussion moderated by President Charles H. Trout and Dean Gene Wubbels. "Washington College on its Way Toward the New Century" will take place in Norman James Theatre.

At 11:15, the Miller Library Celebration begins on the Library Terrace. The keynote speaker is acclaimed Novelist John Barth. A Dorchester County native, Barth is a professor of English and Creative Writing at the Johns Hopkins University.

He is the author of numerous books, including Chimera, which won the National Book Award for fiction in 1973, and The Last Voyage of Somebody the Sailor, just released this year.

Barth will read "Browsing," a new work written for and commissioned by Washington College.

Other honored guests include Lucille Wallop, an Eastern Shore playwright and widow of the late novelist Douglass Wallop; Jonathan Segal, a 1966 WC graduate who is now senior editor at Alfred A. Knopf; and John Danz, the Baltimore businessman whose generous donation of books relating to Maryland has provided the 200,000th book for Miller Library.

The volume is a signed, first-edition copy of H.L. Mencken's Treatise on the Gods.

Photo by Marcia Lane/Mirrorner

Novelist John Barth

See "Family," page 13

College Woman Assaulted Behind Reid Dormitory

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Lacy Frazer, Assistant Field Hockey Coach and resident of Reid Hall, was the victim of a non-violent sexual assault on Friday, October 16.

Frazer returned to campus from her job at approximately 2 a.m. She parked her car in the lot behind Reid, near the row of trees which separates the Kent & Queen Anne's Hospital grounds from those of Washington College. As she left her car, she noticed a figure moving towards her from the vicinity of Minta Martin House.

The man began to run towards Frazer, and she panicked. She opted to make a run for Reid, rather than her car. When she unlocked the door, she turned and saw a short, heavy set white man about 5'10" with long hair about 15 yards behind her. The man dropped his pants and began to masturbate. Frazer shut the door behind her, afraid to enter her room and possibly let the assaulter know which room she lived in.

She went to the hall telephone to call Security, and heard the man trying to open the front door. Frazer phoned Security, who notified the police.

A similar incident, also involving a student, occurred in September about two blocks off campus, said Jerry Roderick, Director of Security. Both events are under investigation by the police and Security.

If anyone has seen a similar occurrence, or has information which would lead to the arrest of the perpetrator, please contact Security at ext. 7810.

CoffeeHouse Interim Project Begins

Amanda Burt
News Editor

Revamping the CoffeeHouse will complete the second phase of the Hodson Hall Renovation Project, which is designed to improve the basement of Hodson Hall so that it offers a "common place" for students to meet. The first phase was completed last year when the old bookstore was transformed into a study lounge.

A committee has been formed by the SGA to organize the Hodson Hall Interim Project, whose focus it is to make the CoffeeHouse as functional as possible for students until renovations to that area can proceed as planned.

While the Hodson Hall Renovation Project has been under consideration since the 1989-90 academic year, which was Douglass Cater's last year as President of the college, it has been slow to complete because of insufficient funding.

When the basement renovations in Hodson are completed, the CoffeeHouse and Snack Bar will be a combined space, and there will be an outdoor amphitheatre designed for concerts.

SGA President Jen Del Nero said that she is particularly concerned with the status of the renovations to the CoffeeHouse. "The space is crucial," she said. "It's the one centerpoint for students to meet socially, and it's been neglected for a while."

The problem of what to do with the CoffeeHouse while renovations are delayed is an issue that has been passed down through SGA administrations. Del Nero said that this year the SGA is not willing to sit idle and wait for the changes to occur.

"Renovations are something that students want and are expecting, and the longer renovations are delayed, the greater jeopardy we put WC social life in," she said.

Del Nero added that SGA, Student Affairs and Student Activities have all worked hard to do away with the image of WC as a "suitcase college," and the success of their work depends on the completion of the Hodson Hall renovations.

The idea for the Hodson Hall Interim Project originated with students concerned with the viability and status of the CoffeeHouse. When word was spread about the project, an anonymous donor gave $2,500 to provide supplies to make the CoffeeHouse functional until renovations begin.

"The idea of the interim project isn't to make the CoffeeHouse 'nice'," she said. "We want to do something with that space that will draw stu-

See "Coffee," page 13

Inside

What Question Six Really Means 5

Student Profile: Harned Runs Marathon 8

Wac Radio Hits The Air WKHS 90.5 9

SGA Investigates Evaluations D

WC Connects With Internet B

Election Special
Pages 5 - 7
Plus Exclusive Announcement of New Candidate

Editorial

This newspaper unequivocally endorses Bill Clinton for President of the United States.

You may ask, why do we endorse Clinton? and how can we get away with such a thing?

I'll address the second question first. 100 percent of our editorial staff is voting, or has voted via absentee ballot, for Clinton. So we may tend to have a bias. Declaring in print what that bias is is fairer to the general populous than having a slant, not declaring it, trying to be objective, and failing at that.

Maybe your student activities fee is this week paying for the endorsement of a candidate whom you do not support. However, I'll make the disclaimer right now that "The ideas and opinions reflected in this newspaper do not necessarily reflect those held by Washington College, its students faculty and staff." There.

Now, why are we endorsing Clinton? Let me give you the answer by way of a personal anecdote. Ronald Reagan was elected when I was in third grade (sorry, don't mean to make anyone feel old). At the time, I had the ideology of my parents, my teachers, and everyone in town — conservative (not surprising for a child of 8). I remember everyone talking about how evil Jimmy Carter was and how Reagan got the hostages released and how Reagan was going to end inflation and the gas crunch.

The older I got, the more liberal I got (much to the dismay of my dad and many of my readers, I'm sure). This of course will stop after a certain point — or I'll be an eighty-year-old anarchist. Which is kind of a neat picture, a little old lady on a motorcycle chucking handgrenades at "the establishment." But I digress.

What my point is is that I'm experiencing a sense of déja vu with the way Bush is handling his campaign. How can a single man attempt to take credit for the end of the Cold War, the fall of communism in Eastern Europe, the breakup of the Soviet Union and the new, improved nacho cheese on Doritoes (I made that one up). Especially when he's the same man that was head of the CIA during the Carter administration and negotiated to have the hostages released after Reagan was elected — with Bush conveniently as running mate (I didn't make this one up).

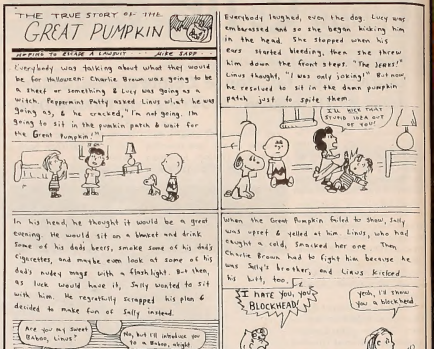
Forget Desert Storm. Not that I don't appreciate our veterans' efforts — that's not it at all. It's just that I wish their efforts hadn't been for such a shady and self-serving cause as George Bush's personal war. I'm sure his campaign advisors are kicking themselves nightly for not timing the war better. Yes, it was an efficient, well-run war. But no matter how you skin a cat, it's still a dead cat.

And why not Perot? Two words: Frank Perdue. But besides that, I see Perot as an "Indian giver" who can't make up his mind about if he wants to run, a bad boss who can't treat his campaign managers with the respect they deserve for simply supporting him to such an extent, and as a big businessman who wants to run America as a corporation — for profits, not people.

What Perot does do well is provide an outlet for the discouraged and disgusted, the people who are tired of party dogma and campaign spindoctoring. He'd make a good campaign ombudsman. But not a good president.

Why vote at all? Why vote for Clinton? Because Clinton offers what George Bush won't and Ross Perot can't: Change.

(see articles on campaign in this issue for more info.)



P.S. If you're a Maryland resident, vote for Question 6.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddish
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Brian Mathison
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspapers of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8280.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

Vahlbusch Gives Octoberfest Thumbs Up

To the Editor:

The Washington College faculty owes thanks and congratulations to the students of the International House for their faculty reception of Saturday, October 24th. Held in the House's tastefully redecorated commons room, the reception offered the delicious fruits of a month's hard work by students who wished to honor their teachers and promote that special sense of community that makes Washington College what it is.

The faculty members and spouses who attended were treated to a truly gemütlich evening, more worthwhile than Munich's Oktoberfest has ever been: music of Mahler and Beethoven, excellent conversation, superb food and drink. On the menu were three kinds of German beer, several German wines, hot spiced cider laced with good rum, freshly brewed coffee, nine sorts of elegant and tasty hors d'oeuvres, crusty home-baked country bread with butter and herb Camembert, handmade German cheesecake and Streuselkuchen, and much more. It was an honor to be invited and an honor to attend; it was an event not to be missed. Many thanks to all the students who made it possible.

Jefford Vahlbusch
Modern Languages Dept.

Holmes Wants Backstabbing to Stop

To the Editor:

I've had a belly-full of Fred Wyman's relentless personal attacks against WC Director of Athletics Geoff Miller ("Athletics Controversy," Oct. 23,1992). The most recent rode piggy-back on Seth Engel's vulgar commentary ("Rugby Founder Tired of Run-Around", Oct. 2, 1992).

I know nothing about the NCAA "self-report" or reasons for non-renewal of Wyman's contract. However, most of his complaints are clothed in concern for the well-being of athletics at the College, so let's look at the record.

Mr. Miller was hired after the retirement of Ed Athey, a living legend, who has respect and affection of all who know him.

The candidates for A.D. were presented with a clear set of objectives, and Miller was chosen over others in large measure because of success achieving similar goals for Guilford College (NC). His assignment at WC included 1) expanding recreational and intramural athletics; 2) moving the women's intercollegiate program toward parity with the men's; and 3) upgrading athletic facilities.

Miller is certainly not the only person responsible for progress toward these goals. But haven't you noticed the Johnson Lifetime Fitness Center, the enhanced number and condition of playing fields, the cumulative won/lost record of the women's teams at WC in the last three years, or a more beneficial conference affiliation for WC? (How about the larger number of club sports, of which rugby was one of the first?) Could these have occurred without a highly competent and professional athletic director?

Wyman's coaching skills, the won/lost records of his teams, and the visibility he provided for Washington College are not in question. Neither does Miller's record of accomplishments deserve the abuse that Wyman has directed towards him. Miller's restraint and pro-

See "Holmes," page 5

Crisis

Scott Ross Koon

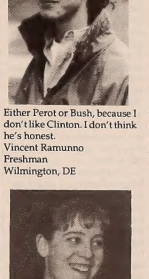
When probable voters were asked "Who would you vote for if the election were held tomorrow ?" in this past Wednesday's USA Today/CNN/Gallup Poll, 42% favored Bill Clinton, 31% favored George Bush, and 19% favored Ross Perot. The same poll also indicated that if Perot appeared unlikely to win, 42% of Perot's supporters would jilt him, and their votes would be evenly divided between George Bush and Bill Clinton.

This essentially indicates that there is a snowball's chance in Tahiti of Bush winning the election this Tuesday. George Bush is quite naturally aware of this, and so he has committed himself to a last ditch effort to get re-elected. Bush said that he would do whatever it takes to accomplish this task, but it is impossible for him to do what it takes to win this election. This is because in order for him to win, he must become someone else.

When the Berlin Wall came down, George Bush was quick to take credit. When brave Americans in uniform won a pointless war against Iraq, George Bush was quick to take credit. His popularity was without precedent. Every single idiot in the country loved George Herbert Walker Bush.

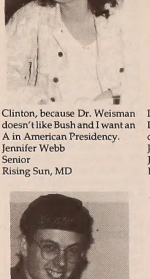
There were some of us out there, however, who were not so enamored of Mr. Bush. We pointed out that the same huge military machine which enabled the United States to win the Gulf War was funded by the huge Reagan debt. We pointed out that with reactionaries like Bush in the White House it was only a matter of time before the fascists would gain a majority in the Supreme Court. We pointed out that Bush serves the class interests of the capitalist class and that this would produce a concentration of capital in the hands of a small percentage of the population and that this would prove to be devitalizing to the economy. We pointed out that neither Bush nor Reagan has been sensitive to the interests of women, blacks, gays, homeless people, the elderly, the young, or families—in other words, middle America. And you folks out there didn't listen.

You didn't listen when we wrote letters to the editor. You didn't listen when we protested in the streets. You didn't listen when we screamed in your faces. And now, America, you want to elect a liberal, left of center, bonafide pinko Vietnam War protesting draft dodging Democrat.



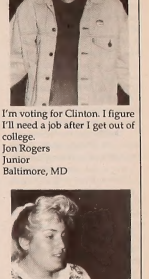
Well, it is a bit late for that now, isn't it? Twelve years ago, sure, there was plenty of time, but today there is a four billion dollar Republican deficit, a global recession, homelessness, the AIDS epidemic, health care costs, and much much more. Twelve years ago, a mere liberal could have solved everything

See "Koon," page 4

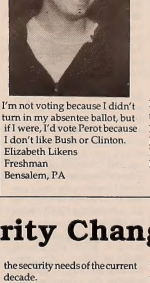


CAMPUS VOICES

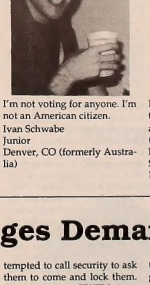
By Dude



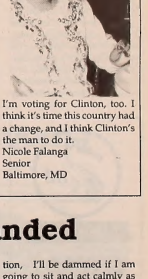
Who are you voting for and why?



Either Perot or Bush, because I don't like Clinton. I don't think he's honest.
Vincent Ramunno
Freshman
Wilmington, DE



Clinton, because Dr. Weisman doesn't like Bush and I want an A in American Presidency.
Jennifer Webb
Senior
Rising Sun, MD



I'm voting for Clinton. I figure I'll need a job after I get out of college.
Jon Rogers
Junior
Baltimore, MD

I'm not voting because I didn't turn in my absentee ballot, but if I were, I'd vote Perot because I don't like Bush or Clinton.
Elizabeth Likens
Freshman
Bensalem, PA

I'm not voting for anyone. I'm not an American citizen.
Ivan Schwabe
Junior
Denver, CO (formerly Australia)

I'm voting for Clinton, too. I think it's time this country had a change, and I think Clinton's the man to do it.
Nicole Falanga
Senior
Baltimore, MD

Open Forum: Security Changes Demanded

Jennifer Fellows

Jennifer Fellows is a senior psychology major from Chevy Chase, Maryland.

As I sit in my dorm room and ponder the past three years at Washington College, I think about the things that have changed for the better and things that have stayed the same, for the worse. A new President, new academic buildings, and more minority acceptance are all things that I can feel proud of when saying "I go to Washington College." One thing that has remained consistent throughout the past three years is the amount of crime, assault, burglary, and harassment on this campus. As this school increases its reputation within American colleges, the most profitable aspect of WC is the size. With no more than one thousand students, WC is smaller than many of the high schools in my hometown. You would think that in a private institution so small, the level of security would be so tight that one incident of crime occurring with in the existence of the college would be a catastrophe. The security system should then be reexamined, evaluated, and changed to to fit the security needs of the current decade.

On a campus with fifteen academic and administrative buildings, sixteen dormitory areas, and eleven parking areas, which need to be patrolled every night, I do not find the current security system at Washington College adequate.

I will start with the dorms. Exactly one week following an assault in Minta Martin, I returned home to the dorm at 1:30 a.m. After parking in the hospital parking lot, because there were no spaces available in the parking lots close to the dorm, I entered in the building through the basement door. To my surprise, security had yet to lock the doors in the building. When I got to my room, I attempted to call security to ask them to come and lock them. The phone rang SEVEN times and no one answered. Irritated, I ventured out of my room. Perchance and luck, a security guard was sauntering down the hall. After informing him of the unlocked, door he annoyingly replied, "I know, I'm just getting to them. Running a little late tonight, I'm on my own." Now I ask you, after the incident that occurred the previous week, shouldn't the doors been locked a tad bit earlier, if not locked all day?

What about the unanswered phone? I understand when calling security, it takes awhile to transfer calls to their handy walkie-talkie system. But, if in an emergency situation, I'll be dammed if I am going to sit and act calmly as the phone rings and rings. I am sure I could call 911 and have the convenient Chestertown PD ride their bikes up here faster than it would take to get a phone call through security. I believe a more convenient phone system should be installed to cut down the risk waiting for someone to answer the phone.

Every year, the dorms have had problems with unwelcome visitors entering the buildings. Yes, some selfish people prop the doors so they don't have to get off their butts to open the door for their guests. Fine, but is security patrolling these buildings at night? The one trip through the dorms to lock the doors is not enough. Raise the penalty for those who do prop the doors open and enforce them. Don't just slap these people on the back of the hand.

See "Fellows," Page 5

From "Fellows," page 3

On the normal Friday and Saturday night, one can find approximately four security guards on duty. Washington College has a reputation as a party school. The young and old come into the college, from town, on the weekends to have a good time. If some "bone head" props open a door and a psycho townie gets in the building, suddenly, it is the dorm's fault for propping the doors, and security comes down on us for " Leaving ourselves open to crime."

I appreciate the fact we now have the Chestertown Police Department patrolling campus. However, I do not find a police officer riding a rinky-dink mountain bike, patrolling the dorms for potential underage drinkers, and handing out $100 citations for open containers, effectively combating security problems. That's great that the school can get $100 out of me if I am outside with a beer. Take that $100 and do something useful. Reopen the coffee house. Promote more college unity, and provide a safe place for the students to have a good time. College students drink, and there is no effective enforcement that can be implemented to stop it. I find it ridiculous that security spends more time trying to find underage drinkers and not enforcing other aspects of security on this campus. Give us back the C-House, and let us have fun. No, I am not referring to underage drinking and the like. Return the Coffee House to its original form. Enforce the underage drinking policy as much as you like; at least we are safe on campus, and the focus of campus activity is in one area. I think that my fathers $18,000 is worth that much.

As far as the parking situation on campus is concerned, I feel that before the administration decides to spend another $40 million on new buildings, take a walk behind Minta Martin , Reid, Caroline, and Queen Anne, and honestly tell me that those new buildings should be the first priority. I personally invite you, President Trout and the entire administration to take a walk with me in these parking lots and around campus at night. The implementation of flood lights on the side of the buildings solves nothing. If anything, it creates some decent hiding places. I am sure you have been on walks before, but what has been done? President Trout, what would you say to my father if I was attacked while walking to my dorm from my car that had to be parked in the hospital lot because there was no parking anywhere else? "Sorry Mr. Fellows. The administration could not find it within the budget to place adequate lighting behind the women's dorms. The parking lots behind those dorms are such a hassle to deal with and redesigning them would not prove worthy. The students need to learn not to park their cars in unsafe areas. By the way, would you like to donate $1 million to the building of our new academic centers?" Deal with the hazards on campus before you make a mess out of an area you just finished refurbishing.

The parking lots behind the women's dorms are the worst on campus. Is the parking lot behind Reid supposed to accommodate Caroline and Queen Ann as well? If not, what makes you think I am going to park in Talbot's parking lot and run back to Caroline at midnight?

How much money does the school make on parking tickets alone? If I have to pay $7.50 in order to feel safe and park close to my dorm at night, not across campus, I guess that is the price I should pay. There is a more efficient way to use the land behind these dorms. Yes, redesign the parking lots so I don't have to pay any more tickets to feel protected. If the college feels that better parking areas are not the answer, then limit the number of students that can have cars on campus. The problem is not going to go away and something has to be done.

I am sure that every year complaints have been made regarding security changes. This year I am not complaining, I am demanding changes be made. I find it sick that my family should have to worry about my safety in an institution so small and so expensive. There are benefits to a small campus, it seems personal safety, at Washington College, is not one of those benefits. Tighten the security on this campus or the college will find that the next assault will result in a law suit that will far exceed the cost of upgrading the security system.

Transferring to WC from a large university, I found the security policies on campus were asking for trouble. At Butler University, my dorm was set to flames on the side of the two weeks. Some ass thought it funny to set the trash rooms on fire. Finally, the school clamped down hard on security. Large campus universities implement such strict policies that one can feel protected and even pay less money to go to school. Is it too much to ask to feel safe in my own dorm room?

Implement new systems in dorm security. Sure, it's a pain in the ass to have to unlock the door every time you enter your dorm, but you keep you house or apartment building locked, do you not? Times are changing, and Chestertown is not a quaint Victorian town anymore. Need I mention the street corners in C-Town where such "legal" activities take place? Wake up, this is the 90's and a band full of security guards is not going to fulfill the security needs of today. Hire more guards on this campus to achieve the safety my dad thought was included in the rent fee for my room. Back off of the carefree college student trying to have fun. You can not stop the drinking on campus, and it should not be the focus of the security guards. Make it possible for us to see another day and look back on the good times we should be having at college.

My suggestions for the improvement of Washington College are as follows:

1. Hire more security guards to patrol the campus in a fashion that is successful in preventing harm to the college. Not reporting events after the fact.
2. Upgrade the telephoning system to reach security. Hire a dispatcher to take the calls, provide immediate support in an emergency situation, and alert the security guards to the situation.
3. President Trout, take a walk with me at night around this campus so I can point out the areas that cause great fear in students and create potential security problems.
4. Have security increase the patrolling of the dorms to further prevent occurrences and close all propped doors.
5. Redesign the parking areas behind Reid and Minta Martin.
6. Place adequate lighting around the entire campus. Students can be found any where at any time on campus. We deserve to feel safe.
7. Design a new security system with in the dorms. Keep the doors locked at all times, or install time locks on the doors that require an ID card to get in. Hire security guards to patrol one specific door. Make entrance in and out of the dorm through one door and require a college ID to enter. Register guests within the dorms. Sure, this is a pain in the ass, but how many more cases of assault or harassment will it take to change your mind?
8. Reopen the Coffee House to its original purpose. This campus was more united when parties were allowed in the C-House, beer was served in the same area as well as the food, and you could interact with the entire campus. Let us know that the focus of attention is in a central area ON CAMPUS, and therefore, we can be guarded more carefully.
9. Put off the construction of these new buildings and focus on the contemporary security needs of Washington College.
10. Create a stronger awareness of the dangers on campus.
11. If the Chestertown PD is going to be on campus, make their priority to focus on the security needs of the college, not the underage drinking (Forget the bikes guys. Honestly, it does harm to the impact of your presence on a college campus).

My intention is not to insult the character or the performance of the current security guards. I just feel that new systems and techniques need to be executed to prevent the risks of the 90's. Hire more people and make security more accessible to students. Stop focusing on underage drinking and illegal parking. I illegally parked my car there for a reason. I do not want you to have to call home and tell my father something tragic happened to me.

Make Washington College an institution that is secure. No place is resistant to crime, but I feel WC could become more resistant and could uphold a better reputation than it already does. The tuition that is paid to this college is for a purpose. Certain accommodations should not have to be demanded. To college should provide students with the feeling that they are well protected. Security does a great job breaking up parties and unlocking your room when you are locked out, but for $18,000 I feel I deserve a little bit more.

From "Holmes," page 3

fessionalism are nowhere more evident than in his refusal to respond to these attacks.

In truth, Miller needs no help from me, would never have asked anyone else to defend him, and probably prefers that I had not written this letter. He knows those with the courage to make difficult decisions always have their critics.

However, some years ago I watched silently as another friend and colleague endured a similar self-serving personal attack. He asked friends not to respond to those who were trying to trash his reputation. Regrettably, we acquiesced as he suffered. There have been too many times when a "don't-rock-the-boat, it will only make it worse" philosophy led to unspeakable injustice to individuals, people and nations. Half-truths, conjured-up conspiracies and the big lie shouldn't be quietly tolerated.

Anyone who has really tried to get to know Miller realizes how absurd Wyman's attacks have become. There are many students on the hill who are beneficiaries of the programs Miller has implemented. When Miller chooses to leave WC it won't be because of Wyman's negative campaign. Instead, he will have been offered a new and bigger challenge elsewhere.

Wyman has contributed positively to the well-being of the community in other ways. But his persistent attacks on Miller distract from those contributions and harm the college he professes to care about. He would benefit and grow personally by putting this matter behind him.

As for Engel, the crude language in his letter renders his "respectful" resignation from the Rugby Club an oxymoron. damages his own credibility and serves his former teammates' cause quite poorly.

Dal Holmes
Associate Director of Admissio

Political Science Professor Comments on Election

Weissman Says 'No More Bush'

Ed Weissman
Political Guru

Why Clinton will win

Next Tuesday, Bill Clinton will win the presidential election for many reasons. The most important of which is no president has survived the economic (unemployment and economic growth rates) and approval numbers "enjoyed" by the incumbent in the summer prior to the election. To some extent, an election can be seen as a referendum driven by these basic numbers. The question: "are you better off now than you were four years ago?" is as predictively powerful today as it has ever been. [In essence, by the way, the Whigs used it against Marty Van Buren in 1840.] But the basic numbers also impact the election results through a variety of intervening variables. These basic numbers in the summer before the election encourage or retard campaign contributions, affect the willingness of good quality campaign and media aides to sign onto campaigns, and encourage or discourage other candidates from campaigning with and sharing organizations with the presidential candidates.

In 1988, those few voters who thought the economy was bad gave 64% of their votes to the Democrat. Most voters thought the economy was good and the Republican got 54% of those votes. Of the tiny minority who thought the economy was good and the best was yet to come, 75% voted for the Republican. This year most Americans think the economy is in bad shape and getting worse. Project the above numbers onto the economic realities and perceptions of 1992 and prediction is easy: Clinton wins.

Why Bush should lose

Bush will lose. As Al Gore pointed out, "it is time for him to go." He will not only lose because of the state of the economy and the predictions made by the general theory of presidential elections, he will lose because he deserves to. It is time for him to go. He has sold out to bigots. He has no vision. And he is deeply implicated in criminal activities. It is time for him to go. He has made one thing clear: the term American Conservative is an oxymoron. The revolution cut this country off from the roots from which conservatism comes and is nourished. Real conservatism is the past making peace with the future. So-called American conservatism is bigotry, reaction, and the liberation of greed. The AIDS epidemic illustrates the point. At its onset, because the Reagan-Bush administration was deeply bigoted and evil, they did nothing. Of course, they were not just prejudiced, and criminal — they were moronic in thinking the epidemic would not spread to the general population. And Bush was part of that loop. It is time for him to go.

Bush has governed by mixing hatred and denial. It is time for him to go. Given the developing evidence in Iraqgate, it just might be the case that it is time for him to go . . . to jail.

Bush = Death

See "Abortion," page 10

Abortion Referendum

Jill Sakaduski
Kent County News

On Tuesday, voters will have the opportunity to vote on Question 6, a referendum on Maryland's abortion law.

Passed by the legislature last year, the new law has been on hold since it was petitioned to referendum.

The new Maryland law would keep abortion legal within the state even if the Supreme Court overturns its decision in Roe vs. Wade.

The existing law, which requires abortions to be conducted in hospitals, that parents of a minor be notified and that women be made aware of the alternatives to abortion, would be replaced by the new law if the majority of Marylanders choose to vote for Question 6.

In nine and a half pages, the new law explains the legal protection of a woman's right to an abortion. The law allows an abortion until the point in a pregnancy when the fetus is capable of surviving outside of before it got out of hand. But now, all a liberal will be able to do is apply a medium sized band-aid to unemployment and reverse a few of the Republicans more odious policies. It's all over. Bill Clinton cannot save the American republic. None of the major candidates can.

From "Koon," page 3

So you might as well vote for me. I realize that I earlier endorsed Clinton, but I'm changing my mind. I'm endorsing myself. Yes, that's right, I'm throwing my hat into the ring. So what if I'm twenty-four years old and not legally eligible for the Presidency anyway. Let them try to stop me from taking office. I'll superglue their feet to the floor and force them to listen to my Jack Jones impersonation. (You know, the guy who sings the theme from "The Love Boat").

Naturally, I don't expect you to vote for me without knowing how I stand on the issues. This is my platform.

- The Federal Deficit—Sell Texas to the Japanese and keep the change.
- Homelessness—Confiscate all vacation houses and turn them into public housing.
- The Health Care Crisis—Eliminate for profit medical care.
- AIDS—Use the change left over from selling Texas to the Japanese to fund a massive research effort.
- Racism—Incarcerate all known racists so they will not have the chance to infect innocent children with their venomous ideology.
- Sexism-Ditto.
- Economic Instability—Eliminate currency. Instead base currency on time in work, so that the basic unit of currency will be one hour's work. Apply technological increases in efficiency to the value of the currency so that everyone's standard of living will rise at the same rate. (This is not my idea, I stole it. But that doesn't mean it does not belong on the platform).
- Governmental Reform—The American Constitution is an antique. I'll write a better one.
- The Education System—I will establish one.

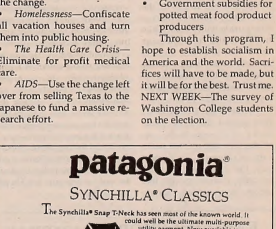
I am the only candidate of real change. Don't be fooled by the slick politicians. Only I promise:

- Free liposuction for the poor
- Duckpin bowling as the new national sport
- Repeal of the lawn dart ban
- A gnome on every lawn
- Government subsidies for potted meat food product producers

Through this program, I hope to establish socialism in America and the world. Sacrifices will have to be made, but it will be for the best. Trust me.

NEXT WEEK—The survey of Washington College students on the election.



$$ FREE TRAVEL AND RESUME EXPERIENCE$$
Individuals and Student Organizations wanted to promote SPRING BREAK, call the nation's leader.
Inter-Campus Programs 1-800-327-6013

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
The Last of the Mohicans
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 30 JIMMY LANDRY D.C. Singer-Songwriter Returns
SAT 31 GAIL BLISS & THE LONE STARLETS and OUR HALLOWEEN PARTY Swing, Country, Boogie

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap T-Neck has been most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.

10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442

We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

Rasmussen Enthusiastically Endorses Clinton

Chris "Chief" Rasmussen
Political Correspondent

It has been hard in the last few years to be a Democrat. I have suffered for following a party that has been electorally unattractive, often incompetent, and difficult to defend. I voted, for example, for Mike Dukakis. This was not because I was enthusiastic about the Democratic nominee (who was?), but because I was unenthusiastic toward George Bush. I also didn't want the continuation of the fiscally irresponsible, self-centered eighties. While my vote for Dukakis is difficult to defend four years later, I feel my vote against Bush and the policies of Reagan and Bush are very defensible. This coming election, however, is not just a referendum on Republicanism for me. I am, unlike in 1988, actually optimistic toward a Democratic presidency. The reason is simple. While in previous elections I would vote for the lesser of two evils, this year I find that the Democrats have put together a ticket which understands government, know how it works, and can actually coherently explain their vision to Americans. In short, I am enthusiastic toward my vote for Bill Clinton.

In many ways, this vote is a vote against the failed presidency of George Bush. As Michael Kinsley pointed out in a recent column: "for democracy, like capitalism, to work properly, it is not enough that success be rewarded. Failure must be punished. To re-elect an incumbent who has failed is to betray the principle of democratic accountability." By almost any standard, his presidency has failed. To borrow from Al Gore, the chant of "Four More Years" sounds like more of a threat than a promise. The economy has been at best stagnant, at worst in recession. While he does not deserve complete blame for the global economic downturn, he does deserve criticism for not having presented a coherent plan to deal with it. Indeed, he (and, before him, Reagan) had no plan to address long-term problems in the economy; inactive for years on crucial issues such as health-care cost containment, job retraining in a global economy, and the growing budget and trade deficit. During this campaign year, he has blamed Congress for his shortcomings. He pretended to be against big government, while never proposing to cut a governmental program voters like. He railed against pork-barrel politics, then handed out such programs like Santa Claus with a thyroid problem. Indeed, he has responded to our economic problems only this year, presumably because his campaign's focus groups demand him to. Like a death-bed patient bargaining desperately for his future, he has only recently (at the urging of Deputy President Baker) offered a coherent economic policy because he and his advisors felt his job was at risk.

On social issues, Bush doesn't deserve four more years. He was disinterested in the urban underclass until the Los Angeles riots. Rather than accept and trumpet Jack Kemp's calls for an urban policy, he ignored them. Instead of filling the Supreme Court with distinguished, qualified scholars, he has filled it with legal non-entities. Whatever you feel about the Clarence Thomas controversy, it seems clear that he was not the most qualified person for the Court, as Bush said. He is, instead, the most qualified pro-life black conservative, a rare commodity among legal scholars. With Roe v. Wade in danger, it is important to remember that the President will probably appoint at least two justices in the next four years. Two more Clarence Thomases, potentially changing policy for twenty or more years seems a great risk. It is also worth remembering that George Bush has appeased the far-right of his party, whether in the Republican platform (opposing all abortions, even in the case of rape or incest) or in the Republican convention's exclusionary rhetoric.

Finally, he has been a prisoner of the status quo in the realm of foreign policy, presumably his strength. Bush implicitly claims the Republican party won the Cold War. This overlooks the fact that successful Cold War policies, such as the arming of the Afgan rebels, were bipartisan. Beyond that, we did not so much "win" the Cold War as the other side lost it. It's like a boxer claiming victory when his opponent suffers a heart attack. In many ways, it was a Pyrrhic victory: triumphing over a doomed economic system while bankrupting ourselves in the process. Similarly, the Bush Administration triumphantly recalls the Gulf War, although the BNL Scandal ("Iraggate") gives evidence that we were fairly sympathetic toward his regime, indeed even providing them loans.

However, these past triumphs give us little comfort as we face the future. While we triumphed against the failed system of communism (apologies to Scott Koon), we face new, more peaceful but also more challenging, economic rivals in Japan and Germany. Furthermore, the post-cold war world is filled with moral ambiguities and unclear choices, whether the decisions lie in the Balkans or elsewhere. This is where George Bush is ultimately an insufficient choice to lead us in foreign policy. He was trained in the cold-war, but the world is no longer bipolar. The game has changed: it's like a checkers player attempting to be successful in three-dimensional chess. Bush, attempting to adapt to the new game with the old rules, has ultimately failed. He misjudged the former Soviet Union, the former Yugoslavia, Iraq, etc... He has failed to react against the repressive government of China. He provided aid to Russia only when Richard Nixon prodded him. In short, Bush is unsuited for the new challenges of foreign-policy.

Clearly, George Bush has failed and there isn't much chance for improvement in the second term. What, then, of Ross Perot? It is too easy to dismiss him as a paranoid investigator, one too enraptured by the conspiracy theories of the moment. Whatever you feel about these theories, it is clear that he has accepted and acted upon advice from less than stable characters, such as Sean Barnes (the guy who accused the Republicans of trying to discredit Perot's daughter).

It is less easy to dismiss Ross Perot, the policy-maker. He does provide much-needed emphasis on a crucial issue: the deficit. However, adopting his proposals (and even his own economic advisor doesn't endorse him) may damage the economy further, putting us in a deeper recession. Furthermore, other than cutting the deficit, what solutions does Perot propose? Basically, he offers the somewhat dishonest answer: "There are a lot of good answers out there. I'll pick one when I get there." In short, trust me.

Mr. Perot would have us run the government as a business. Fine. If Mr. Perot, or any of you, were hiring for the position of computer programmer, would you hire someone with no experience in the field? Would you hire someone who claims his lack of experience as a strength, saying that he is untainted by computers? Furthermore, would you hire someone who defends his lack of experience by claiming that he couldn't possibly do as badly as the last people who you hired? Of course not, and neither would Ross Perot. He is a candidate who has been successful in business only in an autocratic setting like EDS. In a setting which requires more compromise, such as Wall Street and General Motors, he has been a failure. Dealing with Congress, obviously, would entail more than not only giving orders, but also compromise. Mr. Perot seems incapable of that important quality.

Bill Clinton, my choice for President, has little of the failings of either Mr. Perot or the President. Unlike the President, Bill Clinton has a coherent economic policy, endorsing neither supply-side theory or traditional liberalism. He proposes rebuilding our infrastructure, spending $20 billion on a policy area neglected in the Reagan-Bush years but necessary for our economic future. He proposes a health-care plan that, according to a bipartisan panel, would save more money than either the status quo or the proposed Bush plan.

See "Rasmussen," page 12

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

$5 off any service over $20 with ad (one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexxus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2695 Chestertown, MD 21620

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0158

Independent Candidate Ross Perot Shakes Up Party Politics

Angie Smidga
Political Correspondent

As a supporter of Ross Perot, I say move over, Year of the Woman. Make way for a banner at least as catchy — the Year of the Offbeat Candidate.

And with groups like the Taberah World Mission predicting the end of the world for this Saturday — no kidding — there is perhaps no timelier occasion for those who wouldn't normally enter the political arena to make their views known. Despite the time pressure, some of them might actually deserve to be heard.

Ross Perot and vice-presidential stand-by James Stockdale have joined an election which is playing host, if not to many well-known independent candidates, then at least to some unusual party affiliates. Fifty-year-old Marjorie Mezvinsky, veteran reporter, mother of eleven and Democrat for Congress in largely Republican Philadelphia, is one example of a non-political insider running for office this year. And as a Democrat, she stands a fair-to-middling chance of riding in on presidential coat tails, energized by anti-incumbent sentiment.

Judging by the polls, Mr. Perot's bets might not be as sure. Much of the support which swelled his ranks during a dark spring for Democratic and Republican contenders has waned, and his slip in the polls after allegations of Republican sly tactics suggests that the majority of Americans no longer take him seriously. In a race against seasoned politicians with extensive party resources, Mr. Perot, who has never held public office, conducted what seems now a debilitatingly disorganized campaign. His drop from the race in July and Mr. Stockdale's remark in Monday's Washington Post indicating he knew only two weeks prior to the vice-presidential debate that he was still on the ticket smack of indecision and miscommunication.

Mr. Perot seems not to have mastered the attention to detail in politics which he so lucratively handled in business, and for those of us who long for a truly representative leader, it's a shame. Mr. Perot embodies the image of the rugged and savvy entrepreneur, and independence and self-made success remain definitively American ideals. His plain speech to voters and refusal to accept pay if elected appealed to many. His choice of a vice-presidential nominee reflected, moreover, less concern for political bulwarking — an actually heard-of candidate would have sufficed for that — and more deference to the military and academia, in just possibly an appropriate balance. A self-made billionaire and a professor of the classics at the nation's helm? And working for free? What could be more refreshing than the notion that capable and learned men and women who have never been political insiders might aspire to restore government "from you, not at you"? It seems the very fulcrum on which our elections should turn.

Three capable presidential candidates await next Tuesday's results, and though this is not likely to be a successful year for an independent bid, Ross Perot's presence has shaken up party politics and challenged them to put forward their very best. We've enjoyed an election year enriched by proof that America, like all mothers, does embrace her own, and also lets go. Mr. Perot lost support due to ill planning rather than incompetence, but his offbeat challenge might indeed have tuned the other candidates more keenly to America's needs. And if he happens to get a few votes for his trouble, good for him.

Bush's True Colors

James Morrison
Political Correspondant

Political choices made during the 1992 presidential campaign will have repercussions well into the next century. These choices are important and deserve every Americans' complete attention. The presidential candidates this year are all regarded as lame and self-centered. The question that we as voters have to ask is: which candidate is the lesser evil?

I am voting for incumbent President Bush. My reasons for this are rather simple and straightforward. Candidate Bill Clinton is a lying hypocrite. I'm not saying Bush is not a liar, rather I am saying that Bush is a lousy liar. Therefore, the truth is somewhat easier to see.

Bill Clinton has blown rosy smoke up everybody's ass. He has proposed programs to aid secondary education, the elderly, college students, welfare rejects, and God knows how many other special interest groups. It seems to me that Clinton has stuck his nose everywhere except the Pope's ass in his desire to become president. The fact of the matter is Clinton does not have the money, nor does he have any idea of how to get the money to support his programs short of sky-rocketing our taxes.

Clinton has said that America needs to get back to basics. He aims to make America self-sufficient in a GLOBAL economy. I can't imagine anything worse than regressing back to a pre-World War II national economic philosophy of separation from the world. The fact is that the world is too integrated to do that. Clinton is a fool for proposing this. Also, there is the question of Clinton's evasion of the draft. How can I trust someone of that sort of caliber to be the Commander-and-Chief of our armed forces?

Finally, Clinton has promised to enlarge the federal government. This is definitely not in our country's best interest. We have already witnessed what happens when governments become central—eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union—the list goes on and on. I'm not saying that we will end up as they did. However, it is still best for the states to remain with as much power as possible.

To conclude, I feel that Bill Clinton does not have a clear understanding of the way the world works. The programs he implemented in Arkansas have met with mixed results. I think the people in Arkansas want him to run for president so that maybe he will go away, and they won't have to deal with him as their governor.

Perhaps you should know that Ross Perot was my favorite candidate. However, by pulling out of the race and entering it again, I lost all faith in him.

Finally, Bush has my vote because I know that he is a lousy liar. The programs he has proposed are achievable. Global politics and economics are a field that Bush understands far better than Clinton. Bush has served in the armed forces and understands the emotions involved with serving our country. Most important, the federal government won't expand under Clinton's leadership.

Bill Clinton: A Lesser Evil?

Stephanie Tennyson
Political Correspondant

Why am I voting for the Clinton/Gore ticket? Well to begin with and I hate to say it, but he is the best of three possible evils. I am like a majority of Americans who are dissatisfied with the candidates that we must choose from on November 3 at the polls. I consider myself a die hard Democrat. I automatically feel compelled to cast my vote for Clinton, however my position did waiver. The only thing I knew when the campaigning began was that I could not stand another four years with Bush. For a while, I had considered supporting Perot, but that did not last long.

I believe that Clinton represents an "agent for change." We need to move our nation in a new direction and Clinton has a plan for the renovation of the economy, health-care system, and the educational system. I know that he is not a miracle cure for the state of America today, but I feel that he is willing to focus on the issues that are important to the U.S. He has not promised a solution for the deficit, but he intends to focus on domestic issues that affect each and everyone of us.

Clinton's plans for the future of America include a reform in the welfare system which Bush has not addressed at all, as well as a reform of the social justice system which is a major concern to many Americans. Another factor that has greatly influenced my decision to vote for Clinton has been his stance on women's issues. He has respect for women and desires to implement full funding for the Head Start program and other women's and infant's programs. He is pro-choice and supports minority rights.

Economically speaking, Clinton has wonderful ideas to stimulate economic growth. He has designed a government job-training program to either train out of work people or re-train people in other fields who have lost their jobs for various reasons. His platform includes an impressive public-works spending program, urban rival (Bush has no such plans), and also small-business and investment tax incentives. Another advantage in my eyes is his willingness to give the middle-class a tax cut while increasing the tax on upper income brackets and foreign corporations. Clinton's plans for health care also address the nation's growing problem of medical care costs and requires employers to provide insurance for their workers and their families or pay into a national health care "pool."

As far as education is concerned he wants to implement a National Service Institute. Under this program, no one will be denied a government loan for higher education for any reason. After graduation, they can repay the loan through taxes or through public-service work. Also, both major teacher's unions back him. He is pro-environment, whereas Bush has undermined environmental protection.

Clinton is my choice for President of the United States on November 3 because of his willingness to examine and act on issues of extreme importance to all of us, not just a small minority of the nation. Since as a sovereign nation our economy is also a factor of national security, he has promised to put the economy first. Although no one knows what will happen after the new President takes his oath of office, at least Clinton has demonstrated he will put the citizens of the United States first.

GREEKS & CLUBS
RAISE A COOL $1000
IN JUST ONE WEEK!
PLUS $1000 FOR THE MEMBER WHO CALLS!
No obligation. No cost.
You also get a FREE HEADPHONE RADIO
just for calling
1-800-932-0528, Ext. 65

Olde Towne Barbers
Flat Tops — French Braids
Frostings — Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

Week at a Glance

October 30 - November 5

Film Series: Paris Is Burning
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

30 Friday

Registration for Parents' Day
CAC, 3:00 p.m.-4:00 p.m.

31 Saturday

Parents Day
Registration & Coffee Hour, CAC, 9:00 a.m.-10:00 a.m.

Washington College On its Way Toward the New Century, Moderators, Charles H. Trout and Gene Wubbels, Norman James Theatre, 10:00 a.m.

Miller Library Celebration, Guest Speaker: John Barth, Miller Library Terrace, 11:15 a.m.

Parents' Luncheon, Hodson Hall, Main Dining Room, 12:30 p.m.-2:00 p.m., Admission: adults $5.25, children $3.75

O'Neill Literary House Press Demonstration, O'Neill Literary House, 2:00 p.m.-3:00 p.m.

Reception for Faculty, New Students and Families, Hynson-Ringgold House, 3:30 p.m.-5:00 p.m.

Open Halloween Reading, O'Neill Literary House, 8:30 p.m.

Halloween Party, O'Neill Literary House, 9:30 p.m., by invitation only

1 Sunday

Film Series (see above)

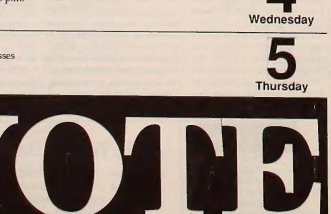
2 Monday

Film Series (see above)

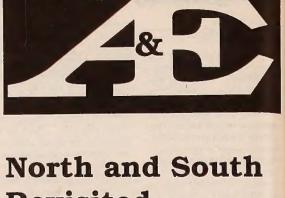
3 Tuesday

VOTE!

Polls are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. The polling place for those registered to vote in Chestertown is the Board of Education Building on Washington ave.



Election Night Reception, CoffeeHouse, 7:00 p.m. Sponsored by the Political Science Department and Phi Sigma Alpha

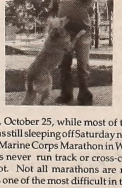


4 Wednesday

Adhoc Committee Meeting on Honesty, Study Lounge, Hodson Hall, 8:00 p.m.

5 Thursday

Advising Day, no classes



North and South Revisited

On whose side are you—the North or the South? You can choose ranks when two members of the Living History Associates re-enact the lives of Civil War soldiers; one representing the Confederate and the other the Union.

They will discuss daily and outdoor life, uniforms and equipment as well as their motivations to become a soldier and their opposing views of the war. Be sure not to miss this trip back to 1861 on Sunday, November 8 in the CAC at 1:00 p.m. For additional information call (410) 778-7849.

Student Profile:

Edward "Nate" Harned

On Sunday, October 25, while most of the Washington College Campus was still sleeping off Saturday night, Edward "Nate" Harned ran the Marine Corps Marathon in Washington, D.C. For anyone who has never run track or cross-country, 26 miles is a long trip on foot. Not all marathons are made equal and the Marine Corps is one of the most difficult in the country and is on par with the New York and Boston Marathons.

A junior history major from Arlington, VA, Nate describes himself as one of those people who is constantly looking for a new physical challenge. As for the marathon, he admits the he "didn't train really, but I wanted something that would force me to quit smoking." Despite his minimal training, Nate finished the marathon in a respectable 5 hours and 7 minutes.

Choosing Washington College because one of his friends attended the school, Nate is known to many people as one of "those Rugby guys." However, his future plans do not entail Rugby, but rather a career as a public high school history teacher, preferably in the South.

On campus, Nate also works "with the rats" as their caretaker in the psychology department. He enjoys travelling and has visited Turkey as well as ventured cross-country with two friends after high school. After graduation, Nate hopes to travel abroad to Ireland to "meet some Irish chick," something he has found difficult to do in the states.

A graduate of Arlington High School, Nate took seven years of Spanish and is a former rower. He highly recommends Fuddrucker's half-pound hamburgers as the "best damn hamburgers in the world."

Washington College: On The Air

Jennifer Reddish
A & E Editor

Have you listened to the radio lately? If you have tuned into WKHS lately, then you've probably heard a fellow WC student on the air. There's no excuse for not knowing about WKHS. Not just any high school radio station, WKHS is the fifth largest in a 200 mile radius and has 17,800 watts of power. It can be heard in Baltimore and Annapolis, MD as well as Dover, DE and Philadelphia, PA.

Washington College's involvement in the radio station began last semester when Kent County High School offered adult continuing education classes in radio station disc jockeying. There was a great interest in the program on campus, including double art and business major Whitney Myrus who has had his own show since last semester. His on-air session, which now features senior transfer student Matt Langan, mostly plays alternative music. The majority of the show's tunes stem from the duo's own CD collections — which has 400 discs.

However, Myrus and Langan, are not content with just one style of music. They play some classic rock here and there, including The Grateful Dead, The Eagles, The Who, Led Zeppelin and The Spin Doctors. As he explains, "I like to play the songs by bands that don't get a lot of air-play, but are just as good."

However, Myrus's and Langan's show also features random samplings of Public Enemy tunes, such as "Fight the Power" and "Bring the Noise," despite WKHS's policy prohibiting rap music. As he states, "I play Public Enemy because the song "Fight the Power" calls for all people to stand up, not for black people to rise up and kill the white man. Rap is the new avant garde — groups like Public Enemy are doing new things people have never heard before."

No one has complained about the rap music as of yet. Myrus plans to keep Public Enemy as part of his program, explaining, "if people like ... Hillary Clinton would stop trying to ban rap music and listen to lyrics, then they would understand what it's all about." However, Myrus respects the Kent County Board of Education's concerns about the content of the radio programs. WKHS's call letters stands for Kent County High School, from which it draws a great deal of listeners. At their young "level of education and level of maturity," Myrus recognizes that the listeners might not be able to understand the artistic statement behind such works as Ice-T's "Cop Killer" and take the messages the songs convey as literal commands.

At the same time, he defends Cop Killer against its bad press, stating, "We need Ice-T. He represents the feelings of the minority population, namely the young black man. He is making a statement about the situation in Los Angeles and about the police situation. [The public] cutting him down only makes him bigger. People are too ready to judge a by surface appearances."

Myrus's opinions concerning "Cop Killer" are even more intriguing when learning that he is in the Navy and served as a Shore Patrolman after boot camp. Despite his short service in the position, he understands the difficult life of police officer. Yet he does not claim that the dangers of their job excuses them from improprieties like those seen in Los Angeles.

As you can see, Myrus and Langan are not your everyday disc jockeys. Perhaps its is time to check out WKHS for a little Dead and some Public Enemy. Langan often is heard playing riffs and chords on the guitar from the songs before they play them on the radio.

However, don't miss other Washington College students' and faculty members' shows on WKHS. Weekday mornings feature Ken "the Ken Man" Pipkin from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. Teri Turmel, of the Student Activities Office, rocks the airwaves from 5 to 7 p.m. on Tuesdays, the same time as Myrus's and Langan's Thursday show. Brian Coleman and Bruce Alexander wrap up the week with their music fugue from 10-11:30 p.m. on Fridays.

Future radio shows include live jam sessions with local acts, including Derry Berry and Alagia, who performed last month in the CoffeeHouse and at Andy's in town. For requests or just friendly banter, call WKHS at 778-4249.

Scott's Paris Is Burning

Scotty Graham
AV Guy

Paris is Burning is a documentary chronicling the lives of gay Balls in New York City during 1987. The movie's main focus concerns gay life in the city and how homosexuals deal with the exile society forces upon them. (The "Balls" are competitions in which homosexual men compete in a variety of ways for trophies and recognition.)

The movie also follows the lives of "House Mothers" as well as those of some of the people in the houses. ("Houses" are groups of gay men who help stand up for each other and protect each other). The end of the film features a return to these people's lives in 1989 to see how they have changed.

I found this documentary to be like most of the documentaries I have seen in my lifetime: informative and boring. This particular movie was interesting to me, as it should be to most people, because of the present gay movement in America. I wanted to know more about what was going on and not Hollywood's poetic creations with happy endings. So, I found all that in this movie: suffering, pain, and also love and triumph. Unfortunately all of these things are not experienced like a movie but are explained by the people who lived it. This story-telling technique just doesn't carry as well when seeing a life on the screen in 365 colors.

To make it simple, this is a dry documentary about the times and troubles of gay, transsexual, and transvestite men in New York city in the late 1980's. It is informative, but I did not find it emotionally provocative or moving. See this movie for its informative content not for an escape from reality.

FAMILY BOOK NOOK
All "in stock" Books DISCOUNTED!
Hard Cover Books - 15% Off
New Paperback Books - 10% Off
Pre-Read Paperbacks - 50% Off
Discover our Pre-Read Paperbacks. Credit for Your Gently Read Paperbacks - BROWSERS WELCOME!
Washington Square Shopping Center - near Super Fresh

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown
Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

gallery 5
Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

Hands Out, Target Tutoring Receive Service Awards

Washington College students Maria Jerardi, Elisa Hale, Jennifer Del Nero, and Stephany Slaughter were honored at the Kent County Community Service Fair, Saturday, October 12th.

Hands Out, an organization established in part by Jerardi, received the award for an outstanding contribution in human services. This organization is designed to seek out needs in the community and draws on student manpower to address them. Past projects of the organization include: "Adopt-A-Family," a food and clothing drive for the needy; "Habitat for Humanity," dedicated to putting low-income families in better housing; maintenance of the Echo Hill Outdoor School; barn painting for Camp Fairlee Manor, a camp for the disabled; and a tree planting to help Kent County Recycling celebrate Earth Day. Both Jerardi and Hale were honored by this award.

Target Tutoring, a program designed and implemented by Stephany Slaughter and Del Nero, in affiliation with Hands Out; is intended to help "at risk" students in their pursuit of education goals. By carefully matching the needs of each student with the strengths of their tutors, Target Tutoring allows for a personalized supplement to regular education. Chestertown Middle School principal Lloyd W. Taylor remarked on the program, "Kids look up to college students. When they talk...kids listen."

Maria Jerardi is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jerardi of Columbia, MD. Jennifer Del Nero is the daughter of Mrs. Mazie M. Del Nero of Stormont Circle, Baltimore, MD. Stephany Slaughter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Slaughter of Elkton, MD. Elisa Hale is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hale of Windor, CT.

-Courtesy of WC News Bureau

From "Abortion," page 5

the mother's womb, or beyond viability in cases where the life of the mother is in jeopardy, or the fetus is deformed.

The parental notification clause in the new law suggests that a physician performing an abortion must contact the parents of a minor unless she would be subject to physical or mental abuse, appears mature enough to decide without parental consent, or for other reasons, it is in her best interest to withhold the information.

"People need to understand the balance between the interest of parents and the health and well-being of minors," Maryland For Choice Press Secretary Maura Keefe said. Maryland For Choice, made up of more than 57 organized groups, is focused on the health concerns and liberty of private decisions, Keefe said.

"The parental notification clause is a big scam," said James Miller of Human Life International. "There's no part of the law which states that parents can't be notified after the operation has already been performed."

Miller, whose organization strongly believes that abortion demeans humanity, also said that inspections of these clinics are not always required by law.

Keefe argues that without guidance to a safe, legal abortion, women are forced to come up with their own alternatives which could take away their rights and jeopardize their health. Whether a matter of health, religious freedom or private decision, MFC supports Question 6 entirely, Keefe said.

Suds 'n' Soda
"Your Store for Convenience"
Rt. 213 & Rt. 297
Chestertown, MD.
1 mi. North of Campus
778-5077
OPEN 7 DAYS
6 a.m.- 12 mid.

WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS!!

FREE IMPRINTING!! of first color on custom T-Shirts
Factory Direct!!
Sports Teams * College Clubs
Fraternity & Sorority Functions
Call now to find out how affordable custom printing really is!
Mention this ad and get $25 off your first order! 12 pc. min.
T-Line (410) 778-5622

SGA Report

Alumni Council Speaker

Kathy Wurzbacher '83, President of the Alumni Council came and spoke to the SGA on October 20th. The Alumni Council hopes to bring about more interaction between the students and alumni in the future. The SGA has formed a committee to help with future events.

Class Officers' Reports

Sophomores — discontinuing the taxi service which will be reinstated at the beginning of next year, planning the run for the spring and the money raised will be going into the scholarship fund

Juniors — attempting to raise money for the B.U.S.H. project

Executive Officers' Reports

Vice President - Calendar Events Committee met 10/4/92 and is seeking to be able to put up daily events announcements in the dining hall and attempting to find funding. Concerns about freshmen with AP credits transferring out of Forms of Lit and Comp and missing the freshman experience was raised and professors are being polled.

Treasurer _ working budget for the year was overestimated by $4000; Ice Hockey fulfilled their fund raising goals from initiation fees and has been made an official club and has SGA normal funding.

Social Chair — The Connells will play Nov. 6th in the LFC at 7:30, tickets available at the door $8 students/$12 all others

SCC - Academic Dishonesty Committee is interested in revising the honor code - all of those interested see Bridgette Winchester

Presidential Announcements

- Students interested in the political science area and wanting work experience are urged to contact Kathy Bohn "Lead of Leave" at 1-800-99-CHANGE.
- A review board is concerned about the survey evaluations done by students about their courses at the end of the semesters. They were typed and given to the professors a few months later in order to keep the students anonymity - but this past spring they were given to the professors directly with the students handwriting as well as year in school the major and other pertinent information. The committee is concerned and is investigating the best financial way to return to more of the old system and keep the student's anonymity.
- On Sunday the local library is having Apple Day for kids and they need volunteers from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Contact Jen Del Nero, ext. 8500 for information

Academic Standing Committees

Standing Committees

Academic Council
Dean Wubbles, Chair
Professor Amt
Professor Lin
Professor Gillin
Professor Premo, At-Large
Christy Albright
Lynn Clifford

Academic Technology:
Dean Wubbels, Chair
Professor Baldwin
Professor Cades
Professor Roat
Professor Shoge
Professor Lin
Professor Tubbs
Dr. Bishop
Professor Verville, ex-officio
Jay Meranchik, ex-officio
Justin Cann
Harrison Gallagher
Sherry Menton

Admissions And Academic Standing:
Professor Daigle, Chair
Professor Siemen
Professor Weissman
Dean Sansing
Kevin Coveney
Dal Holmes
Dean McIntire or Maxcy
Dr. J. Hamilton
Dawn Israel
Elisabeth O'Hara
Harrison Gallagher

Advisory Committee On Appointments And Tenure:
President Trout, Chair
Dean Wubbles
Professor Lin
Professor Mills, At-Large
Professor O'Connor
Professor Newell

Appeals Committee:
Professor Verville
Professor Premo
Professor Roat
Professor Spilich
Professor Tatum

Athletics Committee:
Professor Ford, Chair
Professor Malone
Professor Parcel
Professor K. Smith
Geoff Miller
Jennifer Sloan
Ted Greeley
Matthew Boyle
Melissa Harmeyer

Board Of Publications:
Professor Striner, Chair
Professor DeProspo
Professor Tubbs
Jessica Davies, Pegasus Advisor
Barbara Heck, Elm Advisor
J. Tarin Towers, ELM editor

Calendar Events:
Joseph Holt, Chair
Dean Sansing
Dr. J. Hamilton
Jessica Davies

Patricia Trams
Geoff Miller
Professor Maloney
Professor Andrews
Professor Clarke
Professor Cousineau
Professor T. Pabon
Christy Albright
Sara Boggess
Mr. Jeff Lim
Lauren Bedell, ex-officio
Dennis Berry, ex-officio
Teri Turmel, ex-officio

All-Campus Judiciary:
Dean Sansing, Chair
Christy Albright, Vice Chair
Professor Brien
Professor Briggs
Professor Fessler
Professor Finnegan (Alt.)
Professor Wilson (Alt.)
Professor Walsh
Dean McIntire
Dean Maxcy
Justin Cann
Gregory Giobbe (Fall 1992)
Zylia Knowlin (Spring 1993)
Renee Guckert
Stacey Sherman
Chris Vaughn
Ryan Mahoney, alternate
Jennifer Sloan, alternate

Faculty Affairs Committee:
President Trout
Dean Taylor
Professor Day, Chair
Professor Horne
Professor Verville
Professor Pabon (At-Large)
Professor Amt (At-Large, Untenured)

Faculty Finance Committee:
Professor Cades, Chair
Professor N. Smith
Professor Striner

Fringe Benefits Committee:
Dean McIntire, Chair
Professor N. Smith, ex-officio
Professor Fall
Professor Wright
Professor Tatum
Lauren Bedell
Doris Oakley
E. Neal Metzbower
Jeffrey DeMoss
Susan Davis, ex-officio

Greivence Committee:
Dean Wubbels, Chair
Gene Hessey
Dean McIntire
Professor Baldwin

Shirley Dorsey
Brenda Stanley

Honors and Awards Committee:
President Trout, Chair
Professor Janson-La Palme
Professor Kaplan
Professor Premo
Professor N. Smith
Professor Yon
Andrew McKim
Brenda Stanley
Max Walton

Honors Program:
Dean Sansing (spring 1992)
Professor Andrews (fall 1992)
Professor Scout
Professor Splilich, Chair
Kristin Lewis
Douglas Peterson

Joint Committee On Computing:
Dean Wubbels, Chair
Professor Baldwin
Professor Roat
Professor Shoge
Professor Tubbs
Gene Hessey
Dr. Paul Bishop
Shawn Lyons
Kevin Coveney
Dr. J. Hamilton

Lecture Series:
Professor Cousineau, Chair
Professor Mills
Professor Munson
Professor Shad
Christopher Freisheim
Kevin Lawner

See "Committees," page 12

BRIEF BEEF

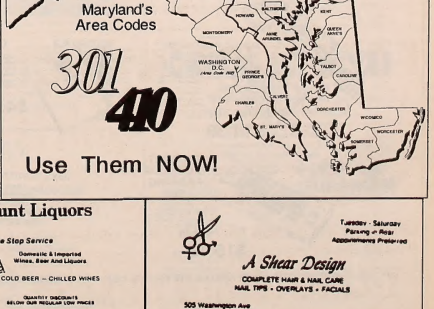
Knopf Senior Editor to Speak Today on Publishing

Today at 2 p.m., Washington College Alumnus Jonathan Segal '66 will be speaking on "How a Pulitzer Prize Book Gets Into Print." Segal is the Senior Editor of Alfred A. Knopf Publishers Inc. While at WC, Segal was SGA President. During the 1970s he was a columnist for Esquire magazine, before moving on to editorial positions at Simon and Schuster and Random House. Segal has edited the works of Gay Talese, Mordecai Richler, Ellen Goodman and Woody Allen, among others. Segal will be speaking in the O'Neill Literary House, and the talk is open to all members of the Washington College community.

Spring 1993 Course Pre-Registration

Important Dates to Remember:
- First Advising Day: Thursday November 5 (no classes)
- Second Advising Day Wednesday November 11 (no classes)
- Program cards are due at Registrar's Office Friday November 13.
- Arena Registration is November 19.

The Office of the Registrar would like to remind students that providing alternative choices for course selection increases the chance of getting first or second choice courses. This will also save students the trouble of attending the Arena Registration.



Students will be notified by campus mail if they do not receive a selected course and must attend Arena Registration. Only those students who do not get all their courses must attend.

Please think seriously about alternative courses and indicate these on the registration card.

Area Code Update

The area code for the Eastern Shore is 410. Effective November 1, callers will not be able to use 301 to dial exchanges in the 410 area. All Maryland counties now use the 410 area code EXCEPT the following: Garrett, Alleghany, Washington, Frederick, Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles, and St. Mary's.

Please note that the 1992-93 Campus Telephone Directory incorrectly lists all Maryland area codes as 410; residents of the eight above counties still use the 301 area code and cannot be reached by dialing 410.

Pip's Discount Liquors

Complete One Stop Service

Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors

COLD BEER — CHILLED WINES

QUANTITY DISCOUNTS BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES

TELEPHONE 778-9126

KENT SHOPPING PLAZA, CHESTERTOWN

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS

505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)

Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0888

From "Committees," page 11

Monique Ware

Library:
Professor Day, Chair
Professor Shad
Professor Sidhu
Professor Tubbs
Mrs. Ingersoll
Mr. Kehoe
Mrs. Lowe
BVG Member
William Ball
Kristen Phalen
Christine Smith

Long Range and Strategic Planning:
President Trout, ex-officio
Dean Wubbels, Chair
Gene Hessey
Shawn Lyons
Kevin Coveney
Dean McIntire
Joseph Holt
Reid Raudenbush
Ms. Kerr, ex-officio
Professor Dickson
Professor Kerchner
Professor Fallaw
Ms. Wurzbacher
Edward Athey
Scott Koon
Marie Mohler
Ciaran O'Keefe

Nominations:
Professor Creegan
Professor Lamond, Chair
Professor Taylor

Review Board For Research With Human Subjects:
Professor Horne
Professor Locker
Professor Newell, Chair
Professor Spilich
Professor Weissman
Nancy Dick
Tanya Cunic

Student Affairs:
Professor Russell
Professor Maloney, Chair
Professor Fallow (Fall 1992)
Professor Sherbondy (Spring 1992)
Dean McIntire
Dean Maxcy
Monita Airen
Lynn Clifford
William T. Phipps, II
Timothy Stoltzfus
David Taibi
SGA Advisor, ex-officio

Student Aid:
Dean Sansing
Professor Bailey
Professor Sidhu, Chair
Professor Tapke
Dean McIntire
Dean Maxcy
Kevin Coveney
Mrs. Levin
John-Bruce Alexander
Brian Ford
Jennifer Ruppert

Writing Committee:
Dean Sansing, Chair
Professor Baldwin
Professor Tatum
Professor Verville
Professor Wilson
Geraldine Fisher, ex-officio
Professor Lamond, ex-officio
Professor Pabon, ex-officio
Tanya Allen
Jenn Reddish
Douglas Smith

Publis Events Committees

Art Exhibits:
Professor Andrews, Chair
Professor Striner

Concert Series:
Professor Clarke, Chair
Professor Mills
Professor A. Parcel
Professor K. Smith
Professor Tatum
Mary Ellen Trusheim, Director

Film Series:
Professor T. Pabon

Faculty Representative To The Full Board:
Professor Tatum

Faculty Representative To Board Buildings And Grounds:
Professor Cades

Faculty Representative To Board Student Affairs:
Professor Maloney

Faculty Secretary:
Professor Kerchner

From "Family," page 1

Augmenting the celebration will be a special exhibition in the library's reference area devoted to the early history of the printed book. Called "Printing in the Age of Columbus," the exhibit shows the transition from the hand-written manuscript to the first great printers.

Among the printing centers represented will be Venice, Augsburg, Basel, Paris and Lyons. The selection of characteristic examples supplied by professor of art Robert Janson-La Palme will be accompanied by hand-printed captions by Washington College Master Pressman T. Michael Kaylor.

Kaylor will also conducting the O'Neill Literary House Press Demonstration at 2 p.m. Kaylor will be giving a brief talk on the press, and will demonstrate printing on an antique letterpress, as well as other equipment. Items such as posters, postcards, etc. will be available for sale during Saturday afternoon.

At 3:30 p.m., President and Mrs. Trout will host a reception for faculty, new students and families at the Hynson-Ringgold House.

From "Rasmussen," page 6

while still providing care for all Americans. He endorses an educational policy, which would, among other things, provide governmental loans for higher education to anyone, provided they pay it back through community service or as a percentage of their future income. He endorses a policy toward the underclass that stresses sacrifice as well as assistance, limiting funds for welfare recipients who refuse to work after two years. While he wisely stresses the deficit less than Perot, he is more likely to cut it than George Bush. I am confident he will achieve these aims for two reasons. First, he will not have the convenient excuse that Congress blocked his programs. Second, Bill Clinton, unlike recent presidents, actually understands domestic policy. It is refreshing to see someone grasp policy detail in domestic matters, unlike President Bush or Reagan.

On other issues, he is more acceptable than either Bush or Perot. He is one who disavows divisive rhetoric, either implicitly or explicitly. Indeed, one is surprised by the role that women, gays, and blacks have had in his reign in Arkansas. His concern about the AIDS epidemic is certainly more evident than the President or Ross Perot. With Al Gore, a Clinton Administration can reverse the neglect of the Reagan-Bush environmental policies. He supports the woman's right to choose. In foreign policy Clinton is more willing to break from the status quo than Bush. He has shown good instincts on the issues of Bosnia, China, and aid to Russia. While he opposes withdrawal from the world, he supports changing our policy to shape it into a more moral fashion.

Finally, there is the issue of "character." George Bush often states that "you can't be on both sides of the issue when President." Actually, you can: he's proved it. I am hard pressed to find one instance where the Bush position has remained consistent throughout his public life. One can state the litany of flip-flops, but the point is that whatever you think of Clinton's changing draft-record story, it is relatively innocent compared to the incoherent cynicism of the public life of George Bush. One does not show character by merely fighting and dying in a war you don't believe in: one also shows character by being guided by core beliefs in policy, not merely changing positions like a political weathervane. In this case, and in the others, the choice is clear: Bill Clinton.

JBK's SERVISTAR® HARDWARE

WE CARRY A FULL SELECTION OF ART SUPPLIES

$14.39

STRETCHED
CANVAS

$4.39 - 12"x16"

#25 11 12"x16"
#25 15 16"x20"
#25 18 24"x30"

$15.19

JBK's SERVISTAR HARDWARE
Kent Plaza
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-9600
M-Th: 8-7;Fri:8-8;
Sat: 8-6; Sun:9:30-4

BRING THIS AD IN AND RECIEVE 20% OFF YOUR ART SUPPLY PURCHASE

From "Coffee," page 1

dents there in the meantime."

From November 15 to 20, the CoffeeHouse will be closed while different campus organizations paint the walls, tables, columns and bar. The CoffeeHouse will be divided so that groups such as fraternities, sororities, sports, clubs, SGA and classes have designated spaces to decorate.

The Senior class is slated to paint the entire bar and column in the CoffeeHouse.

On November 6 and 7, from 12 p.m. to 8 p.m., campus organizations are scheduled for group painting.

During lunch on Wednesday, November 18, the SGA will be selling chairs and ceiling tiles to individuals who wish to participate in the project. Painting for those interested will occur between 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. in the CoffeeHouse.

There will be a grand re-opening of the CoffeeHouse on Friday, November 20. Students, staff, faculty and alumni will be invited to the reception, which will meet at 8 p.m. in the Hodson Hall study lounge before moving to the CoffeeHouse for the ceremonial ribbon cutting. Appetizers and refreshments will be served.

In addition to making the current CoffeeHouse attractive to students, Del Nero said she also hopes the interim project will encourage people to donate to the Hodson Hall project, as substantial funds have yet to be raised before the renovations can continue.

Shawn Lyons, Vice President for Development and College Relations, said that the entire Hodson Hall Renovation Project, which includes restructuring the CoffeeHouse, will cost approximately $1,675,000. To date, there is already $1,010,000 pledged, and of that, $825,000 is at the college.

He added that a good portion of the money has already been used for expenses such as architects fees and the study lounge. Lyons estimated that a little less than $675,000 needs to be raised.

Anyone interested in donating to the project can write Lyons at Washington College or reach him at ext. 7802.

The Connells
Coming
November 6
Tickets on sale
at the door
$8 for students
$12 for public

Volleyball Brings it Together to Conclude Season

Tyler McCarthy
Staff Writer

This past week the Sho'women certainly had there ups and downs. The action began Thursday as the Sho'women hosted St. Mary's.

The intensity was high and the aggressiveness was there but it wasn't quite enough to get the job done against St. Mary's. The Sho'women played four competitive games but came out on the losing end did. The competition started as the Sho'women defeated Haverford two games to one. They continued the winning streak as they pummeled both Marymount and Catholic, two games to none in both matches.

Catholic who had previously beaten Washington, fell twice to the power of the Sho'women, 15-1, 15-9. Jen Dixon connected with 11 kills, bringing her to the number two spot in kills for the MAC standings. She puts the ball away at

Photo By: Sarah Feyerherm

Beverly Diaz meets the opposition head on three games to one. Dropping their record to 8-18.

As the weekend approached the Sho'women began to get ready to explode and explode is exactly what they an average of 4.3 times per game. Beverly Diaz, grabbed 57 assists as she moved up in the ranks to the number seven spot in the MAC standings with an average of 4.14

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal Electrologist – Louise Leaverton, L.E.

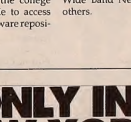
Internet Connection At Washington College

A $27,000 grant from the National Science Foundation will make a vast array of remote software, data-bases, and archives available to Washington College faculty and students through the Internet, a sophisticated computer network linking college and university mainframes around the globe. The connection will be operational in January of 1993.



"We are excited about the wide possibilities the Internet brings to our campus, and we plan to make maximum use of this extraordinary resource," President Charles H. Trout said. "Washington College has long been in the forefront of academic computing programs nationwide, and we are delighted that this grant will keep us on the cutting edge of technology."

Students and faculty across all disciplines will benefit from internet connection. Not only will members of the college community be able to access databases and software repositories currently available only at large research universities, but they will enjoy vastly enhanced opportunities for collaborative work through rapid communication with scholars at other institutions.

Since its inception in 1983, the Internet has grown from two interconnected networks supported by U.S. government, the Advanced Research Projects Network, and the Military Network, to more 2,200 networks worldwide.

Originally serving federal agencies such as NASA, the Departments of Energy and Defense, and other research interest groups, it now reaches intercontinental colleges, universities and industry as well. The Internet spans CREN/CSNET the Defense Data Net, the Energy Sciences Network, the NASA Science Internet, the National Science Foundation Network, and the Terrestrial Wide Band Network, among others.

ONLY IN NEW YORK

ONLY AT NYU
Session I: May 24-July 2
Session II: July 6-August 13
THIS SUMMER, YOU CAN...
• Choose from over 1,000 courses.
• Study with a distinguished faculty.
• Live in New York City for as little as $900 per six-week session.
Make the NYU Summer part of your year-round plan. Call or mail toll free to 1-800-228-4NYU, ext. 231, or send in the coupon.
Open House
January 9, 1993
10 a.m.
Loeb Student Center
566 La Guardia Place
Registration begins January 8
New York University
25 West Fourth Street
Room 233
New York, NY 10012
Please send me a FREE 1993 Summer Sessions Bulletin.
My area of interest is ☐ Undergraduate ☐ Graduate
NAME
ADDRESS
CITY STATE ZIP CODE
PHONE
SCHOOL
NYU SUMMER
NEW YORK UNIVERSITY IS AN AFFIRMATIVE ACTION/EQUAL OPPORTUNITY INSTITUTION 6/11

MIDNIGHT MADNESS

Tim Reardon
Co-Sports Editor

Midnight on Halloween is the setting for the First Annual "Midnight Madness" presented by the W.C. Basketball squad. Don't ask, just prepare to party in the Cain Dome! The event, which is highlighted by an intersquad scrimmage consisting of two-twenty minute halfs and two squads of 9 or 10, is aimed toward raising enthusiasm and school spirit as well as funding for the team. Not only that- but it's FREE!

In commemoration of the drawing (tickets of which are also on sale in the cafeteria until dinner on Saturday), 10 shooters from the audience will be chosen to throw up 3 consecutive 3 pointers. If you make all three shots and your the only person to do it you might just walk away with up to $150. The other half of the money will go toward benefiting the basketball program or possibly charity.

This event, open to everyone from the school as well as the town, is aimed at generating support for Washington's basketball program and will only be as good as we, the student body, make it. So make all the noise you can, dress up in your best costume, and come down to watch all your favorite stars like RUP, Basel, and possible POW candidate Charles Cummings perform their magic on the court!!!

Photo by Gary Broom

Rup "The Rup" Rupert

event T-Shirts are available in the cafeteria at $10.00 a shirt and they will be on sale until dinner on Saturday. After that. . . tough luck! The scrimmage begins at twelve and will last until two in the morning. At halftime, based on a 50-50 raffle

Ice Hockey
support the team for their season opener
against Salisbury State
Vans will leave for Talbot County Community Center at 8:00 pm

Field Hockey Ends '92 With a Smile

Renee Guckert
Staff Writer

Washington College field hockey brought their season to a close last Saturday when they stomped Western Maryland 4-1. The Shorewomen's first goal of the game was scored by Eleanor Shriver off a corner hit from Heather Mayr with 15:31 remaining in the first half. Just three minutes later, Marie Mohler fired at the cage, giving Washington a two goal lead over Western Maryland.

Western Maryland came out strong at halftime, scoring their first and only goal with 14:47 remaining in the game. Determined, however, not to let their defenses down in the second period, WC's squad relentlessly fought to keep the ball in their offensive end. Halfback Maria Jerardi accompanied by Peggy Bowman, Jen Hanifee, and Eleanor Shriver were power houses on defense, fighting endlessly with their opponents and clearing the ball continuously past Western Maryland to Washington's front line. The Shorewomen's third goal was scored off another corner. The ball was sent out to Shriver at the top of the circle who proceeded to make the pass to Renee Guckert on her left. Guckert fumbled but regained control of the ball to make a reverse stick pass to Liz Olivere who was waiting in the midst of a crowded circle. Olivere then put the shot past Western Maryland's defense once again, giving her a total of six goals for the season. To top off the game, Amy McCleary scored her first goal of the season and the final goal of the game off yet another corner pass from Heather Mayr, leaving the score 4-1.

A shocked Widener squad left the Washington College field last Tuesday when they too were defeated by the WC Shorewomen. In what was considered undoubtedly the best game WC field hockey has played all season, the goal with 23:33 left to play. The shorewomen could not be defeated, however, as Jill Schultz retaliated with a goal a mere two minutes after Widener's second. The score remained tied 2-2 throughout the rest of the second half in addition to the first overtime, despite Washington's domination of the ball. As the second overtime period emerged, the Shorewomen fired up even more and took to their opponents with fierce drive and shorewomen came back to beat Widener 3-2 in double overtime. The entire team was determined to seize the win away from this MAC contender as they put their skills and raw intensity together to form a unified team.

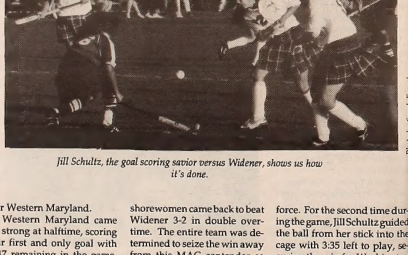

Photo by Sarah Engelhorn

Jill Schultz, the goal scoring savior versus Widener, shows us how it's done.

Liz Olivere scored Washington's first goal of the game and the lone goal for the first half. As the second period began, Widener's Courtney Patton scored unassisted just two minutes into the half, tying the score 1-1. Despite incredible efforts by the WC defense and goalie Brigid DeVries, Widener scored their second force. For the second time during the game, Jill Schultz guided the ball from her stick into the cage with 3:35 left to play, securing the win for Washington 3-2.

Although Washington field hockey graduates five seniors this year, the team is confident and optimistic about the upcoming 1993 season. A lot of learning and improvement has taken place since the squad emerged in late August, and great things are expected of WC hockey next fall. Congratulations WAC on your final two victories, and good luck Seniors!

Park
778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Tennis Toughs Out Towson Invitational

Lizzy O'Hara
Staff Writer

The Fall season came to a disheartening close for the women's Tennis team this past weekend in the Towson Invitational, but there is hope for the Spring, their most important season.

The number one player, Pam Hendrickson came in third after losing her first match, but winning her second. Jen Sloan did not gain any ground over her opponents when she lost both matches and came in second of the number two players. Diana Clausen did the same in the third seeded bracket where she, in turn, came in fourth. Tina Lennon shed a ray of light for the team where she was able to come in second in her bracket by winning her first match, but losing her second in the finals. Vikki Roth followed in the footsteps of the number two and three players by coming in fourth, where she lost both matches in the number five bracket.

The doubles teams did not fair much better than the singles, where the number one team, Pam and Jen, came in fourth after a disappointing loss in their third match. Tina and Diana came in fourth as well in the number two doubles category.

The Women's Tennis team will ambitiously be prepared for their Spring opponents, exemplifying their talents to the fullest. Judging by the skills of each player, it should be a successful '93 season.

Soccer Hits Dry Spell: Scoreless in Last 2 Bouts

Jason Ronstadt
Staff Writer

On October 21st the Washington College soccer team rolled into Pennsylvania riding on a two game win streak and rejuvenated spirits. But whatever these spirited Shoremen were about to encounter was sure to turn their enthusiasm into frustration. From the starting whistle against Widener University the Shoremen just couldn't seem to get things moving. Said Coach Helbling, "We played an awful first half and were still even with them. We really should have been in control at that point."

Once again Washington's defense was tighter then a wet knot allowing little penetration into the squads defensive third. And when Widener did manage to poke through the Shoremen's tough defensive armor their shots were continually turned away by Sophomore Goalkeeper Greg Miller, who denied all of Widener's twelve shots on the day.

It was at the other end of the field where the Shoremen met with frustration. Said Coach Helbling, "We controlled the tempo and kept the ball in Widener's defensive zone for most of the game, but we just couldn't seem to put the ball in the net." The game remained scoreless through the overtime period and ended up in a tie.

Washington's scoring woes continued into there next contest against Goucher. Again the Shoremen controlled the majority of the action outshooting Goucher in shots on goal 20-12. But the squad continued to miss shots time and time again. Goucher managed to punch in a lucky shot to render the score 1-0, and that was the way it stayed.

Yet, even with the frustrating scoring drought, Coach Helbling remains confident and proud of his teams latest efforts, "In the last five games the team has allowed far fewer goals then at the beginning of the season. We are a very young team and over time we'll become better at finishing the play. I'm very happy with the teams play to this point and look forward to playing teams like Widener and Goucher next year."

Next on W.C.'s schedule is a strong Haverford squad on October 28th, and Johns Hopkins away on the 30th.

Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

Sophomore keeper Greg Miller clasps onto a shot with the strenght of 10 men

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR

Trust Me

(410) 778-9819

Beverly "Set Master" Diaz

Well, we must admit, we had to tackle and grapple with this earth shattering decision but in the end, we'll own up, we put Caps second as far as representing true athletes. (Sorry Devlin, you were a mistake) You see, Newt's held their 3rd Annual Caps Tourney last evening and The Bird Man and myself salivated as to whether we should put our shining, smiling faces in this box seeing how we figured no one can match the likes of us on the caps court and we would have blown away the rest of the competition, (especially Whitey and his little CHUMP sidekick, glazed HAM.) But, in all fairness to the rest of you we refrained from entering in order to give everyone else a chance at the title.

Thus, this week's true Newt's POW-- the one we all know and love... Beverly "Set Master" Diaz. Ms. Diaz, the personification of Volleyball, shines in every aspect of the game. She makes her presence felt on both ends of the court but in a subtle way. Bowing graciously to her teammates she likes to act as the unsung hero- proven by her incredible 341 assists. She definitley shines on the front line but she does just as well from the back, leading the team in aces with 45. Diaz goes to show that actions speak louder than words. Nice job Bev!!

Crew Hits Head of the Schuylkill

Melissa Harmeyer
Staff Writer

The Washington College Crew Team headed to Philadelphia on Saturday, October 24 for the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta. There were no outstanding winners, but overall the team did a wonderful job. This race was an opportunity for everyone to gain some valuable experience. The men's team had a quad, two doubles, and 2 singles entered in the race, while the women had only an eight and a four entered.

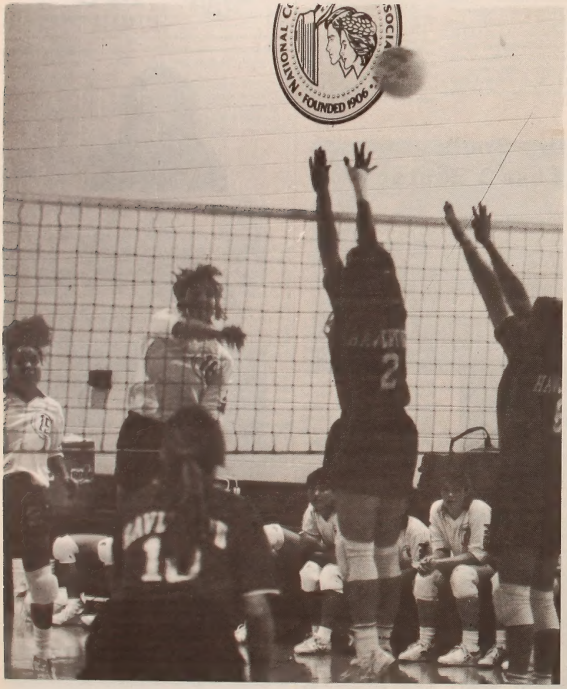
The mens Varsity Quad, consisting of Joe D'Urso, Mark Reyero, Doug Peterson, and Harrison Gallagher came in fourth place. One doubles team of John McCarthy and Eric Jewett placed 10th while the other team of Jon Mulvaney and James Pitt placed 12th. Ari Kodak, the lightweight single, placed last in the race but only because his boat had a broken rigger. The womens Varsity 8 and womens Varsity 4 both placed about 10th. The boats weren't stacked to try and get one really fast boat, so everyone got a chance to get some racing experience.

Next week the crew squad is off to the Head of the Occoquan Regatta which is held just outside of Washington D.C. Good luck to the entire team!!

Soccer Continues to Face Hard Times

See Article, pg. 15

Register for Rec Sports Intramural Basketball TODAY! Ext. 7235



WC • ELM

Sports

Women's Soccer Schools St. Johns in Season Finale

Field Hockey Impressive in Season Closers

See Article, pg. 14

Scores

Men's Soccer
Washington	0
Widener	0
Washington	0
Goucher	1
Field Hockey
Washington	3
Widener	2
Washington	4
W. Maryland	1
Volleyball
Washington	1
St. Mary's	3
Washington	2
Haverford	1
Washington	2
Marymount	0
Washington	2
Catholic	0
Washington	1
F&M	3

Jen Dixon (#16), one of the select few to achieve Newt's POW status, rises to the occasion and hammers home one of her patented slams. Jen, only a Freshman from Glen Burnie, Maryland, is the core of the offense this year as she leads the '92 Volleyball unit in the two major categories of kills, 299, and digs, 173. Overall, she leads in five out of the seven statistical categories possible.

Beverly Diaz: NEWT's Player of the Week

Volleyball Wins 4 of Last 5

See Article, pg. 13

Crew Strokes Up to Philly

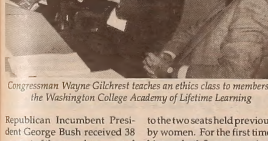
See Article, pg. 15

We will change no country before it's time... It's time.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: partly cloudy & cool; H low - mid 50s; N winds 10 - 15 mph
Weekend: sunny and clear; H 40s L 30-35



Volume 63, Number Ten • November 6, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

12 Years of Republican Rule End

Democrats Retain Majority in Congress

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

The 42nd President of the United States was elected Tuesday by a margin of 5 percent of the popular vote. President-Elect Bill Clinton of the Democratic Party won the race with 43 percent of the popular vote and 370 electoral votes.

Kent County News Photo

Congressman Wayne Gilchrest teaches an ethics class to members of the Washington College Academy of Lifetime Learning

Republican Incumbent President George Bush received 38 percent of the popular vote and 168 electoral votes. Independent candidate H. Ross Perot won 19 percent of the popular vote, but did not receive an electoral vote.

In the Senate, the majority remains Democratic, 57-42. (There was no majority Senate candidate in Georgia; a run-off election will be held to determine that seat).

Four more women now hold Senate seats, in addition to the two seats held previously by women. For the first time in history, both Senate seats in one state (California) are held by women: Barbara Boxer and Diane Fienstein. Carol Moseley Braun (D-Ill) is the first black woman to win a Senate seat.

In addition, the first Native American Senator (Ben NightHorse Campbell, D-CO) was elected; Braun remains the only Black Senator, and two Asian Pacific candidates won seats.

The House of Representatives also remains majority-Democrat, although Republicans gained seven seats. Six seats are as yet undetermined; the current count is 255 Democrat Congressmen, and 173 Republicans.

One-fourth of the House seats were won by new members. Forty-seven women are now national Representatives, as well as 37 Blacks, 18 Hispanics, and four Asian Pacific Congressmen.

In Maryland, Incumbent Democrat Barbara Mikulski continues to sit with Senator Paul Sarbanes; half the Maryland House members are Republican and half Democrats.

The Maryland Charter

See "Election," page 9

Faculty Adopt Part-Time Appointments Policy

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

The faculty adopted a new policy regarding part-time faculty appointments at their November 2 meeting. Professor Robert Day, Chair of the Faculty Affairs Committee, said that President Charles H. Trout had proposed such a policy; the committee subsequently had asked the president to draft such a statement.

This preliminary policy had been re-worked by the committee with 'considerable input' from other faculty members. Final corrections were made prior to Monday's meeting to corroborate with a Fringe Benefits policy recently passed by the Board of Visitors and Governors.

The statement, which next year will appear in the Faculty Handbook, covers salary and benefits for three different groups: full-time faculty who wish to teach a partial load temporarily; half-to five-sixths-time faculty; and under half-time faculty, or lecturers. The policy is designed to complement previous regulations covering retirement, faculty duties, fringe benefits, etc.

Day said that the policy could not possibly encompass specific needs of every current part-time faculty member. "It's a forward-looking document designed to govern future appointments," he said. The committee advised current part-time professors to consult their department's chair or Dean Gene Wubbels for specifics on their own situation.

Day also announced that the committee is working on two other possible statements, on affirmative action and early retirement.

In other business:

- Professor Ed Weissman of the Task Force on the Status of Lesbians and Gay Men at Washington College stated that the task force was nearing completion of their report to the president. Based on the results, Weissman said, the group had decided on the following five recommendations to the college:

See "Faculty," page 9

Here's to the Good Ol' Days

SGA and Students to Revive CoffeeHouse

Sam Johnston
Staff Writer

The steady beat of Motown throbbed in time with the dancers as they gyrated on the dance floor of the smoky lowlit room. At the tables, diners devoured robust slices of pizza washed down with rivers of beer. Caricatures of the regulars adorned the walls, and the stools at the sizeable bar were always full. This, believe it or not, was the Washington College CoffeeHouse.

In its heyday, the CoffeeHouse was the main gathering place for students and faculty alike. Built by the students in1972, the original CoffeeHouse was about one-half the size of the current house, windowless, decorated in the style of a campus pub, and most notably, always filled to capacity every night of the week.

Dean Maureen McIntire recalls, "It was dark, bar-like, smoky, noisy, crowded, and wonderful."

Totally run by students, the atmosphere was casual enough that anyone could tend bar or go back in the kitchen to cook what Dean McIntire describes as "the best pizza in the world."

The CoffeeHouse opened at 9 p.m. every night, and provided a social place for students coming from the library and staff just coming from meetings. The polarity today between students and faculty in regards to social functions was almost non-existent at that time.

"I was 22 then," Dean McIntire remembers, "and younger than some of my students. Most of the faculty then was between 22 and 26, and the Coffee House was a legitimate way to hang out with the kids. You didn't feel awkward mingling; you had a reason to be there."

Asked to pinpoint the cause of the CoffeeHouse's recent decline in popularity, McIntire cited the changing needs of our generation and the unfortunately static role of the CoffeeHouse. As well, the raising of the drinking age from 18 then to 21 now has disabled the college's ability to serve alcohol at the house.

In Spring of '93, renovations are slated to begin on turning the CoffeeHouse and the Deli into a single space. It is to be a "campus party room,

See "C-House," page 9

Inside

Crisis /Counter-Crisis Reactions to Election 3

Huck's not Afraid of the Thought Police 4

Visiting Lecturer Rethinks Kristallnacht 7

Scott Graham Reviews American Dream 7

Inter-Fraternity Council Report Premier 9

Slow News Week

Did you ever wonder what makes someone decide what their editorial's going to be on? Did you ever wonder if the guys at the Washington Post ever run outta things to say? Like, does David Broder ever say, "Ah, shit, there's no real news this week, what the hell am I going to talk about? The election? Please, I've been talking about that for months now!"

There are some subjects it takes just too much research for me to write about while trying to put out a paper. I don't know enough about foreign affairs to write about them, and I could research them, but hey, why bother? The editorial is sometimes the first thing on my mind and sometimes the last. If I want an opinion piece on Iraq or something, I know Scott Koon will cover it. Vegetarianism? Mutants? The Pepsico conspiracy? Matt Shields covers that. So increasingly, I'm left to cover on-campus issues, and frankly, there aren't that many.

I could talk about how they serve Thanksgiving Dinner far too often in the Dining Hall, but there's not much to say on that.

I could talk about how nobody goes to plays, lectures, etc. anymore, including professors, but I'm tired of thinking about that. IF you go to these things, you know there's poor attendance. The rest of you sad chumps aren't planning on going anytime soon anyway, so why bother? (insert beer here)

I could talk about the dangers of propping doors, but that's been covered, and we've actually cut down on that.

I could talk about the anti-Black and anti-Semite grafitti on campus that really bothers me, especially when I notice it during a faculty meeting. Nobody else is going to talk about this, but what's to say? "Graffiti is bad. Discrimination is bad. Stop it." Some people are just beyond help, and I decided that one day in the dining hall.

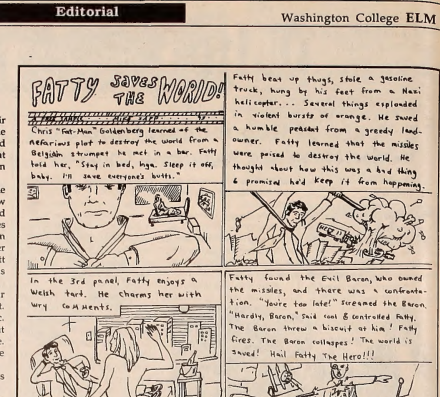
"Okay, let's go over this one more time," said the old jock to the young jock. (They were players of a nameless collegiate sport involving big sticks.) "No means yes, and yes means twice. Got it?" This is an exact quote overheard while getting bread. Ah, the instruction of the young! I'm so glad that upperclassmen set such a good example for new students at WC. (insert beer here.)

And the beer thing really bugs me. I'm not opposed to beer, trust me. But I don't think it should be the primary motivation for interpersonal relations at a small liberal arts college on Maryland's Eastern Shore, or anywhere for that matter.

But if we're going to drink, and it appears that we are, then why not sell beer in the C-House? Yes, I know that it's now against all kinds of rules, and I realize that once the C-House gets revamped so that it looks really swell and bands can play there more often, more people may go, but right now it's much deader than it was even my freshman year, a mere two years ago.

It's okay, I guess, that they have all this stuff going on on Wednesday nights, but I no longer have Wednesdays nor Thursdays (you're reading the reason why). And registering for Open Mike Night???That means it's not really open, and that's not cool.

And about this weather thing — why is it always raining around here? Sure, it's nobody's fault, but I have to complain about something.



So anyway, by the time I actually get around to writing an editorial, it's really late at night, and either I have something to say or I don't. This week I don't, because I promised not to spend this space gloating. Sorry.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Cray Reddish
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Dead lines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quicknet. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-0260.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

Kretzer Defends Vegetarians: Shame Shame, Matt Shields

To the Editor:

I have just finished reading Matthew Shields' "article" on vegetarianism and my reaction is simply one of disgust and anger. I feel that his attacks on the vegetarian population were unfounded and malicious. While I am not a full vegetarian yet, I have greatly reduced my meat consumption in past months and I took his article as an insult to me and my full vegetarian sisters and brothers.

To begin with, for him to argue that the slaughter of animals is not cruel and typical of a male, phallocentric society is flat out wrong. Every society that has ever existed has consumed meat. Every society that ever existed was male dominated. No society that has ever existed was perfect. Do you see my reasoning, Mr. Shields? Carnivorous behavior is the very obstacle between us and a peaceful society.

Mr. Shields' assertion that the entire vegetarian movement is an alien plot is ludicrous. While such conspiracies have been known to happen (may I site the Republican Party's assassinations of JFK and John Lennon), I think that bogeymen in the form of blue spacemen are as far fetched as bogeymen in the form of communist dictators. Really now, Mr. Shields.

As for meat-like vegetable products, they are necessary. As one who is in the process of kicking the meat addiction (no doubt the result of addictive steroids injected into meat by conservative slave driving businessmen) I can testify that Not Dogs and Veggieburgers are both tasty and important in the step by step process of getting better and becoming a vegetarian. For those of you who haven't tried them, I recommend that you do so.

In closing, I would like to point out that Mr. Shields' article was no more than a bullying attack on the brave men and women who have cast away their primitive, unnatural urges and become vegetarians. Well, Mr. Shields, you and the other brownshirts of big business are in for a surprise. People are becoming healthier, more humane and less male dominated. This is the dawn of the Age of the Vegetarian.

Daniel Kretzer '93

Wubbels Addresses Racism

To the Editor:

Tracy Stoer of Hamilton College expresses outrage in a letter to last week's ELM concerning a racially derogatory remark she heard shouted on a bus at a Washington College event. She fears that such remarks are routine at Washington College, an atmosphere she compares adversely with the one at Hamilton.

I wish to note that racial epithets are unusual here and not condoned, but we live in a country in which speech is protected by the Constitution. We hope that Hamilton is indeed the fountain of pure light that she reports. Even enlightened institutions, however, harbor backsliders and small minds. We regret with her that the speaker in question did not get a strong, negative reaction from those present, but let there be no doubt that this College does not suffer racists gladly. We are trying to build a community based on love and respect. That project can be lit or plunged into darkness by what each individual heart chooses to say.

Gene G. Wubbels
Provost and Dean of the College

Crisis

Scott Ross Koon

I realize that last week I stated that the results from the poll of Washington College students on the election would appear in this space, but when Tarin offered me the opportunity to write a point/counterpoint with my friend Matt Shields I could hardly refuse.

In both this campaign and the 1988 campaign Bush demonstrated a degree of pettiness which I found unfitting to his office and stature. Yet Bush's concession speech on Tuesday night was far more gracious than I expected it to be. Nothing in public life became him so well as the leaving of it.

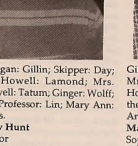
This week has witnessed the end of the Reagan/Bush era, and I would contend that also it marks the beginning of a period of domination of national political life by moderately left wing ideologues. The situation seems analogous to 1980, when an incumbent President who had done a reasonably good job was ousted because of a single issue which was beyond his control.

The issue beyond Bush's control is the economy. The issue beyond Carter's control was the hostage crisis. Both Carter and Bush were hurt by a third candidate who took more votes away from the incumbent than the challenger. Both lost by electoral landslides.

Bill Clinton's most attractive characteristic to the American people is that he is not George Bush. People today associate Bush and Reagan with the failure of the American dream, just as twelve years ago they associated Jimmy Carter with impotence in international affairs.

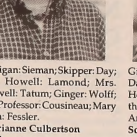
We do not know exactly what we have done in selecting Bill Clinton to be our President. Most people realize that the global recession is not going to be solved from the White House. We don't know what we will be saying about Bill Clinton in four years. What we do know is what Bill Clinton is not.

So as we celebrate what has begun, let us also celebrate what has ended. Twelve years ago Jimmy Carter pointed out that he was unlikely to involve America in a war, and that Reagan would probably be too hot headed. And sure enough, Reagan got us involved in Grenada. It felt good at the time, too, didn't it? No teeny little Caribbean island can push us around.



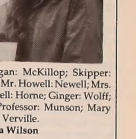
Not that Grenada was pushing us around, but we invaded just because ... well, because. And that's a good enough reason to invade somewhere, now isn't it? Grenada was our Falkland Islands: it made us feel good. Use of military force is lot like using cocaine. You do it, and you feel good. Except afterwards you realize that you spent a lot of money for something with no material reward, and the things that you thought were brilliant and witty are revealed to be asinine and dangerous.

See "Koon," page 8

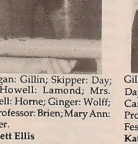


CAMPUS VOICES

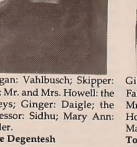
By Dude



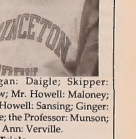
You are staging an all-faculty version of "Gilligan's Island." Who will you cast?



Gilligan: Gillin; Skipper: Day; Mr Howell: Lamond; Mrs. Howell: Tatum; Ginger: Wolff; the Professor: Lin; Mary Ann: Mills.
Jerry Hunt
Senior
Towson, MD



Gilligan: Sieman; Skipper: Day; Mr. Howell: Lamond; Mrs. Howell: Tatum; Ginger: Wolff; the Professor: Cousineau; Mary Ann: Fessler.
Marianne Culbertson
Sophomore
Timonium, MD



Gilligan: McKillop; Skipper: Day; Mr. Howell: Newell; Mrs. Howell: Horne; Ginger: Wolff; the Professor: Munson; Mary Ann: Verville.
Sonja Wilson
Sophomore
Selinsgrove, PA

Gilligan: Gillin; Skipper: Day; Mr. Howell: Lamond; Mrs. Howell: Horne; Ginger: Wolff; the Professor: Brien; Mary Ann: Fessler.
Gehrett Ellis
Senior
Odenton, MD

Gilligan: Vahlbusch; Skipper: Day; Mr. and Mrs. Howell: the Caseys; Ginger: Daigle; the Professor: Sidhu; Mary Ann: Fessler.
Katie Degentesh
Junior
Pasadena, MD

Gilligan: Daigle; Skipper: Fallaw; Mr. Howell: Maloney; Mrs. Howell: Sansing; Ginger: Horne; the Professor: Munson; Mary Ann: Verville.
Tora Triolo
Sophomore
Albany, NY

Counter-Crisis: Slick Willy Means Change

Matt Shields

Let me not be the first person to tell you that Slick Willy Clinton (I'll call him Swilly for short) will become President of the United States in January. Yes, the democratic process has failed us again, but now is not the time for me to piss and moan over uniform ignorance in our nation. I shall press on and adopt Swilly's theme of "change." In doing so, I will propose a few surgical changes for this newspaper.

Change isn't just what the average citizen will have in his pocket after Swilly's new tax-"reform" policies. To me and the average voter, change means to alter or make different. For example, Slick Willy proposes to change our nation's health care, our defense program, our education systems; the list could go on almost endlessly. Oh! He even proposed to change the seal of the federal government from an eagle to a condom. It's true.

The American eagle is old-school Republican. The eagle stood for power, strength, and freedom. But the new bold image of the nineties is the condom; it, too, is power, strength and freedom, but for a "new age." The condom is the perfect emblem for a Democratic Party controlled government: It stands for inflation, protects a bunch of pricks, halts production and gives one a false sense of security while being screwed. Good call, Slick Willy.

Change interests me just as fortune tellers interest me. Hence, while writing this paragraph, I have donned a swami's turban and a wizard's robe. I am holding a sealed envelope marked THE FUTURE to my forehead. Yes, I am about to make a prediction for Clinton's presidency. Within six months (read my text—SIX MONTHS) every political cartoonist, every political commentator, every journalist across this great nation of ours, along with the cast of Saturday Night Live, will be systematically turning Swilly Clinton into a bumbling nitwit hick from Arkansaaaw — you gotta say it with a drawl, a little drool running down your cheek and an empty stare. Ever see Deliverance?

Anyway, remember how George Bush turned water into wine and raised Lazarus during and after the Gulf War? Well, if Bush had walked on water during the final weeks of campaign '92 the front page of the Washington Post (the Pinko Post, I call it) would have read BUSH CAN'T SWIM. The same will happen to our slick little buddy Bill. Democrats are not immune to media derision. Remember that bumbling hick from Georgia who thought a fluffy bunny rabbit looked a whole lot like a Russian torpedo? Not see, the press can anticipate and manipulate change long before any candidate can. They love Swilly now; they'll rail him later. That's called changing the nation's opinion.

So what does one do to avoid presidential heartbreak?

See "Shields," page 8

Open Forum: Multiculturalism and Diversity Reconsidered

Michel N'Youngou-Christophe is this year's French lab assistant. While at WC, he is working on his doctoral thesis in American Social History.

Michel N'Youngou-Christophe

Is this yet another dubious gift from the top ? Another product of a guilt-ridden mind or another strategy to keep the status-quo ? What do you think ? At least, it is certainly nice to hear, for a change, that all cultures are valid, equal, that there is not just one way of looking at things, etc.

Cultures are essentially ways of doing things, and the differing efficiency with which these cultures reach diverse goals accounts in my opinion for their inequality at a particular time in history. Cultures are not equal. Here I measure a culture's efficiency in relation to its ability to provide for the well-being—spiritual, material, intellectual—of the people concerned by it, by its ability to perfect and reproduce itself while maintaining the integrity of its natural environment. Certain cultures have been more efficient than others in the past, to see themselves, later on left out of breath at the periphery of history. The relative superiority of Egypt is very different today from what it used to be at the time of the pharaos. China today does not quite enjoy the great technical superiority that it used to have over Europe.

A culture is never permanently or decisively superior to another. But at a given point in time it can most definitely be said to be superior or inferior to another..Now let us not confuse the visible or conceivable result of a given culture with the individuals behind it. They (the individuals) have only explored doing things in a particular set of ways it does not mean that they are limited as such, tomorrow they can still do things differently.

Yes, multiculturalism as an ideology is a gift from the top. It is an idea that the intellectual and artistic elite has been toying with for a long time. They trickle it down to us, the common man on the street. As I see it, multiculturalism is not an issue. It is only an issue with those who have so far refused to see or hear anything or anybody who did not sound or look like them. People in the major democracies of the world come from numerous ethnic and cultural backgrounds none of them waited for you to acknowledge their cultures' validity . Although they've been with you all along, it's only now that you seem to want to acknowledge their humanity. Thank you, it's very nice, but apart from a few self-defeated individuals they did not wait for you. They've been trying so hard to preserve their cultures; they must have known they were valid. In a sense, these talks of multiculturalism remind me of paternalism. I am even afraid that multiculturalism might become the new and acceptable mask of racialism. It does not question the real distribution of power in any way. Paradoxically, it is an instrument in the so-called fight against racism.

I said earlier that multiculturalism wasn't an issue; they have just made it an issue. Why, to present themselves as open-minded, tolerant, and above all, knowledgeable? This is the new 'in' thing in American well-to-do circles. Multiculturalism is supposed to undo what years of cowardice have done. What a poor medecine. What an unreliable refuge. Hopefully, it possesses within itself its own limitations and in due time will find its place on the dusty shelves of past intellectual fads. It is just a substitute for action that only helps polarize society even more. If our purpose is to eliminate bigotry and promote better relations along ethnic and cultural lines, why not then focus on the real deal, empowerment? Why not get rid of all the artificially created barriers to our mutual progress. America needs more brains to help revive its economy. Why not then open the doors and tap the human resources that you have (no matter what color) to the fullest. Your fear of questioning your deep-seated fears of fellow countrymen with a different facial angles might prove fatal to the whole country. Anyway, why do I care? This is not my country. It doesn't matter in any way because the future of the larger world is linked to a certain extent to what happens in your big country that I incidentally happen to like a great deal.

Certainly, multiculturalism is a celebration of difference. In a way, this is irrelevant because differences can take care of themselves. But I do understand, mind you, why this celebration was made necessary. Society failed to give individuals a feeling of belonging AS INDIVIDUALS. To celebrate differences is to deepen divisions further, reinforce selfishness, exacerbate conflicts and weaken society as a whole. We know we are all different, but that difference is more superficial than we may think it is. Let us concentrate on what unites us. Besides, it is a great injustice to truth to presume that because the next man comes with a different carnal envelope he necessarily has a different message to deliver to the world. You may be shocked by this but no matter what color, language spoken at home, socialization process you go through, you are all immediately identifiable as Americans to me, and you have more in common amongst yourselves than you will ever have with the people where I came from. So, be proud of your ancestry, but never forget that to the world you are first and foremost Americans. Yet, let not this pride be a weapon to your own destruction. Talks of multiculturalism are a surrender to defeat, an avoidance of one's duty to be human first, and they will only lead to the resegregation of America. I took it upon myself to write these few lines because as an individual my victory is to transcend culture, race, class and whatnot to make a bond with the part of you that has still retained some humanity and challenge to leave the comfort of our good conscience.

Somehow multiculturalism is evocative of the past. It is a reaction to the past. It brings back memories of the past, which if not dealt with constructively, can entrap us all into self-defeating attitudes. A great writer who happens to share the same culture with me, Frantz Fanon, once said: "Will be free those who refuse to allow themselves to be locked up in the substantiated tower of the past."

More Letters to the Editor

O'Keeffe Thanks Administration

To the Editor:

The Washington College Rugby Football Club is now in its third year and to many it seemed as though this would be its last. Financial problems and numerous unnecessary setbacks put the club in what seemed to many a difficult situation. Concerns ran high in connection to administrative help from the College and general College support in terms of access to a field on campus and joining the Eastern Penn Rugby Union. These were two goals that the club, its members and officers, had in mind coming into the 1992-93 season. Now Washington Rugby is at a stage where these goals are now no longer mere dreams. Working closely with the Department of Physical Education and Athletics and Recreational Sports Program, the club seems set to move on to only better things. Aided by increased administrative backing from the College in the form of funding, field development and organizational support, this represents a positive step towards improved relations with Rugby and the College, moving it from its current off campus situation to a viable club sport representing Washington College in every sense of the word.

Thanks to everyone for your support and assistance!

Ciaran J. O'Keeffe
President
WC Rugby Football Club

Small Attendance for Big Problem

To the Editor:

As a concerned human being, I feel compelled to write to you and the Washington College paper, the ELM because those who choose to read this have choices they make everyday.

On Thursday evening, October 22, 1992, I chose to attend a lecture by Dr. Sylvia Silver. This lecture had been well announced on campus and throughout various communities: Understanding HIV/AIDS. "Doctor Sylvia Silver is an associate professor at George Washington University in the Department of Pathology. This direct, informed speaker will enlighten the audience on the current status of AIDS, including the broad range of its victims, while explaining how HIV actually progresses within the human body."

This was a unique and eye-opening lecture. Doctor Silver was informative, sensitive, and up-to-date. Personally, I wish I had seen every Dean, Professor, Student and Parent in attendance to avail themselves of her knowledge.

Hopefully, more faculty and students will make the choice to be informed of those areas affecting health and life. We are so fortunate to have the opportunity of furthering our knowledge by first-class presentations such as Doctor Silver's.

Mrs. Helene A. Clifford
Sykesville, MD

Huck Attacks Campus Thought Police

To the Editor:

You rail against anonymous, politically incorrect messages. I find that funny. People would rather not deal with Campus Thought Police.

RE: that prolix socialist who provides lots of copy, and would like to incarcerate me, lest I infect the innocent with my venomous ideology, I was astounded to learn he is 24 years old. Why isn't he out in the world?

In keeping with the precept KISS (Keep It Simple, Stupid), Professor Weissman sounds off with "Bush = Death."

The perfect Washington College student, Ms. Webb, announces that she is voting for Clinton because she wants to get an A from Weissman. I would say, she has learned what the College has to teach.

Print this. The Thought Police can't touch me.

Dr. Susan Huck
Church Hill

Getting The Jump On The Job Market

Reading the daily headlines can be disheartening if not downright depressing -- especially if you are entering the job market for the first time. The last few years have seen shrinking opportunities for recent graduates.

At the same time, in an increasingly globalized society, expectations are greater for the new professional entering the work force. In a narrow, complex job market the graduate who can bring something substantial to the table stands the best chance of landing the job and succeeding.

One way to take charge of your professional future and to make yourself more competitive is to have some "real" experience on your resumé. And if this experience takes place in one of the world's international "power" cities, the rewards can be even greater. Washington, D.C. is one city with hundreds of internship opportunities.

The Institute for Experiential Learning (IEL) is one of several internship programs in Washington. Dr. Mary Ryan, Executive Director of IEL, stresses "While you still have time to plan for the future, you want to take advantage of all the educational opportunities you can. In a tight job market, you need practical, on-site experience, because a background in the professional work place gives you an edge in landing the right position after you graduate."

In addition to enhancing your resumé and expanding your network of contacts, a successful internship can help you project more confidence in job interviews, because you have something concrete to discuss. It also gives you valuable insight into what you do or do not want in a work environment, and allows you to explore career options. Finally, it allows you to experience first-hand the relationship of the public and private sector, and to get to know a diversity of people.

As one former student says, "Without this internship at IEL under my belt, my future job hunting would have been hit or miss. I now recognize the varying aspects of international relations and have narrowed down my interests."

Another student, now applying what she learned, believes that "The internship taught me several things one does not learn in standard classes in college. The video and film industry have a language all their own - a point which is overlooked in classroom exercises."

The IEL program, called The Capital Experience, is unique among Washington internship programs because it is academically based. Students generally can earn up to to 17 credits for it. Designed to be a serious learning experience tailored to each student's needs and goals, it stresses close collaboration between the student, the on-campus faculty advisors, IEL staff and on-site sponsors.

Individualized placements are made in a wide range of government agencies, businesses, professional offices and non-profit organizations.

Students, who come from around the world, formulate their own learning plans to guide their internships, spending four days a week at work and one day at IEL seminars, site visits, tours and briefings.

The combination of course work and the internship allows students to test how classroom theories are realized in practice. One IEL student said she felt that she "matured and learned about myself by changing lifestyles from a college kid to a business professional," adding that "I expected to be doing 'gopher' work, but was pleasantly surprised that the work I was given to do was varied and interesting."

Carefully organized, serious internship programs offer students the opportunities to maximize their college years, and to gain the confidence and independence they need to succeed in a highly competitive job market. As IEL's Dr. Ryan asks, "Can you afford not to invest in your future?"

For more information, contact The Institution for Experiential Learning, 1325 G Street, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20005-3104 or call 800-IEL-0770.

Senior Campaign Committee Hosts Dinner

Traci Castello
Senior Campaign Committee

With only 199 days left until graduation, the members of the Class of 1993 are fast approaching alumni status. Last week, the Senior Campaign Committee celebrated by hosting a dinner for the senior class.

The Senior Campaign is part of an effort to enhance the College's young alumni programs. The campaign seeks to strengthen class identity, educate soon-to be alumni about the needs of the College, and raise $2,500 for the Washington College Fund.

Kathy Wurzbacher '83, President of the Alumni Council, welcomed seniors to the alumni world: "...once you have been at WC two semesters, you are considered an alum," she said. "Don't forget the Alumni House is there for students as well as alumni, and the Alumni Association includes plenty of young alumni."

She encouraged seniors to join the local alumni chapter after graduation, to make new friends in a new place and to tap into a professional network.

SGA President Jen Del Nero reminded seniors of some of the changes they have witnessed over the last few years.

The Class of '93 remembers wearing boots to class every day because the campus was so muddy; crowding into the basement of Bill Smith waiting for the mailroom to open; standing in line for hours in the dreary basement of Hodson Hall to buy books in the bookstore. And they are the last class to remember the HEL L of arena registration.

Kristen Kujawski, who chairs the Senior Campaign, announced that between now and graduation seniors will be asked to pledge support to Washington College with a gift to the Senior Campaign. She explained, "Most people don't know that it costs more than $26,000 to educate each student enrolled. Tuition, room and board cost $18,354. This means that tuition covers only 70 cents of every dollar spent on you. The Washington College Fund and the Senior Campaign help to make up the difference."

Kujawski continued, "We are not asking for a lot of money. Some people can give more than others. Each of us can give something. More important than the amount of money raised is our goal to achieve 100% commitment from the Class of 1993."

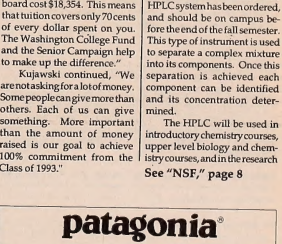
Science Grant Helps Fund Chemistry Equipment

The science programs at Washington College received another boost recently with a successful proposal to the National Science Foundation-Instrumentation and Laboratory Improvement (ILI) Program for high performance liquid chromatograph (HPLC).

The proposal was submitted last November by Dr. James R. Locker, Associate Professor of Chemistry, and Dr. David E. Russell, Assistant Professor of Biology. This is the fifth ILI grant that Washington College has received since 1986.

NSF awarded the College a grant of $19,700 towards the purchase of the HPLC. A Hewlett-Packard Model 1050 HPLC system has been ordered, and should be on campus before the end of the fall semester. This type of instrument is used to separate a complex mixture into its components. Once this separation is achieved each component can be identified and its concentration determined.

The HPLC will be used in introductory chemistry courses, upper level biology and chemistry courses, and in the research



See "NSF," page 8

GREEKS & CLUBS
RAISE A COOL $1000
IN JUST ONE WEEK!
PLUS $1000 FOR THE MEMBER WHO CALLS!
No obligation. No cost.
You also get a FREE HEADPHONE RADIO just for calling
1-800-932-0528, Ext. 65

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At Approx. 9pm
FRI 6 THE CAUSE Excellent Duo From D.C..Folk, Rock, Blues.
SAT 7 SAM ANDERSON + The Rev. BLIND DOG
Acoustic Delta Blues, Folk, Rock
THURS 12 MARC MOSS. Rock, Originals

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap T-Neck has seen most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.

10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442

We' re Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

Week at a Glance

November 6 - 12

Film Series: American Dream

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

6 Friday

Gender Issues on Both Sides of the Atlantic, Guest Speakers: Audrey Fessler, Doris Wietfeldt, Bridgette Winchester, Tina McCuen, O'Neill Literary House, Kaffee und Kuchen, 3:30 p.m., Talk, 4:00 p.m.

The Connells, BAJLFC, 7:30 p.m. Admission: $8.00 WC students, $12.00 non-students For information: (778) 7818
Sponsored by the Student Activities Office

8 Sunday

Civil War Re-enactment, CAC, 1:00 p.m.

Kristallnacht: The Sanctification of Life in Hard Times Guest Speaker: Alan Udoff, Hynson Lounge, 7:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Philosophy Club and Hillel Club †

9 Monday

Kidnapping of Free Blacks on the Eastern Shore, Guest Speaker: Carol Wilson, O'Neill Literary House Tea, 4:00 p.m., Talk, 4:30 p.m. Sponsored by the O'Neill Literary House Monday Series †

10 Tuesday

Jazz Class, BAJLFC, 4:30 p.m.-6:00 p.m.

Canadian Culture "Canadian Women Writers," Guest Speaker: Lorna Irving. "Contemporary Inuit Textile Artists," Guest Speaker: Bernadette Driscoll. Hynson Lounge, 9:30-11:30 a.m., followed by lunch. Admission: $17.50 WC-ALL members, $20.00 non-members. For additional information & reservations: (410) 778-6662 Sponsored by the Washington College Academy of Life-Long Learning

Ad-hoc Committee for Academic Honesty, CAC Commons, 8:00 p.m.

11 Wednesday

Advising Day, no classes

Ballroom Dance, BAJLFC, 6:00 p.m.-7:00 p.m.

12 Thursday

Ballet Class, BAJLFC, 4:30 p.m.-6:00 p.m.

Intimate Relationships Guest Speaker: Kathy Oddenino Hynson Lounge, 7:00 p.m. Sponsored by the Gender Relations Awareness Alliance †

Natural Resources: How in the World Does a Government Official Make Decisions? Guest Speaker: Torrey C. Brown, Dunning Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m. Sponsored by the McClain Program in Environmental Studies

† See Article

November 7 has been canceled due to lack of interest

The Connells
7:30 Tonight
at the fitness center
Tickets at the Door

A&E

Underground Railroad

Jean Doughty
Office Manager

The Underground Railroad promised an escape from slavery. However, the dreams of some newly freed slaves became nightmares when they were dragged to the South and forced back into their old lives.

Professor Wilson's talk addresses this period in history. Her talk, Kidnapping of Free Blacks on the Eastern Shore, is her second at Washington College. An assistant professor of history specializing in African American Studies, Wilson is publishing a book next year.

The lecture is at the O'Neill Literary House on Monday November 9. Tea will be served at 4 p.m., and the talk begins at 4:30.

Student Profile: Tammie Michener

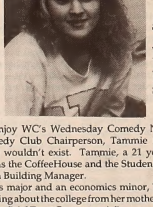

Photo by Andrew Stone

Do you enjoy WC's Wednesday Comedy Nights? Well, without Comedy Club Chairperson, Tammie Michener, the Comedy Club wouldn't exist. Tammie, a 21 year-old senior, practically runs the CoffeeHouse and the Student Center as the Student Union Building Manager.

A business major and an economics minor, Tammie chose WC after learning about the college from her mother, an employee of Hodson-Beneficial Trust Company. A finance corporation that also has mortgage and consumer discount (credit cards) departments, the Hodson-Beneficial Trust Company is a member of the Washington College Board of Trustees.

Tammie has been a member of Zeta Tau Alpha since her freshman year and this year began training in the peer AIDS education program run by Keith Ericson. A physics whiz, Tammie's a tutor for the college. Most people probably know her as a member of the WC cheerleading squad. Tammie's cheered since middle school where she started the school's squad and in high school was team captain for two years.

A Dean's List student and Beneficial-Hodson Scholarship recipient, Tammie enjoys tennis, sketching and writing poetry for own pleasure. She hopes to attend the Johns Hopkins University for graduate work and in the future wants to work in hospital administration. She'd like to eventually become a hospital chairman because "I want to work my way up until I'm at the top. I really like meeting and working with different people in the hospital setting, but medicine isn't my thing."

During the past three summers, she's worked at her mother's company "doing a little bit of everything, including taking applications and approving people for loans with credit checks." She's traveled the East Coast, including trips to Canada and West Palm Beach. She's visited family in Georgia and the Carolinas. If you ever see Tammie's room, you'll notice her collection of posters portraying women with a single tear and hear tunes by En Vogue, Vanessa Williams, Boys II Men and the classical composer Tchaikovsky.

Rethinking Kristallnacht

Keith Daniels
Staff Writer

Kristallnacht or Crystal Night on November 9-10, 1938, marked the culmination of five years of Nazi persecution of German Jews before Hitler's Final Solution. SS troops ran rampant through the Jewish neighborhoods of German and Austrian cities, smashing storefront windows, destroying the shopkeepers' inventories, desecrating and burning synagogues and Torah scrolls as well as interning thousands of Jews in the first concentration camps.

Though well organized and executed, the attacks weren't publicly sanctioned by the German government.

The murder of Ernst vom Rath, Third Secretary of the German Embassy in Paris, France, incited the progrom (an attack on Jews). His assassin, seventeen year-old Herschel Grynszpan, lived in Paris. Grynszpan told French police he shot vom Rath because he was distraught that his family members had been deported to Poland and now lived in an impoverished refugee camp.

Kristallnacht pointed out the failures of the Allied powers. Despite weak protests, not one country tried to help the Jews leave Germany. During the months leading to Kristallnacht, German's anti-Jewish legislation did not affect their relationships with Allied powers.

Dr. Alan Udoff's lecture, Kristallnacht: A Sanctification of Life in 'Dark Times,' is examining these events, Sunday, November 8, at 7:30 p.m. in Hynson Lounge. A Louis L. Kaplan Professor of Philosophy at Baltimore Hebrew University, Dr. Udoff will teach Intro. to Jewish Thought. at WC this Spring.

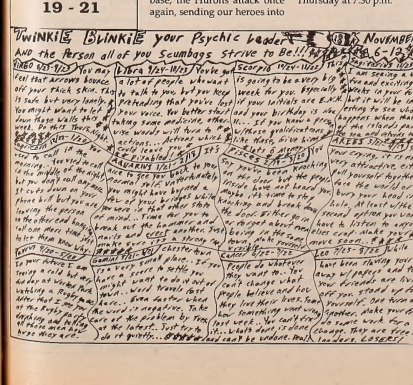
North & South Revisited

On whose side are you—the North or the South? You can choose ranks when two members of the Living History Associates re-enact the lives of Civil War soldiers; one representing the Confederate and the other the Union.

They will discuss daily and outdoor life, uniforms and equipment as well as their motivations to become a soldier and their opposing views of the war. Be sure not to miss this trip back to 1861 on Sunday, November 8 in the CAC at 1 p.m. For additional information, call (410) 778-7849.

Midsummer Night's Dream
Tawes Theatre
November 19 - 21

Andy McKim Reviews The Last of the Mohicans



Andy McKim
Staff Writer

The Last of the Mohicans is an action-packed film set in 18th-century New York during the French and Indian War. Viewers are swept into the movie when a band of Mohican Indians rescue a British officer's two daughters during an attack by enemy Hurons. The three Mohicans agree to escort the two women and a surviving officer through enemy territory to a nearby British fort. During the trip through the rugged frontier, Hawkeye (Daniel Day-Lewis) and one of the daughters, Cora Munro (Madeleine Stowe), fall in love.

They arrive at the fort during a fierce siege by the French. The British surrender and leave peacefully. However, as they travel to a neighboring British base, the Hurons attack once again, sending our heroes into the wilderness for further adventure.

The Last of the Mohicans' historical re-creation and majestic cinematography add beauty and depth to the film's vision. Day-Lewis's great performance rivals his Oscar-winning role in My Left Foot and his critically acclaimed acting in The Unbearable Lightness of Being. Former American Indian Movement members Dennis Banks and Russell Means give an authentic edge to the film's viscous realism.

Though I would not place The Last of the Mohicans on the same plane as the Academy Award-winning Dances With Wolves, it's still worth seeing. The Royal Prince Theatre is holding the film for one more week. Show times are Friday and Saturday at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. and Monday through Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

WC Gets Intimate

It's tough living with people at college, as friends and as romantic partners. Relationships, at any level, can become boring and nerve-racking. Yet understanding other people is necessary in everyday life and the business world.

Intimate Relationships is the topic of this week's Gender Relations Awareness Alliance lecture. Guest speaker Kathy Oddenino, a registered nurse with over 35 years experience, teaches a holistic approach to social interaction.

A graduate of St. Vincent De Paul School of Nursing in Indianapolis, Oddenino has worked with Georgetown University Medical School, The National Institutes of Health, The Naval Medical Research Institute, and Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences. She's conducted kidney and tuberculosis research as well as worked in nursing administration, nutrition, intensive cardiac care, emergency nursing and preventative health care.

The author of several books including The Joy of Health: A Spiritual Concept of Integration of the Practicalities of Living and the recently published book Bridges of Consciousness: Self Discovery in the New Age, Oddenino will be sharing her thoughts on personal relationships, Thursday, October 12 at 7:00 p.m. in Hynson Lounge.

American Nightmare

Scott Graham
AV Guy

If you're in a good mood this Friday, Sunday, or Monday don't see WC's Documentary Series' second installment. This week's tale of depression and misery, American Dream, chronicles the lives of 700-some meat packers working in Austin, Minnesota who go on strike and lose their job. For those who don't remember, this happened in the 1980s at a Hormel plant. Sound like fun? Well, you get to experience the strikers' suffering and sorrow for almost an hour and a half.

I did learn a lot from this documentary. I felt the plight of the working class man (which a lot of students at this college don't understand). But, by the end of the film, I was so depressed that I thought about firebombing a Hormel plant and committing suicide with a Hormel hot dog! American Dream's the biggest downer since Jim Henson died.

I am glad that the film series is trying to open our eyes with its documentaries. These films give an inside look at how others in society cope with their problems; the gay community in Paris is Burning last week (you probably slept through it) and this week's American Dream. But I wish they'd bring back the critically acclaimed snoozers we've had in the past. If I wanted to know so much about the hard life, I'd be in DC, not Chestertown! Did you ever wonder who picks these films?

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
The Last of the Mohicans
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown
gallery 5Q
Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

From "Koon," page 3

And then there was Lebanon. Oh, wasn't that successful! Carter had 52 hostages in Iran. They were there when the trouble started, as members of our diplomatic corps. They had a function there. What the hell was Reagan doing sending the Marines into Lebanon? Over two hundred of our men in uniform would be alive today if he had not. Beirut constituted the most senseless military misadventure since Vietnam. Thank God that human life is not cheap to Bill Clinton like it was for Reagan.

And let us not forget Iran-Contra. Will Bill Clinton subvert our sacred Constitution as Bush and Reagan did? Absosmurfly not. And Bill Clinton will not allow the CIA to line the pockets of drug dealers like Noreiga. Bill Clinton will not ride around on his boat while half of Africa starves.

Under Reagan and Bush Americans abroad often had to take extraordinary precautions to ensure their personal safety. This was mainly due to the inexplicably bizarre foreign policy conducted by Reagan and Bush. Americans were told not to dress like Americans, act like Americans or speak English publicly. Growing up in Germany, it was weird to see how the wave of patriotism in America was accompanied by massive resentment of events like the mining of Nicaraguan harbors. Americans at home were proud, but abroad we were continually at a loss to explain the actions of our own government. Bill Clinton will change all that. Once again we will be able to travel anywhere in the world and be proud of our country, or government and its policies.

The Reagan-Bush years were the years of broken promises. Americans have conservative economic ideas and liberal social ideals. We elected Reagan and Bush to create jobs and growth. Reagan promised to reduce the deficit, yet after twelve years of "fiscal conservatives" the debt has risen fourfold. Reagan and Bush increased taxes on middle America and lowered them on the rich. This has resulted in the massive inequity we see today.

The American people are a devout people, yet they are tired of certain Protestant sects averring that they are the ultimate arbiters of morality. The odious intrusion of the Moral Majority and Pat Robertson into the political realm has created an anti-fundamentalist reaction which will shape people's perceptions of the Republican Party for years to come.

Reagan shamelessly appealed to the right wing Christians, and this meant that he could not say certain words-like AIDS. The President could have at least used his office as a bully pulpit to raise awareness — and yet neither Reagan nor Bush found the courage to do even this. Twelve years of executive apathy to the AIDS crisis has meant twelve years lost.

Reagan also forced the anti-abortion plank down the throat of the Republican Party and appointed judges who would help him realize his dream of an America where women would be forced to have unwanted children. Bush shamelessly went against his own beliefs on this issue, a flip flop which has given us such learned and erudite Supreme Court Justices as Clarence Thomas.

In 1988 columnist David Broder wrote that "The Democrats can blame all their problems on dirty Bush ads if they wish, but the difficulty goes deeper than that. This is a party that needs to get back to its roots, re-examine its thinking, and find new leadership..." This is exactly what the Democrats have done this year. The phrase "excesses of the 80's" has become a cliché, and Bill Clinton was well able to exploit the public attitudes which underlie this perception. George Bush claimed to have created a "New World Order" in four years. On Tuesday Americans gave Bill Clinton the opportunity to create a New American Order in eight.

From "Shields," page 3

My pal Franklin suggested, over a wonderful bowl of chowder at Feast of Reason, to start hating Billy Clinton now. No disappointments, no regrets, no long nights waiting by the phone for him to call as in the curious case of Jennifer Flowers and Miss Arkansaaaw. Check out Arkansaaaw in Playboy — rubber dress, yow!

I heard an ugly rumor (directly from the friend of a friend of a United States Secret Service agent) that Billy-boy Miss and his broom-riding wife Hillary aren't on speaking terms. The story goes like this: a Secret Service agent (assigned to Clinton's campaign) escorted the president-elect and spell-casting Hillary from a speaking engagement to a limousine. Inside the stretch limo neither husband or wife (assign these not-necessarily-gender-specific titles to whom you feel truly wears the pants in the new first family) spoke to the other. Several miles down the road the limousine pulled over to let Hillary ride in a separate vehicle. I'm not making this up.

Let me make one thing perfectly clear! The point in telling you all this is not to gossip, I just figured out a possible flaw in my six month forecast. You see, if tales of marital strife in the White House hit the press, it's all over. We've got a possible Chuck and Di on our hands. The American people love that crap. So, Re-Read My Text: Slick Willy Clinton will be portrayed, by the media, as a stoopid southern redneck within Six months unless his wart-on-the-end-of-her-nose wife starts to bitch. In which case Slick Willy will seek marriage counseling, declare dysfunctional families a "social" disease, add free marriage counseling to his health care reform policy, cry for sympathy from the public and win his second term as president because the American public is a bunch of gossipy People Magazine-reading twits. Anyone else get a Jimmy Swaggart vibe from this clown?

I have too long digressed. This is not a prospectus on Clinton-bashing. The purpose of this discourse is to embrace change. Being a Neo-Conservative Reactionary, this is not an easy task, so pardon any further tangents.

So what was I talking about?— Change. Oh, yes. Since change is a function of the media and the press in relation to the narrow-mindedness of the American public. . . how can I put this discreetly? Okay, since nobody feels the natural urge to think for themselves anymore I propose to do it for them in the Washington College ELM.

Last week's ELM: I quote first from Tarin's editorial, "This newspaper unequivocally endorses Bill Clinton for President of the United States." Secondly, I will quote the ELM's resident "socialist" (?) S. Ross Koon. In his bid for presidency, Koon promised such "socialist" reform as, and I quote directly, "Free liposuction for the poor" and "Repeal of the lawn dart ban." How clever.

Folks, that balderdash is not cutting edge press. Do you really want to wait around for another six months for a biased newspaper to emerge, or do you want a real change now? A change in political direction for the ELM will beat 90% of this country's media to the punch by about six months. I shall now humbly propose to depose S. Ross Koon and be recognized as my own weekly political column under the by-line Matthew Shields, Reactionary Voice of the Washington College ELM. Be certain, there will be no condom pictured between "The" and "Shields." And, Tarin, I can help revise your editorials to match the voice of change. I hope I will not be liable to the least objection, for change is the duty of all under the Clinton administration.

From "NSF," page 5

of student and faculty. Environmental studies at Washington College will be significantly enhanced because of the availability of this instrument. "The combination of the new HPLC and the Gas Chromatograph Mass Spectrometer, purchased with a previous NSF-ILI grant, gives the College capabilities comparable to major research universities for environmental investigations focusing on the fates of agricultural chemicals," Locker said.

Professors Locker and Russell plan to collaborate on several projects related to the fates and effects of pesticides in the environment. The instrument will also be integrated into Washington College's NSF-Young Scholars Summer Program in forensic science for gifted high school students. Students in that program, for example, will use the instrument to analyze the ink from a ransom note.

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists Materials
P.O. Box 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292

J & M'S FAMILY RESTAURANT
JOIN US FOR A PIZZA & AN ICE COLD DRAFT BEER
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL:
HOT TURKEY PLATTER
Dinner Served Daily 4 - 8pm • Breakfast Served All Day
Open 6am-10pm • 7 DAYS A WEEK
1 1/2 mi. S. of Chester River Bridge Next to Emily's • 778-5881

From "Faculty," page 1

AIDS Education; Workshops for members of the community to deal with issues of prejudice and homophobia; Establishment of a 'homo-friendly' counseling service; Extension of specific fringe benefits to 'same-sex domestic partners;' and inclusion of sexual orientation in the college's non-discrimination policy.

Weissman said that input on these issues from the community at large is encouraged and welcomed.

• Professor David Newell of the Committee on Appointments and Tenure announced that the Student Government Association has made an inquiry about submitting the current form of the 'end-of-semester course evaluations' routinely completed by students to the Review Board on Research and Human Subjects.

The evaluations were never presented to the board.

The committee 'decided not to decide;' some knowledge of whether the board encompassed such a procedure was needed before that measure was taken.

Newell is the chair of the Committee on Appointments and Tenure, the Faculty Advisor to the SGA, and the head of the Review Board on Research and Human Subjects.

As chair of the review board, Newell proposed the formation of an ad-hoc committee to evaluate what the scope of the review board should be. This would be done after studying government and legal literature on what the purpose and limits of such a board should be.

• Professor Steven Cades of the Board Buildings and Grounds Committee said that plans for the Daly Academic Building are in their final stages. He also announced that a decision had been reached in regard to the Norman James Theatre sector of the William Smith Hall renovations.

When the architects met with the faculty in September, there had been some question as to what the main purpose of the newly renovated theatre would be. Because of acoustical considerations, the primary function would have to be either performance- or lecture-oriented.

The committee decided to optimize the facility's performance capability; lecture/speech augmentation will be done electronically, Cades said.

• Dean Wubbels announced that a major concern for the near future would be the arrival of the Middle States Evaluation Team in_____. "The first stage of this has already been completed, and that is the adoption of our new mission statement at the last meeting," He added that the Board should pass the statement at their December meeting.

• Dean Maureen Kelly McIntire of the Fringe Benefits Committee announced that two changes to the TIA/CREF retirement plan are being considered. The changes would allow retired faculty easier access to retirement funds and a greater amount of personal freedom to choose a retirement program.

From "C-House," page 1

big enough for 300 kids not to feel cramped," says McIntire, who also places design emphasis on "addressing students' needs, while attempting to re-create the old-fashioned CoffeeHouse feel."

Asked how she plans to draw students out from the Lit House, dorms, sorority and fraternity houses where they've become accustomed to partying, she replies, "Good question."

The major draw will be aesthetics, as the new space will be made more attractive with a sophisticated sound system and state-of the-art movie and video equipment. Concerts will be played in an outdoor amphitheater, and better lighting will be employed to banish the current "unfinished basement" motif.

Perhaps then the CoffeeHouse can return to the way Alumni Office Director and Class of '75 Alumni Pat Trams remembers it.

"They played the same tape every night," she remembers wistfully. "It got so you could tell what time it was by what song was on the tape.

"There was a stage in the corner with a piano on it, and a lot of songs were listened to and written in the CoffeeHouse."

A campus band, Fat Shadow, would often improvise music to the delight of the students. "They had this piano player, John Star, who could write words and music to a good song in the time it took me to drink a beer. And that was pretty quick," she adds.

Looking back, Trams notes, "It was all a blur. A dark smoky blur." She smiles, "But a nice blur."

WC Sailing Team Hosts LUCE Regatta

Chris Vaughn
Co-Sports Editor

Washington College and the University of Delaware will be co-host the prestigious 1992 LUCE Regatta this weekend. The race, one of America's most famous sailing regattas, will be held right here on the Chester and will run from 9 a.m. Saturday, November 7th through Sunday, November 8th.

Quite a few teams qualified for the race at the Area Dinghy Eliminations at Georgetown last weekend as they will be representing the three areas of the Mid Atlantic Intercollegiate Sailing Association. These teams have been categorized as follows: Area A- Hobart, Cornell, Webb, SUNY Oswego; Area B- University of Delaware, Lehigh U., Penn State; Area C- Salisbury St., University of Virginia, and our very own Washington College.

It should prove to be a "Thrilla in Manilla" so find time this weekend and head out to the boat house to catch W.C.'s own Eastern Shore version of the America's Cup!!

From "Election," page 1

Home Rule Amendment, which increases time limits to produce a charter from 12 to 18 months, was passed 57 - 43 percent.

The civil jury amount amendments were also passed. Article 23 of the Declaration of Rights now only applies when the amount in controversy exceeds $5,000.

The new First District, which includes Kent County and had two incumbents running for the House, selected Wayne Gilchrest to continue to serve as Congressman. Gilchrest is a Kent County resident; McMillen resides on the western shore and was up for reelection in a District he had not run in previously.

Gilchrest, a former school teacher and strong supporter of the environment and education, won the popular vote by a 4 percent margin.

Question 6, a Maryland resolution supporting women's reproductive rights, was passed; 61 percent of voters passed the measure.

Two Washington College professors were elected to the Kent County Board of Education: Dr. James Siemen, Psychology Department and Dr. Terry Scout of the Business Department.
(Some statistics taken from the Washinton Post)

IFC Report

The three fraternities at WC, Theta Chi, KA and the Phi Delts, begin this week a bi-weekly column of Greek events and accomplishments. These frats are supported and endorsed by the Intra-Fraternity Council.

Theta Chi

November 10 will be the last day to bid for a Theta "slave for a day." Check to make sure you have not been out-bid! • The Brothers of Theta Chi wish to publicly extend our apologies to anyone who may have been offended by the advertisements posted for our "Rent-A-Day." • Congratulations to all Thetas who played in Midnight Madness: Darren Vican, Jason Ronstadt, Mike Swanson, Geoff Rupert, Jay Devlin & Kris Murphy. • Congratulations also to Than Parker. He played a great defensive game vs. Salisbury State in Club Ice Hockey. • Thank you, George Bush, for four great years!!

Kappa Alpha

The brothers of the Kappa Alpha Order have participated in numerous community service activities. They are currently planning a project that will assist the Upper Eastern Shore Mental Health Facility with their recreational activities. Earlier this year, the Brothers of KA have aided the Lions Club with their annual fund-raising chicken BBQ, and have also helped Republican Congressman Wayne Gilchrest during his successful bid for re-election.

Phi Delta Theta

The brothers of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, in conjunction with the Zeta Tan Alpha sorority, sponsored a haunted house in Cecil this past Saturday. The haunted house was well attended, with about 100 children and parents making an appearance. A costume party, held after the haunted house, was enjoyed by many of the Campus' Halloween revelers. In addition, the brothers and pledges cleaned up the fraternity's section of Adopt-A-Highway an Sunday, November 1.

Emily's

HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686

FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed

"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist — Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal — Electrologist – Louise Leaverton, L.E.

Drop-Off Laundry
We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service
Laundromat Dry Cleaning
Kent Laundry
607 High Street
778-3551

Volleyball Goes 12-20 for '92: Win Last 2 of 3

Tyler McCarthy
Still Staff Cheeseball

The Washington College Shorewomen wrapped up their season this past weekend as they battled Johns Hopkins, St. Mary's, and King's. The Shorewomen beat Hopkins and Kings College but fell to the power of St. Mary's.

The first match was against a talented Johns Hopkins team, but that did not matter, as the Shorewomen wiped them off the court 3-0 with Jen Dixon leading the way with 22 kills. St. Mary's was their second opponent, but the result was not the one the team had hoped for. Washington came out the loser by the score of 2-1. The team's final match of the year came against King's College. The team ended the season on an upbeat note by beating them 2-0. The Shorewomen ended their season 2-3 in the MAC's and 12-20 overall.

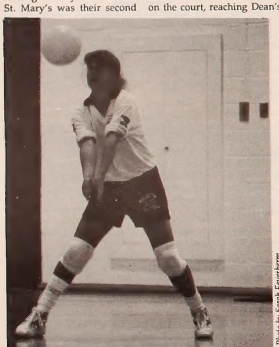

Photo by Sarah Fagerberg

Senior Julie Dill bumps effortlessly

Unfortunately, it is time to say goodbye to three very talented seniors, Julie Dill, Miriam Jecelin, and Nikki Goenaga.

Julie Dill came to Washington three years ago with the talent that would make her a starter. Her strength and leadership has helped the Shorewomen many times in the past. She was second on the team in kills with 202 and ranked high in other offensive and defensive categories.

Miriam Jecelin came to the WAC four years ago and earned a permanent starting position her sophomore year. Jecelin is as smart off the court as she is on the court, reaching Dean's List status several times.

Niki Goenaga came to Washington last year as a transfer student. Goenga is a key server and defensive specialist. She always added a spark to the team and will be missed dearly.

So, as these seniors leave the WC volleyball team, it is with a high status that will be remembered for years to come. Nice job ladies!

QUEEN ANNE'S BOWLING
50 CENTS A GAME
MON-FRI
With College I.D.
Rt.213 South Chestertown
778-5800

Women's Swim Team Receives Academic Honors With 3.23 GPA

Washington College's women's swim team has been named to the 1992 All-Academic Team by the College Coaches Association of America. Those included were Ramsey Bigham, Kasey Carroll, Joan Colton, Mimi Devlin, Beverly Diaz, Amy Draper, Magdalena Fuchs, Jennifer Green, Leslie Newcomb, Karen Pendergast, Eleanor Shriver, Dede Swinden, and Nancy Whiteman.

To qualify for the equivalent for what is Academic All-American acknowledgment, the entire team must have a grade point average of at least 2.80 on a 4.0 scale. Washington's GPA of 3.23 was the 10th highest of all the NCAA Division III schools recognized and two one-hundredths of a point away from a superior ranking.

Three categories are recognized: 2.80 or above, commendable; 3.00 or above, excellent; and 3.25, superior. Washington was the only Middle Atlantic Conference school named to the prestigious team. "I'm very proud of our swimmers," coach Kim Lessard said. "This was a team effort, not just a few high GPAs. I think this is an excellent example of how academics and athletics can be balanced."

--Kent County News

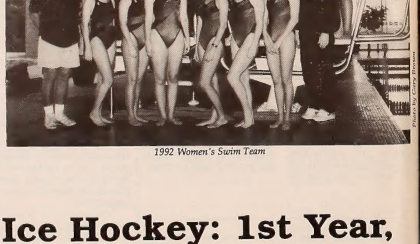

Photo by Sarah Fagerberg

1992 Women's Swim Team

Ice Hockey: 1st Year, 1st Game, 1st Win

Tim Reardon
Newt's POW

On Monday night, Washington College played its first ever ice hockey game. They took on a much larger Salisbury State team. But when the final whistle blew the Shoremen came out victorious by a score of 3-2. Washington started the game with nine skaters and a goalie compared to Salisbury's 17 players.

Washington was determined not to let Salisbury dictate the tempo of the game. So from the opening faceoff, Washington began their domination of the hapless Gulls. The team knew they had to come out strong, because by the third period a team of only nine skaters would be very tired. Washington did exactly what it needed to do to win the game, they outhit and outshot Salisbury and came home with the victory.

All three of Washington's goals were scored by Tim Reardon. First year goalie Dave Kraft played a spectacular game in net, fending off all but two of Salisbury's shots. One of the highlight's of the game was when Chris "Topher" Head got into a pushing match with one of Salisbury's players and naive freshman Gary Yovanovich jumped off the bench to stop the ensuing rumble. By doing so Gary was kicked out of the game, giving Washington only 8 skaters for the remaining period and a half. One of the setbacks for the team was that they were not in good enough condition to skate hard for all three periods. And when Gary got kicked out of the game it made things a little harder (Thanks, Gary).

The college showed great fan support for the game by getting two vans for the students. Even though at times the fans got a little rowdy they really pumped up the team. The rink manager threatened to call the Sheriff's Department, but he knew better. Thanks to all the fans for coming to the game and hopefully everyone will come to the next game (when ever that is).

Shoremen Fires Burn Bright: Ten Year Losing Streak Against Hopkins Snapped

Jason Ronstadt
Staff Gigolo

Last weekend on a rainy Friday evening the Washington College soccer team took to the field and ended a ten-year slump against old rival Johns Hopkins University. A heavy turnout of Shoremen fans showed up for the contest in Baltimore, and they were by no means disappointed.

But everything didn't immediately come up roses in the Shoremen garden. At the end of the first half, the team trailed the Blue Jays 2-0, and it was the second of the two Hopkins goals which really could have dampened Shoremen spirits. "It was a freak goal," said Coach Todd Helbling. "One of our defenders was clearing the ball when a Hopkins forward jumped in front. The ball ricocheted off his back and rocketed straight into the upper corner of the net."

It is goals like this which can stomp out the fire in many a team's heart. But on this night, the Shoremen fire burned much too hot and much too bright for something like mere chance to extinguish its flames.

Photo by Sarah Fegenheimer

Chris "Texican-Dutch Boy" Kleberg slides through some poor sap and carries on with no regard for his feelings

Still down 2-0 and nearing the end of the second half, freshmen defender Brian Rush came all the way up from the Shoremen backfield to punch in a hard low shot past the Hopkins goaltender. Then, just minutes later, the Shoremen struck again. This time it was Brian Rush threading a pass through to Freshmen Midfielder Cliff Howell, who sent home the tieing goal to force the game into overtime. Suddenly, this young Shoremen team didn't look so inexperienced, as the cleat was on the other foot and the Blue Jays were seeing the word "defeat" flash before their eyes.

The game stayed deadlocked through the first overtime. But in the second the Shoremen scored three more goals, the first of which was provided by Cliff Howell and proved to be the deciding goal for the Shoremen.

Soon after that, Freshman Chip Helm and Junior Rory "You don't bring me flowers" Conway, added insult to injury by notching a goal each for themselves.

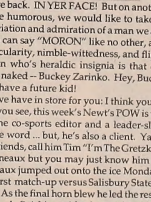
It was a great conclusion to a great game in which the Shoremen who had only scored two goals in the last ten years against Johns Hopkins. They overcame not only bad luck, but ten years of agonizing losses to the Blue Jays. So hats off to the Washington College soccer team, and good luck in this season's final game against Delaware Valley!

Women's B-Ball Tips Off This Tuesady

Eleanor Shriver
Staff Rookie

Women's basketball has moved many steps closer to becoming Washington College's ninth women's varsity sport. As a club team during its upcoming '92-'93 campaign, the lady hoopsters are already preparing for a historic and undoubtable winning season.

Over the summer, a search committee was formed to locate a coach for this new team. Under the leadership of athletic director Geoff Miller the committee chose Lanée Cole to be the driving force behind the 1992-1993 Club. Cole, since her arrival in Chestertown, has traveled to local high schools around the state in order to ensure success as a varsity sport in the new Centennial Conference next year.



Coach Cole comes to the WAC from Central Missouri State University where she held the position as Assistant Women's Basketball coach. In addition to coaching basketball, Cole will be taking over the helm of the Women's softball team this Spring.

This year's club members include freshmen Alison Carr, Kelly Eakin, Erica Estep, Patrice Stanley, Nicole Zemanski, Sophomore Megan McCurdy, Juniors Pam Hendrickson and Susan Himmelheber, and Senior Eleanor Shriver (that would be me).

The Club's first contest is on the home court in the Cain Athletic Center November 10th at 7:00 P.M. So come out and support the Women's Basketball Club as we college history in the making!!

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

. . . And we're back. IN YER FACE! But on another note, one that is a bit more humorous, we would like to take this time to show our appreciation and admiration of a man we all know and love, a man who can say "MORON" like no other, a man who is known for his jocularity, nimble-wittedness, and flippant merriment, and a man who's heraldic insignia is that of poetically clogging on bars naked – Buckey Zarinko. Hey, Buck, stick with it, we think you have a future kid!

Now, what we have in store for you: I think you just may be interested in for you see, this week's Newt's POW is very special. Not only is he the co-sports editor and a leader-slash-lover in every sense of the word ... but, he's also a client. Ya see, we, his loving fans and friends, call him Tim "I'm The Gretzky of Club Ice Hockey" Reardoneaux but you may just know him as Reardon, Mr. Le Reardoneaux jumped out onto the ice Monday night and took the team's first match-up versus Salisbury State by the helm and never let go. As the final horn blew he led the rest of the pack by leaps and bounds finishing with a hat-trick in his pocket and jestingly hooting at his opponent "VIVA LA GULLS" as he left the ice. There was a fire in his eyes like no other as the look on his face appeared to be saying "Don't waste my time with such lackluster talent. I'm ready for THE SHOW. I'M THE BEST!" Nice job Reardonssier!! P.S.- WC has the best Ice Hockey fans I've ever seen – Fire on Ice if you will. That is until they were frightened off by the County Sheriff. OOOOHHHH!!!

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
305 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Janet Thompson
(301) 778-0888

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Soccer Breaks 10 Year Tradition & Hammers Hopkins

See Article, pg. 11

Buckey Dances Naked!!

WC • ELM

Sports

Rugby Roughs it at ST. Mary's: "It was like tough ya know," says Nate Harned

Volleyball Victorious in Final Tourney Campaign

See Article, pg. 10

Gibby Semmes, a crowd favorite, does the white man's overbite attempting to slip by an oncoming opponent. Gib, known for his godlike physique and quotable saying, "How 'bout a 'lil stang," has returned to the sport of soccer in his junior year after taking two years off. He has been a valuable asset in the backfield and has even contributed offensivley with an assist in the team's final game.

Tim Reardon: NEWT's Player of the Week

Scores

Men's Soccer

Washington	5
JHU	2
Washington	1
Delaware Valley	0

Volleyball

Washington	1
F&M	3
Washington	3
JHU	0
Washington	2
King's	0
Washington	1
St. Mary's	2

On Deck

Swimming
Albright (Away)
Sat., Nov. 7
TBA

Sailing
LUCE Regatta
Sat. through Sun.
9 am

The Connells
Tonight!
LFC

W.C. Ice Hockey For Real: Salisbury Falls 3-2

See Article, pg. 10

What Decade Is This, Anyway?

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Fri - Cloudy, Rain, High 65 Low 50
Weekend
Rainy and Cool, Highs in the low to mid 60's

Volume 63, Number Eleven • November 13, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

WC Students Brought Up on Drug Charges by Task Force

Marijuana Ring Uncovered in Kent House

The Kent County Drug Task Force, in conjunction with the Chestertown Police Department, the Kent County Sheriff's Office, the Maryland State Police, and the Washington College Security Department, arrested three Washington College students on drug charges last Friday, November 6. No Federal officers were involved in the investigation or arrest.

At 10:35 a.m. Friday, Police issued a Search and Seizure warrant at Room 218 in Kent House. The residents, Joseph Patrick "Pat" Girdner, 19, of Towson, MD; and Edward Michael "Ed" McGill, 19, of Ellicott City, MD were arrested. The charges for both are as follows: possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, possession of marijuana, maintaining a common nuisance and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Police seized approximately 13 ounces of suspected marijuana with an approximate street value of $4,000, drug packaging materials, scales, screens, smoking devices and $1,008 in US currency from the room. Also seized was a 1990 Ford Tempo GL owned by McGill.

After McGill and Girdner were arrested and transported from the scene, Janairo "John" Hernandez, 21, a WC student from Columbia, PA, arrived at the dormitory room and asked to purchase marijuana. Task Force officers who remained at the scene in an undercover capacity sold a quantity of the drug to Hernandez. He was then arrested and charged with possession.

All three individuals are out on bail from the Kent County Detention Center. Girdner and McGill were released on $15,000 bond each; Hernandez was released on $500 bond.

State's Attorney Tom Yeager said Thursday that the dorm room had been under investigation for some time in an undercover capacity regarding drug dealing from that room.

The room was not searched without a warrant and no "spot checks" are planned for campus; police can only search without a warrant if the consent of the resident is granted or if

See "Drugs," page 9

ELM File Photo

This anonymous and timeless Washington College student has been smoking dope in the file cabinet for years (only on film, of course).

Journalist to Visit WC

Carl T. Rowan, author of six books and recipient of countless awards, will visit WC Monday, November 24.

Rowan is the only journalist ever to win the coveted Sigma Delta Chi medallion in journalism three years in a row for his foreign correspondence and national reporting in the 1950s.

In 1990 the University of South Dakota gave him its Allen H. Neuharth Award for Excellence in Journalism. In April of 1990 the National Association of Black Journalists inducted Rowan into its Hall of Fame.

Rowan has received three honorary degrees, as well as five Emmys for television specials on subjects as diverse as "Race War in Rhodesia," "Drug Abuse: America's $64 Billion Curse," and "Thurgood Marshall: The Man."

In 1987, in an effort to inspire black high schoolers to get good grades and write and speak the English language well, Rowan founded a scholarship program, "Project Excellence." In five years this program has given more than $2 million to 304 college-bound youngsters, all of whom are still in college.

His talk, "The Post-Election America," will be in Norman James Theatre at 4:30 p.m.

Maryland Requires Registration for Out of State Cars

As of October 1, 1992, all students operating a vehicle registered outside of Maryland must obtain a Non-Resident Vehicle Permit from the Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) if the vehicle will be operated here for more than 30 days. This law applies to all such out-of-state vehicles, whether registered in the student's name or someone else's (such as a parent).

The non-refundable registration fee for the Non-Resident permit is $27. This permit will be issued for a period not to exceed one year. It can be renewed annually, as long as the student is still attending school in Maryland and the registration is kept current.

The fine for a first offense violating the new registration law is $260.

To obtain a Non-Resident Vehicle Permit:

- Request a nonresident application form (form VR-111) by calling the MVA at 950-1MVA toll-free.
- Complete the application.
- Visit the local MVA office (in Chesapeake City, Easton or Annapolis) or mail the completed form to the MVA, Title Correspondence Section, Room 104, 6601 Ritchie Highway, Glen Burnie, MD 21062.

Students must have a copy of the vehicle's current registration, a valid college ID, and a completed application in order to apply.

A permit must be sought for each vehicle possessed by the out-of-state resident. The applicant must have approved insurance recognized by the state.

Detailed information on the provisions of this law (and the few exceptions to it) is available from any Full Service MVA Branch Office. Questions about whether you are required to obtain this permit should be directed to the MVA.

Inside

Changes in State and Federal Financial Aid 5

Midsummer* Opens Next Weekend 7

Freshmen Colloquy: Don't Sleep Through It 8

Pan-Hellenic Report Premiere 9

Fact Is Stranger Than Fiction

Now that the election is over, we can stop talking about politics and relax. Or rather, we could, except for the fact that there's so much on-campus politics that the whole question of time is irrelevant: there's so much politicking in each of our daily lives that we don't even see, it's scary.

I'm talking about more than just the administration here. I'm talking about tenure politics, and professors vying for chairmanship, and who got which sabbatical before somebody else who asked for one at the same time, and Blah Blah Blah... I mean, am I the only student who is completely sick of professors trying to get the students to take sides because Dr. So-and-So dissed Dr. Puff'nStuff?

Not that students are blameless, either. I am reminded of an actress in The Color Purple who took out a full-page ad in the New York Times thanking the academy for supporting her and asking for their vote.

Your advisor may write you a recommendation regardless of whether or not you kiss his (yes, his — there are not enough female department chairs, and the ones I know of don't really play this game anyway) tenured ass. But last year I saw a lot of obvious smuggling from a certain contestant for the Sophie Kerr Prize. He or she did not win, by the way, Pat wasn't that bad.

(And I'm not even gonna TOUCH student politics, involving more than proverbial fucking).

This bullshit makes me sick. Being on friendly terms with a professor is a positive thing, but not when you're practically courting, an entire department, and planning your life around a sum of money you can't count on (but did).

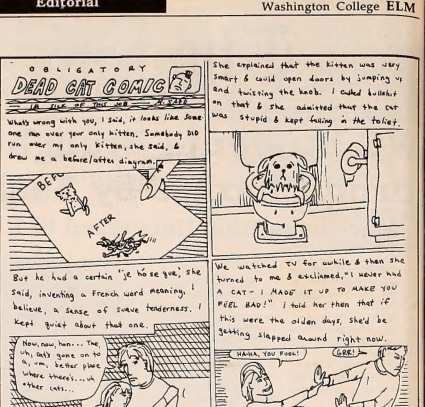
Most people kiss a little butt every now and then. But this campus looks to me like a chain of fools, like the snake biting his tail, only with noses and rumps. Students and faculty intertwined, with a few honest people hiding out in the bathroom trying not to get caught.

And I'm tired of being subjected to it as the Big Guy on the ELM. Don't say this, or Dr. Nobody will get pissed. Make sure you print this one, and soon, so that Dr. Anybody doesn't think you didn't give his/her department as much coverage as Dr. Somebody on purpose. Forget about that interview, Dr. Bonehead won't talk until he or she is sure that their application for faculty enhancement has been passed.

And backstabbing! Certain professors are known for their juicy tidbits, none of which will ever make it into print, true or not, because most of the really big news around here is so off the record that it's on the flip side. (Tails again.)

No, people are not going to a) become genuinely nice and stop talking behind backs or b) make their opinions so known that people know it's not gossip (except, again, for a few: thank you, Prince of Darkness).

They're too busy trying to figure out what their popularity rating is and making up excuses for not going to more lectures. I think the only people I see at everything (and I don't even go to EVERYthing) are Bennett Lamond and Maggie Duncan. Not all lectures are conveniently scheduled. But a play that's open all 3 nights and which features some of your students (or classmates, whichever applies) is certainly not going to inconvenience you.



Yes, I'm pulling the same trick some of my professors do. I'm angry at a few specific people and I'm taking it out on everyone. But let's just get this straight right now: I am tired of this game, and so is my staff. Fuck with us and you'll see it in print. Go ahead. I dare you.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddish
Sports Editors: Chris Vaughan & Tim Reardon
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Cohreti Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 8 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over QuickMail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8585.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Sports

Hockey fans need to cool off

To the Editor:

Last week the Ice Hockey Club opened its season with a remarkable 3-2 victory over an experienced and established Salisbury State University Club.

It was an exciting event, especially for the club members who have worked very hard to establish their club.

While a brief mention was made of the rowdy behavior of some Washington College fans in the recent ELM, I was shocked to be informed of this behavior by the NCAA officials association and by the Talbot County ice area management. Specific claims included ethnic slurs aimed at an Asian player from Salisbury State, public drinking in the bleachers, and interference in game play by reaching over the glass to grab a Salisbury State player.

Although behavior such as this seems almost commonplace these days, it is not nor will it ever be tolerated at Washington College. Individuals who allow themselves to become a part of disruptive crowd behaviors reflect poorly on the institution and show little respect for the hard work of the club members.

Our club sports teams appreciate your support but do not want the image of their team and Washington College tarnished by a handful of fans. Sportsmanship extends to the bleachers, and includes courtesy to our opponents, respect for the officials and adherence to the policies of facilities we visit.

W. Dennis Berry, Director
WC Recreational Sports

Wyman rocks the boat

To the Editor:

I totally agree with Dal Holmes' statement:

"There have been many times when 'a don't rock the boat, it will only make it worse' philosophy led to unspeakable injustice to individuals, peoples and nations. Half truths, conjured up conspiracies and the big lie shouldn't be tolerated." ("Holmes Wants Backstabbing to Stop," Oct. 30, 1992 ELM)

This is precisely what I've been trying to point out for the last year and a half.

Furthermore, Holmes admits:

"I know nothing about the "self-report" or reasons for nonrenewal of Wyman's contract"

Frankly, I am puzzled as to how Holmes can formulate an intelligent opinion without full knowledge of the situation.

Fredrick N. Wyman, D.D.S.,

Athletic Dep. politics continue

To the Editor:

Having just witnessed and endured our nation's recent political campaign, I was most amused after reading Dal Holmes' letter concerning the Washington College Athletic Program, and more specifically, Athletic Director Geoff Miller. ("Holmes Wants Backstabbing to Stop," October 30, 1992 ELM) It seems the art of propaganda and spreading misinformation is not exclusive to politicians.

Mr. Holmes must feel compelled to defend Geoff Miller's integrity in that he (Holmes) was a member of the search committee to select a new athletic director upon Coach Athey's retirement.

Since Holmes is intent on discussing Mr. Miller's "success" as AD, let us indeed look at the record. Holmes implies that Miller should be credited with the construction of the Johnson Lifetime Fitness Center. Plans for the facility were underway long before Miller's employment at the college. As a matter of fact, Coach Fred Wyman's tennis team's successful trip to Chicago in the spring of 1987 spurred Mr. Johnson's interest in a multi-purpose [athletic] building.

If supposedly one reason

See "Read," page 4

Crisis

Scott Ross Koon

The results are in on the poll of Washington College students on the Presidential election. The poll was conducted by Dr. Weissman's American Presidency class, and the questionnaire was designed by Dr. Weissman and Jen Gilday. These data are not the final data, as a few questionnaires have yet to be handed in, but there are enough questionnaires in to give us an accurate overview of the sympathies of Washington College students in this Presidential election year.

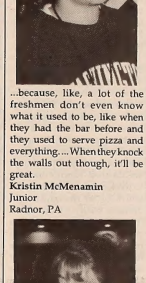
When asked "How would you vote if the election were held tomorrow?," the students responded in proportions which approximate the national popular vote. Forty-one percent indicated Bush, 35 percent indicated Clinton and 20 percent favored Perot. The margin of error is plus or minus 3 percent, 95 percent of the time. It must be noted that Perot got close to 20 percent in many pre-election polls, however the exit polls indicated that he did lose some of his supporters on election day, and that these votes went mainly to Clinton. Given these factors, it is impossible to say with certainty whether Bush or Clinton actually received a plurality of the votes of Washington college students.

Remarkably, there was no gender gap between Bush and Clinton; however, there was one with respect to Perot. Male respondents were only slightly less likely to favor Clinton than female voters. However, 26 percent of all men favored Perot and only 15 percent of the women did. This is entirely consistent with the results of national polls.

One of the reasons why Clinton did so well at what one may expect to be a staunchly Republican college was his wise choice of a running mate. Forty-one percent of those who favored Bush indicated that Al Gore would be a better Vice President than Dan Quayle, whereas none of the Clinton supporters indicated that Dan Quayle would be a better Vice President than Al Gore. This is entirely consistent with the fact that Dan Quayle is perceived as "a major dork" by large segments of the population.

While 38 percent of Bush's supporters indicated that a First Lady was important in their choice of a President, only 21 percent of Clinton's supporters agreed. There was a gender gap on this "issue;" 29 percent of women thought that a First Lady was important in their choice, versus only 13 percent of men.

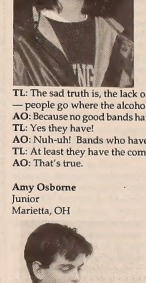
Seventy-nine percent of Clinton supporters indicated that Bush would be the most competent candidate to handle foreign affairs. That they supported Clinton anyway indicates the high degree of irrelevance of foreign affairs to the post-cold war electorate.



Just as the "statesman" issue did not work for Bush, so too did the deficit issue fail to win support for Perot. Only 36 percent of those who thought Perot would be the most competent candidate to handle the deficit actually supported him. On this issue, Bush came out ahead, as 41 percent of those who indicated that Perot would be the most competent candidate to handle the deficit sup-

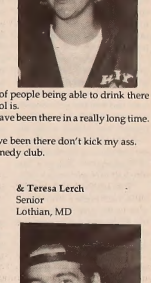
See "Koon," page 4

CAMPUS VOICES



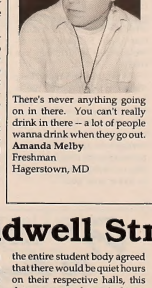
By Big Guy & the Art Fag

Why does the CoffeeHouse suck so much?

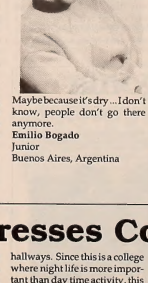


...because, like, a lot of the freshmen don't even know what it used to be, like when they had the bar before and they used to serve pizza and everything. ...When they knock the walls out though, it'll be great.

Kristin McMenamin
Junior
Radnor, PA

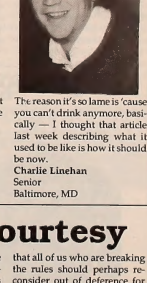


TL: The sad truth is, the lack of people being able to drink there — people go where the alcohol is.
AO: Because no good bands have been there in a really long time.
TL: Yes they have!
AO: Nuh-uh! Bands who have been there don't kick my ass.
TL: At least they have the comedy club.
AO: That's true.



Amy Osborne
Junior
Marietta, OH

& Teresa Lerch
Senior
Lothian, MD



There's never anything going on in there. You can't really drink in there -- a lot of people wanna drink when they go out.

Amanda Melby
Freshman
Hagerstown, MD

Maybe because it's dry ...I don't know, people don't go there anymore.

Emilio Bogado
Junior
Buenos Aires, Argentina

The reason it's so lame is 'cause you can't drink anymore, basically — I thought that article last week describing what it used to be like is how it should be now.

Charlie Linehan
Senior
Baltimore, MD

Open Forum: Kidwell Stresses Courtesy

Tara Kidwell, a resident of Kent House, is a junior majoring in English.

It has been of much debate this semester that the noise levels have been quite out of hand. This is due in part to the lack of interest that the resident assistants have concerning their jobs. Yet, this is not to say that every hall is guilty or that every RA is neglecting their duties, but rather this is to express a growing concern for time taken away from sleep and studies due to loud intrusive noises. As a result, a number of people have chosen to move off campus.

This is not to say that as individuals you do not have the right to make noise, but rather this is to re-enforce the idea that at the beginning of the year quiet hours were established so that people would be able to sleep and study in a peaceful atmosphere. Now, if the entire student body agreed that there would be quiet hours on their respective halls, this does not mean that quiet hours are null and void in other dorms or on other halls. Courtesy and respect go a long way when dealing with anyone, and some people show neither courtesy nor respect when they run screaming down the hall at 3:00 a.m.

Tara A. Kidwell

Another thing which is of great annoyance is that there are a limited number of hall lounges this semester—a result of crowded housing which gives people no place to meet to talk and study except in the hallways. Since this is a college where night life is more important than day time activity, this is bad for those of us who actually like to sleep at night.

A large number of complaints have been logged concerning the RAs not doing anything about the blatant abuse of rules established among hall residents. This has lead to the RA meeting in which the problems of noise and other things were discussed, and there has been improvement. The noise however is not the total responsibility of the RA, it is the responsibility of those making the noise. This means that all of us who are breaking the rules should perhaps reconsider out of deference for those who desire quiet.

There seems to be no end to which the levels of noise can attain. Last week, I was privy (from my room in Kent) to Star Trek theme music and sounds which were being blared from the third floor of Middle Hall well after quiet hours. Not to put down Star Trek, I love the show, but not at twenty thousand and two decibels while I am trying to sleep. To those of you who have the desire or need for Miller's selection was his achievement of satisfactorily integrating the Guilford College field house with the surrounding community, why then has Miller sought to severely limit the use of the Johnson Lifetime Fitness Center by members of the Chestertown community?

See "Kidwell," page 4

From "Read," page 2

One of the goals Geoff Miller set when he was being considered for the athletic directorship was bringing the women's athletic program up to par with the men's program in terms of coaching quality and competitive level.

Holly Bramble, a 1974 graduate of WC, in just four years took the women's tennis team, which in previous seasons had trouble just competing in the Middle Atlantic Conference, and turned it into the 1991 MAC champions. It was the first time any women's team in Washington College's history had captured such a title.

It is rather ironic that Miller had a coach in place who helped achieve this goal, but was willing to dismiss her because he claimed his full-time staff could do a better job.

I beg to differ with Holmes' notion that the women's teams cumulative win-loss records are so superlative under the Miller administration. With the exception of Women's Tennis, women's athletics at Washington College has been mediocre at best. The students certainly are not responsible for this. The coaching staff and its administration, however, are.

Last year Women's Softball did not win a single game and nearly 'folded' before the end of the season. Women's Swimming has placed no better than ninth in the Middle Atlantic Conference. This fall neither Volleyball nor Field Hockey were able to attain a .500 record.

Men's Soccer has been just as lamentable. Hiring a coach by favoritism with no credentials either in the sport or coaching it has produced only five victories in two years.

Mr. Miller's motive to change WC's longstanding conference affiliation will mean a tenfold increase in conference dues. It has already necessitated the school's hiring another full-time coach and create a budget for a new sport to satisfy the participation requirements.

Could it be the "highly competent" athletic director and the administration's main motivation behind this purported upgrading in conferences is simply an attempt to create a pseudo-ivy-league image at a very high cost to Washington College?

Geoff Miller's "professionalism" has only succeeded in alienating alumni and community alike. It is hard to pick out any lasting achievements produced by the Miller years, with the possible exception of the fences erected around the fields, and that is hardly an accomplishment on which to hang one's career.

Scott Read
WC Class of 1991

From "Kidwell," page 3

to be loud in the evening hours: as a way to vent frustration, try cow tipping. It's off campus in a field where you are bothering no one but the cows who don't have RAs to whom they can complain. Well, they do not talk so they cannot even tell Farmer Brown what happened. (I do not advocate cow tipping).

The screaming while walking from one building to another is yet one more thing which disturbs an even greater number of people. This is nice to do when you are raging, but not so nice for those of us who are being peaceable. It usually does not last for more than five minutes, but those five minutes are from hell. I am not referring to weekend noise either. What you do on the weekend is your decision, but if it is during the middle of the week there is a problem. It would be nice if all of us had time to party every night of the week, but not all of us can do that. Some of us are here for an education, not to mention it's an expensive education. Consider it from the point that every student here, whether they are on scholarship or not, has paid for an atmosphere in which they can study.

Next time you party, keep things in perspective. Be as loud as you choose until quiet hours and be respectful of those who ask you to lower your music or just to keep it down. Perhaps you could confine your partying to the weekend. After all, you have the rest of your life to pickle your liver.

From "Koon," page 3

ported the President. Perot seems to have been marginalized by his emphasis of this single issue.

On traditionally liberal issues Bill Clinton was perceived as the most competent candidate. Ninety-three percent of Clinton's supporters indicated that they felt he was the candidate who would do the most to help the homeless, and 69 percent of Perot's supporters agreed. Thirty-one percent of Bush's supporters also felt that Clinton was the strongest on this issue, but that does not mean that most of them favored Bush – many of them indicated that they simply could not decide which candidate would do the most for the homeless.

Ninety-six percent of Clinton's supporters felt that he was the candidate most sensitive to environmental issues, and so did 63 percent of Perot's supporters. This again indicates how Perot's unwillingness to address a wide variety of issues hurt him. Only 28 percent of Bush's supporters responded that Bush was indeed "the environmental President." This is particularly shocking when one considers that 28 percent of Bushies did not know which candidate would be most effective in the environmental arena. This would tend to indicate that Bush supporters have a slash and burn mentality in regard to the health of the planet.

Well, if Bush isn't perceived as the environmental President, at least he is perceived as the education President, right? Wrong. Only 53 percent of Bush's supporters felt that he would be the best candidate to save our education system, whereas 79 percent of Clinton's supporters felt that Clinton was the best education guy. Oddly enough, only 25 percent of Perot's supporters felt that he was the best candidate to improve our education system. This is strange since as the former "school Tsar" of Texas he could have turned education into one of his major issues.

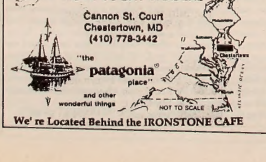
Only 4 percent of Clinton's supporters indicated that Clinton would pursue the best policy on international trade. This would tend to indicate that whatever problem with the economy may be, Washington College students who support Clinton believe that it is a result of internal factors and not due to unfair trade practices on the part of the Japanese, the French or anyone else.

Clinton also got high marks on health care and the fight against AIDS. But what I found most interesting in the survey data was how many of Bush's supporters did not know which candidate was best on specific issues. On the nine issues specifically enumerated in the questionnaire, Bush's supporters had the highest percentage of "don't knows" in six of the nine categories. This would tend to indicate that they did not support their candidate because of any stance on specific issues so much as ignorance of their candidate's stance. In this, then, he is shown to be the candidate of the bland – the President of choice for those who favor a paternalistic figure in Washington who will issue platitudes and soothing reassurances rather than govern.

What Thought Police?

To the Editor:

I would like to respond briefly to last week's letter from Dr. Huck. She wrote that I would like to incarcerate her, but she is dead wrong on that one. Dr. Huck belongs in a mental institution, not a correctional institution.



As to why a 24-year-old is in college as opposed to being "out in the world," the explanation is rather simple. For four years I was "out in the world," and then I decided to attend college.

As pertains to Jennifer Webb's remarks in Campus Voices, I believe she was being humorous. Undergraduates are wont to do that occasionally.

The Elm has a liberal editorial policy; this has nothing to do with any of Dr. Huck's quixotic conspiracy theories. There are no "Thought Police" — this is 1992, not 1984. Wake up and smell the coming of the millennium.

Scott Koon

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap T-Neck has seen most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.

10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442

We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

$5 off any service over $20 with ad
(one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2655 Classes Call 2620

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Higher Education Amendments Affect Student Assistance Programs

Jean Narcum, Assistant Director of Admissions and Financial Aid, has outlined some of the major changes to the student assistance programs mandated by the Higher Education Amendments of 1992. She invites all students who have questions about the application process to visit the financial aid office in the third floor of the Casey Academic Center or reach her at ext. 7214.

• General administrative changes:

There are many administrative changes. Some for the better and some that will drastically change the way we award aid, keep records, and determine eligibility. Some things will be simplified, and others may prove to be record-keeping nightmares for College and University Financial Aid and Business Offices.

Simplifying and additional documentation required will undoubtedly make it more difficult for people to "work the system." The changes resulting from Reauthorization, and institutional verification and data collection will hopefully result in a more level playing field.

Tax returns are still required. However, the 1040, 1040 A, or 1040 EZ is not the only document we will be collecting. Signed copies of parents' and students' 1040s and all schedules filed are required. Also, parents will be asked to verify and provide documentation of legal divorce and separation agreements. Financial aid budgets and aid will be adjusted if students drop the full meal plan. Also, students and families may be asked to provide documentation of investment and bank accounts. Documentation will be required if the interest reported on the IRS tax return does not agree with the account balances, and market value reported on the application for federal aid sent to the Department of Education.

Another change will have an impact on the amount of financial aid awarded. Students receiving any type of assistance from their employer(s) or their parents' employer(s) must report the assistance to the Financial Aid Office. For example: This means if your father or mother's employer provides some type of tuition assistance, or your church assists you with tuition payments, or you receive a scholarship to help pay for books, you must notify the financial aid office of the amount. This aid is considered a resource and your Financial Aid Award may be adjusted.

• General changes:

There will be two applications students will need to complete for the 1993-94 Year. The applications will be available in the Financial Aid Office after mid-December. Washington College's application filing deadline is February 15, 1993.

The two forms are in one large white envelope known as the FAF Packet. It will contain two forms, a green application for applying for Federal Aid, and a Blue FAF, to be used for application for institutional need-based grants, loans, and scholarships. The FAF Packet must be filed with the College Scholarship Service between Janu-

See "Aid," page 9

St. Andrew's Society Offers Scholarships

The Washington Scots Charity and Education Fund of the St. Andrew's Society of Washington, D. C., are accepting applications for 1993-94 scholarships to be awarded to men and women of Scottish descent and to widows or persons of Scottish ancestry studying at the college and graduate level.

Two scholarships foster study between the United States and Scotland.

The Donald Malcolm MacArthur scholarship, of $2,500 is available to U.S. residents planning study in Scotland.

Other awards, as the availability of funds permits, are made to persons of Scottish descent enrolled in U.S. institutions. Eleven awards totalling $15,000 were made for 1992-93.

All the applicants must be able to document their Scottish descent and must be in their third or fourth year in college or university.

Other criteria applied by the fund include an identifiable need for financial assistance and a meritorious academic record.

Special attention will be given to applicants whose work would demonstrably contribute to enhanced knowledge of Scottish history or culture. Finalists for the major awards must be willing, upon request, to present themselves for personal interview by the committee or its designated representative. Candidates either residing or attending school within a 200-mile radius of Washington are given preference among U.S. applicants, although this is not a requirement.

Applications will be accepted until March 15, 1993, and scholarship awards will be announced by May 31, 1993.

Address all correspondence to: James S. McLeod, Chairman, Charity and Education Committee, St. Andrew's Society of Washington, D.C. Bethesda, MD 20817 Tel.(301)229-6140

Pip's Discount Liquors

Complete One Stop Service

Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors

COLD BEER – CHILLED WINES

QUANTITY DISCOUNTS BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES

TELEPHONE 778-4128

KENT SHOPPING PLAZA CHESTERTOWN

Olde Towne Barbers

Flat Tops French Braids
Frostings Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

BRIEF BEEF

Bike Thefts on Campus

Five mountain bikes have been stolen from campus in the last six weeks, most of them from dormitories and all of them locked. Jerry Roderick, Director of Security, told the ELM that these thefts are targeted to the campus, where it is known that there are a lot of bikes readily available. Roderick suggests that students secure their bikes in a safe place, preferably their room. Anyone who notices any suspicious activity or who knows the whereabouts to a stolen bike should report this information to Security.

'Bleed-a-thon'

"Drip 'til you Drop" is the slogan for this year's "Bleedathon," the blood drive sponsored by the sophomore class. The goal for the drive is to get 100 pints of blood. Sign-ups continue today at lunch, and the dripping takes place next Tuesday, November 17, from 11-4 in Hynson Lounge. All blood will be collected by the Blood Bank of Delaware.

Make the new C-House yourself

WC Students will be painting and redecorating the CoffeeHouse next week as part of the CoffeeHouse Interim Project.

• On Monday and Tuesday, September 16 and 17, any student will be able to join in the fun, if not as a member of a sports team, club or Greek Organization, then as a member of one of the four classes (that's Freshman, Sophomore, Junior and Senior, for those of you who are a little slow).

• On Wednesday from 11:30 to 1:30, the SGA will be selling chairs and tiles for $1 for students to paint on the spot.

• Friday, September 20, will be the grand re-opening of the C-House. All members of the Washington College Community are invited to meet in the Study Lounge at 8 p.m. for the ribbon-cutting. Refreshments will be served.

"Culture" Van

Just in case you need to visit a larger library soon, Miller Library is sponsoring free transportation to the University of Delaware Library in Newark and the Library of Congress/Georgetown/GWU/etc. in DC. The van this Saturday (Nov. 14, 9 am) goes to Delaware; the following Saturday (Nov. 21, 9 am) goes to DC; and the last Saturday (Dec. 5, 9 am) back to Delaware. For more info and/or to sign-up, please see Jeff Chaffin at the library.

SYRACUSE ABROAD

ENGLAND • HUNGARY • GERMANY • SPAIN • FRANCE • ITALY • POLAND • AUSTRALIA • CZECHOSLOVAKIA • ISRAEL •

Apply now for SPRING 93

- Internships
- Courses
- Field Study

Enrich your learning, your life, your resume.

Substantial Study Abroad Grants are Available.

For information & catalog:
1-800-235-3472
SPRING 93

Syracuse University
Division of International Programs Abroad
119 Euclid Avenue
Syracuse, NY 13244-4170

Week at a Glance

November 13 - 19

Film Series:

Proof

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

14 Saturday

South Jersey Alumni Chapter Reception, 31 Breakwater Square, Freehold, New Jersey. Hosted by Linda Sheedy '69 & Brian and Diana Farrell '81 For information call the Farrells: (908) 303-1225

Trip to New York City, Meet Behind William Smith, 9:00 a.m., Cost: $5.00, Preference given to International Relations Club Members, For Information, contact Ciaran O'Keeffe, (778) 8765 .

15 Sunday

Gender Studies Reading Group, O'Neill Literary House, 1:00 p.m.

Freshman Literary Colloquy, Sleep in Literature, Norman James Theatre, 3:00 p.m.

16 Monday

The Ban on Fetal Tissue Research: Good Politics or Good Science Guest Speaker: Michael Kerchner, O'Neill Literary House, Tea 4:00 p.m., Talk 4:30 p.m.

Shakespeare's Richard III & The Politics of Family Values Guest Speaker: Phyllis Rackin, Sophie Kerr Room, 7:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Sophie Kerr Committee

Seven Brides for Seven Sisters, CAC, 6:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Dance on Film Series

17 Tuesday

Blood Drive, Hynson Lounge, 11:00 p.m.-4:00 p.m.

Jazz Class, BAJLFC, 4:30 p.m.-6:00 p.m.

Date Rape Seminar, Dunning Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m. Sponsored by ZTA

SGA Meeting, CAC, 9:00 p.m.

18 Wednesday

Ballroom Dance Class, BAJLFC, 6:00 p.m.-7:00 p.m.

Foreign Language Poetry Reading, O'Neill Literary House, 8:00 p.m. Sponsored by the Foreign Language Department Snickers Comedy Club, Comedian: Big Daddy Graham, Hynson Lounge, 8:30 p.m.

19 Thursday

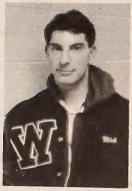
Ballet Class, BAJLFC, 4:30 p.m.-6:00 p.m.

College Community Chorus Rehearsal, Norman James Theatre, 7:00 p.m.

Midsummer's Night Dream, Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m. Admission: $4.00

William Shakespeare's Hamlet will be at the Shakespeare Theatre in Washington, D. C. until January 10.

William Shakespeare's



A Midsummer Night's Dream

Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m.

November 19 - 21

A&E

Student Profile: Michael Frey

If you visit Mike Frey's room, you immediately notice two teddy bears dressed in hospital gear: one as a doctor, the other as a surgeon.

Michael Frey, a 20 year-old junior from Holbrook, New York, says "I've wanted to be doctor since I was born." A pre-med, biology major with minors in psychology and Spanish (and possibly chemistry), Michael's well on his way.

This past summer, Mike conducted research at the National Institute of Health (NIH), National Cancer Institute Division in the Laboratory of Biological Chemistry. He discovered new information about cancer proliferation—an impressive feat for an undergraduate intern.

Many people know Mike as president of Hillel, a Jewish organization open to all students. The organization, of which Mike's been president for three years, just finished a campaign to give clothes and food to the needy and recently sponsored the lecture Kristallnacht: The Sanctification of Life in Hard Times.

Mike works as the WC pool supervisor, a biology tutor and the third-floor Caroline resident assistant. A member of the varsity swim team since his freshman year, his events include free-style and the butterfly races. In his spare time (after his jobs and class schedule which includes 7 hours of lab each week) Mike is the jazz band's lead saxophonist and is a member of the Spanish, International Relations and Karate Clubs.

Mike chose WC after receiving the Modern Languages Scholarship for Spanish, the McClain Scholarship for science majors and the George Washington Scholar for academic achievement. Despite his busy schedule, Mike's maintains a GPA of at least a 3.00 and has been on the Athletic Honor Roll every semester.

Already applying to medical schools in New York, Boston, Pittsburgh and Georgetown, Mike wants to specialize in orthopedics and sports medicine. He hopes to enter physiatry which concerns muscle treatment and rehabilitation. Later, he'd like to receive a Ph.D. in Anatomy and Physiology. This summer, he plans to intern again at NIH or at the Brookhaven Laboratory to conduct research in biological medical physics.

Outside of schoolwork and extracurricular activities, Mike enjoys weight-lifting, jogging, racquetball, volleyball and basketball. He's been a lifeguard for five years and has put in over 150 hours of volunteer work at the Sports and Rehabilitation Clinic on Long Island.

Midsummer Goes on Stage

Eve Zartman
Staff Writer

One of Shakespeare's most famous plays, A Midsummer Night's Dream takes the stage, despite the odds, next week. The senior project of Director Jason West, Midsummer features the comical escapades of lovers, fairies and rude mechanicals.

The story is complex, interwining three plays in one. The play opens with the Duke of Athens, Theseus (WC alumni Tim Madison) winning Hyppolyta, Queen of the Amazons (Bridgette Avanti) in battle and his plans to marry her. At the same time, the nobles, Egeus (Chris "Fatman" Goldenberg), Demetrius (Steve Brown), Lysander (Richard McKee) and Hermia (Emily Grush), experience marriage conflicts of their own.

Hermia's father, Egeus, wants her to marry Demetrius. However, she's in love with Lysander. Further confusion sets in when Hermia's best-friend falls in love with Demetrius. The lovers end up in the forest, where they encounter fairies who are more than happy to play tricks upon anyone who enters. Not only do the fairies wreak havoc upon the lovers, they also tantalize the rude mechanicals, who are workers from Athens rehearsing their play for Theseus and Hippolyta's wedding feast.

The players enter the woods to practice where the fairies proceed to make asses of them. I won't ruin the ending for anyone. Alistair Paget, also an alumnus, portrays Flute/Thisby. Other cast members include Richard McKee, Eve Zartman, Scott Koon, Josh Buchman, Heather Lynch, Brad Foster, David Powell, Cleo Patterson, Johni Savage, Lisa Swann, Katie Degentesh and Rachael Fink. Stage Manager Melanie Green and Assistant Stage Manger Lisa Christie will make sure the play runs smoothly, and Sherry Menton's costume-design expertise can't be beat.

Don't miss A Midsummer's Night Dream in Tawes Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the 19th-21st at 8 p.m. Admission is $4, but no reservations are necessary.

To Use or Not to Use

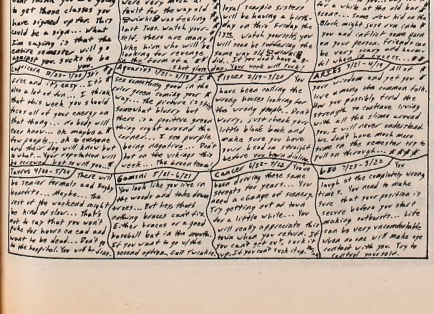
Pat Geissel
Staff Pat

Studies have found that fetal and brain tissue grafts can alleviate the affects of Alzheimer's and Parkinsons disease. However, the United States government has halted fetal tissue research funding due to the abortion controversy that's hung over the political arena the past thirty years. For many representatives, supporting the use of aborted fetuses for scientific research could mean political suicide.

Though recent bills have proposed to set up a tissue bank from miscarriages or ectopic pregnancy as well as fund experiments growing artificial fetal tissue cultures, scientists have argued that these provisions are unsuitable. Diseased or synthesized fetuses cannot provide the same beneficial results as normal fetal tissue.

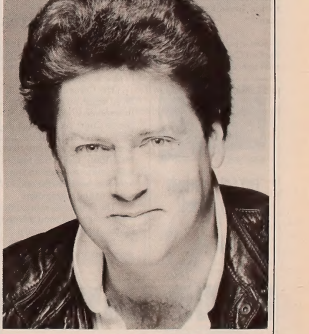
The Ban on Fetal Tissue Research: Good Politics or Good Science, the subject of this week's O'Neill Monday Lecture Series, will examine this controversy on November 16. Dr. Michael Kerchner, a psychology professor at WC, will explain the scientific community's argument. However, he's not discussing the morality of the political aspects involved, but rather the practical applications and alternatives to further fetal tissue research. The talk begins at 4:30 p.m., preceded by tea at 4 p.m.

Ignore Proof, Go to Sleep



Scott Graham
AV Guy

This week's movie is an Australian film called Proof. The picture centers around a blind man named Martin who takes pictures of things he can't see as "proof" he was there. He becomes friends with Andy, whom he trusts to help him label the pictures by fully describing each one. However, trouble comes when Martin's evil lustful cleaning lady wants to get in his pants by any means available! She'd even undermine the two friends' trust by sleeping with Andy. In the end Martin fires the evil Cecelia and once again trusts Andy. (Isn't that sweet)



I found the movie's development slow and difficult to follow. The opening scenes drag as you follow the main characters' growing friendship. When you finally see the evil Cecelia's demented and confused nature, the plot winds down. High points in the film include the night at the symphony, the suspenseful moment before Martin walks in on Andy and Cecelia, and the fight scene. As you probably guessed, the movie easily could be cut to thirty minutes.

This movie's so vacant I find it hard to criticize. There's nothing special about the plot (a evil woman ruining the friendship between two close friends—haven't seen that one before), the direction makes the film seem sit-com-ish and the screenplay's dialogue bland despite a few childhood flashbacks. I'll admit the acting was impressive, but not great enough to sit through it for an hour-and-a-half.

I give up. See Proof yourself if you feel like getting some sleep. Looks like the critically acclaimed snoozers are back! Do you think students pick these movies?

Snickers Comedy Club

Big Daddy Graham yucks it up in the Hynson Lounge ,Wednesday at 8:00 p.m.

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
Under Siege
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 59

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

From "Drugs," page 1

the police witness criminal activity in a specific area.

"The College is part of Kent County," said Yeager. "Drug activity on campus will continue to be investigated by the college and the Task Force."

According to Dean of Students Maureen Kelly McIntire, one student has withdrawn from school and another has been suspended. The third faces the All-Campus Judiciary Board on Monday.

President Charles H. Trout issued the following statement to the press: "Washington College unequivocally condemns the possession, use, sale or distribution of illegal drugs. Our policy, as published in the Student Handbook, states clearly that our campus is not a sanctuary from the law. Members of Washington College's security office cooperated fully with the Kent County Task Force in its execution of the search warrant, and we plan to continue to cooperate with law enforcement in the investigation of this matter."

—from a press release issued by the Kent County States Attorney, with reporting by J. Tarin Towers

Ever Get Somebody Totally Wasted?

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK

Youth Hostels Make Skiing USA Affordable

Skiers can enjoy some of the finest skiing in the USA without paying ski resort prices. American Youth Hostels has nearly 50 hostels, from Alaska to Vermont, located near major downhill and cross-country ski areas.

Less than a day's drive from eastern cities such as New York, Philadelphia, or Washington, D.C., AYH has eight hostels in Pennsylvania near cross-country and downhill ski areas. At the Pocono AYH-Hostel you can go cross-country skiing out the front door, or sign up for lessons and ski rentals less than a mile away. There are also 10 downhill ski areas nearby.

Hostels are inexpensive accommodations for travelers of all ages. They provide dormitory-style bedrooms with separate quarters for males and females. Most have fully equipped self-service kitchens, dining areas and common rooms for relaxing and meeting other travelers from around the world, and a host of unexpected amenities from special programs to hot tubs.

American Youth Hostels is a not-for-profit corporation and a member of the International Youth Hostel Federation (IYHF) which maintains 6,000 hostels in 70 countries — the largest network of accommodations in the world. AYH promotes international understanding through its network of 220 hostels in the USA and its educational travel programs.

Hostelling International and the Blue Triangle are the seal of approval of the IYHF, guaranteeing quality budget accommodations for travelers.

Family Politics

Jen Waldych
Staff Writer

The line, "A horse, a horse. my kingdom for a horse!" from Richard III is perhaps one of Shakespeare's most famous. Yet the play's mental battles of family life, rather than the bloodiness of war, is the subject of Shakespeare's Richard III & The Politics of Family Values.

Guest Speaker, Dr. Phyllis Rackin, a professor at the University of Pennsylvania, is a Shakespeare specialist and 1985 winner of the NEMLA Annual Contest for Papers on Women, Language and Literature. Her latest book, Stages of History: Shakespeare's English Chronicles appeared in 1990. Presently, Rackin is writing a new book, with Jean E. Howard, entitled The History Plays .

Sleeping with Writers

Ryan Walker
Staff Writer

Sleep is an intriguing, but often neglected literary theme. However, this year's Freshman Literary Colloquy, Sleep in Literature, delves into the world of slumber covers such topics as insomnia, coma, drug-induced sleep, dreams, as well as sleep as "death's brother."

For those of you who don't know, the freshman colloquy is a creative compilation of readings pertaining to a particular theme. Past colloquies examined gender, sex, racism and war.

The presentation often combines visual and audio aids, centered around works judged by the students to be thematically interesting and relevant. While some faculty participation in the readings is traditionally a part of the colloquy, the presentation is the product of student collaboration. The independence of the project, and the fact that the freshmen haven't seen past presentations, yield diverse and liberal approaches to the reading.

This year's program includes works by Sylvia Plath, e. e. cummings, Irving Washington and Pink Floyd. Tanya Cunic, a psychology major, is providing perspective on what we spend a third of our lives doing. Jodie Clark will wear cute pajamas and revert to preadolescence.

This year's colloquy has been moved from the O'Neill Literary House to Norman James Theater. The reading begins at 3:00 p.m. on Sunday November 15. Refreshments will be served following the presentation, on stage, on beds, no crumbs barred.

MDHEC Lifts Segregation Moratorium

The Maryland Higher Education Commission has lifted a moratorium on approval of new academic programs.

The Commission had delayed action on new programs in response to a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision that declared that duplicative academic programs offered by both historically black and historically white colleges and universities may have the effect of perpetuating segregation.

The Commission lifted the moratorium after being advised by the Attorney General's Office that it could approve new programs if there was sound educational justification and if the new programs did not have the effect of furthering segregation.

Six program proposals are currently before the Commission, which has statutory authority to approve all new academic programs proposed by colleges and universities in Maryland. The programs are:

- Women's Studies, Towson State University, B.A. /B.S.
- Theater, Towson State University, M.F.A.
- Music, Towson State University, B.M.
- Landscape Architecture, University of Maryland College Park, B.L.A.
- Housing Finance and Development, University of Maryland College Park, certificate.
- Agribusiness, University of Maryland Eastern Shore, B.S.

The deadline for action on proposals is November 15, 1992. Secretary of Higher Education Shaila R. Aery will act on the proposals before that date.

The Supreme Court decision, U.S. v. Fordice, held that separate black and white institutions in Mississippi have the effect of perpetuating desegregation. The U.S. Department of Education Office of Civil Rights has not yet issued guidelines on how the decision will affect states.

FREE IMPRINTING!! of first color on custom T-Shirts
Factory Direct!!
Sports Teams * College Clubs
Fraternity & Sorority Functions
Call now to find out how affordable custom printing really is!
Mention this ad and get $25 off your first order! 12 pc. min.
T-Line (410) 778-5622

FAMILY BOOKNOOK
All "in stock" Books DISCOUNTED!
Hard Cover Books – 15% Off
New Paperback Books – 10% Off
Pre-Read Paperback Books – 50% Off
Discover our Pre-Read Paperbacks. Credit for Your Gently Read Paperbacks – BROWSERS WELCOME!
Washington Square Shopping Center – near Super Fresh

A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Tuesday - Saturday
Perms or Relax
Appointments Preferred
Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0888

From "Aid," page 5

ary 1 and February 15 to be considered for maximum federal, state, and College financial aid. Applications received by February 15 will receive maximum consideration for all available funds. Students filing after February 15 are less likely to have their full need met.

Individual program names have been changed to: Federal Pell Grant, Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (FSEOG), Federal Perkins Loan, Federal Stafford Loans, Federal Supplemental Loans to Students (FSLS), Federal PLUS Loans, Federal Work Study. Briefly, we just add the word Federal in front of the various program titles. This is a fairly simple change, but it should help students and their families understand who really funds these particular programs.

• New definition of an Independent Student. To be considered an independent student for Financial Aid purposes the student must be one of the following:
An orphan or ward of the court, a veteran, married, have legal dependents other than a spouse, a graduate student, or at least 24 years old by December 1993.

The new provisions DO NOT grandfather in those students previously classified as independent, and single undergraduates are no longer considered independent on the basis of resources. It no longer matters if your parents claimed you on a tax return, or if you have been earning more than $4,000 per year.

We have a few students that this will effect, such as students who have exceptional circumstances. These students will be contacted in December by the financial aid office to review the new 1993-94 applications.

• Fewer adjustments and allowances to income in determining eligibility for aid.

Beginning with the 1993-94 award year, the federal government will no longer include certain items as adjustments to income. Medical and dental expenses, and tuition paid for children attending private elementary or secondary schools are no longer considered additional expenses or adjustments to income. These questions have been eliminated from the applications.

• New loan limits and programs:

There is a new loan program that will benefit middle income families, or families that did not meet the eligibility requirements for Federal Stafford Loans. It's called the Unsubsidized Federal Stafford Loan. It works the same way that the current Federal Stafford works - same loan limits, same interest rate — except the Federal Government does not pay the interest for students while they are in school. Instead, the student will pay the interest while enrolled.

Also, new loan limits go into effect on July 1, 1993. Students and their families can borrow more money each year to help defray some of their expenses. Federal Stafford limits will increase, and parents can borrow up to the full cost of attendance under the Federal PLUS loan program. The expanded FPLUS limit can prove to be a real benefit for families currently using some of the extended payment plans. However, new borrowers will no longer be able to defer interest and principal payments on FPLUS loans made after July 1, 1993. Repayment will begin 60 days after the loan is disbursed.

FPLUS will be made copayable to the parent and the college. No check will be negotiated until both the school and parent signs the check.

Lenders are now required to charge FPLUS and FSLS borrowers an origination fee of 5% of the principal amount of the loan. The fee will be deducted from the disbursement and paid to the Secretary of Education.

• Federal Pell Grant Program changes:

Currently, eligible students can receive Pell Grants ranging from $200 - $2400 each year. Effective 93-94, the minimum grant will be $400, and the maximum grant will be $2300. This is an easy change to remember - add the word federal and subtract $100.

• Federal Work Study changes:

The purpose of Federal Work study is amended to add an encouragement to eligible students to participate in community service related activities. We will be required to use 5% of our Federal Work Study funds to compensate eligible students for work they perform in community service employment (e.g., Community Tutoring Programs, The Mental Health Clinic, City Parks and Recreation Programs).

Pan-Hellenic Report

Alpha Chi

The Alpha Chi Omega sorority is hosting their annual Casino Night on Saturday November 21 from 8-12. Dave Lipinski, who opened for the Connells, will be playing some great tunes down in the CoffeeHouse on the same night. All proceeds go to Domestic Violence (Battered Women). So, bring your money and some LUCK!!! Also Congratulations to our fall pledges — Cherly Bull, Pam Hendrickson, Denise Coleman, Renee Kuhnel, Jen Nyman, and Sabrina Leighbul. Keep up the spirit and good work! You're awesome!

A O Π

The sisters of Alpha Omicron Pi held their annual Crush party on November 5 at the Elks Club. We also sold candy grams for Halloween as a fundraiser and last month we co-sponsored a Toga Party with the Theta Chi fraternity in Dorchester. In the future we plan to hold fundraisers whose proceeds will benefit our philanthropy, The Arthritis Foundation. We congratulate our fall pledges, Renee Alten and Julie Klien, for their spirit and enthusiasm.

Zeta

The sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha co-sponsored a haunted house with the Phi Delta Thetas on Halloween and organized the campus trick-or-treating. We are sponsoring a Date Rape Seminar on November 17 with Kappa Alpha Order. Our fall formal will be held on November 14 in the basement of Minta Martin. And Congratulations to our fall pledges — Lainie Goldsmith, Sue Huntly, Krissie Rindfuss, and Meredith McPherson.

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 13 JAMIE MORTON Boston Singer-Songwriter
SAT 14 THE BAY COUNTRY GENTLEMEN
Simply Great Bluegrass!!
THURS 19 THE MOVIES The Best Rock Dance Band Around

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

2nd
Second to none.
SECOND NATIONAL Federal Savings BANK
Over $1.6 Billion in Assets
FDIC Insured
503 WASHINGTON AVENUE
P.O.BOX 577
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
410-778-1013
OPEN 6 DAYS A WEEK
FOR YOUR BANKING
CONVENIENCE
LENDER
MUST

Casey Swim Center Alive in '92: WC Swimming Looks Promising

Tim Reardon
Co-sports Editor

The 1992 Women's Academic All-American Swim Team opens Saturday against MAC power Swarthmore. This season they are a small team, but Coach Lessard feels they are very talented. They will be led by junior standouts Mimi Devlin and Jennifer Green.

Devlin was a MAC finalist 2 years in a row in her 3 events and will see a lot of action this year in the distance events. Lessard stated, "She is probably our most versatile swimmer and will help wherever the team needs her."

Jennifer Green, school record-holder in the 100 and 200 Backstroke, has also placed both years at the MAC championships. She too will be an asset, especially in the Freestyle.

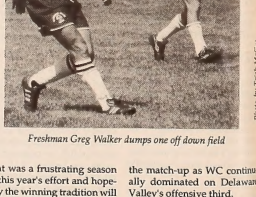
Senior captain Karen Prendergast will backup Green in both Back events and help in the IM. Junior Magdalena Fuchs, member of 4 WC Relay records, will be valuable in the 50, 100, and 200 free events while Nancy Whiteman will also show her versatility in the 100, 200, 500, and 1000 Freestyle races. Sophomore Amy Draper, an MAC finalist last year in the 100 fly and the 3rd fastest in WC history behind All-American Kasey Carroll will return with Mimi Devlin in the Fly and Free events.

The outstanding freshman class will also help the women. Colleen Roberts of Medford, NJ will be WC's top Breaststroker and will also help in the IM and Fly events. Jennifer Dow of Ridgeley, WV recorded Washington's 5th fastest butterfly time in time trials and will also swam distance Freestyle events. Denise Hakanson of Gloucester, NJ proved her sprinting ability by recording the fastest times in the 50 and 100 Freestyle trials. Hakanson will also swim Backstroke and IM races. Finally Robin Woolens of Dover, Delaware will contribute by swimming Breast and Freestyle events. The women are working very hard and should have some great swims Saturday.

The WC Aquamen will also open their 3rd season against Swarthmore College. Sophomore standout Dave Cola, school record holder in the 50, 100, 200, 500, and 1650 Free as well as the 100 Butterfly and 400 IM, should again prove to be the team's leading swimmer. He placed in all 3 events at the MAC championships and should continue to tear up the league.

Sophomore Jason Campbell will defend his school record in the 100 and 200 Backstroke while being very valuable in the sprint free events. Campbell also placed in the MAC finals. Returning Sophomore Tim Whittier, MAC finalist, will swim in the 100 and 200 Backstroke events. Tyler McCarthy, the Leading Staff Cheeseball and member of all 5 school relay records, will be a valuable asset in the 50, 100, and 200 Free and Backstroke events. Sophomore Dave Czekaj, MAC qualifier in the 100 and 200 Backstroke, will also swim in the distance freestyle events. Sophomore Captain Chris Freisheim, MAC qualifier in 3 events last year, will help the Shoremen in a wide range of events with his excellent versatility. Sophomore Mike Bowman and Junior Mike Frey will be adding depth to the lineup with their skill in the 50 Free and 100 Fly events. The only Senior on the team, Andy Mckim, a member of the MAC Academic Team, will continue to be valuable in the Breast and Free events.

With the help of an outstanding recruiting class Coach, Lessard feels the men will be surprising many teams this year. Remarkable Backstroker and IMer Peter Ward from Greenwich, CT is already holder of a few Shoremen records. Scott Steinmuller of Lawrenceville, NJ swam the 3rd fastest WC 200 Freestyle in time trials and his 100 Fly is under the school record. Freshman Jon O'Connor of Germantown Academy will give WC great depth in the distance events behind Cola. He swam the 4th fastest 200 Freestyle in the time trials. Dave Kraft, Ice Hockey goalie extraordinaire of Silver Spring, MD will help in the distance events recording the 5th fastest 500 Freestyle time. He is also a talented Backstroker. Chestertown native Julian Gaudin recorded the 2nd fastest Shoremen Breaststroke time and should prove to be a significant addition.



Coach Lessard stated, "The team is young but we are very optimistic about the future. They are working hard and proving their dedication. This year WC will be the surprise team of the conference." Come over to the Swim Center Tomorrow and cheer on a new and improved Washington College Swim Team.

Soccer Wins Season Finale to go 5-12-2

Chris Vaughn
Chicks Dig Me

The final bout was completed last week for WC soccer as they it took it right to Delaware Valley from the opening whistle. It was a nice ending to what was a frustrating season for this year's effort and hopefully the winning tradition will carry forward into the future. The Hopkins win, by far the biggest win for WC soccer in years and which lead to this victory is just a taste of what lies ahead for such a young team.

Chris "I've been in the sports section way too much" Kleberg was responsible for the only goal scored which came in the first half. Assistance came from Gibby "I made the back page last week" Semmes and Chad "I have no nickname" Wheatley. The final score, however, was not reflective of the match-up as WC continually dominated on Delaware Valley's offensive third.

Freshman Greg Walker dumps one off down field

Photo by Trish McGee

Although the team's overall record is unbalanced, it does not reflect the positive cultural turnaround of the team instilled by co-captains Charlie "Mr. Gray" Linehan and Mr. "Boggess" Kleberg. They have done an outstanding job inspiring the team and laying a foundation that will be an integral part of the building years yet to come. They will be sorely missed. Rory "Public Enema" Conway looks to be the team leader and its rallying point next year with his unstoppable offensive talent, but he has some big shoes to fill.

Players, coaches, and fans alike seem to have a renewed interest in this sport as a slow realization and recognition of this squad's ability are gaining. Coach Helbling and assistant Jack "I'm only going to have one" Shafer have a great amount of confidence as they look to their upcoming years with this cohesive unit.

Suds 'n Soda
"Your Store For Convenience"
Rt. 213 & Rt. 297
1.5 Miles North of Campus
778-5077
BEER*WINE*LIQUOR*SODA*ICE*KEGS
OPEN 6 a.m.-12 mid
7 DAYS
LARGE IMPORT SELECTION
LARGE KEG INVENTORY
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
MAGNUM MALT LIQUOR 12oz CANS
ONLY $6.99 + tax
CASE
WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS
YOU MUST BE 21 AND HAVE 2 FORMS VALID IDENTIFICATION TO PURCHASE ALCOHOL

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist
Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal
Electrologist –
Louise Lawerton, L.E.

Washington College Sailing Takes 3rd in Luce Regatta

Tim Reardon
Co-Sports Editor

Saturday the 7th and Sunday the 8th were both chilly days on the Chester River, but they provided a nice steady breeze for the sailors, as Washington hosted its first Mid Atlantic Intercollegiate Sailing Association sanctioned regatta.

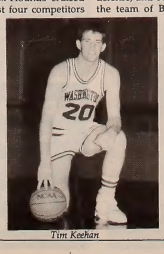
The two skippers from Cornell won the first series of races on Saturday and never relinquished their lead, winning the regatta. Hobart, which placed 2nd, posed no real threat to Cornell and was able to keep a modest lead over Washington and Delaware who maintained third and fourth positions respectfully. Webb finshed fifth while Salisbury came in sixth.

The A-fleet skippers for Washington were Joey Coale and Chris Harget while Chris Wolf and Matt Wilder crewed for them. Skippering the B-fleet for all 14 races was John Wyman, while Wisty Wurtz crewed.

W.C. Sailing pacing themselves on the Chester

Photo by Mike D'Andrea

Former Shoremen B-Ball Stars Receive National Attention



Chris Vaughn
All Girls Want Me

Tim Keehan and Andy Bauer, two former basketball stars here at WC, took it to the limit in a world competition of three-on-three basketball. Their team, the Ex-Hounds, representing Washington, D.C., overcame a shortage of players to finish 4-1 in round robin play Nov. 2, in the Hoop It Up World Finals in Dallas.

The Ex-Hounds cruised past its first four competitors but had to play morning games against Richmond Va., and Zaragoza, Spain, without former W.C. player Tim Keehan. Keehan, 24, discovered he was a diabetic. In order to return he took a crash course to treat himself, took a later flight and joined the team just in time to beat defending champion Omaha, Nebraska, 19-6, and go undefeated in the first three games.

Using ball control, tough defense, and outside shooting the team of Bauer, Keehan, David Gately, and John Miller went 4-0 by beating Sacramento, California 16-12.

Andy Bauer, a former WC player, twisted his ankle in the team's final game on Nov. 2 to Pool-A winner New York. But in their game against N.Y. Keehan said a strong wind on the open court proved costly. "We're the type of team that plays on the perimeter," Keehan said. "On that court there were no buildings around to stop the wind. It forced us to play inside and we don't do that as well."

Tim Keehan

Andy Bauer

Photo by Gary Broom

NEWT'S
Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

Ted Greeley

Oye Como Va. Uh, uh, uh uh . . . Oye Como. . . ohh, sorry , just jamming to our favorite "Mean Gene" Hamilton Newt's tune. Our hats go off to the master's performance Tuesday and his uncanny likeness to Bill Murray. (Don't give up your day job, Gene.)

But our hats, our shoes, and even our boxers really go off to Ted "RED, YOU'LL GET 'EM RIGHT SHRED" Greeley, this week's Newt's POW. Ted, a native 'RADO' man, characterized by his cool equanimity, his dispositional capriciousness, his abstinence – oh, we mean obstinance, and his melodious voice, captured our hearts this week with his FANTASTIC FINISH. It was probably the most memorable game ending play in the 200 year history of Rec Sports B-Ball. Ted, a member of the Dream Team/Bad News Bears of D-III, eloquently and graciously heaved up a three pointer only to have it fall, giving the Dream Team its first win of the season. 22 seconds, 100 feet, 3 passes, 3 points. What did you expect from #7 John Elwa. . . . I mean #18 Ted Greeley and the legendary Dream Team. Nice Job Shred! You da mang!

QUEEN ANNE'S BOWLING
50 CENTS A GAME
MON-FRI
With College I.D.
Rt.213 South Chestertown
778-5800

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN MARYLAND 21620

Soccer Downs Delaware Valley 1-0

See Article, pg. 10

Swanson Goes For Blood as Security Guard at Connells!

WC • ELM

Sports

Girls B-ball Struggles 1st Night Out. What's up?

Swimming Set to Start '92-'93 Season

See Article, pg. 10

Would the real Bucky Zarinko please stand up? That's right ladies and gentlemen, after digging through our files, we discovered a former W.C. student who was of kith and kin to the Zarinko name. If you will notice the vigor, poignancy, and trenchancy exhibited by his countenance you quickly come to realize it could be none other than the long lost, illigitimate son of Mrs. Zarinko. P.S.- It's been a slow sports week.

Scores

Men's Soccer

Washington	1
Delaware Valley	0

Women's B-Ball

Washington	26
Phil. Col. Bible	88

Sailing

Cornell	41
Hobart	68
Washington	95
Delaware	111
Webb	136
Salisbury	137

On Deck

Swimming
Swarthmore
Tomorrow
2 p.m.

Hi Mom!

LUCE Regatta a Success: W.C. takes 3rd

See Article, pg. 11

Ice Hockey vs. Navy: Desert Storm on Ice

"Away- 11am Sunday"

Ted Greeley: NEWT's Player of the Week

"If you're gonna speed, at least look in your rear-view mirror"

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: rainy and cold; H low - mid 50s; N winds 10 - 15 mph
Weekend: clear and cold; H 40s L 30-35

Volume 63, Number Twelve • November 20, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Vandalism Heats Up the Literary House

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

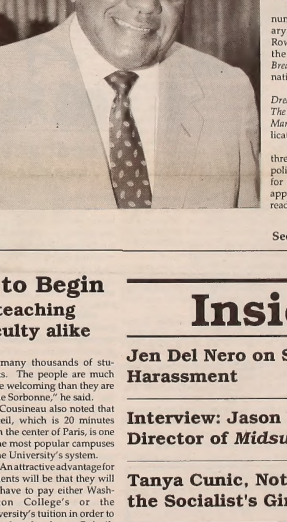
Washington College Security is currently investigating a rash of burnings which have occurred in the O'Neill Literary House as early as September and as recently as last weekend.

On Sunday, November 15, somewhere between the hours of 4:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., an unknown person set fire to a pile of flammable material — possibly toilet paper or paper towels — on the floor of the third floor bathroom in the Lit House.

An English major with a Fellowship Room on that floor had left the building at 4 a.m. and found the charred remains in the bathroom at approximately 4 p.m. Sunday.

Housekeepers in O'Neill revealed that they had found several smaller burnings over the course of this semester. Items such as coffee filters and entire packs of matches had been lit and left in various parts of the house. The previous incidences had not been reported to Security because they were not as alarming as Sunday's.

Professor Robert Day, Director of the O'Neill Literary House, expressed concern at a meeting Monday night with students who regularly use the building that a student with emotional problems was "seeking attention" from the Lit House environment and that the burnings were "cries for help."



Not only is the house made mostly of wood, but its high content of paper, not only on the bookshelves but in the pressroom, makes the building highly flammable.

T. Michael Kaylor, Director of the Literary House Press, reiterated that the solvents and papers kept in the Lit House make targeted fires particularly alarming. Kaylor makes his living running the press shop, and a fire in the building would destroy not only the literary environment which students and faculty enjoy, but Kaylor's livelihood as well.

Students at the meeting expressed concern that these

See "Fire," page 8

Nationally Syndicated Columnist to Visit WC: Carl T. Rowan Speaks on Post-Election America

Accomplished journalist Carl T. Rowan will deliver a talk, "The Post-Election America," at Washington College on Monday. His talk, which will be held in Norman James at 4:30 p.m., will give members of the college community access to one of the most visible figures in print, television and radio media.

In addition to accumulating numerous awards and honorary degrees for journalism, Rowan has published six books, the most recent of which, Breaking Barriers, has been a national best-seller.

Rowan's seventh book, Dream Makers, Dream Breakers: The World of Justice Thurgood Marshall, is scheduled for publication early next year.

He has been the author of a three-times-a-week column of political and social commentary for 28 years, a column which appears in newspapers that are read in half of America's homes.

See "Rowan," page 4

WC-U. of Paris Exchange to Begin

Transatlantic partnership offers teaching opportunities to students and faculty alike

Amanda Burt
News Editor

In an unprecedented move to offer students and faculty the opportunity to broaden their international experience, Washington College has initiated an exchange program with the University of Paris at Créteil. The program, slated to begin in the fall of 1993, will solidify a thirteen-year relationship with the University.

The first component of the exchange program will offer three or four students the opportunity to spend their junior year abroad at Créteil, and the University will in turn send Washington College three or four of their students.

While students will have to be familiar with French, the program is not restricted to French majors. Students will be able to take courses in in areas such as International Studies and English.

Dr. Thomas Cousineau, Graduate Program Director for the college and Professor for the department of English, has had close personal relations with the Créteil, one of the 14 campuses in the University of Paris system, for nearly twenty years.

In addition to teaching at the Sorbonne, Cousineau has taught at ten different campuses in the University's system, and he said that teaching at Créteil was the most enjoyable.

"Créteil is a much better opportunity for students than going to the Sorbonne, where students tend to get lost among the many thousands of students. The people are much more welcoming than they are at the Sorbonne," he said.

Cousineau also noted that Créteil, which is 20 minutes from the center of Paris, is one of the most popular campuses in the University's system.

An attractive advantage for students will be that they will not have to pay either Washington College's or the University's tuition in order to attend school at Créteil. Cousineau said that while most other programs of this nature cost $10,000 or more, students will be able to receive full credit for their junior year without having to pay an excessive amount of money.

See "Créteil," pg. 9

Inside

Jen Del Nero on Sexual Harassment 4

Interview: Jason West, Director of Midsummer 5

Tanya Cunic, Not Just the Socialist's Girlfriend 6

Flying Chairs and Swords at Hamlet 7

No Elm Next Week
Happy Thanksgiving

Superman and Madonna

I heard on the news the other day that Superman died. Or, as the newscaster said, "Not only did they tug on Superman's cape, they killed him!"

"Is this a symptom of the postmodern condition," you may ask, "or a symbol of the decline of the classic American reverence of the almighty Hero?" (Or maybe not)

One Superman fan they interviewed on the program named Batman and the Punisher as comic book superheroes who are still alive and well. I could similarly console you with the fact that Supergirl lives on. Except that not one person on the news buying stacks of black comic books even mentioned Supergirl. They all prayed for the second coming of, well, Clark Kent.

Sure, maybe I should have some sympathy for a man who shares my profession, except for the fact that he is a mild-mannered journalist, and I, in case you haven't noticed, am not.

My point is not, "where are the heroes," but "where is the heroine" (and I'm not talking smack here). I used the singular of the word because just one would do. There are lots of lesser female comic book characters, even some of the X-Men are actually women. But what I'm talking about goes further than the printed page.

They call this the 'year of the woman.' More woman Senators and Representatives will sit in this coming Congress than ever before. The numbers of female governors and mayors of major cities are also on the rise. And yet I can't name one single woman that I'd call my hero.

This is not confined to just America. A week ago, Bridgette Winchester, a her portion of the "Gender in the Academy" colloquium in the Lit House, talked about the women she interviewed in Germany this summer. She asked them to name a female mentor that has influenced them. Largely, they couldn't. Bridgette herself said she'd name Madonna or Cher. Interesting.

Similarly, a recent teenage magazine readers' poll asked roughly 100,000 girls between 13 and 17 what woman they admired the most. First place was mom. Second place was Madonna (not the Virgin).

I love my mom, she's great. But who else is there? Men in America today can pick from a catalog of not only entertainers, but businessmen, statesmen, authors, journalists, artists, scientists, athletes, etc., etc.

Women can choose from a smaller list of people who make 70 percent of those same men. A list of people who are doomed to be called "a great woman writer," rather than "a great writer." People who would never be elected President because the American public doesn't want to let PMS near the red phone, much less the button. You get the idea.

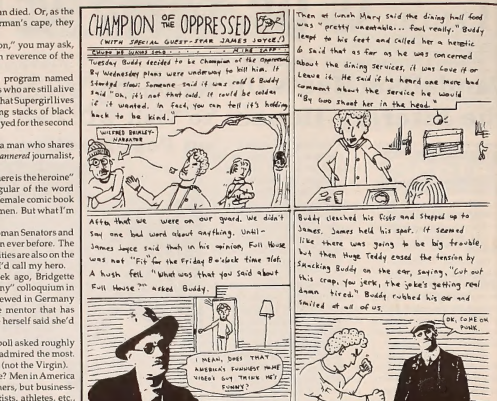
I was watching TV with a certain few male friends of mine last week, and the 'bad guy' was a woman who happened to be trying to destroy not only Earth, but the time-space continuum. "If men ran the world," one said, "it would be a lot better place, and things like this wouldn't happen." The other guy countered, "Men do run the world." And the first guy said, "Oh, yeah, and it's a damn good thing."

They say things like that all the time and try to leave me guessing as to when they are or are not joking. That's at least better than the ones who I know aren't joking, the ones that Jen Del Nero talks about on page three, who will not only look you up and down, but tell you what they'd like to do to you after they get their eyeful.

No, not all men are guilty of either harassment or sexism. But the trouble is that the majority of the guilty parties don't even know they're doing anything wrong. In a court of law, this is called either ignorance or insanity.

I'm not saying it's necessary to kill off Superman in order to have a Superwoman. But I say, cut the 'Supergirl' crap and let's mobilize. As Tanya Cunic says on page 8, "You can call me a raging feminist." I've been called worse and lived through it. I've survived.

Women are capable of a lot more than 70 percent of what men are. I'd even wager 100 percent. No, a woman could not be elected President today. But what about tomorrow?



It's time for women to stop surviving and start thriving.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jennifer Gray Reddish
Sports Editor: Chris Vaughn
Layout Editor: Brian Morrison
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's edition.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-0683.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

Why doesn't Read like women?

To the Editor:

Over the past several weeks, we've watched as various members of the Washington College Community have used any excuse that they can find to list their grievances against the current athletic director and rehash old controversies.

We are all aware of the controversy surrounding the tennis team last year, and many of us are also aware of the accomplishments of the members of the tennis team, both academically and athletically. No one begrudges them their accomplishments, yet Scott Read still felt the need to mount an unprovoked attack on the other women's teams on campus in his letter to the Editor last week ("Athletic Department Politics Continue, November 13 ELM).

Such ignorant generalizations as Mr. Read made when referring to the other women's teams on campus as "mediocre at best" need to be set straight. We cannot speak for all the women's teams on campus that he insulted, but as members of the swim team, we felt compelled to share our collective reactions.

Why is Mr. Read so concerned with the win-loss records of WC's women's teams anyway? We feel that success cannot be gauged by meaningless tallies in a win-loss column. Is not the Division III philosophy of 'student first, athlete second' still held dear at Washington College? Furthermore, if it were not for Washington College's Division III Athletic Program, most of us would not be participating in and excelling at sports on the varsity level, while at the same time not sacrificing other parts of the learning experience of college life. This is something to be treasured. The lessons that our coach has taught us about sports as the key to lifelong fitness, health and enjoyment will endure much longer than our win-loss record ever will.

Mr. Read also blamed the so-called failure of our women's teams solely on the coaches and administration. This is a very naive position to take. It is impossible to blame or praise an athlete's performance solely on the actions of his or her college coach. But our greatest problem with that statement is that he completely denounced the hard work of half of the Athletic Department to substantiate his argument. We feel fortunate to have such caring and committed individuals like our coaches behind us.

Next time Scott Read attempts to argue his particular viewpoint, we hope he can manage to do so without insulting and offending people who never expressed any opposition to his cause.

Members of the Washington College Men's and Women's Swim Teams

Hey, that's not us!

To the Editor:

This is a letter concerning the quality of the reports in our Campus Voices. Upon reading this week's issue (November 13), we were surprised that although the quote over our names had a ring of familiarity, to say we were quoted would be a slight stretch. Well, if you are going to put words in our mouth you may at least try to make us sound not so lacking in cognitive abilities. Amy has changed her mind regarding the band situation. Upon reflection she has decided that Gilligan's Fundeck was chill. Theresa was disturbed to see that the picture was not her at all but in fact her mentally challenged evil twin sister, whom her parents left on the side of the road shortly after birth due to her being too ugly to keep.

Lastly, we have decided that a more pertinent Campus Voices question would be "Why has there never been a rower as Newt's Player of the Week?"

Theresa Lerch & Amy Osborne

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

Currently, there is a lot of speculation as to the composition of President-elect Bill Clinton's economic team, and one of the names which occurs often in this context is Robert Reich. Robert Reich is a former FTC official who currently teaches at Harvard.

By sheer coincidence, I happened to read one of Mr. Reich's books last week. When I began to read The Next American Frontier, I fully expected to be bored beyond my ability to bear boredom. I was pleasantly surprised in that the book itself is well written and interesting.

But as I read, a feeling of uneasiness came upon me. I came to the startling revelation that this man's ideas are dangerous in the extreme. His analysis of the current state of the development of American capitalism is nearly flawless. Reich is a critic of the current philosophy governing economic affairs in both the government and the business community. However, his criticism is entirely from within the capitalist tradition of economic thought, and his suggestions for policy making threaten to promote stable growth of the American economy and thereby delay the crisis of capitalism.

In the first 115 pages of The Next American Frontier, Reich chronicles the development of industry in America. This section is non-controversial in content, and seems to be included to provide a background for the rest of Reich's analysis.

Reich notes that low wage competition from nations such as Mexico, Brazil, Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore has caused many older industries in developed nations to become less competitive. This is certainly true, and the natural reaction of American capitalists has been to attack the working class by lowering wages and benefits. Although The Next American Frontier was written in 1983, the experience of the 1980s increases the credibility of this hypothesis.

Another failing of American business which Reich attacks is what he terms "paper entrepenurialism." By this he means the process whereby companies motivated solely by profit buy other companies without consideration of factors involved in the production process.

This dynamic also extends inward to the internal functioning of American companies; "Through shrewd maneuvering, accounting and tax rules can be finessed, and the numbers on balance sheets and tax returns manipulated, giving the appearance of greater or lesser earnings. ... Huge profits are generated by these ploys. They are the most imaginative and daring ventures in the American economy. But they do not enlarge the economic pie; they merely reassign the pieces."

Another reaction of American capitalism has been to shift capital to the service

See "Koon," pg. 8

OFF-CAMPUS VOICES

By Dude

Why do you think everyone should move off campus?

So that they can live in a beautiful downtown Chestertown house like mine that's ripe for a Better Homes & Gardens layout. Matt is moving: ISO a non-anally retentive roommate.
Heather Evans
Collegeville, PA Senior

I don't think everybody is capable of living off-campus. Most of the students need a lot of hand-holding and spoon-feeding. Keep them on campus and away from me.
Matthew B. Shields
Sterling, VA Very Senior

Special Voices Goon of the Week!
Abby "Please don't do this to me" Clifford
Collect them all! Trade with your friends!

Because the dorm rooms are gross, and they're too small. It's just too crowded.
Heather Skelly
Wilmington, DE Senior

Because old security men cannot come off campus. It's left up to the police.
Michael Mucha
Towson, MD Junior

They don't know where you live.
John Bates
Towson, MD Senior

Because you can have kegs and you can share housing with women.
Chris Holmes
Ambler, PA Senior+

Open Forum: Harassment - Not Just on the Hill Anymore

Jennifer Del Nero, President of the SGA, is a senior majoring in English.

In case you are wondering, yes, it is sexual harassment when someone grabs you in the middle of the Dining Hall. It is sexual harassment when you confront members of the opposite sex who stare at your breasts or genitalia while you speak. It is sexual harassment when you run or bike and the driver of a passing car shouts obscenities.

Yes, it is sexual harassment when you degradingly call a woman "little girl" or a man "little boy." It is sexual harassment when comments about your academic or professional performance are inappropriately linked to your gender. It is sexual harassment when you type offensive messages on Broadcast.

And yes, sexual harassment does occur on the Washington

Jennifer Del Nero

College campus. Let there be no mistake about it.

Anita Hill started a ball rolling that was long in need of a push. Since the infamous Clarence Thomas hearings, the issue of sexual harassment has come to light in a number of arenas, and certainly not exempt from this form of verbal and physical assault are college campuses.

Although it may seem like it, sexual harassment does not defy definition. It is the creation of a hostile environment through unwanted gender-related attention that occurs in power situations. And it's common. Very common.

Granted there are degrees of sexual harassment; it exists on a continuum, ranging from the leering look to the inappropriate touch to the violent sexual assault. (And each range has found a home at Washington College.) It is not by coincidence that sexual harassment and rape are related. The attitudes that serve as catalysts for both forms of assault are identical and include a desire to place a person in an inferior position.

What's so frustrating about defining sexual harassment is that it is often intangible. Even if the harassment is spoken, words are interpreted differently by each party involved. Although the words out of the mouth of person A may be considered teasing and harmless, those same words out of the mouth of person B may be interpreted as harassment. Whose interpretation is right? It's one person's word against the other. And it's so easy to profess, "That's not what I meant."

But a claim like that won't hold water with NASPA [National Association of Student Personnel Administrators] members who argue that it's not a question of intent. It's interpretation that ultimately decides what constitutes sexual harassment. Regardless of what you mean to say, what matters is how the other person interprets what you say.

That's why education is so important. That's why it's so important for men to understand how women may interpret their remarks and vice versa. But keep in mind, harassment extends beyond words. So often it is a tone of voice or body language that puts one person in an inferior position to another strictly on the basis of gender. It's still sexual harassment and it's still unacceptable in all situations at all times.

See "Del Nero," page 4

From "Del Nero," page 3

So what can we do at Washington College? What can we do at a small college where confidentiality is virtually non-existent, where we have no Sexual Harassment Resource Person (come on, it took us until last year to design and implement a sexual harassment policy)?

Well, for starters, it begins with evaluating your behavior, reflecting on what you've said or done. (Do you recognize yourself in any of the opening examples?) It is essential to determine if you are sending the message to the opposite sex that you want to be sending. And if your intent matches the receiver's interpretation of sexual harassment, if your goal is to sexually harass someone, then we've got a serious problem. In that case, it's time to check behavior and change it.

Changing behavior is a tricky thing, but it's not impossible. When it comes to sexual harassment, it means would you (if you are male) want the object of the comments you just expressed or the feel you just copped to be your girlfriend? Your sister? Your mother? If the idea of your mother getting felt up bothers you, then cut it out. Hey, it happens. Ask your girlfriend, your sister, your mother, and chances are damn high that she has been a victim of sexual harassment.

At Washington College two cases of sexual harassment have already been formally dealt with this semester. And you can restassured that many more unreported ones have gone on and will continue to go on.

Another way to attack the problem of sexual harassment is to create a stronger and more visible support network. That means if some creep says something to a female friend of yours, let her know that you are behind her if she wants to confront him (or her, that happens too) or that you'll confront the offender. Let her know it offends you that someone is treating her with disrespect.

Support also means that if one of your friends (be it male or female) harasses someone, you let your friend know that that kind of behavior bothers you. If he does it to one female, there's no guarantee he won't also do it to your girlfriend or girl friend. Don't kid yourself. Sexual harassment offenders aren't selective about their victims.

In other words, protect yourself and protect your friends.

There will always be a number of women reluctant to voice their discomfort and make waves. It all has to do with comfort level. It has to do with women deciding for themselves that either sexual harassment makes them uncomfortable or is acceptable as learned behavior (although learned behavior can be unlearned).

Women who chose not to report sexual harassment should not be judged, although one certainly hopes they'll reach a point when they feel strong enough and comfortable enough to defend themselves and respond to such dehumanizing behavior. But in the meantime, that doesn't mean people who witness sexual harassment have to remain silent.

On the subject of judging, be careful how you judge those people (usually women) who do confront offenders. It's not that they don't know how to take a joke or they're too sensitive, or they're bra-burning liberals. They are women with self-respect. They are not bitches.

So where to now? How to educate men and women that sexual harassment is a serious issue, that it exists in full force on our campus? How about not just a fraternity and sorority sponsored seminar on rape, but one on sexual harassment too and the connections between them? How about inviting Bernice "Bunny" Sandler, a senior associate with the Washington-based Center for Women Policy Studies, to address sexual harassment as a particularly unique and problematic issue for a small campus?

What it comes down to is awareness. Listen to what you say, to what others say to you. Check your behavior. See if people are interpreting the message you are intending to send. And most importantly, make it a point to protect yourself and protect your friends.

IFC Report

Kappa Alpha

On November 17th, the Brothers of Kappa Alpha Order co-sponsored a seminar with the Sisters of ZTA on the issue of Date Rape. They are currently planning their annual Christmas party with the ZETAs, as well. The party will take place on December 5th and will benefit various underprivileged children from Chestertown. The order would also like to welcome P.J. Mullin as their first pledge in quite awhile. On Monday, November 23rd, the Brothers of KA will be coming to your door and asking for donations to benefit MDA. Please give. The Muscular Dystrophy Association needs YOU!

Theta Chi

Beta Eta Chapter of Theta Chi will be hosting their regional conference this spring at the college. Two regional counselors have already been down to help with the planning.

Congratulations to the basketball team for their win in last weekend's tournament and good luck this weekend at the Scotty Wood tournament.

Good luck to Lance Mercereau who is in D.C. this weekend for model O.A.S.

Happy Birthday to John McCarthy who is 22 and Terence McCabe who turned 21.

From "Rowan," page 1

In addition, he is an original and permanent panelist on the highly-rated talk show, Inside Washington, which is in its 24th year as a news program. He has also given a five-day-a-week radio commentary, The Rowan Report, for 21 years.

He recently retired from his 25-year position as editor of Reader's Digest.

Applications for Assistant News Editor for the Spring 1993 term are available in the ELM office (Reid basement). Call 8585 for info. No experience necessary; maturity and drive required

The CoffeeHouse interim project will be completed the week of November 30. The grand re-opening is Friday, December 4. See your dorm senator for details.

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap T-Neck has been most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.
10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442
"the patagonia® place"
and other wonderful things
NOT TO SCALE
We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
305 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Janet Thomason
(301) 778-0888

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 20 BITTER CREEK Simply Great Bluegrass!!
SAT 21 DERRYBERRY and ALAGIA
One of the Best New Rock Bands We've Heard!!
WED 25 OUR ANNUAL BIRDDOG AND THE ROADKINGS
778-6779

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Passion, Vision, & 'A Midsummer Night's Dream'

An Interview With the Director

Jason M. West, a senior drama major from Bethlehem, Connecticut, came to Washington College as a freshman in the fall of 1988. He joined the Marine Corps Reserves in the summer of 1989 and continues to work for them as a carpenter. West has performed in numerous plays, often as the male lead, and has served as Technical Director for countless others. He also has worked as the theatre shop manager for the past few years. This weekend is the culmination of his time here, as his senior production, William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream, hit the stage last night.

West has directed and designed the show, which is free and open to the public and plays tonight and tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in Tawes Theatre.

ELM editor Tarin Towers has worked with West during her three years here in several aspects of technical theatre work. She interviewed him Monday about his thoughts on life, drama and the art of magic.

JTT: Why 'A Midsummer Night's Dream'?

JMW: It says something that I want to say, and is that a lot of what 'civilization' brings causes problems, and that a lot of times in life today I feel that people look for these well-reasoned, intellectual answers to everything, and I feel that people are ignoring that there is a magic in life today, and that in this 'adult' world, there is a need for that magic.

I think that people are so concerned with conventional approaches to problems and conventional answers to questions, that a lot of the time they stop trusting their instincts.

In essence, I think a tendency to take life too seriously causes problems.

JTT: What do you do, personally, to find that magic in your own life?

JMW: I think that I approach life in a more unorthodox fashion than most people. I try to have fun, and while I'm sometimes irresponsible, I try to have fun to do what makes me happy.

I think a lot of people settle for whatever they can get — at a certain age, we stop exploring the passion that we as humans have in our lives — a lot of people pile things on top of it, and they cover up the passion that should exist in our lives.

By denying your passions, you deny an essential part of humanity. The conventional approaches to solving problems in society are not necessarily appropriate for all circumstances.

Director Jason West

JTT: What are your favorite plays that you've acted in since you've been here?

JMW: 'Drinking in America' [by Eric Bogosian, directed by Dale Daigle], 'Waiting for Godot' [by Samuel Beckett, directed by Daigle], 'Baby with the Bathwater' [by Christopher Durang, directed by Emily Lott], and 'Burn This' [by Lanford Wilson, directed by Stephanie Hess].

JTT: And what set, besides your own, did you most enjoy working on?

JMW: My favorite set? It would have to be the one for 'Seascape with Sharks and Dancer.'

JTT: Your set's pretty big, too.

JMW: It's an extravaganza up there. I'm really happy with the set — it's an exciting space for the play to take place in.

JTT: This might be a strange question, but how has your Marine Corps experience influenced your technique as a director?

JMW: You know, it has. I have such a huge cast (over twenty people). My experience to this date with speaking to or working with or talking to people has basically been with the Marines — I think that sometimes the cast is intimidated by my way of speaking to them as a whole — sometimes I have to remind myself that I'm not speaking to a platoon of marines.

A big part of how I feel about putting the show up is that I'm very interested in working with my cast in crew in a way that's not just one-sided. I'm not just using them for my senior thesis, it's a form of give-and-take. I'm allowing everyone in the cast and crew to learn and grow with this experience — I would like to think that everyone I've worked with has learned at least one new thing over the course [of the production].

JTT: What directors have you learned the most from yourself?

JMW: The plays I've worked on with TM [Tim Maloney, chair of the Drama Department] may not have been my favorite productions, but I've done some good work on stage for TM, and the work I've done with him on stage and in class has given me a lot more knowledge about acting — it's expanded my view of what individual actors are able to bring to the process. I encourage them to try anything on stage — no matter how inappropriate it seems — if they have the urge to drop their pants on stage to get some attention, then I applaud that.

I think that the most important thing about acting on stage is to explore as many choices as you possibly can.

"I encourage [my actors] to try anything on stage ... if they have the urge to drop their pants on stage to get some attention, then I applaud that."

JTT: It's been said that you're often typecast as the 'bad guy' or the 'heavy.' Do you think this is true, and how do you feel about it?

JMW: To a certain extent — I think I've had a lot of experiences that helped me on stage. Living in Kent House for a full year my freshman year, back when it was all male, gave me a lot of help with playing drunks — I had a year of in-depth character study.

I work as a carpenter and I'm in the Marine Corps, and God only knows I've seen enough 'masculinity on display' to play more than my fair share of bad guys. Drunks and bad guys have been my specialty for some reason.

JTT: And yet there's no real 'bad guy' in 'Midsummer'.

JMW: No.

There isn't a bad guy in Midsummer because there is no 'good versus bad' conflict in the play. The only person in the play who really can qualify as the bad guy in the play would be Theseus, who really is just holding up the law of the land — and reluctantly, I might add — he's really not a bad guy.

JTT: I remember interviewing you when you were playing Creon in TM's production of 'Antigone' a year ago, and you gave me a similar description of your character then. What insights did playing Creon then give you to direct Theseus now?

JMW: I think there are a lot of similarities between Theseus and Creon — they're both in a situation where the law dictates what is to be done, but they don't necessarily agree with that. The law is where they derive their authority, and if they don't uphold that, then they end up looking bad.

I've approached it from the point of view that Theseus doesn't like having to give an ultimatum to Hermia. His wedding day is coming up, and the last thing he wants to think about is being a strict authoritarian — he doesn't want it to be clouded or marred in any way — he wants everyone to be happy — this is a celebration.

JTT: What's been the best part of your experience directing?

JMW: Boy, there's a lot to choose from. I haven't really sat down and thought about it.

A lot of very good things have happened. I've given a lot of people their first chance on stage at Washington College — I think it's been a very rewarding experience for everyone — I don't think it's just myself getting what I want.

I think I've come as close as I can get to realizing my vision with this show. I haven't compromised anything I've wanted to do with the show.

JTT: That includes your massive set.

JMW: Yeah, it's a great set, isn't it?

JTT: Do you have any advice for future or prospective drama majors?

JMW: I would say to never compromise your artistic vision — to set high, hard-to-attain goals for yourself, and instead of compromising somewhere on this side of attaining those goals, to push yourself to realizing them.

I keep thinking, when my show goes up on opening night, 'could I just have stayed a few hours later on that one night, could I have gotten up a little earlier on that one day,' just to give my show just a little bit extra.

The cast of this weekend's 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' (that's director Jason West on the far right)

Week at a Glance

October 23 - 29

Film Series: Tatie Danielle

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday, November 20, 21 & 23

20 Friday

Humorous Hypnotist Dan La Rosa, Norman James Theatre, 9:30 p.m., Admission: $1.00

21 Saturday

Trip to University of Delaware Library, Newark, Del. Van Leaves at 9:00 a.m. For Information: See Jeff Chaffin in Miller Library

French Club Trip to Smithsonian Museum, Washington, D.C. Leaves at 10:00 a.m., Returns 5:30 p.m. For information: Tom Shepherd, (410) 778-6532

Alpha Chi Omega Annual Casino Night, Hynson Lounge, 8:00 p.m.-12:00 a.m., Admission: $3.00 Dress is casual

Dawg On, CoffeeHouse, 10:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m. Admission: $3.00, Sponsored by Alpha Chi Omega in conjunction with Casino Night

22 Sunday

Baltimore Alumni Chapter Annual Bull & Oyster Roast. Oregon Ridge, 1:00 p.m.-6:00 p.m. Advance reservations requested. For information: Rich Denison '78, (410) 321-5936

23 Monday

Guest Speaker: Alicia Partnoy, International House Basement, 7:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Goldstein Program in Public Affairs, the International House and Amnesty International

The Concert Series presents pianist Paul Maillet, Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m., Admission: Adults, $10.00, Students and under 18, free

The Post-Election America Guest Speaker: Carl T. Rowan, Norman James Theatre, 4:30 p.m.

30 Monday

National Aids Awareness Week Begins

Beethoven Bows: 20th century music and original compositions by student performers, Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m.

December

1 Tuesday

Trip to Canadian Embassy, Washington, D.C. Bus leaves Chestertown Ames parking lot at 8:00 p.m., returns 5:00 p.m. Cost: $17.50 WC-ALL members, $20.00 non-WC-ALL members, For information: WC-ALL (410) 778-7221

HIV AND ME: Sexual Responsibility in the Age of AIDS: Guest Speaker: Doug Rose, '86, Hynson Lounge, 7:30 p.m. Reception at O'Neill Literary House immediately following

2 Wednesday

AIDS Quilt Exhibit, CAC

Masculinity and Manhood Guest Speaker: Dr. Newell, Sophie Kerr Room, 7:00 p.m.

8-Ball Tournament, Louie's Side Pocket, 6:30 p.m. Sign-up: See Dave Johnson, CoffeeHouse, 2:30 p.m.-3:30 p.m., weekdays or enter in dining hall. Number of participants limited †

Hamlet will be at The National Shakespeare Theatre in Washington, D.C., until January 10. For information: (202) 393-2700, Monday-Saturday after 10:00 a.m., Sunday after 12:00 p.m. †

Midsummer
Through Saturday, Nov. 21
8:00 pm at Tawes Theatre
Tickets are FREE

Alice in Wonderland
Nov. 27 & 28 at 7:30 pm
Nov. 28 & 29 at 2:00 pm
$6.00 for adults
$3.00 for students

A&E

Be an 8-Ball

Attention pool sharks—show you're stuff at the 8-ball tournament, Wednesday December 2. First prize is a free trip to the regional tournament at Pennsylvania State University and gift certificates to your favorite local restaurants and businesses.

To sign up, see Dave Johnson in the CoffeeHouse during the week from 2:30-3:30 p.m., or enter during lunch. There's a limited number of competition slots available -- so sign up soon. The tournament's entry fee is $3.00, and it'll happen at Louie's Side Pocket.

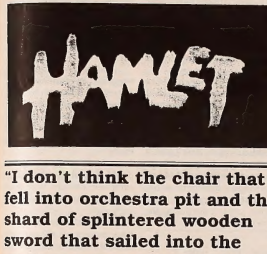
Student Profile: Tanya Cunic

Tanya Cunic, a 21 year-old senior English and Psychology Major, will never be defined as just "somebody's girlfriend." As she says, "You can call me raging feminist. I'm radically pro-choice and don't care about people's sexuality as long as they don't hurt animals or children. I'm a member of NOW (National Organization of Women) and proud of it."

Besides her involvement in feminist causes, Tanya's the senior representative on the Writers' Union Junta and serves on the Ad-hoc Committee for Academic Dishonesty/Honesty and the Student Advisory Board. In between meetings, she finds time for GALA (Gay and Lesbian Alliance) and the Gender Studies Reading Group. She's also a member of the Film Club and an ELM staff writer.

For those of you who eat breakfast at 7:30 a.m., you've probably seen Tanya walking to the pool. She swims a mile every day because, as she says, "I love to swim—it's my favorite activity." That's an understatement. Tanya's been a lifeguard for 6 years and is certified in first-aid and CPR. A trained Water Safety Instructor, she's given swimming lessons for 5 years to students as young as 3 years old, teaching beginning swimmers as well as training life-guards.

Presently, Tanya's working on her senior thesis examining Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD), a cyclical seasonal depression. Her project focuses on the affect SAD has on college students. Tanya's and Dr. Siemen's poster has been accepted by Eastern Psychological Association (EPA). Tanya now is working on another poster about SAD for submission.



Originally from Denville, New Jersey, Tanya graduated from Morris Noles High School and received a scholarship from the local fire department. A Dean's List student the past two semesters, Tanya hopes to pursue a Ph.D. in clinical psychology. This past semester, she's been nominated for induction into the Psi Chi Honor Society for psychology majors.

In her spare time (which is hard to believe exists) Tanya's an Addams Family pinball addict and a connoisseur of linguini Carbanara. She also visits her guinea pig (who's not on campus, Security) Isabella. Her favorite book of all time is Robin Morgan's Upstairs in the Garden.

Amadeus' Tom Hulce at the National Shakespeare Theatre

Jennifer Reddish
A&E Editor

Though every opening night has some glitches, Hamlet's definitely a great production in the rough. Tom Hulce, one of America's finest actors as Hamlet, can't be missed. The production, which opened this past Tuesday, November 17 grips its audience from its opening fog scene to its murderous close.

"I don't think the chair that fell into orchestra pit and the shard of splintered wooden sword that sailed into the audience were planned."

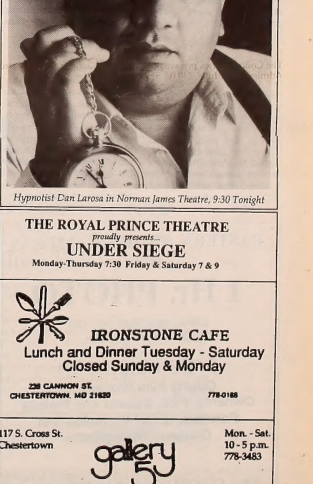
Hulce's credits include the cult classic, National Lampoon's Animal House, the television drama, A Murder in Mississippi, Broadway's A Few Good Men and the modern film-classic Amadeus. His talent has earned nominations for the Academy Award, Golden Globe Award, Tony Award, and Helen Hayes Award.

His portrayal of Hamlet, prince of a foreboding Denmark, is strikingly spirited. Sitting at arm's length away from the actors (I could have knocked him off the stage if I wanted), I was struck by his wired presence and his ease with other actors.

The play's best moments occurred when the actors were on stage one-on-one, namely Ophelia's (Francesca Buller) and Laertes's (Jay Goede) playful banter as well Hamlet's and Ophelia's violent encounter. However, the burial scene was a great disappointment. Too many lines were cut from the play, watering down the moment's emotional impact. Hamlet's cries of woe seem more hypocritical and whiny than mournful.

Though Hulce's performance is exceptional, Buller and Goede steal the show. Buller, a graduate of the Central School of Speech and Drama in London, is known to most Americans for her portrayal of Jessica in The Merchant of Venice on Broadway. Her Ophelia's frighteningly insane songs' grief affect the audience long after the curtains close.

Goede, star of day-time television's One Life to Live and Law and Order and a member of the Yale Repertory Theatre, gives subtle strength to the young Laertes, without making him seem rash or childish.



I'd suggest waiting a few weeks to see the play when the rough spots are worked out. I don't think the chair that fell into orchestra pit and the shard of splintered wooden sword that sailed into the audience were planned. However, Hamlet's line following the splinter's flight, "Why, what an ass am I!" was hilarious.

The director's interpretation was fresh and innovative. Laertes's and Ophelia's relationship seems incestuous, paralleling the unsettling marriage of Queen Gertrude to her dead husband's brother, King Claudius. When we first see Laertes and Ophelia, he wrestles her to the floor and lays on top of her while warning her of men's evils. King Claudius (Jack Ryland) warns Queen Gertrude (Franchell Stewart Dorn) that Hamlet's chalice is poisoned before she drinks from it, making her death a suicide, rather than a murder.

When you buy tickets for the play, I suggest getting box seats near the middle of the theatre. Though it was exciting to be close to the play's action, my view was blocked during some parts. Shakespeare's language, though beautiful, does send a great deal of spit into the air. I also found myself staring at the actors' makeup and costumes (which were exquisite) rather than paying attention to the story line. As a huge fan of Amadeus, I must admit that I kept staring at Hulce, amazed that he was three feet from me.

During much of the play, there are too many extras on stage, upstaging some of the action and swallowing up the short Hulce. The stage design is lacking. The color scheme is more bland than desolate, and its set-up makes it difficult for the actors to maneuver. At one point, Hulce nearly tripped into Ophelia's grave.

Hamlet's run lasts until January 10. Tickets are available at the window Monday-Saturday from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. when there's no evening performance, Tuesday-Saturday during production night weeks. For information, call (202) 393-2700, Monday-Saturday after 10 a.m., Sundays after noon. Be sure to check a seating chart before buying a ticket—higher priced tickets don't mean seats closer to the front. If you're susceptible to migraine headaches, sit away from the speakers—the play's music is loud.

Hypnotist Dan Larosa in Norman James Theatre, 9:30 Tonight

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
UNDER SIEGE
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown
gallery 5
Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483
Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

"Koon," from pg. 3

sector. This is due to the higher rates of profit in these industries as compared to the manufacturing sector. The third tactic taken has been to subsidize older domestic industries and to impose quotas or voluntary restrictions on the volume of imported goods.

Reich argues that this approach is short sighted and leaves the manufacturing sector uncompetitive and has the effect of lowering the real income of American workers. He avers that a better approach would be to allow developing nations to take over a greater share of the world's production of such products as steel, ships and copper.

This is, of course, going to occur anyway. Reich argues that instead of providing subsidies and tax write-offs to older industries, a superior tactic would be to use the same funds to enhance competitiveness in industries which "are relatively secure against low-wage competition because the depend on high-level skills rather than standardized production." Reich identifies these industries as precision products, custom products and technology-driven products.

This is exactly the tactic which has proven so successful for the Japanese. Reich notes that the Japanese export jobs which require low levels of skill and retain those which require higher levels of skill. This means that semi-skilled tasks such in steel production and automobile assembly are assigned to second-tier nations such as South Korea and the United States, whereas high skill jobs stay in Japan.

And this, as I perceive it, is the primary danger of Reich's school of thought. If Reich somehow succeeds in pushing his agenda through, American workers will see their real incomes rise, American businesses will become more competitive and the economy will enjoy stable growth for many years to come. Additionally, this would have the adverse effect of preserving the integrity of the capitalist system on an international level.

Conservatives ought to love Reich, because he provides the only clear formula to preserve the viability of the capitalist system. Reich favors close cooperation between government and industry to maximize the social wage, increase the skill levels of American workers, to increase productivity and to enhance the competitive position of American firms on the international level.

Ultimately, however, it is this plan of action which leads me to believe that Reich will fail to accomplish his agenda. Although he correctly points out that the American distinction between the "public" sector and the "private" sector is too rigid when it comes to economic policy making, his battle plans contain a fatal flaw.

Reich's analysis of the current state of American capitalism is superb; however, it focuses too much on the economic development of America and gives short shrift to the political realm. I do not mean to imply that political relationships determine economic relationships -- any idiot knows that the opposite is true. I do mean to say that the form of government can have a substantial role in promoting or retarding economic growth of any given nation.

Reich often points to Germany, South Korea, Mexico, Japan and France as countries where governments cooperate more effectively with business than in either the United States or the United Kingdom. He does not notice that it is the form of government which allow these nations to adapt more readily. Governments in these countries cooperate better with industry because they are better able to cooperate with industry.

It is the structure and form of these governments which allow them to cooperate with business more effectively. Reich analyzes the policies of these nations and then assumes that any nation can adopt these sorts of policies. In this, he has failed to take his own advice. He has given short shrift to his analysis of governments. In noting that these governments cooperate better, he assumes that it is the policies which are shared and not certain aspects of the policy making mechanisms within these governments.

Reich should have asked himself the following question: "Is what I am observing a phenomenon unto itself, or is it a result of other factors? If it is, what are they?" He should have then asked what, besides policy, the various nations concerned have with one another. He would have found it straight away. Germany, South Korea, Mexico, Japan and France all have modern, 20th-century constitutional forms of government, whereas the governmental forms of the United States and the United Kingdom both preexisted modern capitalism.

This is why Reich's program shall fail. The ascendant nations are more flexible because the form of government itself was wholly determined by modern capitalism, whereas the forms of government of the Anglo-Saxon nations were developed in an earlier stage of economic development.

One example of the many ideas expounded by Reich which cannot come to pass because of the nature of political formulation in America is his contention that workers should have a more direct say in business operations. This ain't gonna happen under the governmental system as presently constituted. American business leaders are paternalistic and don't think the workers know a damn thing about how to effectively conduct a business. One call to their congressman (who is probably a Democrat) will stop any of that sort of rubbish. Under a more modern, more democratic form of government, perhaps. But not in this country.

And so Mr. Reich's lofty ideals will come to naught. He'll sit there in his lushly appointed government office for the next eight years wondering why a Congress controlled by his President's party won't pass a single proposal he sends them. And meanwhile, it will be business as usual, and the economy will continue to go to Hell in a bucket, just as it did during the Bush years burnings could be the work of an antagonistic student or a pyromaniac. No leads have been found as to the identity of the person responsible.

From "Fire," page 1

"If the problem is vandalism," said Day, "then we want that person caught. But if it's a person with an emotional problem in some bizarre way, we want to find that person and help them."

Day added that the students who use the Lit House, both for studying and partying, are generally very responsible. "The usual use of the Literary House for quasi-social purposes has been terrific."

The Security Department suggested that the building be closed to students each night and not reopened until the following morning. Current policy has the pressroom being locked at 6 p.m. and the Lit House being locked at midnight. Students studying within can remain and are asked to lock the doors behind them when leaving.

Professors Day and Kathy Wagner, as well as Kaylor and the students present, were opposed to such measures, despite a general feeling of concern for the safety of those involved.

A 'neighborhood watch' sort of system was suggested, with students volunteering to provide a self-security system. This involves making sure the building is locked up when no one is present and reporting any suspicious activity to Security.

Additional measures were suggested by students and reported to Security by Day. These include the following:

- A telephone will be installed downstairs so that students can call Security more easily.
- Security patrols will be doubled until the end of this semester; officers will check each room in the house during each visit.
- In addition, officers will take names of all students present in the house at night and make sure that no students sleep in the building. Students will be reminded to lock all doors on leaving the Lit House.
- All smoke detectors and fire extinguishers will be tested, and additional equipment will be installed as deemed necessary. A floorplan indicating the location of fire extinguishers will be posted throughout the building.

Security Director Jerry Roderick told the ELM Wednesday that the department is "deeply worried" about the burnings, particularly Sunday's. "It could have potentially been a devastating incident. We're just fortunate that the damage was as limited as it was," he said.

"We will be instituting further security measures asking that students that use the building take some extra measures and be a little more aware of keeping the building secured and noting any unusual occurences," Roderick said.

Roderick added that he was reluctant to close the building at night and would not do so unless absolutely necessary. "It's important in this kind of academic environment to allow students to utilize the Lit House at the hours that we do ... it's this kind of incident that forces us to review that policy."

He was glad to hear that the students who regularly use the facility were as concerned as Day assured him they were. "Hopefully that feeling will continue throughout the school year."

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist Entrevaux - Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal Electrologist - Louise Leverton, L.E.

"Créteil," from pg. 1

Students who spend their junior year abroad at Créteil will spend a week of orientation, and they will also take a language course in French to make them proficient during their stay.

Because most French students attend the school which is closest to them, they live at home. Although there are no dorms, the University will help exchange students find housing.

The second component of the exchange program offers the position of Visiting Lecturer of English to a graduating Washington College Student. Créteil has reserved this position specifically for the college, who will nominate a student for the job. The contract is for one year, with the possibility of renewing the appointment for another year.

Because the University stresses civilization in its education of students, the visiting lecturer might teach courses in conversation, English literature or American history. The position is not restricted to English students, and students majoring in areas such as History, International Studies and Political Science could be candidates.

Two years ago, Cousineau recommended Washington College graduate Roy Kesey, an English and Philosophy major, for the position. He is now about to complete his second year as Visiting Lecturer, and the position will be open for another student to take his place in the fall.

In an interview from Paris Monday, Kesey said he is excited that a more comprehensive program has been established. "Teaching at Créteil is such an extraordinary experience beyond what many Master's degrees can offer in the United States," he noted.

He added that the English department has been extremely supportive during his stay. "Everyone is friendly and there is a nice ambiance in the department. The pedagogues are helpful and make sure that you're not in over your head," he said.

When Kesey was hired, Cathérine Colomb, Chair of the English department at Creteil, proposed that the University and Washington College initiate a more formal exchange program.

Arrangements for the program were made through Yvette Rivière, a close friend of Cousineau's, and have recently been approved by Bernard Dizambourg, President of the University of Paris, and WC President Charles H. Trout.

The final aspect of the program will involve a faculty exchange, whereby faculty members from Humanities and Social Science areas will be able to teach courses at Créteil for one year. This component of the program is also not restricted to English or Modern Language professors.

Conversely, professors from Créteil will be able to teach in a variety of disciplines at the college such as French, English and American Studies.

Whereas the visiting lecturers will be paid by the French government, the salaries for the professors will be paid by the home institution. For example, Washington College would be responsible for paying the salary of the professor it sends to teach at Créteil.

Cousineau said he believes that the faculty appointments will be handled by the Advisory Committee on Appointments and Tenure.

While Cousineau can explain the details of the program to interested students and faculty members, the program will be administered through the office of Associate Dean Lucille Sansing.

Sansing said that even though there will not be an official call for applications until early next semester, interested students and faculty should start to think about applying for acceptance in the program now.

"We have enjoyed the language assistants that have come from Créteil," she said. "It's very nice that there is a reciprocal model set up."

Drop-Off Laundry

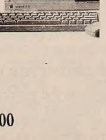
We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service

Laundromat Dry Cleaning

Kent Laundry

607 High Street
778-3551

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists' Materials
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
P.O. Box 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620



Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller: The holiday gift you can really use.

Tell your folks that more college students choose Macintosh than any other computer. They'd want you to be in good company.

Ask for an Apple® Macintosh® computer this holiday season and join all of the students who've discovered that no matter what they do, Macintosh helps them do it better and faster. That's because Macintosh is so easy to use. And the thousands of available software applications work in a single, consistent way. So once you've learned one, you're well on your way to learning them all. The advantages of Macintosh don't end when school does. In fact, the majority of Fortune 1000 companies use Macintosh computers.* So ask your Apple Campus Reseller to help you choose which Macintosh to put at the top of your holiday gift list.

Macintosh. It's more than a present, it's a future.

For more information visit the

WC Bookstore

Casey Academic Center or call x7200

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. MS-DOS is a registered trademark and Windows a trademark of Microsoft Corporation. *Based on a survey conducted by Computer Intelligence, 1991

Hockey Club Nailed by Navy Middies

Tim Reardon
Co-Sports Editor

After a succesful debut by the Washington College hockey team against Salisbury, the squad headed down to A-Town to play the boys from the Naval Academy. Washington faced off against the Navy's B team, which is considered rather competitive. The outcome of the game was not the way the WAC players wanted it. The Shoremen wound up losing a hard-fought battle 8-4.

Innet again for Washington was Dave Kraft who played a superb game turning away over 40 shots. Navy started the scoring by putting one past Kraft early in the first period. Washington answered back when freshman Gary "I should go to practice more often" Yovanovich took a pass from Tim "I like writing on myself" Reardon and stung it past the helpless Midshipmen goalie. The first period ended in a 2-2 deadlock with Tim "It's me again" Reardon scoring late in the period for Washington's second goal.

At the start of the second period, Washington came out strong but, with only 10 skaters, fatigue began to play a major factor in the game. Navy began to take advantage of this seeing they were in a little better shape than most of WC's players. They scored 4 goals in the second period and Dave Kraft faced 22 shots during that time.

Right at the start of the third period Washington got their offense going again when Yovanovich scored his second goal of the game with a blast into the upper right-hand corner of the net. The team thought they could gain some momentum with it, but Navy capitalized on missed opportunities and scored 4 goals to bring the tally up to 8-3. Washington's last goal was scored by Tim "Hey, what can I say, I'm awesome" Reardon, who has 5 goals on the season, to make the final score 8-4.

The team had a scare during the third period when Chris "Topher" Head got into another one of his favorite game time activities, a pushing match. Topher, a former sparring partner of Riddick Bowe, engaged in an altercation with one of the Middies, receiving an enexpected spear to the midsection. Even though "Body by Topher" runs and lifts weights everyday, he got the wind severely knocked out of him and suffered shortness of breath for a brief period of time. An ambulance quickly arrived on the scene as Toph was taken to Johns Hopkins Medical Center for observation. He turned out to be fine and returned back to campus the next day. (Thank God for the running and weight-lifting program.)

The team's next game is Monday against Hopkins in Baltimore at 10 p.m. If you need directions call Gary at ext. 8684 or Jamie at 778-9239. I'm sure they would love to give them to you. In fact they may even give you a ride. Don't worry about gas or tolls, they enjoy company.

Shoremen Hoops
Look Toward '92 Season

Dave Taibl
Writer at large

Last Saturday the Shoremen basketball team geared up for its 1992-93 campaign, travelling to face the Devils of FDU-Madison. In a scrimmage that contained three, 20 minute quarters of play, Washington College's experienced squad proved to be a worthy candidate for this year's MAC championships.

The Shoremen, led by seniors Darren Vican and Pete Basel, controlled the tempo of the game. Junior point guard/forward Geoff Rupert continued to display a level of play that had earned him the title of "Midnight Madman" during the team's November 1st debut. Rupe, along with fellow standouts Charles Cummings and Jay "Too Easy" Devlin, provided the Shoremen with plenty of firepower, as did seasoned veterans Basel and Vican. Enhancing the Shoremen scoring potential were newcomer Edmund Hicks and homecourt favorite Mike Swanson, a skilled pair from the bench that crashed the Devils' boards throughout the scrimmage.

On Sunday, Washington College took the court again, matching up against the highly-ranked Division III opponent, New Jersey Tech. The Shoremen, despite the quick "run-and-gun" style adapted by Tech's squad, were able to remain neck and neck with them through all three periods. In the end, NJ Tech prevailed, but the match left the WAC focusing optimistically upon the season.

"We fared pretty well over the weekend," replied Basel when asked about the outcome of the scrimmages. His trademark grin gives away the Strong Island senior's anticipation of the upcoming drive toward the Final Four. It all begins this weekend with the Scotty Wood tournament at Muhlenberg College (Nov. 20th and 21st). Come support the Shoremen as their home opener against St. Mary's December 1st in the Cain Gymnasium and see what the grinning's all about. You just may be surprised.

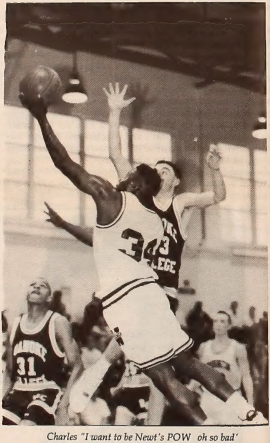


Photo by Corey Browne

Charles "I want to be Newt's POW oh so bad' Cummings lays one in

Jen Dixon: All-MAC Southwest V-Ball Team

Jen Dixon (Glen Burnie, Maryland/Archbishop Spalding), a freshman hitter for the Washington College Volleyball team, has been named to the All-MAC Southwest team, capping off an impressive rookie season in which she led the entire Middle Atlantic Conference in kill average with 4.49 per game. An outstanding all-around player, Dixon led the Shorewomen in total kills (368), hitting percentage (30.2%), as well as digs (208). She was fifth in the league in hitting percentage, leading Washington to a 12-20 record and a late-season run in which the team won five of its final matches. The first freshman from Washington College ever to be selected to the All-Section Volleyball team, Dixon was a unanimous pick for the 1992 squad which was voted in the Middle Atlantic Conference. Plus, she was honored by receiving the coveted Newt's Player of the Week award, selected by none other than Bird Man and The Vaughnster.

The season was Washington's last in the Middle Atlantic Conference. Next year, the college will join the all-sports Centennial Conference along with 10 other small liberal arts schools from Maryland and Pennsylvania.

--WC Sports Information

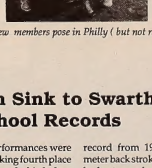
Suds 'n Soda
"Your Store For Convenience"
Rt. 213 & Rt. 297
1.5 Miles North of Campus
778-5077
BEER*WINE*LIQUOR*SODA*ICE*KEGS
OPEN 6 a.m.-12 mid
7 DAYS
LARGE IMPORT SELECTION
LARGE KEG INVENTORY
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
MAGNUM MALT LIQUOR 12oz CANS
ONLY $6.99 + tax
CASE
WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS
YOU MUST BE 21 AND HAVE 2 FORMS VALID IDENTIFICATION TO PURCHASE ALCOHOL

WC Scullers Finish Fall Season in Philadelphia



Melissa Harmeyer
Staff Stress Ball

The Washington College crew team traveled to Philadelphia over the chilly weekend to compete in the Frostbite Regatta, their last regatta for the Fall season. This was a 2,000 meter sprint race, not a head race like all the other regattas this Fall season.

The men entered a double made up of Ari Kodek and Ray Herndon, a lightweight fourman consisting of Mark Reyero, Brendan Norris, Adam Brown, Skip Gibson, and coxswained by Cindi DeWaters. The lightweight four-man came in last, due to the fact that they collided with the Delaware team from a Delaware mistake. The men also entered a Varsity four-man coxswained by Amy Osborne and crewed by Jon Mulvaney, Eric Jewett, Doug Peterson, and Harrison Gallagher, which proceeded to take fifth place.

The women entered an eight-man and a four-man. The eight man consisted of captain Kara Wiesenbaugh, Mary Bird, Melissa Olsen, Tanya Howell, Jen Hosik, Jenny Sue LeSchander, Jennifer Dougherty, and Tora Triolo. The eight-man came in second out of four boats competing. They beat St. Joe's and Ithaca, but Temple managed to keep the lead over Washington to finish first.

The team is finished practicing for the Fall and is looking forward to the spring season which actually begins in January when we return to school. Two big supporters of the Crew team are helping them celebrate the fall season. The first, Dr. Peter Tapke of the Philosophy Department, is hosting a party this weekend and the second, Dr. Susan K. Ross, M.D., is having a Christmas party for the team. Good job to all and good luck in the '93 Spring season!

Crew members pose in Philly (but not really)

Photo by Cory Brown

Aquamen and Women Sink to Swarthmore: Green Breaks Two School Records

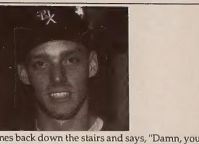
Brandon White
Staff Hoser

Last year the WC swimming team had a tough loss against Swarthmore, losing by the narrow margin of 50 points. The team has come a long way from last year. This past week the team went out against the powerhouse Swarthmore once again and lost by an even slimmer margin of 109-95. Dave Cola turned in two impressive wins in the 200 and 500 free events. Freshman Peter Ward turned in an impressive day by taking 3 seconds off the IM record, but was beaten in the race by a mere .06 of a second. Ward then joined Tim Whittier, Jason Campbell, and Scott Steinmuller to win the 200 medley, missing the school record by .1 of a second. The relay team consisting of Czekaj, Madison, Bowman and McKim placed third for some important points in the meet. In the 1000 free, Freshman Jon O'Connor swam W.C.'s second fastest time ever for a very impressive second place. Dave Czekaj took third and Dave Kraft took fifth. Turning in other good performances were Steinmuller, taking fourth place in the 200 free and third place in the All-time Flyer. In addition Jason Campbell took second in the 50 free while Tyler McCarthy took third and Mike Bowman took fifth.

Head coach Kim Lessard said, "This was a great indication that this team is serious about challenging teams like Swarthmore who easily beat WC last year. This is only a third year team and they are going to keep improving with 7 sophomores and 5 freshmen on the team. They are ready to challenge Ursinus this week."

The WC women started off very strong in the meet by winning the 200 medley relay and setting a new school record with a team comprised of Jennifer Green, Colleen Roberts, Amy Draper, and Magdalena Fuchs. Head Coach Kim Lessard said, "It was great to break this time, set at the MAC's last year, so early in the season. This is a great forecast for how they are going to do this year as they get more in shape."

Jen Green continued on record pace breaking a school record from 1989 in the 100 meter back stroke. Mimi Devlin had a strong showing in the 500 and 1000 yard events for an important second place finish. Joined by Denise Hakanson, Magdalena Fuchs and Nancy Whiteman, she also achieved her fastest split in the 200 free for a second place finish. Nancy Whiteman added two important fourth place finishes in the 100 and 1000 free. Colleen Roberts took third in the 100 breast stroke and 200 individual medley. Denise Hakanson placed third in the 100 backstroke and fourth in the 200 individual medley, Jennifer Dow placed second in the 100 butterfly, third in the 200 free and fifth in the 500 free stroke. Head coach Kim Lessard summed up the day by saying, "We did not have the depth to win, but the girls have been really working hard and turned in some terrific times. I am very proud of them."



Come out tomorrow to see the WC Aquamen and women as they take on Ursinus in the Casey swim center. " Be there or be square," says Bucky Zarinko.

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR

Trust Me

(410) 778-9819

. . . so he comes back down the stairs and says, "Damn, you got me, 111 to 96." P.S.— Please take note of the Zarinko family picture below as they indulge in a classic family-invented athletic contest. A game with sentimental & historic value, this basic form of B-Ball w/ boxing gloves, appropriately named by the Zarinkos as B-Ball w/boxing gloves, was dreamed up and eventually turned into reality by Bucky's cross-dressing great-grandfather. Kooch Voltaire Zarinko, back in the early 1800's, in some hidden-away, maxium-security institution in which he was committed for his lifetime, said he dreamed of his offspring playing this game late in the next century, carrying on the creative geniuness for which he and, in fact, all the Zarinkos are known for. Bucky states, "I seen pictures of him but I don't remember 'em too good. It's good to play this game 'cuz my great-grandfather would say it's good, 'cuz its old and my family had thunk of it before other people did think of it, and say it was theirs, 'cuz it's not theirs, it's ours. If you look closely at the picture you can see me in the upper left hand corner as a young, strapping lad, admiring my father reffing the game in his newly acquired, perfectly hemmed, 15th generation hand-me-down slacks."

Enough fun and games at Bucky Zarinkos' expense. We're tired of him. Now, for the NEWT's POW… this is his second time in two years, "Disco Diamond" Dave Cola of the WC Men's Swim Team. Mr. "Just For the Taste of It" has already turned a few heads in his first outing of the year. Facing Swarthmore he stole the show by laying waste to the competition in the 200 & 500 free. Mr. "I'm not your average R.C." Cola holds a number of WC records and should continue with his trend setting pace here in his sophomore year. Nice job Dave! We love you!

The Zarinko family goes on a summer outing to play a family tradition, B-Ball with boxing gloves

Photo by Cora Stonegate Zarinko

Hockey Drops to Navy 8-4.

See Article, pg. 10

The Dream Team for Real: Showtime, Here We Come!!

WC • ELM

Sports

Women's B-Ball has Another Tough Outing versus Columbia Union College

Men's B-Ball Scrimmages New Jersey Tech

See Article, pg. 1

#14 Pete Basel, showing off his better half, goes hard to the hoop. Basel, a native Garden City, "Strong" Island boy, has been a tremendous asset to W.C. basketball over his past three years here. His senior year should be no different. Averaging almost 10 points a game and tallying up 236 points over the '91 season, Pete will be a true threat to all opponents.

David Cola: NEWT's Player of the Week

Scores

Swimming

Men's

Washington	95
Swarthmore	109

Women's

Washington	63
Swarthmore	140

Women's B-Ball

Washington	23
Columbia Coll.	94

Ice Hockey

Washington	4
Navy	8

Rec B-Ball (DIII)

Dream Team Always Wins!
Other Teams Always Lose!

Swimming Falls to Swarthmore Looks to Ursinus

See Article, pg.

Crew Chilled at Frostbite Regatta

See Article, pg.

The Paper That Eats Like A Meal

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

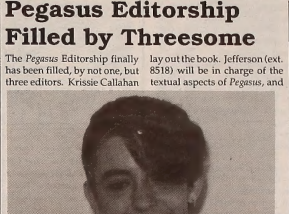
Weekend Weather
Friday: partly sunny; H low - mid 40s
Weekend: var. cloudiness chance/showers Sunday H mid 30s-40s; L mid 20s

Volume 63, Number Thirteen • December 4, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Breaking and Entering in Talbot

Joshua Oberciain of Talbot returned to campus Sunday to discover that his suite, 116-118, had been broken into over the Thanksgiving break. About $2,425 worth of goods had been taken from the suite's lounge, including two stereo systems and a large collection of compact discs. A small wooden box has also been reported missing; its owner, Michael Mucha, is offering a reward for its return. Security is currently investigating the break-in and theft, but no leads as to the perpetrator's identity have been found. Anyone who has any information that would lead to the recovery of the merchandise or the apprehension of the thief should contact Security at ext. 7810.

Girdner Convicted



Sophomore Patrick Girdner, who was arrested November 6 for four drug violations, was tried Tuesday in the Kent County District Court. According to Assistant States Attorney Tom Yeager, Girdner pled guilty to possession of marijuana, and the other charges were dropped. After finding him guilty, the court sentenced Girdner to fifteen days work release from the Kent County Detention Center. He was granted status of probation before judgment, which if maintained for one full year with a clean record, will result in all charges being dropped from his criminal record. Yeager would like to remind students that possession of illicit substances applies to any illegal items located in their residence, whether or not the substance is owned by the student or his or her roommate.

Trout matches gift to AIDS Project

The Office of the President of Washington College recently allocated $2,000 to the AIDS Peer Education Program run by junior Keith Erickson. This gift matches a grant which the SGA passed earlier in November toward the program. For more information, see Jen Del Nero's letter on page 3 and Amanda Burt's interview with Erickson on page 5.

Pegasus Editorship Filled by Threesome

The Pegasus Editorship finally has been filled, by not one, but three editors. Krissie Callahan and Mary Jefferson, both freshmen, and Geoffrey Donahue, a senior, will be running the yearbook at last. Callahan (ext. 8574) will be the figurehead for the group, and will design and lay out the book. Jefferson (ext. 8518) will be in charge of the textual aspects of Pegasus, and Donahue (ext. 8846) will supervise both business and photography. Photographers are needed immediately; interested persons (in this or any aspect) should contact any one of the editors. A general interest meeting will be held Wednesday, December 9 at 8 p.m. in the Minta Martin fourth floor lounge.

Krissie Callahan

Photo by Andrea Stone

Lit House Vandalism Continues

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

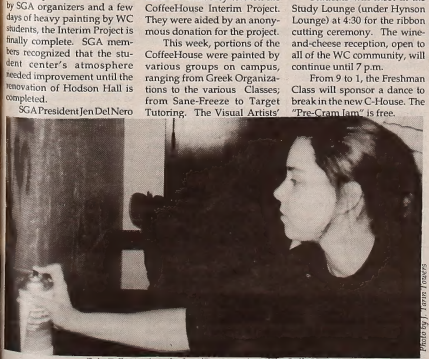
Administration, faculty and students remain concerned about the status of the O'Neill Literary House following another fire which was set last Sunday or Monday. A student found a piece of paper taped to a bookshelf in the downstairs hallway; the paper had been lit and the wooden bookshelf was badly scorched.

Emergency measures which involved closing the house at midnight each night and for the duration of Thanksgiving break were enacted by the Security Department and the Literary House staff.

Wednesday afternoon Professor Robert Day, Director of the building, held a meeting which was attended by Security Director Jerry Roderick, Dean and Provost Gene Wubbels, Dean of Students Maureen Kelley McIntire, Associate Lit House Director Kathy Wagner, Literary House Press Director

See "Fire," page 9

Renovated CoffeeHouse to Re-Open Tonight



Tonight marks the grand re-opening of the CoffeeHouse. After many weeks of hard work by SGA organizers and a few days of heavy painting by WC students, the Interim Project is finally complete. SGA members recognized that the student center's atmosphere needed improvement until the renovation of Hodson Hall is completed.

SGA President Jen Del Nero and Reid Dorm Senator Eve Zartman worked especially hard on what they termed the CoffeeHouse Interim Project. They were aided by an anonymous donation for the project.

This week, portions of the CoffeeHouse were painted by various groups on campus, ranging from Greek Organizations to the various Classes; from Sane-Freeze to Target Tutoring. The Visual Artists' Union will fill in the gaps after Friday's ceremony.

Students will meet in the Study Lounge (under Hynson Lounge) at 4:30 for the ribbon cutting ceremony. The wine-and-cheese reception, open to all of the WC community, will continue until 7 p.m.

From 9 to 1, the Freshman Class will sponsor a dance to break in the new C-House. The "Pre-Cram Jam" is free.

Erin Talbert paints the Sane/Freeze section of the CoffeeHouse

Photo by J. Tarin Towers

Inside

Come to Moonpile's Edible Landscape 3

Peer Education Program on AIDS Takes Off 5

Nutcracker Celebrates 100th Anniversary 7

Task Force Works to Improve Health Services 8

Names Project AIDS Quilt Visits Campus 8

The End of the World (or just the semester)

It's that time of the year again, folks. Freshmen, if you aren't aware of it by now, this twilight zone of the semester is known as ACADEMIC HELL. This point, the next to the last week of classes, is the denouement, the climax, the culmination of the entire semester. This is where you realize that yes, you are way too far behind to ever dream of catching up, and yes, you have to let something give, and it better not be your grades.

(Here's a note to each and every one of my current professors: NO, of course it's not YOUR class I'm behind in. I LOVE your class—it's the only one in which I've read each and every word of text, xeroxed, bought, or otherwise. No, I don't sleep in your class. I just, um, meditate, so I can grasp the concepts better with a fully relaxed mind just waiting to be poured full of [History/ English/Art Theory]. In fact, I hope none of my other professors read this, or they'll know that I'm having trouble keeping up, and I think I've fooled them so far.)

Oh, ye of little faith. IF you have gone to most of your classes, it's not too late for you. IF you have taken reasonably good notes, you have a better chance than many of succeeding this semester. IF you have read say, 3/5 of what you were supposed to, then relax. IF you are all caught up, then dammit, stop gloating.

Here's my advice on how to make it through the next two weeks relatively unscathed:

1. Stay in tonight OR tomorrow night. If you want/need to stay in both nights, do so. But I suggest releasing a little tension this weekend. However, don't drink too much either night.

2. Wake up BEFORE NOON both Saturday and Sunday. Yes, it can be done.

3. Spend this extra time I just got you in the morning and evening in one of the following ways:

- writing that late paper
- reading that book that you've been using to prop your door open all semester
- doing research on a paper that isn't due Monday, but will take you longer than one night to write.

4. Borrow a studious friend's notebook for the one class (you know the one) that you've missed more times than you can count, always show up late for, and usually doze off in. READ IT. Compare and contrast with your own notes, which may look like they're written in Martian.

Speculate on how much you think the final will really count for, and then read the notes again.

5. No matter how much you hate writing papers, get them all done. Now if possible. Here's a quick way to tell when to start writing your last paper. Count the number of papers you have left. If that number is one or less, write the paper this weekend and then stop worrying. If that number is two to four, write half the papers this weekend and half next weekend. If that number is over four, you've done something way, way wrong, and you should spend this weekend praying and tearing your hair out.

6. To study for finals, use this simple guide:

- spend this weekend catching up (ha) on your reading.
- spend your free time (ha ha) reading over your notes this week.
- spend next weekend relaxing, since you'll be well prepared for all your finals already (If anyone in WC's history accomplishes this one, they will be bronzed and set at the foot of Cater Walk for all to see.)

7. After it's all over, go home and sleep until January. Good luck.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Features Editor: Jason Truax
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jason Truax
Sports Editor: Tim Reardon
Layout Editor: Brian Mathison
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Door and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday at 5 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8565.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

Beverly Wolff Renounces Hero Worship

To the Editor:

I'm convinced that the call for heroes or heroines is not such a wise thing. Superhuman ones have hidden weaknesses; human ones always seem to have feet of clay. If we depend on heroes and heroines to fight our battles, we never develop our own strengths. And while I admire certain figures in history or literature for particular acts and qualities of character, their deeds aren't really any more inspirational, to me, than are the accomplishments of some of my friends and colleagues, my students and children.

At a recent party, someone asked me to name my hero. "You're sitting next to her," I replied.

When I manage more than I thought I could, when I overcome some tribulation or resist some temptation, when I learn that some good has come of my own actions, then I am my own heroine. The women of the next generation would be better off learning to appreciate their own strengths than seeking packaged mentors or heroes. I would recommend the same practice for the men.

Beverly A. Wolff

SGA Funds AIDS Program

A copy of the following letter of November 16 was sent to the ELM prior to President Trout's decision to match the SGA grant to the AIDS Education Program. Its content is such that the ELM has decided to print it in its entirety. On November 25, President Trout sent a similar letter to Jen Del Nero and the ELM, announcing that his discretionary fund will match the $2,000 gift.

Dear President Trout:

It is with the greatest of pride in Washington College's Senate that I inform you of its decision to allocate $2,000 towards the AIDS Education Program initiated by junior Keith Erickson. Keith's plan is ambitious, admirable and long-overdue.

In addition to approving the $2,000 allocation, the Senate passed a resolution to encourage the President to match (if not surpass) its own contribution.

AIDS awareness is increasing on this campus, thanks to the tireless efforts of dedicated faculty and students, although there remains ground to be covered, clearly demonstrated by the results of the Task Force on the Status of Lesbians and Gay Men at Washington College's spring survey. The exhaustive research revealed some disturbing statistics. Perhaps the most troubling of which is that of the 75 percent of sexually active WC students, 85 percent have engaged in unprotected sex. Unfortunately, those figures have remained mere numbers; there has been no strong commitment to address the issue of unprotected sex, which implicitly raised the issue of AIDS.

Keith's AIDS Education Program focuses on unprotected sex, but the program can only be successful if it is equipped with adequate materials. That is why the carefully calculated $8,500 budget Keith has presented is a legitimate one. Each line item is essential toward facilitating an effective, efficient program.

Not only is the plan well-thought through, it takes advantage of and demonstrates strong faith in the leadership of WC students; the one quality it lacks is strong backing from the College as a whole.

Currently, there exists a core group of 13 students adequately trained either to educate their peers (both about AIDS and other issues) or to participate in other capacities within the organization. Considering the size of Washington College and the commitment the role of peer educator

See "Del Nero," page 9

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

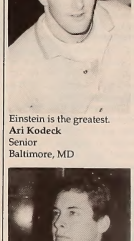
When Bill Clinton becomes President next year, he will be confronted by a lot of tough choices. He has vowed to focus "like a laserbeam" on the economy, yet it seems today that the most troubling issues facing the new administration will not be domestic economic concerns but foreign diplomatic and military issues.

During the Cold War this nation focused "like a laserbeam" on the Soviet Union. I'm certain there are still some people out there who think that the former "Evil Empire" was the source of all evil in the world. But now, in the post-Soviet era, our nation faces new challenges which our military establishment is not well-equipped to address.

The US Army and Air Force were well equipped and trained to stop hordes of Soviet tanks from invading Germany. The problem is, the tanks never came. Now President Bush is proposing to involve the US in an effort to ensure that aid reaches the needy in Somalia. It's about time America did something in Africa other than support counterrevolutionaries.

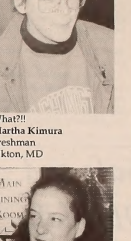
At first, I must admit, I thought that this was a shameless and cynical attempt on the part of the President to involve American ground forces in a guerilla struggle with no real objective — in other words, another Vietnam War. Yet upon closer examination, there remains every reason to be hopeful. The main difference between Somalia and Vietnam is that the enemy consists of armed thugs who will undoubtedly receive little support from most Somalis. Also, these thugs have little or no ideological reason to continue fighting once it becomes plain that they face a vastly superior force. And this time we will have international backing and military support, just as we had in the Gulf.

What irks me is the suggestion that this is a situation where no American interests are at stake. To my mind, this is the only major American military action since World War II which I can unreservedly support. In Korea, we lost tens of thousands of servicemen and achieved nothing. In Vietnam, we killed ten million people and lost any way. The Gulf War was not expensive in human terms or even monetary terms, but it was morally indefensible in that we supported one despot against another despot and still wound up with the same number of despots in the end.



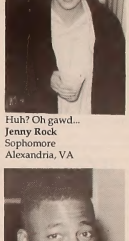
Now hundreds of thou-

See "Koon," page 4

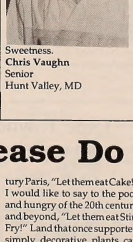


CAMPUS VOICES

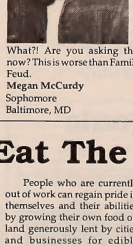
By Dude



You have five seconds to say something intelligent.



Einstein is the greatest.
Ari Kodeck
Senior
Baltimore, MD



What?!!
Martha Kimura
Freshman
Elkton, MD

Huh? Oh gawd...
Jenny Rock
Sophomore
Alexandria, VA

Sweetness.
Chris Vaughn
Senior
Hunt Valley, MD

What?! Are you asking this now? This is worse than Family Feud.
Megan McCurdy
Sophomore
Baltimore, MD

Where's the football team?
Andre Taylor
Freshman
Washington, D.C.

Open Forum: Please Do Eat The Daisies

Justin Cann

Justin Cann, a.k.a. Moonpile, is a senior English major from Annapolis and a member of the Writers' Union junta.

Most people might think, what is edible landscaping, and does it have anything to do with edible underwear (on sale at the Elkton Crown station)? This simple, environmentally savvy, idea can help us reduce the problems associated with the distribution of food to the hungry.

It has been estimated that there is enough food grown in the world to feed every person the equivalent of two loaves of bread per day. Why, then, must there be people starving even in the supposedly prosperous U.S. of A.? The problem lies in our centralized farming and supermarket system. The food is all in one place, in the hands of a few giant agribusinesses.

The means of production must be decentralized and placed into the hands of the average person. This is where edible landscaping comes in. Have you ever been in a city or on a college campus and thought of the uselessness of most of the plants growing there? Why don't the landscaping companies plant peppers, corn, squash, herbs, and fruit trees where they currently plant ivy?

The simple fact remains; most people don't eat ivy, little lambs eat ivy. The problems of hungry people in urban areas could be greatly alleviated by practicing edible landscaping. Marie Antoinette said to the poor and hungry of 18th-century Paris, "Let them eat Cake!" I would like to say to the poor and hungry of the 20th century and beyond, "Let them eat Stir-Fry!" Land that once supported simply decorative plants can now grow decorative and nutritious food for those in need.

Edible landscaping will also help to reduce the transportation costs currently involved in the centralized food distribution system. This will in turn reduce pollution and the overall costs of food. Since primarily those in need of food will be involved in the actual farming of it, they can assure themselves that their foods are grown without harmful pesticides and fertilizers. While the dangers of pesticides are obvious, the use of fertilizers actually reduces the nutrient content of the produce. Through the use of edible landscaping, those who are currently hungry will have more food, and their food will be more nutritious.

People who are currently out of work can regain pride in themselves and their abilities by growing their own food on land generously lent by cities and businesses for edible landscaping projects. This sort of confidence can help lead them to revitalize their neighborhoods and increase the value of their property.

This is all fine and good, some people might say, but how does it apply to us in Chestertown?

First, edible landscaping can be practiced by everyone in their own home. Instead of flowers, ferns, and other standard house plants, you can grow peppers and herbs that satisfy both the visual aesthetic and the taste buds. My roommate and I have two basils, a sage, a rosemary, and about fifteen various hot pepper plants that have just recently sprouted. The herbs are quite pretty and have been enhancing our dishes for some months now, and we can't wait to have hundreds of hot little peppers for just about every dish.

Second, the College could use the flower beds in front of the Miller Library, along the Cater Walk, and behind the Literary House for peppers, herbs, squash, beans, strawberries, tomatoes, and cucumbers. Instead of tulip poplars, the school could plant apple, pear, and cherry trees. Dave Knowles could send one of his employees out to gather fresh herbs, fruits, and vegetables for the dining hall dinners. Better yet, the school could invite members of the Chestertown community who need food to tend the plants in return for the produce they grow. The students could even participate, helping the needy and learning about farming.

Edible landscaping could

See "Cann," page 4

From "Koon," page 3

sands of lives are at stake in East Africa, and yet there are people who see no apparent American interest? There was a time when the American interest was seen as simply the antithesis of the Soviet interest. Absolutely no more nations were to become "clients of the Soviet Union." Containment at all costs. Let us hope that the Gulf War did not set the new standard for determining where the American interest lies in the post-Cold War era.

I laud the President's efforts to alleviate the suffering in Somalia. This presents America with the opportunity to define a new national interest. America cannot and should not be the policeperson of the world, but America can work through international mechanisms to ensure stability and use our prestige to promote the cause of justice in the world.

Yes, we do need a President who will focus on the economy. Yes, it is a shame that America manufactures the best air-superiority fighter jets in the world but produces no VCRs. But America still has a role to play in the world, and Bill Clinton will play a defining role in determining what our role should be in this "new world order."

I earlier mentioned justice. It is true that there is little social justice in America. But there are injustices in the world which are abhorrent to most Americans, and we are now in a position to use our massive military might constructively. We didn't borrow all that money we didn't have for nothing. Let justice in the world be our national interest. This is something which every American could be proud of.

It is just this sort of philosophy which could be applied constructively in Bosnia. It would be fraught will peril, and it would be an expensive endeavor. And certainly, there is no definable "American interest." No oil-rich sheiks to save, no wicked Soviet menace to contain. Why should we do anything? After all, isn't it a European problem?

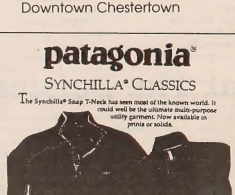
This past Saturday's International Herald Tribune offers some good reasons why we should. It contains an article derived from seven hours of interviews with Borislav Herak, a twenty-one year old Bosnian Serb who confessed to the killings of 29 civilians. He witnessed the mass murder of about one hundred and twenty Muslim men, women and children. He saw the bodies of 60 men who were used as a human shield by the Serbians when the Bosnians were attacking. He and two cronies gunned down a Muslim family of ten execution-style. He personally slit the throats of three Muslim freedom fighters after they had been captured. He described the system whereby Serbian soldiers regularly rape and murder Muslim women being held captive at a motel complex which has been converted to a women's prison; "He said that he went to the motel once every three or four days, and that although Serbian fighters routinely took the women they raped away and killed them, there were always more women arriving. 'It was never a problem,' he said 'you just picked up a key and went up to a room.'"

Of course, Mr Herak was provided with a rationale for his actions by his superior officers; "We were told that Ahatovci must be a cleansed Serbian territory, that it was a strategic place between Ilidza and Rajlovac, and that all the Muslims there must be killed. We were told that no one must escape, and that all of the houses must be burned, so that if anybody did survive, they would have nowhere left to return to. It was an order, and I simply did what I was told."

If the words of the first Serbian war criminal captured during the Bosnian War sound familiar, it is because they are. When atrocities occur in the third world, we often support the regimes responsible. The last time genocide happened in Europe, we took no action until after millions had already died. In the former Yugoslavia, it will not be easy. But then what is right is seldom easy.

Have a Safe and Happy Holiday

from



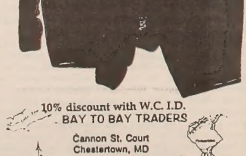
Brambles

Downtown Chestertown

patagonia

SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS

The Synchilla® Snap T-Neck has been most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.



10% discount with W.C. I.D.

BAY TO BAY TRADERS

Cannon St. Court

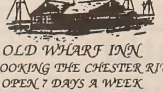
Chestertown, MD

(410) 778-3442

We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

Olde Towne Barbers

Flat Tops French Braids



Frostings Cuts For Everyone

COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA

Route 213 and Spring Ave

Open Monday-Saturday

778-4771

OLD WHARF INN

OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

778-3566

Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Andy's

337 1/2 High St.

Music Starts At

Approx. 9pm

FRI 4 THE HULA MONSTERS Hawaiian Western Swing

SAT 5 TOM LARSEN BLUES BAND

One of the Hottest Blues Bands On the East Coast

Goldwater Science Scholarship

Washington College students interested in a career in mathematics, the natural sciences, or those engineering disciplines that contribute significantly to the technological advances of the United States are invited to apply to the Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship and Excellence in Educational Program.

Established by Congress in 1986, the Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship and Excellence in Education Foundation operates an educational scholarship program designed to provide opportunities for outstanding US students with excellent academic records and demonstrated interest in, and potential for, careers in mathematics, the natural sciences, and eligible engineering disciplines.

In May 1993, the Foundation will award scholarships to students who will be college juniors or seniors during the 1993-94 academic year. In order to be considered for an award, students must be nominated by their institution. The deadline for all 1993 nominations is February 5, 1993.

The scholarship award covers eligible expenses up to a maximum of $7,000 per year. Junior scholarship recipients are eligible for two years of support or until the baccalaureate degree is received, whichever comes first. Senior recipients are eligible for one year of support or until the baccalaureate degree is received, whichever comes first.

To be eligible, a student must be a current full-time sophomore or junior and must be pursuing a baccalaureate degree, have a B average or equivalent, stand in the upper fourth of the class, and be a US citizen, resident alien, or US national who will pursue a career in mathematics, the natural sciences, or an eligible engineering discipline.

Interested sophomores and juniors should contact Dr. Satinder S. Sidhu in 203 Dunning Hall, by December 8.

From "Cann," page 3

save Washington College some money. It would spice up the dining hall dishes and help our Chestertown residents. Using this simple idea, we could vastly improve town-gown relations and set Washington College in the forefront of environmental and social responsibility.

Erickson Doesn't Want You to Get AIDS

Amanda Burt
News Editor

In response to the need for increased AIDS awareness within the Washington College community, junior Keith Erickson has organized the Peer Education Program, whose main focus is to educate students, faculty and administration about the disease and promote ways to practice protected sex.

Erickson became interested in starting the program while he was at home in Chicago last summer, where he had the opportunity to read through the information of a friend who is a student and AIDS educator at Tufts University in Boston. He said that AIDS education is a credited course at Tufts as well as at a number of other colleges and Universities.

While his intention was originally to do volunteer work with AIDS patients in Washington, DC, Erickson decided that he could be more helpful at the college, where there was no official AIDS awareness program.

In September, he approached Dawn Nordhoff, the Associate Director for Health Services, and she convinced him that the program would be beneficial to the college. She agreed to be the advisor for the program and has worked with Erickson to develop goals, initiate a training program for potential student educators and acquire materials.

The first training session for students occurred on October 31 and was instructed by Barbara Hernan, an AIDS educator for a three-county district in Maryland. Erickson and eleven other students went through the intensive and extensive process in order to familiarize themselves with AIDS and become comfortable relating information about the disease to others.

"Through the training, we've become knowledgeable about contraceptives, HIV and AIDS," Erickson said. "As new information becomes available, we will have new training sessions."

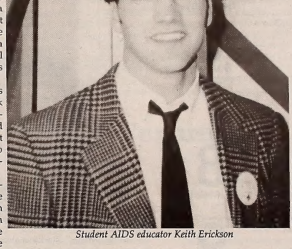


Photo by / Tavia Travers

Student AIDS educator Keith Erickson

He said that the primary goal of the program is to raise awareness on campus by defining the disease to the college community. Peer educators will explain how AIDS is and is not contracted, and they will also discuss contraceptives, including newer devices such as the female condom and a relatively little-known oral sex prophylactic.

Erickson added that the program plans to increase the use of condoms on campus through free distribution by peer educators, and he mentioned the possibility of installing condom machines in bathrooms throughout campus and outside the Coffee House. He said the machines would be maintained by the Peer Education Program.

"Unfortunately, I think students are not protecting themselves at all times — it's touch and go. Sometimes they will, sometimes they won't," Erickson said. "I want people to realize they have to protect themselves. This is a matter of life and death."

He noted that current statistics cite that over 1.5 million people are HIV positive and do not know they are carrying the virus. Erickson also said that while the number of AIDS cases has leveled off in the homosexual population, infection rates continue to rise among the heterosexual population.

He stressed three of the most important methods of AIDS prevention. The first is to use protection during intercourse. Erickson said that if a condom is uncomfortable, it can be used with nonoxynol 9, which helps to kill both sperm and HIV. However, the spermicide should not be completely trusted to control the spread of the virus.

Second, Erickson urges everyone to get tested for the infection. Testing for HIV is available, free of charge, at the Kent County Health Department on 125 Lynchburg Street in Chestertown. The phone number for the Health Department is (410) 778-1350.

He said that complete anonymity is guaranteed for anyone wanting to be tested. An individual must give their name so that they can be identified after the results are received, but their blood is actually sent as a number to Baltimore to be tested.

The results of all tests are locked in a file cabinet in one room at the Health Department to which only person has access.

"It's so difficult to get people to be tested that we need to concentrate on getting them tested and then work on ideal conditions."

Erickson said he understands why students may be nervous about getting tested. "You have an obligation to yourself and to your partners to get tested and to know."

He added that testing should be done on a regular basis and become as routine as a physical. Erickson suggested that testing should take place every six months or at least once a year.

Finally, he said that everyone should be honest about their own sexual history and should not be afraid to ask about their partner's history.

Erickson hopes to incorporate the program into next year's freshmen orientation in addition to the Health Services budget so that the program is not just a student-based organization.

While the program currently focuses on AIDS education, Erickson said it will eventually expand to address such issues as rape, alcohol and drug abuse, eating disorders and other relevant topics.

"I can't give enough credit to the peer educators, Dawn[Nordhoff], and Mary Adda Moore at the Health Department. I also want to thank the SGA, President Trout, Health Services, Student Affairs, and everyone else who helped get this off the ground," he said. "The program wouldn't have been possible without their support."

FREE IMPRINTING!! of first color on custom T-Shirts
Factory Direct!!
Sports Teams * College Clubs
Fraternity & Sorority Functions
Call now to find out how affordable custom printing really is!
Mention this ad and get $25 off your first order! 12 pc. min.
T-Line (410) 778-5622

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal Electrologist – Louise Leaverton, L.E.

Week at a Glance

December 4 - 10

Film Series: The Double Life of Veronique
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

Renaissance Dinner, Hynson Lounge 7:00 p.m. For reservations call ext. 7875

4 Friday

Renaissance Dinner, Hynson Lounge 7:00 p.m. For reservations call ext. 7875

SAO: Acousti, Norman James Theater 8:00 p.m.

5 Saturday

Go to church, if you're a churchgoer.
If above does not apply, recover from hangover.

Brunch, Hodson Hall, 10:30 - 12:30

6 Sunday

Attend classes (if this is a novel idea, then don't bother)

7 Monday

SGA meeting, CAC Forum 9:00 p.m.

Maria Jerardi presents Images and Institutions: A Slide Show on Bangledeshi Culture and Politics, International House Basement 8:00 p.m. Sponsored by the Society of Junior Fellows

8 Tuesday

WC Historical Society presents a slide show and lecture: Commeration of the 350th Anniversary of Kent County, Hynson Lounge 7:30 p.m.

Snickers Comedy Club, Comedien: Melvin George II, CoffeeHouse 8:30 p.m.
Admission: $1.00

9 Wednesday

Chorus Rehearsal, Norman James Theater, 7:00 p.m.

10 Thursday

All library books due back by Friday, December 11

Grand Re-Opening of the CoffeeHouse

Meet in the study lounge in Hodson Hall at 4:30 p.m. for the opening, then hang around for the "Pre-Cram Jam" at 9:00 p.m. in the CoffeeHouse

A&E

Student Profile:
Laura "Krissy" Rindfuss

Photo by Andrea Stone

Laura "Krissy" Rindfuss always finds herself planning for the future. An Eastern Shore native from Hurlock, MD, Krissy is an junior International Studies major with a Middle East concentration.

Krissy frequently finds her activities revolving around her major and future career goals. A member of the International Relations club, she is currently coordinating the WC delegation to the Model United Nations held in Boston in late February. Colleges and universities across the nation participate in the Model U.N., representing nearly every country on the globe. A second year participant, Krissy represented the Afghani delegation last year. Krissy admits that the work is fast-paced, but overall, she finds the Model U.N. to be an interesting, realistic and rewarding experience.

Aiming for a career with the Department of State or the Agency for International Development, Krissy interned with AID last summer in the Reimbursable Training Programs office. Even though the office is relatively small compared to other international offices in D.C., the group works to bring foreign students to the U.S. for short term training or study in degree-based programs. The objective is that foreign students will go through the program and return to their homelands to use what they have learned. Krissy's internship involved a little bit of everything, from minor office work to setting up a data base of community college and four year college course offerings. Since she has always had an interest in foreign affairs, the most exciting part of the internship was getting into the State Department.

Always interacting with people in one way or another, Krissy was a peer advisor and is a member of this semester's pledge class of Zeta Tau Alpha. It is not surprising that she sees her future in the hustle and bustle of Washington, D.C. and international politics.

Normally carrying a work load of five courses while maintaining a GPA well above a 3.0, Krissy still finds time for activities apart from her major. She enjoys reading anything ranging from fantasy to historical fiction and spending quality time with friends. While she only dabbles in gourmet cooking, one of her favorite pastimes is sampling ethnic cuisine, her favories being Greek and Turkish. Ethnic cuisine is also another perk when working in D.C.

Christmas Ballet Celebrates 100th Aniversary

Karen Lynn Smith
Dance Instructor

This year the ballet The Nutcracker is 100 years old. Though it seems to have been a holiday tradition forever its holiday connection is in fact a fairly recent one. It premiered at the Maryinsky Theatre in St. Petersburg on December 18, 1892, for an audience that included Tsar Alexander II and his court.

Compared to Tchaikovsky's opera Iolanta, which was also on the program, its reception was less than notable: and the ballet was deemed a failure by both critics and audience.

Although written by a German (E.T.A. Hoffmann), adapted by a Frenchman (Alexander Dumas, the elder), and originally choreographed and staged by Russians (Lev Ivanov and Marius Petipa), The Nutcracker is a decidedly American phenomenon. This holiday ballet, presented by more than 250 companies in the U.S. this year, is the biggest money-maker in professional dance; in fact, it is largely responsible for the survival of ballet in this country and accounts for 25% to 65% of the annual ticket sales and one-third of total annual performances of America's ballet companies.

The Nutcracker was not performed in the west until the staging in England by its famed Sadler's Wells Ballet in 1934. It made its first appearance in America as a short excerpt presented in 1940 by the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. Although there were scattered versions in the U.S. in the 1940s and 50s, George Balanchine is credited with popularizing The Nutcracker as a holiday tradition following the 1954 New York City Ballet successful performance.

Written in 1816, Hoffmann's Nutcracker and the Mouse King is a serious story made into a fairy tale filled with mystery and adventure. Godfather Drosselmeyer is one of the favorite characters of children. They like him because they adore mysterious characters, and he does tricks for them. With his patch covering one eye, he looks like a wizard, the old-fashioned kind (like Merlin) who could change pretty little girls into hideous toads and bad little boys into creepy-crawlies. Freud often went back to Hoffmann's stories because the psychological insights were amazing. The ballet is filled with dreams, mystery, excitement, and a bill of fare that is swallowed whole by adults and children alike.

The Nutcracker is the perfect way for people to meet the ballet—discovering that it can be spectacular theater yet be as intimate and personal as the story of a little girl. It is a wonderful introduction to the artistry and athleticism of the dance. Attending The Nutcracker is a ritual, a habit, a tradition; but we don't know what exactly its secret is. Holiday entertainment, ballet primer, career inspiration, bread winner? Questioning the popularity of this ballet is like asking why we watch the Wizard of Oz every time it is shown on television. Perhaps knowing the secret could destroy the magic.

To quote George Balanchine: "In the final analysis, The Nutcracker is for children young & old. That is, for children, and for adults who are young at heart. Because, if an adult is a good person, in his heart he is still a child. In every person the best, the most important part is that which remains from childhood."

Students and faculty wishing to view a live version of The Nutcracker can attend a performance by the National Ballet of Maryland at Queen Anne High School on Saturday, Dec. 5, at 3:00 p.m.. Tickets and information: 758-1331.

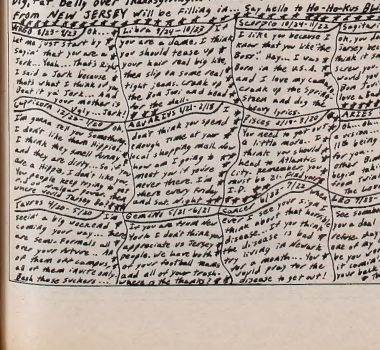
Eat Like Henry VIII

Eve Zartman
Staff Writer

While people are seated at their tables in festively decorated Hynson Lounge, the harmonious sound of carolers echos from the stairwell. As the audience turns, in marches the Early Vocal Music Consort, who, along with talented musicians, warm the guests with their good cheer. Once a few carols have been sung and the boar's head, with apple in mouth, is presented, and the feast begins. After the dinner is finished and the last decanter of wassail is served, the dancers entrance the audience with their graceful movements and elegant costumes. The singers come out once again and help the hour pass as people let their dinners settle. The evening closes as carolers, with candles in hand, sing a Christmas lullaby.

What I have just described in the annual Renaissance Dinner hosted by the college's music and dance departments. It is truly a trip back to those merry old times, if only for a little while. The Renaissance Dinner is being held this Friday and Saturday at 7 p.m. in Hynson Lounge. Dress is semi-formal. Tickets are available through Cecelia Everitt (ext. 7875) and cost $11 for students, $18 for non-students. The audience is usually varied between students, townspeople, parents and alumni — so as to make for a festive occasion.

Thumbs Up For Veronique



Scott Graham
Staff Writer

The Double Life of Veronique is a French film about two women in different parts of Europe who share an unexplainable bond. These two women never meet, and yet, they sense the existence of each other somewhere in the world. One of the women dies in the middle of a concert, and the other lives on to work things out without the "feelings" of the other.

The movie would be a lot more enjoyable if you speak French. As always, sub-titles only let you know what they're saying, not how they say it. I wish that I could speak French or hear this in English so that I could appreciate the depth of the characters, and so that I could enjoy this film that much more. The subtitles and the language difference create a certain distance between you and the characters. I think that most college students should be able to get past most of this and get a feel for what's happening.

The cinematography was lovely. The way the director used the moving images of light and dark make this a visually appealing film which constantly gives you a sense of motion when there is no movement. The music is a beautiful melody that is almost haunting and sad, but yet moving away to hope.

The whole film is a sensory experience that keeps you spellbound. The story is a whisper that you follow, the visual is like a dream, and the music: a familiar voice at your shoulder. Seeing the movie is like a dream from your childhood … So if you're feeling young this weekend, give the movie a shot. You may be surprised.

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
PASSENGER 57
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

FAMILY BOOKS NOOK
All in stock Books DISCOUNTED!
Hard Cover Books – 15% Off
New Paperback Books – 10% Off
Pre-Read Paperback Books – 50% Off
Discover our Pre-Read Paperbacks, Credit for Your Gently Read Paperbacks – BROWSERS WELCOME!
Washington Square Shopping Center – near Super Fresh

Allen Works to Revamp Health Services

Junior Tanya Angell Allen was amused by rumors that the first question doctors in Health Services asked female students was "Are you pregnant?" However, she was not at all amused when one of her friends was given a penicillin derivative when she had a cold — the student's records clearly stated that she was allergic to penicillin.

Last year, as editor of "Beyond the Shadow of a Trout," Allen collected "Health Service Horror Stories." However, these horror stories became more than just amusing to Allen, and she decided to take action. This year she formed an SGA-supported task force to investigate improvements to the health center.

The Health Service Task Force is a group of students set up to assess Washington College's health services, policies, and the center itself. It is headed by Allen, and advised by Dr. David Newell of the Philosophy Department.

Student members include Jessica Aspiazu, Rae Brown, Jen Del Nero, Gehrett Ellis, Keith Erickson, Elisa Hale, Mary Holmes, George Jamison, Max Walton, and Sonja Wilson, as well as Associate Director of Health Services Dawn Nordhoff.

Two of the force's main goals are to reinstate the college's "Wellness Committee" and to press for an official AIDS policy. Both of these things are listed in the Student Handbook as already existing, which is a misrepresentation.

The purpose of an AIDS policy would be to protect students with HIV from discrimination and harassment, to guarantee that they would have unrestricted access to WC facilities and would be allowed to attend classes as long as they were physically, mentally, and psychologically able to, unless they engaged in behavior that would endanger others.

The policy would also assure confidentiality, and would provide support services to help patients get counseling and medical care. In addition, it would set up committees and educational programs to teach the student body about the virus, and how to protect themselves from it.

An AIDS policy was drawn up in 1990, but was scrapped by Douglas Cater because it contained the suggestion that we have HIV testing on campus. The student handbook still says that we have a policy.

The "Wellness Committee," which met under Douglas Cater, was discontinued after he left office, and has not been reinstated under President Trout. However, it is still listed in the Student Handbook as the "Educational Task Force," which is said to consist of "the Dean of Students (chair), the Chair of the President's Advisory Council on Lifetime Fitness, a physician and/or trainer, a member of the Food Service, a staff member serving on the Health Benefits Committee, two students appointed by the Student Government Association, and the Chair of the Lecture Series Committee."

The Educational Task Force does not exist.

In the past, the Wellness Committee met once a month, and was instrumental in getting the Health Service Center renovated. It also helped to sponsor Health Fairs, and worked on the campus AIDS policy. Most importantly, it improved communication between the different departments, and kept up with the general feelings on campus. Right now, Health Services only reports to Student Affairs, and since it is situated in Queen Anne's House, it is relatively isolated from the rest of the college.

The Force is also pushing for more doctors, counselors, and other staff. The student body is growing, and so far the number of staff members at the Health Center is not growing with it. Ideally the center should have a full-time secretary, educator, counselor and doctor. If this is not possible, creative alternatives, such "For All Seasons," should be instituted.

For All Seasons is the rape crisis center for the upper Eastern Shore, and they have hours on campus once a week — which helps relieve some of the work-load of the regular counselors.

The Force will also be pushing for more hours at the center — particularly weekend hours. Right now all medical problems which occur on the weekends — including minor problems such as bronchitis and other cold complications — are taken care of at the Emergency room of Kent and Queen Anne's hospital.

In addition, the Center itself has requests for renovations that have been promised, but have still not been delivered. These include having sinks added to the examining rooms, adding an additional bathroom (the center currently uses the bathroom in the apartment, but when the apartment is in use the bathroom is shut off to other students,) and improving the Center's air conditioning.

(There is currently no air conditioning in the waiting room, which is bad for students with respiratory problems, and the air conditioners in the examining rooms are so loud that the staff usually has to turn them off in order to hear patients speak.)

The staff also needs money for traveling to educational conventions such as the one run by the American College Health Association.

Last year the Center was not granted any money for student education, although they requested $900.00.

Next semester the task force will be running two surveys. One will be of student attitudes and perceptions about WC's health services; and the other will be a phone survey of the colleges in the Centennial League, to find out how our services compare to programs at other colleges.

The Force would like to acknowledge Jennifer Del Nero, who was the impetus for having another one of our goals — RA training — instituted. According to Dean McIntire, beginning next semester Residential Assistants will, as part of their spring training, be taught CPR and Emergency First Aide. They will also have a reminder program on this in the Fall.

—Health Services Task Force Press Release

Alum Brings AIDS Quilt to Washington College

Wednesday, three sections of the AIDS Memorial Quilt were on display in the gallery of the Casey Academic Center. Each portion is made up of several 3' by 6' panels, of which there are over 24,000 in the U.S. today. The panels for the quilt, which is sponsored by the Names Project, are made by friends and family of a victim of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

Troy Petenbrink, a 1992 Washington College graduate, was instrumental in having the panels come to WC for AIDS Awareness Week. Petenbrink began working for the Names Project Chapter of the National Capital Area in June of this year as a volunteer. He was hired a month later as an administrative assistant for the chapter. In addition, Troy was recently elected to the chapter's Board of Directors.

While he was at WC, Troy was a Political Science major, a member of Kappa Alpha Order fraternity, and President of the Senior Class.

There are currently over 30 chapters nationwide of the Names Project, as well as 18 international initiatives. Petenbrink was a part of the organizing effort which brought all 24,000 panels together in Washington, DC this October. This is the fourth time the quilt has appeared in its entirety.

For information about the Names Project or the AIDS Quilt, call (202) 29-NAMES.

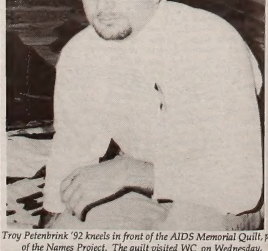

Photo by J. Tone Travers

Troy Petenbrink '92 kneels in front of the AIDS Memorial Quilt, part of the Names Project. The quilt visited WC on Wednesday.

2nd
Second to none.
SECOND NATIONAL Federal Savings BANK
Over $1.6 Billion in Assets
FDIC Insured
503 WASHINGTON AVENUE
P.O.BOX 577
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
410-778-1013
OPEN 6 DAYS A WEEK
FOR YOUR BANKING
CONVENIENCE
EQUAL HOUSING LENDER
MEMBER FDIC

$5 off any service over $20 with ad
(one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2695
Chestertown, MD 21620

From "Del Nero," page 2

demands, the numbers are impressive. Judging by the success of its first peer education training programs, the AIDS Education Program has already proven its merit.

I would like to call your attention to page 25 of the student Handbook 1992-1993 which acknowledges Washington College's "responsibility to the AIDS epidemic to help educate its members about ways to prevent HIV infection, to limit the consequences of established infection, and to provide compassionate care for all concerned individuals." As the College has no present program in place, each member of our campus community should certainly applaud and thank Keith for taking on the responsibility the College claims in its Handbook.

On a similar note, and in fact on the same page of the Handbook, there is a description of an Educational Task Force, whose goal is to educate students "about prevention of health disorders," a committee which would "design and coordinate education programs for the entire campus community, including students, faculty, and staff." Additionally, this council is to "present an annual report to the President of the College outlining its educational plans for the year." However, this Education Task Force has not been formed this year, nor for the past few years. Keith's proposed AIDS Education Program impressively assumes at least partial responsibility of these duties.

The SGA encourages you to take the advice of the Task Force on the Status of Lesbians and Gay Men at Washington College, which recommends AIDS education and to recognize the institution's acknowledged responsibility to educate students about health disorders by at least matching SGA's contribution of $2,000 to the AIDS Education Program.

Jennifer Del Nero
SGA President

From "Fire," page 1

Michael Kaylor, English Department Professors Bennett Lamond and Nancy Tatum, and over 25 students.

Day announced that the measures discussed at the last meeting, including inspecting fire prevention equipment and posting a floorplan with this equipment's location posted, had been instituted. A telephone will be installed soon, and more smoke alarms will be located on each floor.

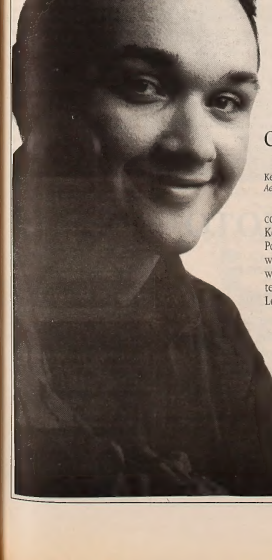
In addition, it was suggested that fire escapes be positioned on the third floor to improve the safety of the Lit House fellows, who hold study rooms on that floor.

Roderick expressed his concern to the ELM earlier in the day. "The Literary House isn't going to do anybody any good if it's gone," he said. "We have to protect the property of the college and the lives of the students."

At Wednesday's meeting, he stressed that the Security measures being taken were not meant to be punishment for students who frequent the Lit House. "We're looking for reasonable measures to insure that this building is going to be here next semester and next year," said Roderick.

Day and Roderick said that the building had been locked up between 12 midnight and 8 a.m. because most of the fires were suspected to have been set during those hours. "We are experiencing fires when there are other people in the house," said Day.

Wubbels mentioned President Charles H. Trout's concern whether, in the case of a fire, the insurance company would be satisfied that the college was taking "prudent action" to secure the building.



Several students suggested a policy of having student volunteers monitoring the building during those hours when faculty were not present. After lengthy discussion about what form this monitoring system would take, the following measure was unofficially adopted by the Literary House Staff; Day said he hoped to have the remainder of the administration (in addition to Roderick, Wubbels, and McIntire) approve the measure by Friday.

Students will sign up to monitor the Literary House in two-hour shifts of three students each. The shifts will begin at 5 p.m. when the faculty leave the building, and end in the early morning hours after no volunteers are available. After the last volunteers depart for the night, Security will lock the building until 8 a.m. the next morning.

The students' names and phone numbers will be posted in the house, and the Security officer on duty will have a copy of the list. The students will take names of all students who are in the building during their shift.

The first group of monitors were on duty from 7 to midnight Wednesday, and the house will be secured in this way through finals week.

Any student having any information as to the identity of the vandal should notify Security, Student Affairs, or Professor Day.

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller: The Apple Computer Loan.

"Why should I wait in line at the computer lab when I can own a Macintosh for $15 a month?"

Kevin Campbell
Aerospace Engineering Major

What allowed Kevin to own an Apple® Macintosh® PowerBook™ 145 computer for such a low monthly payment? The Apple Computer Loan.† Kevin knew that owning the power and portability of a Macintosh PowerBook for his full course load and his work in the Civil Air Patrol was a smart thing to do. And the Apple Computer Loan was the smart way to do it: easy application, fast turnaround and low, flexible payment terms. So Kevin went to the only place that offers the Apple Computer Loan, his Apple Campus Reseller.

Macintosh. It's more than a present, it's a future.

For more information visit the

WC Bookstore

Casey Academic Center or call x7200

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. PowerBook is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc.
*Based on Kevin Campbell's Apple Computer Loan of $1,342.40, his monthly payment was $15 (interest only) as of 11/1/92. Principal payments may be deferred up to 4 years. The interest rate is variable, and is based on the average of the higher of the 30-day or 90-day commercial paper rates as reported in the Wall Street Journal, plus a spread of 5.5% (this is current 5.5%). The term of the loan is 8 years with no pre-payment penalty. The total finance charge on every $1,000 borrowed will be $545.58. Each applicant pays a $35.00 non-refundable application fee. Approved borrowers will be charged a 4% loan origination fee. The loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount and repaid over the life of the loan. For the month of October 1992, the average rate was 7.6% with an APR of 9.8%.

Hopkins Shames and Humbles W.C. Hockey, 8-2

Tim Reardon
Co-Sports Editor

On Monday, November 23rd the Washington College Hockey Team traveled to Baltimore to face off against John Hopkins University at the pleasant Mt. Pleasant Arena. The Shoremen were trying to end their one game losing streak suffered at the hands of Navy. The team was poised and ready to play, but a lack of skaters and excessive penalty minutes proved costly as they were trounced 8-2. The loss dropped the teams record to 1-2.

As always the WC Hockey unit came out skating hard and ready to play. Hopkins began the scoring late in the first period, while the Shoremen could not generate any offensive threat.

At the end of the first period Hopkins was leading by a score of 2-0. Washington knew they were still in the game, but had to get more shots on net. But, with the loss of Chris "Topher" Head, W.C. had only three defensemen to use and they became winded very quickly. Hopkins then went on to score three unanswered goals to make the score 5-0.

Washington had not lost the desire to win the game. A John Hopkins player received a five minute misconduct penalty and the team knew it was time to pressure the goalie. After two successful faceoffs by Gary Yovanovich, Than Parker, over the span of two minutes, fired two slapshots from the point, right past the helpless Hopkins goalie. The sorry sap. With Parker's two goals, the Shoremen closed the gap to within 3, 5-2. In the third period, Hopkins put the nails in the coffin by scoring three more goals and winning the game 8-2.

In net again for the Shoremen was Dave Kraft who turned away over 40 shots. Even with Daves superb saves the team was unable to help him out by getting quality shots on the opposing goaltender. The Shoremen also sustained some where around 50 minutes in penalties which usually doesn't help a team.

Once again the whole team played well but were unable to benefit from Hopkins penalties and mistakes. There was also an excellent turn out of fans again, led by Fans of the Month Doug Sarno and Sam "Slammer" Gessner. Boy, they're the best! The team hopes more people will come when they resume play again in Easton after the Christmas vacation. They hope to get back on track and break their two game losing streak. Plenty of games still remain at the Easton Garden Coliseum so don't miss it. And if their lucky the sheriff may come again.

Shoremen Spank St. Mary's Seahawks

Dave Taibl
Staff Writer

Washington College began its home season with a stunning victory over the Seahawks of St. Mary's College Tuesday night before an estimated crowd of 375.2 ecstatic fans, including President Trout and former Shoremen juggernaut Tim Keehan ('90). The homecourt win brought the WAC to .500, and on track to another fast and furious season under head coach Tom Finnegan, this his 23rd year at the helm of the Shoremen basketball program.

Photo by Gary Broom

#42 Darren Vican gets to show his sleight of hand dribbling technique. "It's all in the face," says Vican

The previous Tuesday, Washington College was plagued by inconsistencies, falling behind to Frostburg State by as many as 20 points in a heated MAC contest. Although they were able to rally in the second half behind spectacular efforts by senior guard Pete Basel (19 points and NEWT, POW honors) and junior Geoff Rupert (17 points), Frostburg held on to win 76-67.

However, this Tuesday was another story for the Finnegan machine. Utilizing the entire bench, the Shoremen were able to score seemingly at will, routing the Seahawks, 82-59. Once again, the WAC was paced by Basel and Rupert, contributing 23 and 20 points respectively. Senior captain Darren "the Shaq's got nothin' on me" Vican made his presence known, slamming one home to the standing ovation of the Cain Gymnasium crowd. Freshman starter Mike Kenah put on an impressive performance, opening up several scoring opportunities for the offense.

Senior forward Mike Swanson was no stranger to the limelight either, leading the Shoremen with 13 rebounds on the night. The Seahawks attempted to overcome what at times was a 24 point Washington College lead behind the guidance of junior scoring ace Chris DeLisi, only to fall short in his 15 point effort. Junior Sean Keehan left plenty of space in his brother Tim's shoes, contributing a meager 9 points to St. Mary's deflated offense.

The Shoremen's victory gears them up for a tough week before they return home for the Wild Goose Classic on Dec. 11th and 12th, featuring Dominican, Kean, and Goucher Colleges. First they travel to face UMBC in a Division I match-up on Saturday, and then to the campus of George Mason University in scenic Fairfax, Virginia to battle the Patriots, another Division I tournament hopeful. These games should ready the WAC to fight for the Wild Goose title that has been highly-contested by fellow Division III rivals.

Don't forget to take time away from those books to catch the action of this thrilling tourney in the Cain Dome/ Open air retractible sky dome stadium.

Suds 'n Soda
"Your Store For Convenience"
Rt. 213 & Rt. 297
1.5 Miles North of Campus
778-5077
BEER*WINE*LIQUOR*SODA*ICE*KEGS
OPEN 6 a.m.-12 mid
7 DAYS
LARGE IMPORT SELECTION
LARGE KEG INVENTORY
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
MAGNUM MALT LIQUOR 12oz CANS
ONLY $6.99 + tax
CASE
WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS
YOU MUST BE 21 AND HAVE 2 FORMS VALID IDENTIFICATION TO PURCHASE ALCOHOL

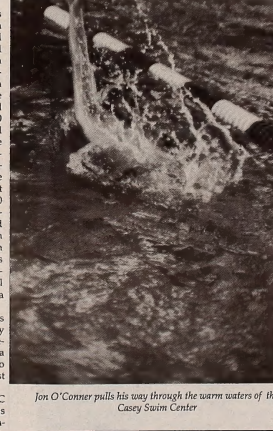
EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

AQUA MEN AND WOMEN TOP SALISBURY STATE

Brandon White
Staff Writer

Against Salisbury last Tuesday Junior Mimi Devlin swam the iron women events. First came the win in the 800 freestroke followed by a win in the 200 freestroke. She didn't stop there as she finished the day with yet another victory in the 400 freestroke. Coach Lessard said, "Mimi had a great night and swam her heart out for the team."

Freshman Colleen Roberts continues to look impressive on the year winning the breast and the IM events. She then joined Jen Green, Amy Draper and Jen Dow to win the 200 medley relay. Senior Nancy Whiteman scored important points for the aqua women with two third place finishes in the 400 and 800 freestroke. Nancy then joined Jen Green, Dow and Denise Hakanson for a first place finish in the 200 freestroke medley. Amy Draper turned in the second fastest time of the night taking first place in the 50 freestroke and then taking second in the 50 freestroke behind Draper. Jen Dow helped with an important first place finish in the 100 fly. Jen Green was touched out in the 100 backstroke, but broke her school record for the third week in a row.



Coach Lessard's thoughts about the meet, "I was very proud of the women. They really had to pull together as a team to win. Everyone had to swim well and they did just that."

Earlier in the week the WC Aqua Women lost to Ursinus who finished second in the conference in 1992. Colleen Roberts swam a personal best time to take first place in the 200 IM. Mimi Devlin also swam a personal best in the 200 freestroke to take second place. Also, swimming very well was Jen Green, Denise Hakanson, Jen Dow, and Robin Woollens.

The Aqua Men followed in the women's footsteps and were also successful versus Salisbury. Leading the Aqua-Men to victory was Captain Chris Freisheim who won both the 200 IM and the 400 freestroke. He later joined Peter Ward, Dave Cola, and Scott Steinmuller to win the 200 freestroke relay. Dave Cola continued to dominate in the freestroke events winning both the 800 freestroke and the 100 freestroke. Fresh-aqua-man Scott Steinmuller added a first in the 100 butterfly and later joined Jason Campbell, Tim Whittier, and Tyler McCarthy to take first in the 200 medley relay. Other aqua-people having good days were Dave Czekaj, Julien Gaudion. Jason Campbell, and Tyler McCarthy.

Earlier in the week the men beat Ursinus 121-56. Leading them to victory were Dave Cola and Peter Ward combining for three first place finishes. Again Jason Campbell, Tyler McCarthy, Dave Kraft, Julien Gaudion, and Mike Frey swam quite well.

The Aquamen and Women hit the water again this Saturday away at the Dickinson Invitational. The Best of Luck!

Jon O'Conner pulls his way through the warm waters of the Casey Swim Center

Photos by Sarah Feyerherm

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

. . . and so, I must bid you adieu, adieu, adieu. That's right ladies and gents, the Vaughnster is stepping down after 15 years of working on race cars. I'd like to say thanks to Mr. Reardon and Linehan, my two co-editors over the years, for their time, effort, and assistance. It's been fun. You were the inspiration and fire behind the words sprawled on these pages. Not only did you give me hope but you gAVE ME YOUR LIFE . LIKE A BRIIIIDGE OVER TROU-A-BLED WATERS. . . . ooops, sorry. Saturday Night Live Flashback. It's time to pass the ingenuity and fun creativity you've come to expect from the sports section to someone who is younger, stronger, better, faster. We can rebuild him. . . . oh, sorry, a little Lee Majors tangent there. Applications are available for the position through myself (8896) or Tarin Towers (8585)

(P.S.- Hi Bucky, Hiiii!)

(P.S.S.-Berger, don't waste my time. You'll never get the job.)

(P.S.S.S.-What you say in the library.)

And for the POW of our choosing, that's right, you probably guessed it, Pete "Check out my lil' sis' cheerleading, it's a family effort" Basel. Mr. Basel has started off his final B-Ball season here at W.C. hotter than ever with a team leading19 points per game. He's not only hitting 54% from the field but he's hitting almost 60% from three point land. Defensively he's been just as strong, leading with 10 steals. Oh my! We're impressed. Nice job Basel!!

Pip's Discount Liquors
Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER – CHILLED WINES
QUANTITY DISCOUNTS BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES
TELEPHONE 778-6133
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA, CHESTERTOWN

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0888

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
236 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

B-Ball Hits .500 With Big Win Over St. Mary's

See Article, pg. 10

Rec B-Ball Playoffs Begin: Dream Team To Win It All!!

WC • ELM

Sports

Vaughn Retires: Sports-Editor Position Available! Call ext. 8896!

Swimming Trounces Salisbury State

See Article, pg. 1

Scores

Men's B-Ball

Washington	60
Albright	69
Washington	102
Drew	81
Washington	67
Frostburg	76
Washington	82
St. Mary's	59

Swimming

Men

Washington	121
Ursinus	56
Washington	131
Salisbury St.	72

Women

Washington	62
Ursinus	108
Washington	118
Salisbury St.	83

Ice Hockey

Washington	2
JHU	6

Tyler "Fish" McCarthy elegantly backstrokes his way to the wall. Mr. McCarthy stole the show a few times over the past couple of meets. Versus Salisbury State he helped place first in the 200 medley relay. He got two close second places finishes in the 100 back and 50 free. Against Ursinus he achieved another first place in the 100 free. Coach Kim Lessard is very excited with his performances thus far and looks for his times to continually decrease as the season moves on.

Pete Basel: NEWT's Player of the Week

Ice Hockey Boarded by Hopkins: Spirits Remain High Amon W.C. Player and Fans

See Article Pg. 1

Have a happy Whatever. Get lots and lots of sleep.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weather: SNOW Sometime SOON

Volume 63, Number Fourteen • December 11, 1992 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Faculty Debates Salad and Lacrosse Practice

Board of Visitors and Governors Passes Mission Statement

Torin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

The faculty met on Monday December 7 for the last time this semester. The Board of Visitors and Governors met the previous Friday, and Professor Nancy Tatum, the Faculty Representative to the Board, reported that the body had passed the two faculty resolutions proposed to them from earlier faculty meetings.

Board members passed both the new Mission Statement of the College and the policy on part-time faculty drafted by the Faculty Affairs Committee during the December 5 meeting.

President Charles H. Trout, in his remarks to the faculty earlier in the meeting, said that a representative from one of the national fraternities on campus had visited for a week. The man is a professional campus reviewer, and told President Trout that WC had more of a drinking problem than any other campus he had visited.

Trout said the college would be addressing this problem next semester, as well as the Affirmative Action Plan which the Faculty Affairs Committee is working on.

The Nominations Committee elected, after several runoff ballots were taken, five new faculty to sit on standing committees beginning Spring 1993. The new members are as follows: for the Review Board on Research and Human Subjects, Robert Fallaw; for the Nominations committee, Thomas Pabon; for the Social Sciences Division Representative to the Faculty Affairs Committee, Ruth Shoge; for the Untenured Representative to the Faculty Affairs Committee, Lida Baldwin; for the Social Sciences Division of the Academic Council, Carol Wilson.

Academic Council, headed by Dean Gene Wubbels, passed several course changes for two college departments. After about 45 minutes of debate, Chemistry 496 and 497 were added to the science curriculum. "Independent Research" will be a two-credit per semester course. Either semester can be taken for credit by any student; both semesters must be taken by Chemistry majors wishing to be accredited by the American Chemistry Association.

Faculty members were skeptical of the two-credit approach to this course; if the credits were to be rounded up to four, it could theoretically be completed before any credit will be given.

Professor Christine Pabon was alarmed at the possibility of a "salad approach" to the curriculum. She suggested that a single course credit (four credits) made up of half chemistry and half music was not a productive arrangement.

Currently, students would not have to supplement a two-credit course with anything; the graduation requirement is 128 credits, not necessarily made up of 32 4-credit courses. Students who do end up with 126 credits can appeal to graduate two credits short; this usually happens because of the transfer process from another school, not because of an odd course selection made at WC.

Dean Wubbels made the following statement: "I'd like to say this about salad. Salad is good for you. Salad is nutritious and delicious ... If this faculty deprives us of the possibility of trying some salad, they're depriving us of some nutrition, and we have to wonder what they're protecting."

The faculty also passed for supplemented by a two-credit music course. The Music Department is the only department which currently offers two-credit courses. The physical education department has a one-credit per half-semester arrangement in which four half-semester classes must be com-

See "Faculty," page 8

I'd like to say this about salad. Salad is good for you. Salad is nutritious and delicious ... If this faculty deprives us of the possibility of trying some salad, they're depriving us of some nutrition, and we have to wonder what they're protecting.

–Dean Gene Wubbels

Policy on Vacating Dormitories

Students Must Be Out By Saturday

The Student Affairs Office has issued the following guidelines for students who currently live on campus to use when leaving for the semester. Students are to vacate their residence hall within 24 hours of their last final examination.

All dormitories will be closed to any student use from Sunday, December 20 until Tuesday, January 19 (classes begin for the Spring semester on January 20). Locks on all buildings will be changed: your key will not open your dormitory during this time.

Those students whose final examinations do not end until Saturday afternoon, and, therefore, need to remain on campus until Sunday morning, must inform the Student Affairs Office in advance. A list of those students with permission to spend Saturday night (other than members of the varsity basketball team) in the residence halls will be given to Campus Security. All students must be off campus by noon on Sunday; therefore, plan in advance.

Students planning to vacate their room in the residence halls at the end of the fall semester must be checked out by the Director of Buildings and Grounds, Reid Raudenbush. Telephone his secretary at extension #7210. Any student failing to do so will be liable for a $25 charge. (See page 29, Student Handbook.) This applies to students who are leaving WC as well as to those moving off-campus.

Before departing campus, all residents should make certain that their rooms are in good condition. Any damage to the rooms, including writing on the surface of the door to the corridor, will cause the present occupant(s) to be assessed by the Maintenance Department.

It is strongly recommended that students not leave valuable possessions in the residence halls during the vacation. Take them home. The College will not be responsible for items left on campus. Make certain the window(s) and door lock. If they do not, inform your RA or the Maintenance Department (ext.#7210).

No room changes are to be made without the expressed permission of the Deans of Students. A key change slip must be signed by the Deans and presented to Campus Security before a new room key will be issued. Requests for changes may be made through your RA or directly with the Deans of Students. Be aware that the College must house

See "Dorms," page 8

Inside

Bye Bye Matsy Shields We'll Write You at 90210 3

Doug Rose '86 Increases AIDS Awareness at WC 5

Ann Veiga Sends Message from Thailand 7

Course Evaluation Forms Revamped 8

Last issue of the semester, see you in January

Potpourri

For the first time, I feel it's necessary to talk about the letters in this issue. I've managed to refrain before. I'll go in order of appearance. "Vanya's" letter is in reference, as I said briefly in a note, to a Quickmail message which "Gerard" sent over Publicad to each individual account. It was a message about Wednesday's blue-jeans event sponsored by GALA and the SGA. There were messages posted all over campus which read, "When you wear blue-jeans on Wednesday, December 9, you show your support for gay and lesbian rights." The message advised its readers not to wear blue jeans, to engage in heterosexual activity with people not wearing blue jeans, and to recognize those who did wear blue jeans as "homos" to be "bashed."

After roughly half an hour, Gerard realized the inflammatory wording of the message was inappropriate. He removed the message from Public, and tried to unsend it, but was unsuccessful. Later he was informed that due to this letter, he may be suspended. Authorities tell me that no official action has been taken, but that Gerard may have to appear before the All-Campus Judiciary.

Gerard issued an apology, a statement regarding possible suspension, and a clarification of the word "bash." He did not advocate violence in any form, Vanya, he meant "bash" in the sense of "male-bashing" or "Hillary-bashing."

Many students, both gay and straight, issued statements in defense not of what Gerard said, but of his right to say it. They are rallying to his defense to express any opinion he wishes. I agree.

In regard to John Bates' letter: Although I agree that Security could use some improvements, I disagree with some of the specific "improvements" advocated by Bates: basically, that they find something else to do besides their job: unregistered parties and ILLEGAL at WC, and it is Security's job to shut them down. What constitutes a party? Well, if there is not sufficient people-traffic or noise to attract the attention of Security officers, chances are, they won't shut it down. Instead of berating Security for going by the book, I suggest you (not just you, personally, John, I mean anyone who shares your views) keep the music down in the first place: they can't punish you if you don't get caught.

Also, I urge you never to drive drunk, whether you want to keep drinking or not. It's not worth the risk that you think will be big enough to get busted, try to register it, or hold it off-campus from the beginning and have everyone walk downtown. People do it every weekend — you can, too.

I certainly have gone to my share of "illegal" parties, and those that weren't loud, didn't get busted until around 2 a.m. or so. And I have also been to a lot of off-campus parties, and believe me, we all walked.

The other statement I object to was that of "What does everyone do on the weekends?" Obviously, if you're having a party with only 15-20 people, they all don't hang out with you. Most people on this campus, believe it or not, don't drink. Some people who normally party need to stay in to catch up on homework or sleep. And some others may be having their own "private" parties (with one host and one guest, if you know what I mean), and may not appreciate loud music drowning out their own.

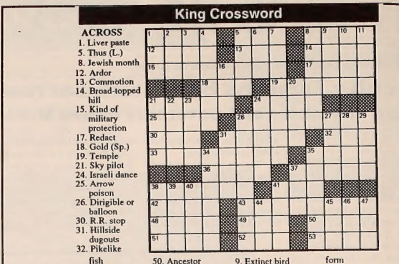
Or the people may be afraid to complain. If you actually want them to show up with Security in tow so you know who to harass later, you're nuts. They probably know that if you found out who was reporting you to Security, you'd never let them hear the end of it — literally — and they wouldn't complain next time.

Again, I am not in the least opposed to parties on or off campus. I'm just asking that you exercise common sense and common courtesy.

Finally, I will address Mr. Eichler: Gee whillikers, I'm sorry my dirty words offended you. I already washed out my hard drive with soap and water. Gosh, it stinks that you feel that way about cutting funding (especially since it's supplied by the students). I sure am glad that you and your pals don't have seats on the NEA (or the Supreme Court).

To you, Mr. Eichler, and to everyone who has written or thought of writing a letter in regard to Geoff Miller (this goes back to October 2, folks) — STOP IT. Please. I don't care if you want to insult him or defend him. Write each other. Don't write me, unless you aren't going to waste my space dishing dirt at each other.

LAST BUT NOT LEAST (I lied), a hearty farewell to my friend, classmate, barber and fellow writer Matthew B. "ElvisMatt" Shields. Matt leaves us this semester because he is done with classes. But here's a tip: look for his art show this spring. It's going to be hot.



The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

Photography Editor: Andrew Stone
News Editor: Amanda Burt
Arts & Entertainment Editor: Jason Truax
Sports Editor: Tim Reardon
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Eliis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8565.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

King Crossword

ACROSS
1. Liver paste
5. Thus (L.)
8. Jewish month
12. Ardor
13. Commotion
14. Broad-topped hill
15. Kind of military protection
17. Redact
18. Gold (Sp.)
19. Temple
21. Sky pilot
24. Israeli dance
25. Arrow poison
26. Dirigible or balloon
30. R.R. stop
31. Hillside dugouts
32. Pikelike fish
33. Military decoration
35. Indy 500
36. — and Thummim
37. Goddess of agriculture
38. Varnish ingredient
41. Go to — for
42. Border on
43. Kennedy and O'Hare
48. Nothing more than
49. — the mark
50. Ancestor
51. Winglike
52. Goal
53. "— Tim"

DOWN
1. Legume
2. Noted boxer
3. Sailor
4. Further performance
5. Pantomimist: Jimmy —
6. Fish
7. Next to a sergeant
8. Sour ale
9. Extinct bird
10. Surrounded by
11. New Zealand tree
16. Crude metal
20. Circle segments
21. Italian city
22. Against
23. Beloved
24. Man's name
26. Renounce
27. Culture medium
28. Countenance
29. Very (Fr.)
31. Air: comb. form
34. Grumble
35. Lab vessel
37. Surpass
38. Baby's word
39. Biblical brother
40. Chapter of the Koran
41. Engendered
44. Charged atom
45. King, in France
46. Weight
47. Filthy place

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

A Love Letter in Defense of Homophobia

Editor's Note: the following letter is a response to a Quickmail message sent over Public and to individual accounts, including "Vanya's" and The Elm's. The message advised everyone not to wear blue-jeans on Wednesday, December 9 in support of gay and lesbian rights. I have chosen to protect the privacy of both parties so that they are not subject to undue harrassment.

Dearest Gerard:

Indeed, it is plausible that you are right and I am wrong. And, I do not mean to come off as Neo-Socratic by stating that. What you have communicated through your messages to me is that fags are to be feared. Rightly so.

My experience with faggots, at least the ones that I have had intimate relationships with, is that they are essentially rapists. Not being of the feminine gender, I could not write an intelligible statement regarding dykes. Male breeders, as they vastly outnumber their lesbian counterparts, are clearly superior.

In this day and age with the political rights of minorities being carried to absurd extremes for the purposes of plurality the majority must rise up in arms against their potential oppressors and be victorious once again. In your words: " Kill all fags!!!!" Faggots, it is true, may one day discover a method by which to eliminate the breeding community so as to cease their good behavior. Lest evil reign over this planet, at least ten percent of the male population must be exterminated. To be on the safe side, we must be prepared to eliminate a solid ninety percent of all males to account for the "breeders" who have allowed their minds to be infected with the thoughts of the mutant race.

I have begun work on a machine that reads thoughts so that one may delineate breeders from others, it should be ready by Christmas: as I am sure you are not Jewish, either. I have already convinced the faggots whose existence I am aware of that they, along with myself, must run, without resistance, to your clean-up operation — they are all as enthusiastic as myself to rid this world of those who are diseased. Might I counsel you to eliminate the rest of the mentally ill population after my execution too?

Do not assume for a moment that I am attempting sarcasm or irony in this letter as it would not deceive you, knowingly. I do wish to thank you for showing me the error of my ways, unfortunately the revolution has come too late for my prodigal self.

Love and kisses,
Vanya

Better Late Than Never

To the Editor:

Today we received a carton of art and poetry books "borrowed" illegally from the library some years ago.

To the student who convinced the alumnus to return them, and to the other student(s) who conspired to deliver them to the library anonymously, thank you from the staff of Miller Library and from your present and future fellow students.

William J. Tubbs
Librarian

Letters Policy: Letters to the Editor do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM Editorial Staff. No unsigned letters are accepted, except in cases where identity needs to be protected for reasons of personal safety. Letters may be sent to the ELM via campus mail, Quickmail, or they can be dropped off at the ELM Office in the basement of Reid Hall. No letters received after 6 p.m. Wednesday will be printed in that Friday's issue.

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

As of this writing, the tragedy of the eight coal miners trapped in a Virginia coal mine is unresolved. In America, when a little girl falls down a well and is rescued, it merits national attention. But every year over ten thousand people die on the job, and nearly two million more are severely disabled, yet most of us greet this with acceptance.

Occupational hazards are part of the social cost of production. Occupational hazards strike when we least expect them, in unexpected ways. When we think of occupational hazards, we tend to think of getting your brain smashed in by a socket wrench dropped from a height of a hundred feet, or getting your leg amputated by an automated baling machine, or getting your skull caught in a garbage compacting truck when you're trying to clean it out.

Actually, most work related injuries are far less dramatic. In 1982, amputations were experienced in the workplace by 21,000 people, which represents less than one percent of all injuries that year. And 93 percent of these amputations were of fingers, and 4 percent were of hands or toes. Statistics from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) show that 13 percent of these fingers were lost by being crunched by hand tools or caught in machines, 10 percent were lopped off by saws and slicers, 6 percent were bludgeoned off by presses, 5 percent were ripped off by moving belts and 2 percent were lost to doors and gates.

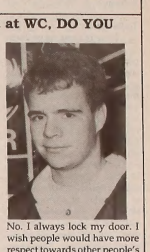
Many work-related diseases are far more difficult to detect than something obvious like amputation. They are also occupation-specific: radiologists get acute lymphoid or myeloid leukemia, shoemakers get malignant neoplasm of the nasal cavities, machinists get malignant neoplasm of the scrotum, coke oven workers also get malignant neoplasm of the scrotum and malignant neoplasm of the kidneys. It is sometimes difficult to tell if these diseases are caused by the agents the workers are working with or by other behaviors.

Sometimes, it is easy to see where the responsibility for death or injury lies. By far the most dramatic of work-related fatalities are those which involve explosions, falls from great heights, asphyxiation, etc. In an OSHA study of occupational fatalities in the shipbuilding industry, 101 out of 151 cases involved citations against the employers, which indicates that they were partly responsible for the deaths of these workers. 26 percent of these cases were directly caused by defective, worn-out equipment. In a similar study done of 217 incidents involving fatalities involving welding only 48 cases resulted in no citations. In a study done of logging fatalities, 100 out of 140 cases in-

See "Koon," page 8

CAMPUS VOICES

By Dude



In light of recent vandalism and theft at WC, DO YOU FEEL SECURE?

I don't fear for my personal safety. However, I don't feel secure about my personal things.
Michael Mucha
Junior
Somewhere in Talbot House

We haven't had any problems with things getting stolen.
Will Hobbs
Freshman
Kent 1NLG

No. I always lock my door. I wish people would have more respect towards other people's property.
Philip McQuade
Freshman
Kent 1NLG

No. I think there needs to be a revamping of the Security system on this campus. A few examples: more Security people, easier access to them and better "locking devices."
Tanya Cunic
Senior
Kent 101

Personally I don't feel threatened. I don't have many things people could take, but I feel sorry for people who do. That's good enough.
Jean Doughty
Freshman
Kent 100

Despite the fact I don't even live on campus, I spend quite alot of time there, and I don't feel secure only because I feel Security spends far too much time giving parking tickets instead of patrolling the grounds.
Roxanne Seubert
Senior
Downtown

Open Forum: So Long to WC From a Really Sensitive Guy

ElvisMatt Shields

In this year's first issue of the Elm I wrote a rather facetious article welcoming in the new freshman class. I probably came across as a whiny conservative brat, and if you've read anything else I've written in the Elm since you might also get that same impression. The time has come for me to apologize for sounding that way. I was but an undergraduate and immature. I have said some nasty things that I probably shouldn't have said in the past. I've been a bad boy and probably deserve a serious spanking (Call the Elm office for more info — clean, discreet, serious inquiries only. No wimps!).

The reason for this sudden change of heart is as follows: This is my last opportunity to apologize; next week I'm graduating. Yes, I'm one of those students that is a semester off, but that is unimportant. What is important is that in the face of the brutal realities of the real world, I've becoming more in tune to my more sensitive side. Call it Post Graduation Stress Disorder.

Don't get me wrong here, "Disorder" doesn't mean it's bad. On the contrary, I'm fully aware of my situation and very glad to be suddenly sensitive. Why, just the other day I was walking through the CAC when I spied sections of the AIDS Quilt scattered about the atrium. Moved, I was. Touched, even. I became so choked up that when I turned to ask the time from a passerby my voice was but a soft, high-pitched, crackle. One might have noticed a fresh tender teardrop spring from the corner of my watery eyes as I stood studying each caring stitch that went into that quilt. I thought maybe I too could frequent dozens of bath houses, have unprotected sex with countless partners and maybe I could have my own place in that quilt someday.

You obviously see that I have changed my way of thinking, but it doesn't end there. The following example should show you exactly how politically correct I have truly become: Just after seeing that AIDS Quilt a 'friend' of mine told me he was on his way to visit the Vietnam War Memorial. And do you know what I told him? I called him a warmonger, then I spat on him. I can't imagine anyone paying tribute to those that died trying to kill innocent people. And anyway, that feeling sorry for fallen heroes bullshit is just a bunch of melodramatic hoopla. Imagine, feeling sorry for someone you never even met — pretty stupid if you ask me. I'm ashamed to have ever called that poor lost soul a friend.

I've run into some problems though. You see, I'm white, I have a penis, I have certain lustings towards members of the opposite sex, I'm not religious, and I like to hunt, kill and eat animals. Therefore, the black cause doesn't want me; the feminists will have nothing to do with me; the gay and lesbian cause shuns me; I'm not sure if all those religious groups want me or my money; and the animal rights groups want to kill me (Interesting fact: Hitler was a vegetarian ... on principle.). Sure, I can be sympathetic to all these causes, but I can't empathize. I have all this guilt to carry around with me too. I mean, soon after I was born people started telling me that people just like myself are responsible for all that is wrong in the world, and everything

See "Shields," page 9

Stop Busting Parties - Start Busting Thieves

Security?

To the Editor:

There is a serious problem on this campus which completely detriments the whole aspect of life on campus. That problem is security, or lack thereof. Washington College is a small, private liberal arts college. It is located in the center of lovely, historic Chestertown. Most of us came here in the because of the size. It is close and intimate. One would tend to agree with the level of security one finds here at this school, or any other of a comparable size. Being able to walk from Cardinal to Dunning in a little over three minutes. Seeing everyone every day. Whenever any of my friends asks about WC, what I stress is that everybody parties together. To be able to say "hi" to just about everyone you pass is great. That is what I refer to as (one definition of) intimacy.

Chestertown has six police officers (not including staties) and three police cruisers (not including the new Caprice — ugly, isn't it?). Like the town, Washington College employs six security guards but has only one vehicle. At any given time, there are only two on patrol. I have seen girls banging on the door of the security building late at night, but in vain. What do you suppose they needed? Assistance? Help? Aid? Too bad they didn't have a phone.

Granted, the campus is small, at least small enough to be patrolled by a few good men. Men that make us feel secure in the "homes" we're living in now. Men that deserve the title of Security (That title does imply a certain feeling, doesn't it?) Unfortunately, they don't do that. A better name for them would be Campus Police. Then again, they don't really police either, they just call the police a lot.

I'm not implying that the job is an easy one. Telling idiotic drunks to turn down the music is definitely a task. And that's even if it REALLY is necessary. Too many nights, security has knocked on the door around midnight and requested the breakup of a party of about 15-20 people under the guise of a noise complaint, threatening police action. On two occasions I have actually had fellow students with the balls to come down and ask us to turn it down. Besides those times, I've never actually heard any complaints. I don't believe that anyone was complaining, at least there wasn't any proof as to that fact. What does everyone do on the weekends anyway? Might I suggest the complainer be required to accompany the security guard to the site of carnage and face the perpetrators.

Of course, everyone leaves the site, gets into their cars, and drives downtown, where security has no jurisdiction. Good thing there are no extradition laws. Safety first, that's security's motto. I always say, "If you can't drink, then drive!" It seems that security becomes more of an instigator of problems. They aren't there to monitor parties, they're there to stop them, which fuels the campus-wide flames of disdain for them.

This brings me back to my initial point. Security is meant to keep the campus secure. That implies both when we're here and when we're not. Over Thanksgiving break, my friends in Talbot were robbed of over $2,000 worth of stereo equipment and CDs. The odd thing is, their suite was broken into from the inside common room of the dorm. Some person(s) took a large plank of wood and smashed it through the plexiglas window of the front door, and those windows are meant to withstand beatings by empty kegs. I bet that was noisy. They took what they wanted, or what they could carry. Over break, the campus was closed, right? The dorms are supposed to be secured (meaning locked). For some reason though, someone was able to get access into the dorm, and from there, they picked the right door. Did they have a key? That would narrow the suspects in the ongoing investigation.

The occupants discussed what had happened with the proper authorities, both on and off campus. They discussed it with the proper authority in student affairs. They were told by that authority that they were very sorry, and subsequently pointed out in the Student Handbook that the school is not liable for stolen property. I contend that they are. They are responsible for securing the campus when it is closed, and apparently is wasn't secure.

I'm pushing for them to get a close lawyer friend and sue the school for the items lost. The administration can hide behind its regulations and security can cry about being undermanned, but it might take a lawsuit to get something done. Maybe it would hire a few more security guards, ones who remember their college days. Maybe the security office could be manned 24 hours a day, so that if someone is being attacked or even followed, they could run into the office and find help. I myself have woken Spike up. Isn't there something wrong with this? Is there no pension plan for these people?

One can only guess as to what will happen. Maybe my friends will get their things back. Maybe not. It just seems as though drastic actions must occur in order for that to happen. I hope the administration will open its eyes to the problem we have on campus. A court decision would.

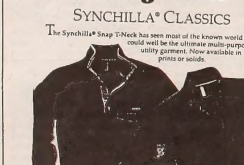
John W. Bates
Senior

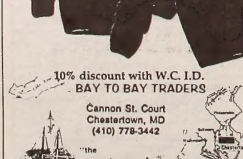
P.S. This letter does not pertain to every member of the WC Security team. Some members are very respected on campus. Some come and ask us to turn it down. Others tell us to. They already have 9 and 1 punched into their telephones, when they knock, and their finger is on the 1. As a police officer said last weekend, "What are we doing here?"

The Horse Isn't QUITE Dead Yet...

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my disappointment and disgust with two opinions published in the November 13,1992 ELM.





First, your editorial reflects very poorly on Washington College with your use of profanity to express concerns about campus politics. I know that Washington College has a progressive writing program that you must not be able to take advantage of. Otherwise, you would not have to resort to the use of profanity in your column. Though profanity is used in everyday conversation, there is no excuse for using it in a written, supposedly "professional," column. Does your office not have a thesaurus? It is very hard to believe that your publication is any way related to the ELM that I enjoyed during my WC career. My hope is that if you cannot clean up your editorial column, the College will see fit to withhold any financial support or office space it may provide to the ELM.

Second, Scott Read's comments about Geoff Miller's tenure Athletic Director show how short-sighted Mr. Read is with respect to running a College department. I had absolutely nothing to do with Mr. Miller's selection as Athletic Director, but I can not imagine someone better suited for the job. Mr. Miller has worked for the benefit of the College and student athletes first and foremost. His efforts to provide athletic opportunities, either on the intercollegiate or intramural levels, are beyond any programs seen in recent years. [...]When Mr. Miller can recruit and place a coach who has national recognition for his sport, and expand that coach's responsibilities to work with the community in a successful manner, it would seem that he has both the College's and community's best interest at heart.

In working with Mr. Miller on Sho'men Club matters, his professionalism and interest representing the College leave me with absolutely no concerns about how he runs the Athletic Department. Maybe those few who do not understand how important athletics are in an academic setting should volunteer some of their time in the Athletic Department to realize the opportunities and advantages that Mr. Miller and his staff offer to Washington College and Chestertown.

Thank you for continuing to provide this forum for contrary opinions.

Paul W. Eichler '86

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap T-Neck has seen most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.

10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442

We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At Approx. 9pm
FRI 11 JIMMY LANDRY Accompanied by a Former Weasel!!
SAT 12 GLEN GOROT and TRAVIS Great Duo from Wilmington!!

Alumnus Visits Campus for AIDS Awareness Week

Caption: From left to right: Gehrett Ellis '93, Doug Rose '86, and Amy Caddle '94. Caddle and Ellis founded the Gay and Lesbian Alliance at WC. Rose visited WC Tuesday to talk about AIDS to the WC community.

Doug Rose came to WC in 1981. During his years here he was a French and Drama major. He spent his junior year abroad in Belgium, and was active in the Writers' Union. He graduated in 1986 and won the Sophie Kerr Prize for his portfolio of essays, reviews, translations, poetry and prose. That same year, Rose was awarded a Fulbright for study in Belgium.

He took his MFA from the University of Massachusetts, and worked at an internship at the National University of Great Britain. Rose moved to New York City and began doing publishing work at the Council for the Arts. He currently works there as Director of Marketing and Communications for the Council.

Rose came back to WC this year to talk about a subject that many Americans would rather ignore: AIDS. Rose is HIV-positive and has been taking AZT for a year. Tuesday night he talked about "HIV and Me" because he can't ignore the AIDS epidemic, and because it's important that today, when the virus is no longer relegated to a few small high-risk groups, that no one else ignore it either. The fastest-growing group of HIV-positive persons is heterosexuals.

Congratulations to the new members of the Spring 1993 ELM Staff: Justin Cann, Features Editor • Doug Hoffberger, Co-Sports Editor • Charlie Linehan, Co-News Editor

This Week With Greeks

Zeta Tau Alpha has been getting into the spirit of the holidays. Last weekend ZTA hosted a Christmas party with Kappa Alpha Order for underprivileged children of the Chestertown community. Santa made a surprise visit and all the children went home with new toys.

Thursday the seniors cooked a special farewell dinner for graduating senior Franci Green. Congratulations to the ZTA new initiates: Lainie Goldsmith, Susan Huntley, Meredith McPherson, and Krissy Rindfuss.

Have a Safe and Happy Holiday

from

Brambles

Downtown Chestertown

HIV Testing in Kent County

Elisa Hale
Staff Writer

Maryadda Moore, the communicable disease director of Kent County, shared her concern with the ELM about the misconceptions of the college community on the subject of confidential HIV testing. The Kent County Health Department on Lynchburg Street in Chestertown offers free, confidential HIV testing by appointment or walk-in on Monday thru Friday from 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. They practice confidential testing instead of anonymous simply because many of their employees are natives of the area and will know many local residents who come in for testing and services.

The testing process is quite simple. When one goes to the Health Department, they are first counseled about HIV, risky behaviors, and the test itself. This is a time to ask any questions one may have. There is a consent form with the number issued to this person, and on this is the number that goes on the sample of blood drawn, then sent out to be tested. The form gives them permission to test the blood for the HIV antibodies. This form needs to be signed, which is what makes this process confidential instead of anonymous.

It is very important to note that anyone who wishes to remain anonymous may use initials or a false name such as Mickey Mouse. The results of the test, HIV positive, is currently unreportable in Maryland, and the only copy of these results are locked in a log book in Moore's office.

The county also offers services for those who are HIV positive or have developed AIDS, such as counseling, wellness assessment, doctor referrals, financial services and social security disability claims.

For more information, call the Kent County Health Department (778-1350) or Moore's

Drop-Off Laundry

We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service

Laundromat Dry Cleaning

Kent Laundry

607 High Street
778-3551

Emily's

HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686

FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting

Also

Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed

"New Services"

Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist
Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow

Permanent Hair Removal
Electrologist –
Louise Leaverton, L.E.

Week at a Glance

December 11 - 25

Students return January 19.
Classes begin January 20.

Senior Comprehensives Last day of classes WC Chorus Christmas Concert, Norman James Theater 8:00 p.m., soloist Dean Gene Wubbles AXO Formal, CAC Foyer	11 Friday
Senior Comprehensives Reading Day 1782 Society Christmas Party	12 Saturday
Reading Day	13 Sunday
Final Examinations	14-17 Monday – Thursday
Faculty-Staff Christmas Reception, Hynson Lounge 3:30 p.m.	18 Friday
Hanukkah begins	19 Saturday
Administrative Offices closed through January 3	23 Wednesday
Christmas	25 Friday

Good Luck on Finals & Happy Holidays

A&E

Student Profile: Andrea Nola

Dedicated is the word to describe Andrea Nolan. A sophomore English major from Columbia, Maryland, Andrea discovered W.C. by accident. In the midst of neverending college mail, she received an odd looking recruiting brochure with an unreadable title. The indecipherable title was the signature of George Washington. This prompted Andrea to actually read the brochure instead of tossing it with the remainder of unwanted college material into a box she never plowed through.

Andrea is definitely people oriented. Always quick to volunteer, her freshman year she was campus coordinator of Sane/Freeze, treasurer of Terra Firma, and secretary of Amnesty International. Andrea's devotion to humanity has carried over into her sophomore year. She is now president of Terra Firma, junta member of the Writer's Union, and member in memory of Amnesty.

Despite her heavy academic schedule, she works as a desk assistance in the library and finds time on the weekends to volunteer at Infinity Recycling. An avid softball player, Andrea was an injured reserve pitcher last year and hopes to be back on the field in the spring semester. Even though her life seems to revolve around campus involvement, Andrea is a Dean's List student with a cumulative G.P.A. of 3.5.

Andrea describes herself as a one who "Should have been born in the 60's generation, but [she] should showed up late." An avid classic and modern rock fan, her hobbies include hiking, camping, and anything which involves enjoying the great outdoors. In fact, she is planning on participating in the National Outdoor Leadership School (NOLS). Occasionally, she reads for pleasure and not dissection. Last year, she took part in the Literary House book binding workshop.

Even though her interests hint that she should have a constructed career plan, Andrea's goal is to have no career plans. She admits to seeing herself working for the environmental movement, perhaps Greenpeace. Andrea is definitely the type of individual to throw all of her belongings into knapsack and head out across country on foot.

Sawasdee, From Thailand with Love

Ann Veiga
Foreign Exchange Student

I realize it has been a while since you have heard from this lonely body half-way around the world, but for a while I had lost the enthusiasm to write. I suppose I should explain, if you will bear with me.

Today was the kind of morning that you decide just to lie in bed and drift in and out of sleep. When you finally get up and walk out onto the balcony, you find that it is a beautiful spring-like morning, complete with an occasional breeze brushing past your face. Surprisingly, it is November.

My first thoughts were of a child I met in Chiang Mai. While foreigners, including myself, were busily cashing in on everything from wooden elephants to oriental fans to hand-made silver, a boy not more than six years old was sitting cross-legged in the middle of all the consumer commotion, holding out a plastic green cup for that one baht if you could spare it, holding the cup out with the hand of his one only arm.

It was this little boy that I sat next to for only a moment. I asked him his name, but he spoke so softly I could not catch it. I gave him the change I had, and remembered I had some candy in my bookbag. When I offered it to him, he gave me a beautiful "wi," his head bent deep, the tips of his fingers touching his forehead, the base of his palms touching his heart. I was embarrassed and squeaked out that it wasn't necessary. I wanted to stay with him, to buy him food, to take him home with me. Instead, I joined the sea of tourists and looked for my friends who had walked on.

I felt confused, frustrated, angry. Not even to mention stupid. Why did the boy "wi"? I did not deserve such a beautiful "wi." All I did was give him a packet of candy. I did not give him anything to nourish him, to keep him warm in the chilly Chiang Mai nights and the cold Chiang Mai mornings.

Why could not he be like the children we met at the temple ruins of Wat Saragamphaegyai? Like those children looking curiously at us "farang" through ruined brick doorways and windows? Like the child who introduced a soccer ball? And there we were, surrounded by what seemed like a hundred village children of different shapes and sizes, trying to steal the ball, flip-flops flying off feet as they get that one big kick ... Children joking with us, playing with our cameras, pretending to smoke, being cool, sitting on

See "Veiga," page 9

X-mas Chorus Concert

Jennifer Waldych
Staff Writer

Tonight at 8 p.m. in Tawes Theatre, the Washington College Music Department presents The College-Community Chorus Christmas Concert. The concert will feature music by Monteverdi and Bach, as well as a number of folk songs and carols from France, Spain, and Poland.

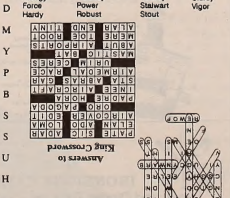
The chorus came together in 1982 when the college was celebrating its 200th year. Its members include faculty, staff, students, and community. Since its first performance, the chorus has done two Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, the Three-Penny Opera (a collaboration with the drama department and Actors' Community Theatre), and in the spring the College-Community Chorus performs in Tawes Theatre and opens the lobby an hour prior to the show as a café.

Professor Mills of the Music Department says that the Christmas Concert has pretty much become tradition. This year's theme is peace and the music has been selected to reflect the idea. This year's special extra will be our own Dean Gene Wubbles as soloist. Mills promises us a good voice.

Other soloists will include Diane Landskroener, Vickie Kaylor, Richard Eberts, Ward Tatnall and John Farr. Instrumentalists include Professors Al Briggs, Garry Clarke and Amzie Parcell; students John Harris, Melissa Sirick and Mikki Senn; and Tom Anthony and Jo Johns.

WC Annual Pool Tournament Winners

Pool tournament winners: First place, John Shannahan; Second place, Christopher Eaton; and Third place, Ciaran O'Keeffe.



The Student Activities 8-Ball Tournament was held on Wednesday, December 2 at Louie's Sidepocket. It started at 4:30 but ran over-time, so, it was continued on Saturday at 1:30. It was a double elimination tournament that started with 11 students. Prizes were awarded to 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners and included free admission to the Region 4 Inter-collegiate Tournament in February for 1st place, and gift certificates to local businesses and restaurants for 1st, 2nd, and 3rd places. The winners were: First place, John Shannahan; Second place, Christopher Eaton; and Third place, Ciaran O'Keeffe.

STRONG

G Y V P S Q N S K H E B Y W T
R O (R O B U S T) T L J G E H B
Y W D T U R P U R N K I G T D
B Z X E V S O R Q A Y O Y G M
K I G N G T O D E C W A D N Y
W U S C S G H Y Q E E L R E P
N L J Y I H U G C Y N W A R B
F E C V A Y X R I V I U H T S
Q P N M K J O E H M S F E S S
C B Z Y X F A N I M A T S V U
T R Q P O M R E W O P L K I H

Find the listed words in the diagram. They run in all directions-forward, backward, up, down and diagonally.

Brawny Might Rugged Strength
Energy Potency Sinewy Sturdy Force Power Stalwart Vigor
Hardy Robust Stout

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
DR. GIGGLES
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown
gallery 5y
Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483
Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists Materials
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
103 Box 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Evaluation Form Compromise

Dina Sansing & Tarin Towers

In late October, members of the SGA Senate became concerned with the student course evaluations that are filled out at the end of each semester. The form, revised as of last year, asks students to describe strengths and weaknesses of the course and its professor, first in two short answer questions and then in a series of questions which ask the student to rate the professor on a scale from one to five.

When the forms were revised last year, another section was added which asked for the student's year, estimated grade in the course, and reason for taking the course. Additionally, it was announced that the forms would no longer be typed because of budgetary/staff power constraints.

What the SGA was concerned with was the question of the students' anonymity. Particularly in small classes, a student's handwriting, combined with the potentially identifying information, could reveal his or her identity. If the student were to evaluate the professor unfavorably, it could hurt the professor's opinion of him in future classes.

In addition, if a student were afraid of the consequences of his potential answer, he or she would not answer the questions fully, which would not be helpful to the professor or the college.

The SGA filed a formal complaint with the Committee on Appointments and Tenure asking that the form be examined by the Review Board on Human Subjects.

The Committee brought up the issue at the November faculty meeting, stating that they were not certain of what the Board's jurisdiction was and whether such matters fell in the scope of their mission.

Professor J. David Newell, as Chair of the Review Board on Human Subjects and of the committee on Appointments and Tenure, proposed in that meeting to form an ad-hoc committee to define more clearly what the mission of the Review Board was. Newell is also the advisor of the SGA.

To resolve the issue still at hand, that is, how to factor the students' concerns into the evaluation form, a compromise was worked out which includes the following:

- All parts of the evaluation form are optional; this will be printed on the form itself so that students know they can skip the self-identifying (or any) questions for any reason.
- For classes with enrollment of under 20 students, the forms will be typed by the staff of the Dean's Office.

The final revisions to the course evaluation form appear on the forms filled out by students this past week for their current classes.

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

"Faculty," from page 1

the chemistry department CHE 301-302, Analytical Chemistry I, Spectroscopy; and Analytical Chemistry II, Electrochemistry and Separation Science.

For the psychology department, the faculty passed the following changes to the curriculum:

- PSY 402 will now be PSY 305.
- PSY 405, Psychopharmacology; and PSY 490, Neuroscience Research Methods, were added to the course list.
- PSY 317-318, Sensation and Perception, are now one course, PSY 317; and PSY 302-303, Developmental Psych, are now one course, PSY 302, "Life-Span Developmental Psychology."

Wubbels announced that the Academic Council would be examining the following items during the spring term: the practice of numbering courses, AP-credit coursed taken in high school, and low-enrollment courses.

The Student Affairs Committee introduced a resolution, which passed, to urge the administration to match the SGA grant of $2,000 to the AIDS Peer Education Program and to continue to support the program through funds distributed to Health Services. The president's office has already matched the funds.

Professor Nate Smith suggested the college examine the possibilities of the college's liability for such a program, particularly if it expands.

Certain problems were addressed to the Athletic Committee by faculty members; Professor J. Wright said that some of his advisees were told by their coaches, in lacrosse and possibly in other sports, not to take courses that fell after 2 p.m., because they would interfere with practice times. Other faculty said they had heard the same thing from their ad'sees.

Professor Steven Cades said that students had told him that while the coaches certainly recommended that students attend classes which conflict with practice, if they miss a practice the night before a game there chances of starting in that game would dramatically decrease.

Athletic Director Geoff Miller found these reports "tremendously upsetting" and will look into them immediately.

In other business, Ad-Hoc Committee on Academic Honesty Chair Kevin Brien announced that next semester, a full report will be delivered to the faculty along with a "comprehensive plan," which will include a draft of a new honor code and plans for a monitored file in the library which would demonstrate good paper-writing and documentation skills.

The possibility of extending the honor code to cover social conduct was suggested by Trout.

"Koon," from page 3

volved citations. In a study of 161 incidents resulting in fatalities 84 cases resulted in citations.

In this sample of four different industries, nearly half of the cases involving fatalities were cases where OSHA standards were violated. And since a good number of the incidences of fatalities involve multiple fatalities, it would be fair to say that half of the deaths occuring on the job are preventable by the employer, and half by the employees.

The problem with our industrial hygiene program is that it is essentially optional. Companies can opt to run a very clean, safe enterprise where safety first is the order of the day, or they can operate in a slipshod manner and take special precautions to make it appear that their shop is safe on the day that they suspect the inspector is coming.

Under our current system, both techniques have their advantages. The safe business spends far more money insuring that safety standards are met, especially when this involves replacing old, dangerous equipment with newer equipment. The safe businessperson hopes that he or she will recoup these costs by lower health care costs for his or her employees and by not having to pay fines for safety violations.

The unsafe businessperson knows that it is very expensive to spend all that money on modern equipment. He or she also knows that it is far cheaper to pay the fines than it is to run a safe shop. As for health care costs, it is probable that he or she does not have to worry about that, either because employee turnover is so high that few employees qualify for insurance, or because only limited medical benefits are provided.

Often in this type of economy, workers are reluctant to report environmental or industrial hygiene violations. And many businesses do take advantage of this fact, yet there is hope. Since 1960, occupational related fatalities have declined in real terms and have declined even more dramatically in relative terms. But much remains to be done in this arena, and it remains to be seen if Mr. Clinton will place a higher value on the lives of American workers than his predecessor. This nation is facing the historic opportunity to lower its occupational fatality and injury rates

Pip's Discount Liquors
Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER — CHILLED WINES
QUANTITY DISCOUNTS BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES
TELEPHONE 778-6128
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA, CHESTERTOWN
IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-6188

"Dorms," from page 1

new and re-admitted students for the semester beginning in January. (If you are an underclassman with a single, there is a possibility a roommate will be assigned to live with you over the semester break).

Juniors or Seniors considering living off campus second semestermust contact the Student Affairs Office before the beginning of the new semester. Students who move off campus without permission of the Deans of Students may expect no room refund.

"Shields," from page 3

hat has been unjust in the world's entire history is somehow my fault. This archetypal guilt, coupled with my profound ultra-sensitivity, can be a problem. I need a release.

I just figured out what I'm gonna do. I'll start the men's movement. It's not some kooky guy thing. No, it's more like an alter-ego to the women's movement (Eve White/Adam Black).

I can see our organizational meetings now: A bunch of us in Jay-Z-Boys sitting around in a circle drinking beer and passing gas discussing how badly the world has treated us. I'll turn to one of my blue-eyed buddies and say, "Hey, Lou. You ever get really drunk and the next day you wake up next to some medusa you met the night before, but, the night before, you remember her looking more like Elle MacPherson." Lou belches and nods. "Doncha think we should be able to report it as rape? I mean, she tricked you, plain and simple, into sleeping with her." Lou agrees. "I mean, if it was the other way around, like, if she was really drunk and woke up next to a slob like you, whaddaya think would happen?"

Yes, this is sounding like a better and better cause the more I think about it. This is as politically correct as a group could be. Finally an equal rights policy that is truly equal!

Oh! I just thought of a wonderful solution to a huge problem. You know how for generations in this country men have gone to work and made their underprivileged wives sit home all day. Well, seeing how the women's movement has propelled more women into the work-force and made them self sufficient it is time to punish the men. I say let the women go to work and let us men stay home all day and see how we like it.

Of course, this doesn't solve any of the problems of the past it is merely a conciliatory reparation for the evils of the past. It's time to turn the tables, folks. We men have been naughty, naughty boys, and it is time to give us just what is coming to us (Slim, Lincolnesque build, 90210 style, alluring, vivacious, and honest, with a new-found sincerity. I enjoy great conversation and lots and lots of "safe" sex. Non-smoker preferred.). Men are no longer to be considered chauvinist pigs, with the rise of the men's movement we have been liberated as dysfunctional products of a Euro-centric society. Men, like myself, are now to be called "Sensitivity Impaired."

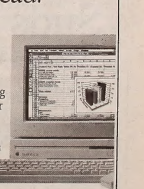
It is truly a new era. I now look upon graduation with restored hope. I have scrapped my plans of running off into the mountains, with a stockpile of automatic weapons and dried foods, to wait for society to crumble. It is time to devote my efforts to the cause of the white, straight, meat-eating, agnostic male. Yes, I will miss the comfortable womb of Chestertown that I have known for the past three years, but my message must be heard by the masses. Guilt ridden men everywhere need comforting, compassion, and guidance into this new age of understanding.

Boy, I sure will miss each and every one of you from my times here at ol' WC. My sensitive side has been buried for so many years now I feel I'm about to burst. So if you don't mind, I'm going to cut this article short and go listen to my inner-child scream and cry about the over-bearing male figures that warped and misdirected my upbringing. Then I'm going to call my mom long distance on the phone and cry. I've been so bad (Call 778-8585. It's free and fun.). It feels so good to get all this off my breastless chest and into the open. My only hope is that it is not too late for all of you to accept me as a caring and sensitive individual. Farewell to all. I love you people.

"Veiga," from page 7

the ruin's stairs and ledges, smiling and laughing, clutching their sides when the ball flew out from nowhere, grazing the top of my head and knocking my hat into the air, sailing it across the wat courtyard.

I want to go back to Chiang Mai, to search for the little boy sitting among strangers — bustling by him, not seeing him, walking past him in his country. I want to take him up, take him and hold him and tell him everything will be okay. Feed him, clothe him and teach him to kick that soccer ball high, grazing the sky. Tell him he could be a goalie, even with only one arm. Yes, the homeless have left me feeling helpless before; they scatter the streets from Washington, D.C. to L.A. But this little boy, I cannot forget the face of this little boy.



So this morning I stood on the balcony, unable to control the welling up of tears in my eyes. But perhaps if more people cried, miracles would happen. Maybe like the cold, rainy days of April in Chestertown that bring forth the promising flowers and excitement of Spring.

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller:
The holiday gift you can really use.

Tell your folks a new Macintosh will help you succeed today as well as tomorrow. It shows you're thinking ahead.

An Apple® Macintosh® computer is the one holiday gift that will help you work better and faster from one new year to the next. Because Macintosh is so easy to use. And thousands of software applications are available to help you with any course you'll ever take. There's even software that allows you to exchange information with computers running MS-DOS or Windows. In fact, Macintosh is the most compatible computer you can buy. And the advantages of Macintosh don't end when school does — the majority of Fortune 1000 companies now use Macintosh computers.* So ask your Apple Campus Reseller to help you choose which Macintosh to put at the top of your holiday gift list.

Macintosh. It's more than a present, it's a future.

For more information visit the

WC Bookstore

Casey Academic Center or call x7200

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. MS-DOS is a registered trademark, and Windows a trademark, of Microsoft Corporation. *Based on a survey conducted by Computer Intelligence, 1991.

I think it's worthwhile thinking about goats.

--Tex Andrews

We regret to inform you that the sports guys disappeared during Thursday's storm. We hope to see them next semester.

Suds 'n Soda

"Your Store For Convenience"

Rt. 213 & Rt. 297
1.5 Miles North of Campus
778-5077
BEER*WINE*LIQUOR*SODA*ICE*KEGS
OPEN 6 a.m.-12 mid
7 DAYS

LARGE IMPORT SELECTION

LARGE KEG INVENTORY

THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
MAGNUM MALT LIQUOR 12oz CANS
ONLY $6.99 + tax
CASE

WE WANT YOUR LEGAL BUSINESS
YOU MUST BE 21 AND HAVE 2
FORMS VALID IDENTIFICATION
TO PURCHASE ALCOHOL

B-Ball hits two game slide, hopes to rebound this weekend

Doug Hoffberger
Staff New Guy

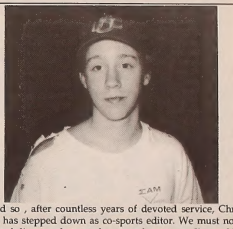
Before a capacity crowd of 1,100 insane fans, at the UMBC Fieldhouse, the Washington College Shoremen fell short against the UMBC Retrievers, by a score of 88-76. This loss drops the Shoremen Hoopster's record to 2-3. Pete Basel led all scorers with 30 points, a personal high for the 92'-93' season. In the 91'- 92' NPABA All-Star game, Basel collected 33 points, his all-time high. The Shoremen Hoopster's have 8 more games outside the MAC conference, before their first conference match-up versus Swathmore.

Against the Division I Retrievers, the Shoreman were evenly matched after the first-half, with only one reverse tomahawk double pump jam seperating the score. In the second half, the Shoreman matched their first half offense, but their defense allowed the Retrievers to score ten more points then their first half total. The starting five of Rupert, Swanson, Vican, Kenah, and Basel accounted for 54 points in the teams loss. Cummings, Devlin, and Hicks gave strong performances off the bench accounting for the remaining 21 points. Edmund Hicks, a 6' 4" freshman forward , out of Riva, Maryland has shown tremendous promise averaging close to 7 points a game. Jay Devlin, a returning letterman, has played a key role this year coming off the bench and averaging 7 points a game.

On December 8, the Shoreman were defeated by Division I rival George Mason, by a margin of 92-52. Turnovers plagued the Shoremen as they were held to only 21 points in the first half, a season low for the team. Junior forward Geoff Rupert led all WAC scorers with 17. The Shoreman's record now stands at 2-4. The Shoremen hope to improve their record to .500 when they host this weekends Wild Goose Classic. Last year the team took the title by beating Roanoke College 89-87 in overtime.

Photo by Sarah Feyerharm

Syracuse transfer Lawrence Moten steps aside as Basel floats to the hoop



Jason Campbell leads toward the fonish line against Widener which will be covered in the next paper.

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR

Trust Me

(410) 778-9819

...and so , after countless years of devoted service, Chris Vaughn has stepped down as co-sports editor. We must now reflect, and discuss what we, the general sports reading public liked about the "Late Great " editor.; Nothing! Vaughn had the uncanny ability of creating inside jokes that nobody understood. The sports editing staff promises in the future to become " user friendly " Vaughn, this is probably the only time your name will show up around the sports pages. Also Bucky we hope your awoundz heal in time for you to see Stinger go to the operating table.

P.S. This section could actually be the NEWT'S co-sports editors of the week spotlight if we wanted, that's how much power we have!

On a different note, Pete " I'll probably graduate before my brother " Ward wins this weeks Newt's POW award. In only five meets, Ward has already broken two school records in the 200 I.M. and the 200 backstroke.This freshman has made an immediate impact on the team, helping the Aquamen to a 3-1 record...Oh yeah, his mom also threatened us to give him this award. Nice job Pete. Sorry Pete didn't win this award earlier, Mrs. Ward. Maybe even Benji will win one next season.

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS

505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)

Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0888

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales

Park

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Swimming splits in dual meet

See Article, pg. 11

Showtime takes Division 1 mug

WC • ELM

Sports

Sports editing position filled by fifth caller: Berger

Hoops falls short to UMBC and George Mason

See Article, pg. 11

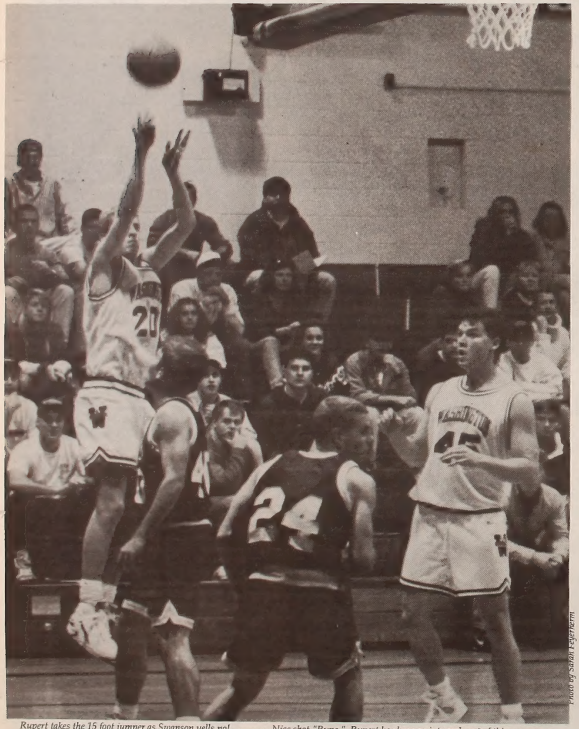


Photo by Nikki Eggleston

Rupert takes the 15 foot jumper as Swanson yells no!.....Nice shot "Rupe." Rupert has been an integral part of this years team. Hailing from Sykesville, Maryland, this 6'5" junior letterman has been averaging over 15 points a game. He tallied his season high 25 points against Drew University. Look for him to "get nice" in this weekends Wild Goose Classic.

Pete Ward: NEWT's Player of the Week

Scores

Men's B-Ball

Washington	76
UMBC	88
Washington	52
G. Mason	92

Swimming

Men

Washington	109
Widener	94

Women

Washington	68
Widener	124

Upcoming Events

Basketball
Wild Goose Classic
Goucher
Tonight, 8:00 p.m

Swimming
@ Dickinson Inv.
Tomorrow
TBA

Support your teams!!

Sports staff needs writers

ext 8893

Boone/Bucky bring resume

Back in the Saddle Again...

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

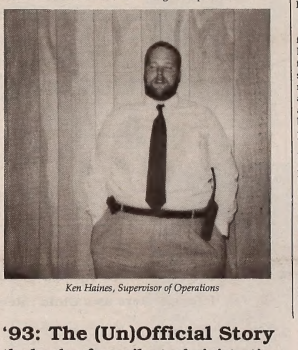
Weekend Weather
Friday: Fair, breezy
H mid 30s L mid 20s
Weekend: Partly cloudy
H 35 to 45 L 20s

Volume 64, Number Fifteen • January 29, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Haines Joins WC Security Force as New Supervisor of Operations

Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

During the students' semester break, the Security Department was busy restructuring their office.



One of the additions was bringing in a new supervisor in charge of operations. Ken Haines of Chestertown worked as a security officer at the college in 1985. For the past five years, he has been an employee of the Kent County Sheriff's Department, and he returns to WC this spring to fill in a new slot with security.

Haines will be working closely with the student body, coordinating special events and managing evening manpower to fill the needs of the campus," said Jerry Roderick, director of WC Security.

Working primarily evening hours, and covering the Thursday to Sunday evening area when most crimes are committed, Haines will try to find out the students' needs in order to better serve them.

Haines will be interviewing student leaders and RAs, in order for security to "refocus attention" on things that students are concerned about, said Roderick.

"I see this as a very positive change," Roderick said. "He has a lot of important law enforcement contacts and a good range of experience."

Ken Haines, Supervisor of Operations

Literary House Restricted

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

As a result of the numerous fires last semester, the O'Neill Literary House will be open from 8 a.m. to 12 midnight this semester. Any students remaining in the building will be asked to leave at this time. In addition, security officers will be making frequent patrols, particularly after 4pm.

Director of Security Jerry Roderick remains concerned about the Lit House, in part because the culprit has yet to be apprehended. "We feel this is a necessary step to insure that the property is protected during those hours," he said. He added that the measure will be reviewed at mid-semester.

"I was glad to see the Lit House community come together this past semester. They devoted a lot of time and energy to keeping that building open, and I don't want to see that disappear," said Roderick.

WC Crew Teams go for the Guiness

The men and women's rowing teams are going for a new world record for most consecutive hours rowed on a ergamator (rowing machine). The team started began last Friday at 6 p.m. with President Trout rowing for the first 15 minutes. The team has been rowing around the clock since they began. Members of the teams are taking hour shifts to complete the mission. The previous record was set by a private rowing club on the Thames River in England. The private club set the current record by rowing consecutively for 140 hours. The WC Rowing teams plan to surpass the record by a margin of 28 hours making the new world record 168 hours of constant rowing. On Wednesday, the team passed the 1 million meter mark. Upon completion of the record the teams will be approaching the 2 million meter mark. The teams plan on completing the record this Friday at 6p.m. If you have a minute, stop by and support the team!

Birthday Ball '93: The (Un)Official Story

Freshman VP bears the burden for a silent administration

Martha Kimura
Staff Writer

On February 20, Washington College will be holding the annual George Washington Birthday Ball. This year's Birthday Ball promises to be drastically different from the Birthday Balls of previous years. The Birthday Ball originated as both a fundraiser for the financial aid program, and a social mixer for the students, faculty, staff, alumni, and the townspeople. But because of considerable financial losses from previous Birthday Balls, many people had doubts as to whether or not the Birthday Ball would be held this year.

"In past years, the Birthday Ball was more of a cooperative effort between the Alumni Office, Student Affairs, and the Development Office, " said Shawn Lyons, Vice President for Development and College Relations. This year, however, the Freshman Class Vice President, Andre Taylor, has been placed in charge of the whole event. Given a sum of money from the Alumni Office and little support from the Administration, Mr. Taylor has secured the services of DJ Whitney Myrus and has rented out Hodson Hall for the evening.

Troubled by what seems to be the beginning of the end of Washington College's traditional formal, the Elm approached a number of college officials in an effort to shed some light on the subject. All declined comment on the situation.

"The Ball will not be as extravagant and glitzy as it has been in the past years. With the limited amount of money I was given, I had to cut out a lot of decorations and other things that have always been a part of a traditional Birthday Ball," said Andre Taylor during an interview. "I have tried to keep down the price so that everyone can go. We are hoping for a good turnout. It would be a shame if this was the last Birthday Ball Washington College has."

Andre Taylor, organizer of the Birthday Ball, and Lisa Chobody, His assistant

Photo by Martha Kimura

The tickets for the Birthday Ball can be purchased from Andre Taylor (8689) or Student Activities (7818). The formal starts at 9 o'clock, and anyone who wishes to volunteer to help set up is encouraged to contact Mr. Taylor.

Inside

Susan Huck's Past Life as a WC Professor 2

George on Bill Clinton's Inaugural Celebration 4

Drug Survey Reveals Truth About Students 5

Book Designer to Speak Tonight 7

Financial Aid Update FAFs Now Available 8

A New Beginning

It is cold and dim at 3:40 a.m. in the ELM office. Everything seems to thrum with the rhythm of the printer, and yet another issue winds to a close in the late/early hours of the first "ELM night" of the semester.

Last semester was a good one for news. We had plenty of "beef" to report, and page after page of newsprint churned with the rhythm of a campus in turmoil. Crime and trauma, red tape and controversy converted themselves into reams of words and pictures.

It wasn't an outward sickness, there were no major epidemics of anything but fatigue. But the college was sick at heart for reasons that need no renumeration. Aside from on-campus tragedies, deficits of money and attention, and petty inter-departmental controversies, each individual student seemed to be waging his or her own war with "personal" problems of friends and family. Estimates range as high as 10 to 20 percent when considering the number of students who lost a family member or friend from home.

The problems go beyond simply the personal when every member of the college community, whether or not they suffered any personal losses, feels the heavy weight on the backs of their friends and realizes they must help to shoulder it.

The position of an editor is a Janus-faced one; it is essential for a good newspaper to report hard news accurately and well. But I would be perfectly happy to have twelve pages of human interest stories and interviews versus the plethora of "real news" of last semester.

The other day, Jerry Roderick told me there had been no crime yet this semester, and he hoped it stayed that way. So do I.

I already feel a change this semester in the way things are running. People are looking a little less world-weary, and while I realize that termpaper season has not yet begun for most students, I think there is a shift in disposition. It's not just a glimmer of hope, it's an outright resolution, at least in the case of those I know well, that things are going to go better this semester. When you ask a friend how he his, he no longer replies "tired" instantaneously. People are smiling.

This may sound corny, but I am ready for a good semester. I don't want to run screaming from Chestertown for spring break because I am experiencing post-traumatic stress disorder. I want it to be because I am bored. Boredom would be a positive change (as long as it doesn't increase the apathy level around here).

Fall semesters tend to be "darker" in more ways than one. The knowledge that one is about to embark on nine months of scholarly endeavor, coupled with the relative lack of sunlight, tends to dampen the spirits of the most light-hearted individual. But when spring semester starts, the school year is already halfway over, and you know it's going to get brighter and warmer.

If it's still appropriate to say, Happy New Year. I'm looking forward to having nothing to write about; that will leave me with the energy to have something to say.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers

News
Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan

Features
Justin 'M' Cann

Arts & Entertainment
George Jamison

Sports
Doug Hoffsburger & Matt Murray

Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quicksmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8280.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Correspondence, Feedback & Dirt

'Ah, Yes, I Taught Here as a Child': Recalling WC's Past

It's fun to say that, because they really don't like to hear it. I signed on with the College at 22. By that time, I already had a Master's, and had worked a year with the Air Force, but it made for a sketchy resume.

The College was not then as you see it now. Nor was I, for that matter. In September of 1953, most of the buildings were yet to come. Gibson's Bluebird was the edge of town, and more or less the "student center" at certain hours. Before people got around to letting me know not to fraternize with the students, there was this neat Korean War veteran. . .

A yearbook lists me as a "professor of economics." Since my paycheck was so tiny that I could only have been an instructor, I'm rather fond of the error. I was part time, teaching three courses — nine hours — the standard load in those bad old days being 15 semester hours.

I'll tell you a secret, though. The hardest I ever studied was during my first year of teaching. There was this whole new shift in attitude which I had not really thought about before. It was from the students' "how little can I slide by with?" to the teacher's "my God, I have to sound intelligent for fifty minutes!"

My office was in the vicinity of Dr. Preme's office [in Ferguson] today. Although there was a face-lifting in later years, I suspect that if you scratch through the brick veneer, you will find the remains of the World War II "tempos" — temporary prefab wooden barracks buildings. Papers stacked on the floor, I recall, were soon termite-riddled.

You can fairly guess which other buildings were around in those days. The science building was smaller, as was the present administration building, then the library. Bill Smith, the ugly old dorms, and the water tower were just the same! The old stairs in Smith were worn and creaky even then.

But hey, some of my fondest memories are of spring waterfights in Smith. Would that we had had Super-Soakers!

For my labors I was paid a memorable forty dollars a week. A 1953 dollar is about ten dollars today, and I was able to augment that in a variety of ways. The most respectable of them was by teaching extension courses in downstate Delaware for the University of Delaware. I distinctly recall that I made more on mileage than by teaching.

And then . . . Have you ever seen these plates with a line drawing of the church on them? Churches used to — maybe still do — sell them to raise a little more money from the congregation. Well, I would be supplied with a photograph of the church, and given $15 for each pen and ink rendition.

But the hardest-won income was derived from selling homegrown strawberries. That's "stoop labor," which I had also performed in the cucumber fields of upstate New York. When you get tired of stooping, you can crawl, and when you're tired of crawling, you can stoop again. The professionals never crawl, they stoop all day.

You see, on my forty a week, I was living in a tumbledown farmhouse on a farm outside of Church Hill. It was my father's only winner in an investment, I say now in retrospect. But at the time, the house was such that when the wind blew hard, my sad little carpet rippled along the floor.

This was the setting for a party for similarly ill-paid faculty, including a few two-fisted drinkers who were able to overlook the fact that the water

See "Huck," page 9

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

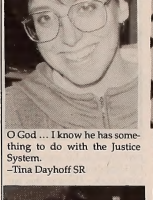
Upon returning from winter break I found myself in the unusual position of having absolutely too much to write about in this week's column. After four weeks of news, so much had happened that I could not decide what was the single most important event to analyze.

Obviously, the inauguration of a new President produced an unusual glut of news. At this point in time, the country finds itself struggling with the issues of gays in the military, illegal domestic help, the situation in the Balkans, the crisis in Somalia, and the revelation that George Bush was deeply involved in Iran-Contra. I eventually decided that I would write a review of the month's events and analyze them in the context of the more fundamental economic crisis which is affecting the world as a whole — and then Justice Thurgood Marshall died.

Clearly the death of a Supreme Court Justice who had served for twenty-four years outweighs the more fleeting importance of other national events. Justice Marshall was the first African-American Supreme Court Justice, and until last Sunday he was the most important surviving figure of the civil rights movement. Long before there was a Colin Powell, there was Thurgood Marshall, who showed that excellence in the pursuit of social justice could lead to lasting social change.

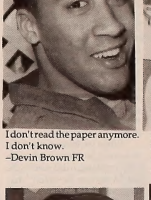
There are some who would argue that the efforts of men such as Marshall were ineffective in the long run. The fact is that after three decades of struggle through the legal system and non-violent struggle in the streets of America the material condition of most African-Americans has not significantly improved. That is certainly an open question; however, it cannot be doubted that the contribution made by Marshall has deeply affected all Americans in more than one respect. If today's radicals stand tall at all, it is only upon the shoulders of yesterday's liberals.

Marshall began to work as a lawyer for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in 1936, and rose to the position of chief counsel in 1938. On two days in July of 1945 the NAACP held a conference in Chicago called the "Meeting of NAACP Lawyers and Consultants on Methods of Attacking Restrictive Covenants."



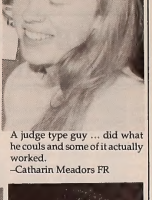
At this meeting the NAACP devised a national strategy to reduce barriers to residential racial integration by appealing to the courts and seeking favorable legislation. From the outset the strategy pursued by Charles Houston (Marshall's mentor) was to "use the courts as educational forums for moulding national opinion." At that meeting Marshall advocated that test cases should be sought in the South as well as in the North, and that the NAACP

See "Koon," page 9



CAMPUS VOICES

By Moonpile



Who was Thurgood Marshall and what did he do?

O God ... I know he has something to do with the Justice System.
–Tina Dayhoff SR

I don't read the paper anymore. I don't know.
–Devin Brown FR

A judge type guy ... did what he couls and some of it actually worked.
–Catharin Meadors FR

He was the first black Supreme Court Justice and he just died ... I saw the flag.
–Kelly Eakin FR

Thurgood Marshall was a Justice on the Supreme Court who did Brown v. Board of Education and Civil Rights stuff.
–Marcia Mowbray JR

I don't want to be in this because I don't know who he is.
–Ciaran "He's got a good excuse" O'Keefe SR

Open Forum: Makin' the List, Checkin' it Twice

John Need

John Need is a Senior Philosophy major, and Dean's List student. He spent last year in Oxford at Manchester College.

It is a commonly held belief that grades for papers, essays, even courses, are to some degree subjective. While it's true that any good paper should follow a standard form, be firmly argued, and thoroughly footnoted, it's also true that a professor's personal bias can tip the balance between two grades. I've met few professors who were openly biased, yet I've met even fewer who have claimed be totally non-biased, even subconsciously.

Naturally, it is in the interest of fairness for the college to refrain from practices which might prejudice a professor. Nonetheless, Washington College, as a matter of policy, provides lists to every professor of all the "good" and "bad" students in their classes.

It seems that there's more than just names on that roster provided by the registrar. Right beside your name is a code which tells your professor if you are on the Dean's List, on Academic Probation, or an average student. On the first day of class, as you're introducing yourself to the other students, your professor, intentionally or not, is sticking you into one of three groups: good students, bad students, and bland students.

You are immediately intellectually appraised, academically stigmatized, scholastically sized-up. Why the registrar gives out this information is not clear. What is clear is that this policy skews professors' impartiality. You no longer have a fair chance at a good grade. Your success now depends, to some degree, on your previous academic record.

Consequently, Dean's-List students tend to stay on the Dean's List and AP students are more likely to get stuck in the AP quagmire. Professors, being human, may subconsciously pay more attention to students they believe to be superior, and disregard the opinions, comments, and questions of "inferior" students.

The elimination of the identification of a student's academic status has been up for consideration. Apparently, the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of retaining the policy. I can't imagine how it can help students. If it is supposed to point out troubled students for extra attention, then there is no reason to identify Dean's List students. If it is designed to publicly recognize excellent students, then it is a ineffective redundancy. A publicly posted Dean's List already exists, and is far more effective than your professor's private list.

Washington College, in the interest of fairness, should eliminate such purely prejudicial lists of past scholastic performance. Every student should be graded solely on the work done in an individual class, not the work done in past courses. Why make it unnecessarily difficult for poor students to pull themselves up? Why create an artificial class of academic elite? If Washington College is an equal opportunity institution, then it has a duty to provide a level playing field for all. While it is naïve to believe that bias can ever be eliminated, institutionalized bias is an anathema to the ideal of equal educational opportunity for all.

Almost as Good as The Dead: Bill Clinton's Inaugural Bash

George Arthur Jamison Jr. is the new A&E Editor. On January 17, he and three other WC students attended the historical Clinton/ Gore Inauguration Celebration. This is their story. . .

Having spent most of Christmas break in the always exciting town of Chestertown, my roommates and I were totally bored out of our minds. We more or less spent our winter break watching television. And it so happened that one evening we were watching HBO and we saw an incredible opportunity. We saw that there was going to be a free concert at the Lincoln Memorial in order to celebrate the inauguration of President Bill Clinton and Vice President Al Gore. So, we decided to go.

George Jamison

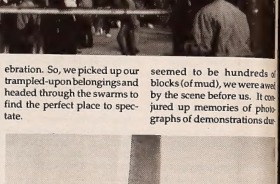
We loaded up the car the morning after and headed out for the New Carrollton Metro station. We brought sleeping bags, blankets, food, etc. in order to prepare ourselves for the day ahead of us. And it was a good thing that we did. The weather could have been a little warmer but we did not mind it since we were prepared. We got on the Metro and immediately we had to stand; it seemed that everyone had the same idea that we did. When we left the Metro to enter on the mall, we knew that the numerical expectations of the day were going to be exceeded.



The first thing we laid our eyes upon was the calender of events for the next two days. We where flabbergasted. We knew this was going to be a big thing but we had no idea. The list of performers went on for miles. The performers ranged from Michelle Shocked to Blues Traveller from Peter, Paul, and Mary to a Sesame Street Revue. The bonus: it was all free. This seemed like the opportunity of a lifetime for four poor college students looking for a good time.

When we looked out at the crowds of people trying to soak up everything, it did seem to be the "American Re-union" that they called it. We were surrounded by individuals from every walk of life. Whether they were black or white, young or old, rich or poor, gay or straight, or man or woman, everyone was there to show the government that they were ready for a change.

We eventually decided to camp out by the "Reunion Hall" tent and listen to the bands. After listening to a few bands, we eventually heard what we were waiting for. Little Feat performed and it seemed that the Dead-heads came out of the woodwork. The area that we were occupying suddenly became cramped and we stood up. And when we stood up it hit us. Yes, the true proof that there were hundreds of thousands of people there. As far as we could look, there were bodies (or rather "heads") and most of these "heads" were exhaling a smoke of some kind. It brought visions of Grateful Dead concerts and it was quite amusing after we thought about it. There we were, in the center of an inaugural celebration, in the center of the nation's capitol, and there were thousands of joints being passed around to celebrate the election of the first president from the Woodstock generation. It seemed such a coup d'etat. Eventually the masses became too much for us and we decided to head down to the Lincoln Memorial for the real celebration. So, we picked up our trampled-upon belongings and headed through the swarms to find the perfect place to spectate.

When we eventually reached the Washington Monument after walking what seemed to be hundreds of blocks (of mud), we were awed by the scene before us. It conjured up memories of photographs of demonstrations during the sixties, except with a very strange twist. This twist is that most of the people that attended this inauguration celebration began to become increasingly rude after a while. I began to think that we were in New York City during rush hour or something. Everyone was trying to get as close to the stage as possible and after a while it seemed that the lemmings were turned out in full force. The horde kept moving in while not allowing anyone to escape. There were some pretty ugly scenes involving the porta-johns, a broken wooden fence, and some blond bitch that deserves the I-Should-Not-Have-Been-Born Award, but, all in all, when the concert began everything seemed to turn around.

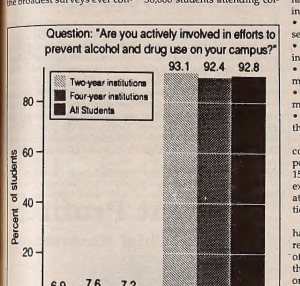
Having found a semi-visual spot through the trees, my

See "Inauguration," page 9

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap-T-Neck has seen most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.
10% discount with W.C. I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442
"the patagonia place"
and other wonderful things
Chestertown
Cannon St.
NOT TO SCALE
We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE



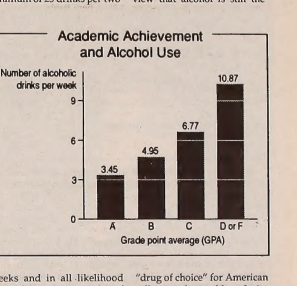
OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 29 JOANN & MONTE Alaska's #1 Singer Songwriter Duo-Contemporary Acoustic Music
SAT 30 RED LETTER DAY (formerly The ECLECTICS)-Guitars, sax-folk, blues, rock, jazz)
778-6779

Alcohol and Other Drugs on Campus

New Report Reveals Extent of Student Substance Abuse

Alcohol and other drug use has become a major societal problem over the last 25 years. But in what ways? And at what cost? The report, Alcohol and Drugs on American College Campuses, contains results of one of the broadest surveys ever conducted by a two-year survey conducted by Southern Illinois University at Carbondale under a grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education, is a comprehensive analysis of self-reports from more than 56,000 students attending college.



The results, detailed in the report, reflected in the consequence that students reported as a result of their involvement with alcohol and other drugs:

- 63 percent had experienced a hangover in the last year.
- 22 percent had experienced a hangover more than five times in the last year.
- 50 percent had become nauseated or vomited.
- 36 percent had driven while intoxicated.
- 33 percent had fights or arguments.
- 28 percent experienced memory loss.
- 39 percent later regretted their actions.

These are only a few of the consequences students reported. Alarmingly, more than 15 percent said that their first experience with drinking was at the age of 18-25, the "traditional" college-age range.

While these consequences have considerable impact on the retention and academic failure of students, they also impact the use of health care facilities on campuses. Findings of particular concern to higher education administrators and health personnel involve binge drinking.

Defined as consuming five or more drinks in one sitting, binge drinking is frequently associated with sexual assault, fights, property damage, and drunken driving. Forty-two percent of the students reported engaging in binge-drinking episodes in a single, two-week period prior to the survey; 28 percent say they had binged more than once in the last 14 days; and 7 percent binged more than five times in the last two weeks. (This represents a minimum of 25 drinks per two weeks and in all likelihood more.) The average number of drinks per week for all students was 5.11.

The study also shattered the myth that women do not binge drink — 35.9 percent of women had a binge drinking episode within the prior two weeks. But as the number of these episodes increases, the difference between male and female becomes more pronounced. Twenty-seven percent of males reported binge drinking three or more times in the past two weeks compared with 13 percent of females.

The data collected in this report supports the general view that alcohol is still the "drug of choice" for American college students, although significant numbers are involved with a variety of other drugs. In the past year, 27 percent used marijuana; more than 6 percent used cocaine; and nearly 5 percent used hallucinogens and amphetamines. The physical and psychological toll that these drugs take on the individual ducted. It sheds some light on questions that have historically challenged college health providers and details the nature, scope, and consequences of substance abuse on college campuses.

See "Drugs," page 9

The report, derived from a leges and universities across the country. It confirms the disturbing results of a 1989 opinion poll in which 42 percent of college presidents cited substance abuse as the campus-life issue of greatest concern. The reality of this concern is

Schaefer Adds to Financial Aid Budget

Governor William Donald Schaefer has proposed a 10-percent increase in funding for state scholarships.

The $2.75 million increase, part of the governor's proposed FY '94 budget, would increase the number of Marylanders receiving state financial aid under the General State Scholarship program by an estimated 2,000 students.

The additional funds would also permit an increase in the amount awarded to all students, partially offsetting the effect of tuition increases.

Total spending on financial aid programs would exceed $31.3 million in FY '94 if the appropriation is approved by the legislature. Funding for the General State Scholarship would total almost $16.1 million.

"If this financial aid budget is approved, it will mean that the governor and the General Assembly in Maryland have increased the amount of money available for scholarships by over 240 percent since Governor Schaefer took office," said Shaila R. Aery, the Secretary of Higher Education.

Aery said that rising education costs have made it more difficult for students to attend college, and that Maryland's continuing support of broad-based financial aid programs will provide opportunities for students that might not otherwise exist.

Funding for financial aid stood at $9.1 million in FY '86; 15,416 students received grants that year. In FY '93, an estimated 26,750 students are receiving state assistance to attend college.

—Press Release

New Faces Appear On Campus

Jennifer Waldych
Staff Writer

Twelve new students join the Washington College community this semester. Kevin Coveney, Vice President for Admissions and Financial Aid, said that two of twelve are freshmen, and the remaining students are second-semester sophomores or first-semester juniors.

Four of the new students are from abroad: one woman is from England, one man from South Africa, and two women from Sri Lanka. All of the new students are planning to complete degrees here at the college, Coveney said.

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal Electrologist – Louise Leaverton, L.E.

Week at a Glance

January 29 - February 4

Film Series: Everybody Is Fine. Norman James Theatre, 7::30p.m. Friday, Sunday, Monday

29 Friday

O'Neil Literary House presents The History of Book Design
Slide show and Lecture presentation by Mr. Stephen Kraft. Sophie Kerr Room, Miller Library, 7:30 p.m.†

Zeta Tau Alpha presents The Post New Year's Eve Bash featuring The Bub. C-House, 9p.m.-1 a.m. ($)

30 Saturday

Women's Basketball vs. Cecil Community College, 7:00 p.m.

Men's Basketball at Ursinus, 8:00 p.m.

31 Sunday

The Tidewater Performing Arts Society presents Isodor Saslav, violin, and Ann Saslav,piano, performing at the Easton High School, 3:00 p.m. ($)†

Superbowl: Buffalo vs. Dallas

1 Monday

Women's Basketball vs. Bristol College, 7:30 p.m.

2 Tuesday

Spring Rush Begins

Kappa Alpha Order - Informal 7-11pm

3 Wednesday

Chinese New Year Dinner, Dining Hall, 4:45 - 6:45

Theta Chi - Informal 7-11pm

4 Thursday

Phi Delta Theta - Informal 7-11pm

Border Run, Taco Bell (Elkton), 10pm

Zeta Tau Alpha presents

The Post New Year's Eve Bash

featuring The Bub

Tonight C-House, 9pm-1 am

A&E

Isidor Saslav Visits Easton

This Sunday, January 31, the Tidewater Performing Arts Society welcomes, for a repeat performance, Ann and Isidor Saslav. This presentation will be held at Talbot County Auditorium at Easton High School. Violinist Isidor Saslav, the former concertmaster for the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, is now with the New Zealand Symphony. Pianist Ann Heiligman Saslav is a Fulbright scholar, a music educator, and a concertist with major orchestras throughout this country and abroad. Their program will contain selections from Douglas Lilburn, Jeno Hubay, Chris Prosser, Ernest Bloch, Ravel, and Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. For tickets to the 3:00 p.m. concert this Sunday, call 410-476-9002; they will also be available at the door. Prices are $18 for adults; $7 for students; and $3 for children 12 and under with an adult.

Student Profile:

ChrisMarvChief Rasmussen

Christian "ChrisMarvChief" Rasmussen hails from Kansas City, Missouri. Chris is a twenty-two year old Scorpio that was born in Beaverton, Oregon. Marv's major is political science and he does not believe in a minor. He does not know what his GPA is because of the fact that he has attended four colleges in the past four years, but he has been informed that he has made the Dean's List once again. It seems that Marv has been on the Dean's List since the fall of 1990. This semester, to keep him busy and graduating on time, along with taking the usual four courses, Marv finds himself with an internship at the General Assembly of Maryland. Chief is in the process of applying to Law School at Columbia, Northwestern, and Missouri, but he is very apprehensive about graduating.

Having spent last year at St. Andrews in Scotland as a Junior Fellow, Chief found it strange to return to the wonderful land of WAC. He moved into a spotless apartment off-campus, but after seven months he needed help. Needless to say, his new roommate has whipped him and the apartment into shape. Chris has a three-month-old baby brother and since a few people compare him to Guy Smiley it does not seem that he will have a problem dealing with the change. Marv is an avid movie watcher and book reader and loves to drink un-refrigerated diet cola.

Chris' proudest possessions include season tickets to the Royal's and a Mike Dukakis hand puppet. Marv seems to be the only person that owns a five-track CD-player but only one CD. Chief includes in his highlights of 1992, the fact that he got his cable hooked up and election night. Being a strong supporter of the Clinton/Gore movement, he threw a party at his apartment. But to his guests' chagrin, he actually missed the magic 270 count that elected Clinton because he was stargazing with his favorite Republican mystic, Satinder Sidhu.

New AV Reviewer Likes Foreign Films Just 'Fine'

Gerard Hunt
AV Guy

The spring Film Series in Norman James is under way with a dazzling line-up of foreign films. For those who missed last week's film, Europa Europa, about a German Jew hiding his identity as a Hitler Youth, I strongly recommend catching it on video.

This week's movie, Everybody Is Fine, is an "epic" tale of an old man's journey to see his children. The "hero" of the adventure is not altogether sane, as he sees and talks to visions of his youthful children, his wife, and his mother. He is also haunted by a vision of his children being carried off by some big monster balloon at the beach.

In spite of his faults, the old Sicilian is a likeable character, and the movie is cheerful and interesting until the end, when it takes a nose dive. Sad endings are commonplace in foreign films, but this movie is either too predictable or too sappy, I'm not sure which. Simply do not expect to leave the theater having uncovered a great mystery.

Broadside Poetry Postcard Winners

The winners of the Fall 1992 Poetry Postcard Contest are as follows: "After the Funeral," by Tanya Allen; "Father and Son at the Beach," by J. Edward Need; and "This God Winter," by Thane Glenn. All the participating poets had their work appear in the O'Neill Literary House Broadsides Series last fall, and the three winning poems will be hand printed on limited-edition postcards by the Literary House Press Printer's Devils. Lynn Doyle, who replaced Kathy Wagner last year as Assistant Director of the Literary House during Wagner's sabbatical, was the judge for the contest.

Anyone interested in participating in this semester's Broadsides Series should contact Erin Page via campus mail.

FAMILY BOOK NOOK
All in stock Books DISCOUNTED!
Hard Cover Books – 15% Off
New Paperback Books – 10% Off
Pre-Read Paperback Books – 50% Off
Discover our Pre-Read Paperbacks. Credit for Your Gently Read Paperbacks – BROWSERS WELCOME!
Washington Square Shopping Center – near Super Fresh

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
TOYS
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

Kraft's Craft Comes to WC

Pat Geissel
Staff Writer

Tonight, Washington College will host a lecture by Stephen Kraft. Kraft is a very talented artist who designs and illustrates books. He will present a slide show and lecture on the art and history of book design.

Stephen Kraft has a long history as an artist and book designer. He graduated cum laude from Bucknell University in 1940. He was managing designer for the Smithsonian Institute Press for eighteen years and some of his works are in a permanent collection at the Library of Congress.

In the past few years, Kraft has been a judge at various design competitions, including The American Association of Museums, Washington Book Publishers, and The Association of American University Presses. Currently, Kraft is an adjunct professor at the American University College of Arts and Sciences and an instructor at the Corcoran School of Art. He also runs a graphic design business in Washington D.C.

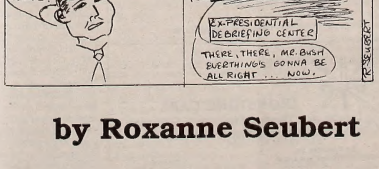
The event is sponsored by the Literary House Press, who hope to use one of Kraft's designs for their next publication. The History of Book Design will be held in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library at 7:30 p.m.

WHEN DRINKING, CALL A FRIEND.
Drinking and riding can lead to a loss of license, a conviction, or even worse. When you drink, get a ride with a friend. It's the best call you can make.
MOTORCYCLE SAFETY FOUNDATION

Concert Series Performer Outshines Her Dress

Tara Kidwell
Staff Writer

On Wednesday, the Washington College concert series presented the brilliant talents of Kyung Sun Lee. Movement of sound and soul was the treat for those who attended the performance. Kyung Lee's tempered playing and insightful interpretation was sheer delight. She is truly a mistress of the violin.



The original program was changed, to some dismay, but the pieces which replaced Mozart's Sonata in B-flat Major, K. 454, and Chaconne by Bach were marvelous; truly selections worthy for Kyung Sun Lee's skill. Lee began with Devils Trills which showed the empassioned nature of both the violinist and the composer. Her second selection, Sonata No. 1 in F minor, Op. 80, by Sergei Prokofiev, was not only a delight to listen to but an incredible challenge for the musician. The abundance of energy and the ease that Kyung displayed while performing was to be admired. The dexterity and fire with which she executed this selection lingered well after she had stopped playing.

After intermission came the inspired rendition of Debussy's last Sonata which seemed so effortless and teasing it made the listener almost forget the acomplishment of the artist and admire the music sheerly for the sake of listening. As if this were not enough, Lee consumated the evening with Bela Bartok's Rhapsody No. 2. It was entracing. The raw power of the music under the disciplined hand of musician was a rarity to behold.

Brian Suits, who accompanied Lee on the piano, was as equally skilled as his conterpart. His personal flare and timing added just the right dramatic touch to the show. This is not to say that the performance was flawless. Just once, perhaps in reminder of man's fallible nature, the violin went out of tune. Over all the performance was even more sparkling than the dress which Kyung Sun Lee wore.

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown
gallery 5
Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483
Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

Political Commentary

by Roxanne Seubert

Financial Aid Forms Now Available

Jeanni Narcum, Director of Financial Aid for Washington College, has announced that the 1993-94 Financial Aid Packets are here. FAF Packets have been mailed home to parents or placed in campus mail boxes for all students currently receiving financial aid.

If you are not currently receiving financial aid, but would like to submit an application for 1993-94, please call Ext. 7214, or stop by the Financial Aid Office to pick up an FAF Packet. The Financial Aid deadline for the 1993-94 school year is February 15, 1993.

In addition, the following scholarships areavailable to qualified Washington College students.

Rubin Scholarship

This year's Central Scholarship Bureau will again be administering the Mary Rubin and Benjamin M. Rubin Scholarship Fund for the Associated Jewish Community Federation of Baltimore. This non-sectarian fund was established to provide women with opportunities for higher learning by providing tuition support.

To be eligible for consideration, students must:

- be female
- attend an accredited post-secondary school
- have a 3.0, or better, g.p.a. on a 4 point scale
- meet family income requirements
- be a Maryland resident.

Applicants must submit supporting information and a personal statement outlining their special merit and need. Application deadline is March 1, 1993. Applications or materials postmarked after the deadline will not be accepted.

Applications may be obtained by contacting:
CSB
4001 Clarks Lane
Bristol House Apartments #108
Baltimore, MD 21215-2677

Central Scholarship Bureau evaluates applicants on an individual basis. All decisions of Central Scholarship Bureau and the Rubin Grants Committee are final.

German Society Scholarship

The German Society of Maryland will give tuition scholarship aid to students of German ancestry residing in Maryland and enrolled in an undergraduate or graduate program at a four-year college or university in Maryland. The Committee welcomes applications from students with at least a 3.0 G.P.A. who can prove financial need.

The 1993-94 FAF Packet, obtainable from the Financial Aid Office, is required. SAR forms alone are not acceptable. All applications postmarked after April 15 and incomplete applications will be considered ineligible and will be returned to the applicant.

Students already on a scholarship from the German Society must reapply to be considered for renewal.
Application blanks can be obtained from:
The German Society of Maryland
P.O. Box 22585
Baltimore, MD 21203-4585

Accounting Scholarship

The Government Finance Officers Association's Government Accounting Scholarship of $2,000 will be awarded to one or more senior undergraduate students enrolled in full-time study preparing for a career in state and local government finance. The winner of the Government Accounting Scholarship will be invited to attend, at our expense, the government finance Officers Association's annual conference in Vancouver, British Columbia, May 2-5, 1993, where the award will be presented.

Any person who is currently a full-time student in the senior year of an undergraduate accounting program and who is preparing for a career in state and local government finance is eligible. He or she must be a legal resident of the United States or Canada. Recommendation by the head of the accounting program is required.

Applications deadline is February 15, 1993, and the award announcement will be made April 5.

For applications and additional information, please contact:
Scholarship Committee
Government Finance Officers Association
180 North Michigan Avenue, Suite 800
Chicago, IL 60601-7476
(312/977-9700)

Yearbook Staff Rolls Along

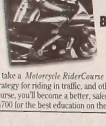
The Pegasus staff will hold its second organizational meeting on Sunday, January 31 at 7:30 p.m. in the basement of Reid Hall. Anyone interested is welcome, whether or not you have heard from you before. Attention Seniors:

Time to submit your senior quote and yearbook picture for the 1993 Pegasus! Pictures can be no bigger than 4x6, and black and white is preferred (but not required). Pictures should be clear and in focus.

Send pictures to Krissie Callahan or Mary Jefferson via campus mail by February 17. Any questions, contact Krissie or Mary at ext. 8584.

The yearbook staff appreciates any ideas or suggestions for this year's yearbook

Free Clinton Victory Card



In the spirit of national unity and support for President Bill Clinton, National Card Company from Chattanooga, Tenn. is offering a free full-color limited edition Victory Card to citizens who request it. The company publishes other types of cards including baseball, basketball, football, and political trading cards.

To obtain the free Victory Card, readers should send their request with a self-addressed stamped envelope to

National Card Company, Corporate Offices
P.O. Box 72967
Chattanooga, TN 37407-5967

According to National Card Company President Lewis Revels, this free offering is an advance press card produced with cooperation from the Clinton/Gore Transition Team and previews a 10-card "Road to the White House" Victory Set. The press card features Bill Clinton with his wife Hillary on the front, and on the back is a breakdown on how each of the 50 states voted in the Presidential Election.

To add further educational interest to the 10-card set, there will be 5,510 randomly inserted "Winner" cards in the 50,000 sets. The "Winner" Cards can be redeemed for free political memorabilia ranging from real campaign buttons to political cards to presidential coin sets, inauguration coins, and 1989 Congressional gold coins.
—press release

BECOME A ROAD SCHOLAR IN YOUR SPARE TIME.

When you take a Motorcycle RiderCourse you learn evasive maneuvers, cornering skills, a strategy for riding in traffic, and other valuable riding techniques. With just one course, you'll become a better, safer rider, and riding will be more fun. Call 1-800-447-4700 for the best education on the streets. MOTORCYCLE SAFETY FOUNDATION

Ever Get Somebody Totally Wasted?

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists Materials
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
P.O. Box 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0185

"Koon," from page 3

would need to conduct a vigorous publicity campaign and meet regularly to formulate strategy.

In 1948 Thurgood Marshall argued against restrictive covenants before the Supreme Court, and all cases brought by the NAACP were decided in favor of the plaintiffs. This opened the door to integration in residential areas across the country. While dealing with the integration in private life, the NAACP also attacked the desegregation of public institutions.

This effort began with cases in the late 1930's and 1940's and were largely handled by Charles Houston, who won Gaines, an important case in 1938 in which the Supreme Court found that it was unconstitutional for a state to award scholarships to African-American students to study in other states when the same course of study was available at a white institution in the student's state of residence.

This was a case which was rather peculiar in that the student in question wanted to attend law school, but as law programs were unavailable for African-American students in Missouri the state had no recourse but to send him to another state. This was due to the 1852 case which established that segregated schools were constitutional only if the quality of these schools were the same for both Black and White students. But because the student wanted to study local law, there was no out of state institution which could serve him adequately, and therefore the Court ruled in favor of the plaintiff. Gaines marked the first time the Court weakened the doctrine of "separate but equal."

The case which catapulted Thurgood Marshall to national fame was a natural outgrowth of Gaines. When Houston died, Marshall took on the cases involving education, which previously had been the domain of Houston. In 1954 Marshall won Brown v. Board of Education, in which the Supreme Court decided that separate facilities for the education of White and Black students were inherently unequal. This landmark case began the process of public school integration which was not complete for two decades. Ultimately it was this case, more than any other, which led to the rejection of racism in both public and private institutions and the general perception that racists are sick people who are a grave danger to the American republic.

Before Brown our entire society was divided along racial lines. Today if it becomes common knowledge that a public official is a member of a discriminatory private institution the public outrage inevitably causes that official to end their membership. Thus, the integration of public schools has had an immeasurable effect on all sectors of society, and a fuller range of possibilities is open to minorities than was even conceivable in the thirties or even the sixties. The plan plotted out by Houston, Marshall and others in 1945 is remarkable in that it constituted an attack on the legal structures of racism which ultimately succeeded in eroding the social causes of racism.

Marshall was a judge in a Federal appeals court in the early sixties, and in 1965 became the solicitor general under LBJ Johnson then appointed Marshall to the Supreme Court in 1967. Justice Marshall sat on the Court during one of the most important eras in modern legal history. On January 22, 1973 he joined with the majority opinion written by Justice Blackmun in the case of Roev. Wade, which affirmed that the right to an abortion is a fundamental part of the right to privacy, and that the right to privacy is implicit in the Constitution.

His distinguished career on the bench is too long to explore in depth here. On the Court he championed the rights not only of African-Americans and other minorities, but also the rights of individuals in general. He was the very model of a modern judicial activist.

Justice Marshall was a feisty, combative, opinionated man who brought a definite ideological agenda to the Supreme Court, and his impact on the Court will endure for many years. He is a good example of how a consistently applied beliefs can become a powerful force for self-motivation. On the Supreme Court he was more than the first African-American Justice, he was an aggressive advocate of the individual rights of all Americans — which makes it all the more ironic that he was replaced by a man who will never be anything more than a mediocre token, Justice Clarence "Uncle" Thomas.

Justice Thurgood Marshall was more than just the right man at the right time, he was a righteous man who created the right time.

"Drugs," from page 5

use has been well documented. Additionally, 49 percent of students who drank every day also preferred having drugs available on campus.

Alcohol and other drugs are present on campuses in proportions that present challenges not only to students, faculty and administrators, but to the college health providers who are involved in prevention programming efforts. These professionals must respond directly to the health-related problems resulting from student substance abuse.

Yet the situation is not as overwhelming as it seems. Thirty-three percent of the college students who responded to this study do not want alcohol available on campuses, and 87 percent do not want other drugs available. Positive trends found in the 1989-1990 and 1990-1991 academic years show a slight decline in the number of drinks consumed per week and the number of alcohol binges in the last two weeks. Additionally, the survey indicated a significant decline in the use of almost all drugs.

The use of alcohol and other drugs by students continues to present many challenges to the health professionals. However, by working together, students, health center staff, and administrators can discover solutions that will impact students' behavior and attitudes towards substance abuse. Over the past decade, the phenomenon of cigarette smoking has become increasingly unacceptable. This process involved large numbers of individuals coming together to make their presence felt. College health professionals are in a position to lead campus efforts to achieve similar results with regard to alcohol and other drug use.

This article has been reprinted from the American College Health Association Action Newsletter, Vol. 32, No. 2, by permission of the Association. Special thanks to Carol Thornton, RN, of WC Health Services, for making this information available.

"Huck," From page 2

from our surface well turned the drinks first greenish then black. I was already annoyed by the manner in which they served themselves to my fathers liquor supply, so when the canapes ran low, I served salted Ken-L-Ration on Ritz crackers. Nobody noticed. It is but a small step to road-kill shish-kebab.

Among the two-fisted drinkers was the librarian. On the verge of his departure, he boasted that over all his years of service, his water carafe had never contained water.

The man was a notable wit, a mine of truly intellectual jokes, some of which I recall to this day. I further recall his boast that he kept his pornography in the open stacks. How was it that nobody ever found it, I asked. Using the Dewey Decimal System, it was shelved with religious philosophy. Nobody ever went near it.

It was the impossibility of heating the old farmhouse which led me to take a room in Centreville. The dear sweet old lady had not received the message about the Depression being over, and rented me a furnished room for five dollars a week. For that, I was more than happy to listen to her stories. One of them was about her attendance at the second inauguration of Grover Cleveland.

We were on the old academic schedule in those days, a relic of when schools closed for the summer to free up an agricultural labor supply. The academic year thus began very late in September — one might say, between the harvest moon and the hunter's moon — and dragged on into June.

The worst part was coming back after Christmas vacation to face a rump two weeks of classes and late January finals. Usually, papers due cast a pall over the vacation time of at least the conscientious students. Then we would gather again, in the pits of January, and all try to remember where we were in the classwork.

One January we had a fairly decent snowstorm. My finals were all mimeographed and in the office, luckily for me. In good conscience, I could phone my department chairman and whine regretfully about the impossibility of driving up to Chestertown.

And so, while my students laboured through the exam, this particular "professor of economics" was bellywhopping down Turpin's Hill. I still relish the thought!

Dr. Susan Huck
Church Hill

"Inauguration," From page 4

comrades and I decided to sit down and enjoy the festivities. And it was fantastic except for some idiot that brought his portable television in order to watch some kind of sporting event during the entire thing.

We witnessed one of the most invigorating and phenomenal assemblies of stars that will ever be brought together. We saw, to name a few, Michael Jackson, Whoopi Goldberg, Aretha Franklin, Diana Ross, James Earl Jones, Michael Stipe, Ray Charles, Sidney Poitier, Jack Nicholson, Kenny Rogers, Lauren Bacall, Stevie Wonder, Dionne Warwick, Luther Vandross, Harry Belafonte, Oprah Winfrey, Quincy Jones, Stephen Stills, Mary Chapin Carpenter, Ted Danson, Bob Dylan, and Barbara Streisand. With such stars, how could anyone have a bad time?

It eventually came time for us to leave. And we thought that we should leave before everyone else decided to leave. But along the way, we got sidetracked by the most spectacular fireworks display that could possibly have been arranged. We were standing there, in front of the Washington Monument, witnessing the dawn of a new day and we could feel the pride and the happiness being exuded from everyone present.

In fact, I even had a fleeting thought that I was actually glad to be an American, a thought that I do not think that I have experienced since before that evil Republican Regime. And as we were leaving this historical event, we saw hundreds of thousands of Americans that were also proud to be part of this historical moment: the American Re-Union. Let's hope that the entire American population can learn from just a fraction of its members that it is time for Americans, as a country, to start respecting each others' differences, to live with them, and to start turning this country around for the better.

$5 off any service over $20 with ad
(one ad per customer)

The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office

778-2805 — ARD 21600

Women's swimming Falls to Dickinson

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

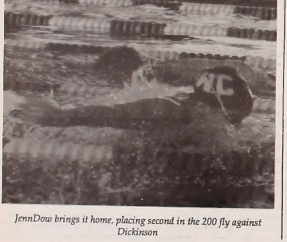
Despite outstanding performances from Jen Green and Colleen Roberts, the women's swim team fell to Dickinson 114-67.

"The women had great swims today," Coach Kim Lessard said. "We need to just keep focused on our times and do the best we can."

Roberts won the 200 individual medley and the 200 breaststroke as well as swimming on the second place 400 medley relay.

Green once again broke her 200 backstroke school record with a time of 2:22.46. She also swam on the medley relay with Roberts and place third in the 200 freestyle.

"They continually swim well, even though the team isn't winning," Coach Lessard said of Green and Roberts.



Jen Dow and Amy Draper joined Green and Roberts on the medley relay. Dow also finished second in the 200 butterfly and swam on the first place 400 freestyle relay with Ramsey Bigham, Denise Hakanson and Karen Prendergast.

Draper finished fourth in the 200 butterfly behind Dow and third in the 500 freestyle. Hakanson finished second in the 50 freestyle and third in the 100 freestyle.

Prendergast added a third and a fifth place, while Bigham swam fifth in both the 50 and 100 freestyle. With only seven swimmers competing on Saturday, Lessard feels they are a better team than the score indicates.

"They are working hard, and it will pay off," she said.

The women's team's next meet will be February 3 at Bryn Mawr.

JennDow brings it home, placing second in the 200 fly against Dickinson

Washington relays message

Men's swimming topples MAC powerhouse

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

Dickinson College's swim team visited the Casey Swim Center last Saturday. After two years of easy victories, their men's team expected another win.

However, the Shoremen shocked the Red Devils on the strength of two relays and good overall depth, as Washington team of Dave Cola, Peter Ward, Ty McCarthy and Chris Freisheim had to win their race to win the meet. They succeeded in a school record time of 3:23.33.

"Everybody came through when they had to," Freisheim said of the meet victory. "It was a total team effort."

The meet began with an upset of sorts in the 400 medley relay. The team of McCarthy, pulled the upset by a 106.5-97.5 score.

"We're a small team, but we swam great today," Coach Kim Lessard said. "We had many really fast times for January, and this team will keep getting faster."

Relays were definitely the key to the meet, as Washington won the 400 medley relay and the 400 freestyle relay. Leading the meet by only four points with one event to go after Jason Campbell's win in the 200 breaststroke, the 400 freestyle Julien Gaudion, Scott Steinmuller and Freisheim took first place to give the Shoremen an 11-6 lead.

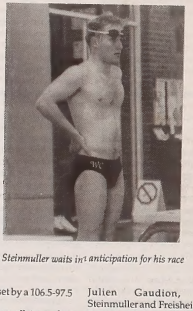


Photo by Sarah Fayerberg

Scott Steinmuller waits in anticipation for his race

In the 1000 freestyle, Dave Cola finished first and David Czekaj followed in third, as the Shoremen extended their lead to 24-12. In winning, Cola shattered his old school record by eight seconds with a time of 10:26.16.

"After watching the first relay, I was pumped," Cola said. "I felt that everyone had to do their best if we were to win the meet."

In the 200 freestyle, team captain Freisheim swam from behind into a second place finish, and in the 50 freestyle Campbell won in a time of 23.0. Peter Ward closed out the first five events by winning the 200 individual medley, breaking his own school record with a time of 2:08.79. The Shoremen led 51-42 at the first break.

However, after Steinmuller finished second in the 200 butterfly, and Campbell was touched out at the wall in the 100 freestyle with McCarthy finishing third, Dickinson took its first lead in the meet.

Washington won the next two events, as Ward won the 200 backstroke, and Cola and Steinmuller finished first and third in the 500 freestyle. With these efforts, the Shoremen recaptured the lead 85-82. Campbell's win in the 200 breaststroke led into the important 400 freestyle relay which decided the meet.

"It was a definite momentum builder going into championships," Freisheim said. "It also shows our improvement over last year when they killed us."

Jon O'Connor, David Kraft, and Andy McKim provided team depth to help in the victory. With the win, the Shoremen move to 4-2 on the season and should have a cake walk through the rest of the dual meet season. Beating Dickinson shows the strength of the men's team this year, as the Red Devils finished fifth in the MAC a year ago.

"With the WC men knocking off Ursinus, then Widener, and now Dickinson, it's a quick improving team," Coach Lessard said. "Everyone had to do well to win."

Drop-Off Laundry
We will professionally wash, dry, hang, and fold your clothing, $.60 lb., $6.00 minimum, same day service
Laundromat Dry Cleaning
Kent Laundry
607 High Street
778-3551

Pip's Discount Liquors
Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER – CHILLED WINES
QUANTITY DISCOUNTS BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES
TELEPHONE 778-6128
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA, CHESTERTOWN

IFC Report

The brothers of Kappa Alpha Order have named their officers for the 1993-94 season. Jeff Grafton, Chris Berghaus, and Lionel Dyson were elected President, Vice-President, and Recording Secretary, respectively. The remaining officers, appointed by Grafton and the elected council, are as follows: Ken Pipkin, Corresponding Secretary; Brian Tarlton, Historian; Charles Bucknor, Treasurer; Deepak Raja, Parliamentarian; Ben Smythe, Sergeant-at-Arms; and Gordon Scherer, Ritualist. —Andrew Parks

Fraternity Rush

Any man whoo is interested in rushing a fraternity or is unsure as to whether or not they wish to rush is encouraged to attend any or all of these events. Feb. 2, Kappa Alpha Order - Informal 7-11pm; Feb. 3, Theta Chi - Informal 7-11pm; Feb. 4, Phi Delta Theta - Informal 7-11.

Men's Hoops Wins Two in a Row

The Washington College men's basketball team evened its record at 8-8 overall and moved to 2-0 in the MAC Southeast with league victories over Swarthmore (72-64) and Haverford (82-64) last week. In the win over Haverford, senior center Darren Vican (Milford, DE/Milford) scored his 1,000th career point, becoming the 23rd Shoremen to reach that level.

The Shoremen entered MAC Southeast play looking to stop a skid that saw them lose four of their last five contest. Losses to Lebanon Valley (69-93), Elizabethtown (78-87), Salisbury State (69-91) and Western Maryland (73-88) dropped Washington's record to 5-8 before the team regrouped to post a 78-71 victory over a winless Gallaudet squad.

Mike Swanson takes it strong to the hoop, as Basel hustles his way into another ELM photo

Photo by Sarah Fegenheim

Vican topped the Washington scoring list with 26 points on 13-for-23 shooting and pulled-down a game high nine rebounds against the Bison. Senior guard Peter Basel (Garden City, NY/Garden City) hit for 21 points and dished out five assists in a game that saw the Shoremen pull away from a 35-35 halftime tie. Junior forward Geoff Rupert (Sykesville, MD/South Carroll) put in a solid all-around game, scoring 17 points, handing out five assists, and snatching a career-high six steals.

The team then travelled to Swarthmore and had a tough time shaking a pesky Garnet squad before finally capturing the contest, 72-64. Rupert earned game high scoring honors with 27 points while Basel chipped in with 18 and Vican posted 12.

On Saturday, the Shoremen used 53% shooting from the field and an 89% mark from the free throw line to overwhelm the Fords, 82-64. Stretching a 39-30 halftime lead to as much as 27 points midway through the second half, Washington won the battle of the fast breaks to score its second MAC Southeast victory. With 18:00 remaining in the second half, Vican canned a baseline jumper to score his 1,000th career point and finished the game with 12 total points.

The team captain, Vican has been a key player for the Shoremen for four years and was an all-MAC selection both as a sophomore and a junior. Junior Charles Cummings (Baltimore/St. Paul's) pumped in 19 points and was nine-for-nine from the charity stripe to pace the Shoremen offense.

Rupert added 16 points and Basel contributed 13. Sophomore Jay Devlin (Springfield, PA/Springfield) scored a career-high 11 points and was a perfect three-for-three from three-point land, keying a second half run in which the Shoremen pulled away from the threatening Fords.

—Sports Information Office

Widener's Depth Outlasts Sho'men

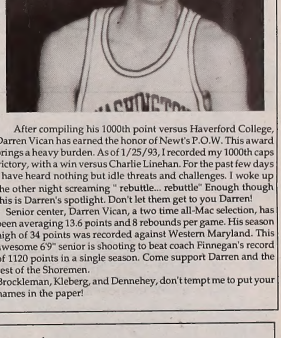
Brandon White
Staff Writer

On December 2 against Widener, Peter Ward, Jason Campbell, Scott Steinmuller and Ty McCarthy opened the meet with a victory in the 400 medley. Dave Cola took first in the 200 and 500 freestyle. Dave's 200 swim was a season best and he currently leads the MAC with the best time in the 200 freestyle.

Chris Freisheim and McCarthy both followed by scoring points in the 100 freestyle to pull the aquamen in the lead 69-62. Cola, Jon O'Connor and David Kraft then took first, second and fourth respectively to increase Washington's lead to 91-78. Campbell, Julien Gaudion and Andy McKim then finished first, third and fourth in the 200 breaststroke to increase the lead once again to 105-83. The aquamen finished up with a 109-94 victory.

Three new team records were set by two freshmen, Peter Ward broke the 200 IM record and the 200 backstroke. Scott Steinmuller took 11 seconds off the 100 butterfly to also set a new school record.

"What an exciting team win this was," Coach Kim Lessard said. "We thought we could win going into it but then lost a few close races, but the men never gave up and pulled out the upset."



The women's swim team took four first place finishes, but just could not match the talent of Widener's team, as they lost 124-68. Colleen Roberts led the women with two first place finishes in the 200IM and the 200 breaststroke. She also joined Jen Green, Jen Dow, and Denise Hakanson to take second place in the 400 medley relay.

Mimi Devlin won the 200 butter fly with Jen Dow placing second and Amy Draper finishing fourth.

"All three had excellent times for this early in the season," Coach Lessard said. Other Aqua women having good days were Nancy Whiteman and Denise Hakanson.

NEWT'S
Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

After compiling his 1000th point versus Haverford College, Darren Vican has earned the honor of Newt's P.O.W. This award brings a heavy burden. As of 1/25/93, I recorded my 1000th caps victory, with a win versus Charlie Linehan. For the past few days I have heard nothing but idle threats and challenges. I woke up the other night screaming " rebuttle... rebuttle" Enough though this is Darren's spotlight. Don't let them get to you Darren!

Senior center, Darren Vican, a two time all-Mac selection, has been averaging 13.6 points and 8 rebounds per game. His season high of 34 points was recorded against Western Maryland. This awesome 6'9" senior is shooting to beat coach Finnegan's record of 1120 points in a single season. Come support Darren and the rest of the Shoremen.

Brockleman, Kleberg, and Dennehey, don't tempt me to put your names in the paper!

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown, MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Janie Thomason
(301) 778-0898

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Men's Swimming Upsets Dickinson

See Article, pg. 11

WC Crew team shoots for world record

WC • ELM

Sports

Attempt on sports editors' lives! Vaughn taken in for questioning...

B-Ball on a Roll; Defeats Gallaudet, Swarthmore and Haverford

See Article, pg. 11

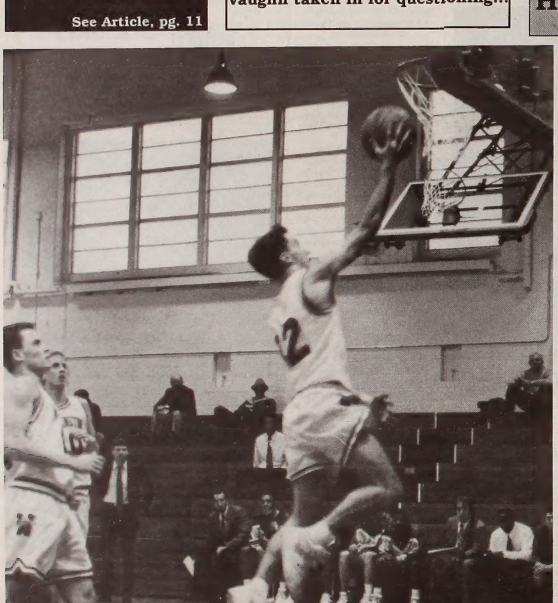


Photo by Sarah Fyerharm

Rupert and Basel confer, " Damn... That's a fat looking lay-up." Mark Kenah takes away from Rupert and Basel's scoring average on this play. Kenah, a freshman hailing from West Orange, NJ has become an integral part of the basketball team this year, winning the job as the starting point guard in his first season.

Darren Vican: NEWT's Player of the Week

Scores

Men's B-Ball
Washington	69
Salisbury St.	91
Washington	73
Western Md.	88
Washington	78
Galluadet	71
Washington	72
Swarthmore	64
Washington	82
Haverford	64
Swimming
Men
Washington	89
E-town	111
Washington	106
Dickinson	97
Women
Washington	91
E-town	107
Washington	67
Dickinson	114

Sports staff needs writers

ext 8857

ask for Matt

"Time to Shuffle the Deck."

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: sunny & mild H 55; SW wind 10-15 mph
Weekend: cloudy, windy, chance/snow; H 30s L 20s

Volume 64, Number Sixteen • February 5, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Lit House Update

• Any student interested in helping to plan the 1993 annual Blackhearts Ball should contact Tanya Cunicat 778-3965 or Becky Bryant at ext. 8712.

• At press time, a petition is currently circulating around the Lit House to propose extending the hours of operation had been signed by approximately 60 people. The resolution asks that the building be open until 1 a.m. seven days a week. Currently, the house is open from 8 a.m. to midnight; fears of continuing vandalism have prompted officials to set restricted hours.

After a four-week probationary period, the entire situation will be reviewed by WC Security and Robert Day, Director of the Literary House.

Jerry Roderick, Director of Security, said Wednesday that although efforts on the part of the students to 'save' the Lit House were a positive step, although he hadn't seen the petition and couldn't address it.

"We're all interested in hearing what the needs of the students are and in working out a resolution to accommodate them," Roderick said.

Any student wishing to sign the petition will find it posted on the first floor refrigerator in the O'Neill Literary House. Persons who signed it at Monday night's meeting may have to re-sign it because the proposal has been extended from only weekends to the entire week.

• The Spring 1993 Broadsides Series is currently accepting submissions of poems and short-short stories. All manuscripts should be sent to Erin Page through campus mail.

• The third annual Love/Hate Poetry Reading has been scheduled for Friday, February 12 at 8 p.m. For more information, contact Tarin Towers at ext. 8585.

Dinner to Recognize Members of 1782 Society

Martha Kimura
Staff Writer

On Friday, April 23, Washington College is planning a large formal dinner in recognition of the members of the 1782 Society. The 1782 Society is a group of patrons who donate over $1,000 per year of membership for the improvement of the College. Of the 300 members, half are from Chestertown.

This dinner, which is to be held in Baltimore, is designed to recognize and thank certain members of the Society. These members are Jim Price and Al Decker, who were co-chairmen for the Campaign for Excellence, and Walter Sondheim, who is an emeritus member of the board.

Change the SGA: Run for '93 Office

Amanda Burt
Co-News Editor

Students interested in running for Student Government offices for the 1993- '94 school year should be aware of some upcoming deadlines.

Petitions for potential candidates will be available through the Student Affairs office on February 18. Students should return them by March 1.

SGA President Jen Del Nero said that there will be a written notice on the bottom of each petition asking the candidate to submit a 500 word essay outlining why they want to run for office. The essay will be printed, along with the candidate's picture, in the March 5 edition of the ELM. Essays should be sent via campus or quick mail to the ELM office by March 1.

Along with the essay, candidates should be sure to include their name and telephone number so that a picture can be arranged to be taken for the SGA supplement.

Speeches by the candidates will be given on March 8, and the elections will follow on March 11. The time and location of the speeches has yet to be announced.

The positions available include President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer and Social Chair. The office of Social Chair can be held by either one person or two people. As there are no limitations or prerequisites for candidacy, all students are encouraged to run for office.

Students who are considering running for office are welcome to attend an informal meeting on March 7. The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Coffee House.

London, Middle States, and USPO

First faculty meeting covers range of programs

Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

The faculty unanimously passed a resolution Monday to execute a joint venture with the Grinnell in London program this fall.

Academic Council introduced a motion at the February 1 faculty meeting to take Grinnell College up on their offer to Washington College students of fifteen spots in their Fall '93 London program.

Grinnell's program involves sending approximately 40 students and a few professors to London; the courses are conducted the same way they are in the US, but on a London campus operated by Grinnell. The invitation extended to WC this year will include Professor David Newell, Academic Council nominee to attend the program.

Tuition for the program will not exceed Washington College's semester fees.

If the joint program this fall is successful, WC will look into establishing its own "WC in London" program. SGA Senators at Tuesday night's meeting seemed to be largely in favor of the program, although reservations about financial aid and competition with the Oxford and Manchester programs were brought up.

• President Charles H. Trout in his opening remarks addressed the continuing problems of Miller Library. "It will be very difficult to put Miller Library in a place where we can be proud of it." He added that he was proud of the staff, the improvements to the cataloguing system, and the way the library is run, "but not the collection, at least not in terms of quantity."

He said that an "anemic" portion of the total expenditures have gone to the library for "a very long time," and he will continue to reexamine the situation.

In a related report, Library Chair Robert Day announced that the whole of the library's special projects fund has been canceled. However, members of the Board of Visitors and Governors as well as the Development staff are interested in establishing a "Friends of Miller Library" program at WC.

• Jack Hamilton, Registrar, announced that the final enrollment figures are in for the semester: the total is 848 undergrads (down from 886 last semester and 799 last spring), 826 of those full time; and 46 graduate students (as opposed to 51 last fall and 63 last spring). These figures include transfer students and returning abroad students.

• Dean Gene Wubbels said that he and the department chairs had had a "fruitful discussion" of the "problem" of low-enrollment courses. "Anything affecting you will be reported to you by your department chair," he told the faculty.

Wubbels said that the Middle States Review Commission had "endorsed our

See "Faculty," page 9

Inside

Is the Birthday Ball A Dead Tradition? 2

He's a SuperFreak: Dude at the Sideshow 4

StartNow! How WC's Environment Affects You 5

"A View of Chestertown & the White House Farm" 7

Distinguished Alumnus Kicks Off Monday Series 7

Next Week: Convocation Update

Playing With a Full Deck?

As of Tuesday, the 1993 Spring ELM Staff is finally complete, and it may even remain that way for the rest of the semester. While Brian and myself have retained the same jobs (in addition to Pete and Gehrett, the behind-the-scenes guys), there have been a lot of staff musical chairs in the past month.

Most recently, Wistie "Wistie" Wurts has joined us as our new photo editor. We miss Andrew and thank him profusely for his help, but he has a higher calling this semester: Faulkner. George "Morrissey" Jamison is also new to the ELM as the A&E mid-season replacement, and former (spring '92) layout guru Justin "MoonPie" Cann rejoins the staff as the new Features Editor. Amanda "Beef" Burt has to write her thesis, so 'co-chairing the news committee' is Charlie "Spiderman" Linehan, a Bleacher Creature from the days of Pat. (Oh, those were the days, when I had nothing to do but A&E!) Two new Sports Guys now join us, Mr. "Doug" Hoffberger and Mr. "Matt" Murray. If these guys keep up their energy all spring, the back section is going to see more action than.... well, never mind.

In addition, I'm proud to introduce two new columns, which are on page five and need no explanation. Open Forum remains the place for you to voice your grievances (HINT, HINT). Our usual suspects return this semester on a weekly basis: Mike's Comic, Twinkie's Horoscope, Koon's Crisis, and Dude's Voices.

Scott's column is particularly brilliant this week; and Dude reaches out into the wild, wonderful, wacky world of the freak (that's a stretch — no pun intended).

Speaking of sideshows and crises, the Birthday Ball (or whatever) has captured a lot of recent attention; of the students, that is. At Monday's faculty meeting, President Trout stated that "Convocation Weekend is intact minus the trappings of the fancier Birthday Ball of previous years." He was also "quite surprised to hear in the ELM about a silent and uncooperative administration," due to the "huge number of manhours that the various administrative departments have contributed" to the project, citing his own office and Jessica Davies' as examples. I'm sure the efforts of Ms. Davies should not go uncommended. Nuff said. It doesn't take the eyes of a hawk to see that the ratio of traditional events canceled or downsized to those that have occurred or will occur in full force is a strikingly unbalanced one.

The Birthday Ball isn't a ritualistic shindig that can fall by the wayside unnoticed. The students and the alumni from years past come together with professors to mix in a setting which is formal enough to warrant decorum but casual enough to allow some interesting Conversations between, say, the 9020 set and Louis Goldstein. I was even going to go this year. I still may, but it's not as exciting a prospect when alumni, etc., are not officially invited but rather briefed about the fun student dance in the dining hall.

I feel like there's a kernel of truth somewhere in this whole story that's been submerged under fathoms of petty detail.

So the students are concerned? Then let's do something about it! The professors were supposedly up in arms about this issue as well; I would be too, considering that most of the other special events (dinners, etc.) which faculty enjoy as perks have been recently canceled. But Monday's faculty meeting was not the well-spring of controversy that I'd hoped. [NOTE: this is not a contradiction of last week's premise. Faculty tend to generate nice, stress-free, self-contained controversy.]

I want some Dr. Bonehead or other standing up and saying: "I know everything! I feel everything!" racing around Dunning Lecture Hall, spilling coffee the whole way, and then sending in the Klowns™ to secure the area while proceeding to throw Velcro darts at the offending member of the administration, who would end up with his head mounted on a plaque, preferrably one reading "Cater Walk" or "Casey SOMEthing."

But no. The shakiest thing this time out was a query into whether or not Muzac should be played over the phone lines when callers are put on hold. In summary, Monday's meeting was one big sedative. I guess that's an example of one tradition that just won't go away.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

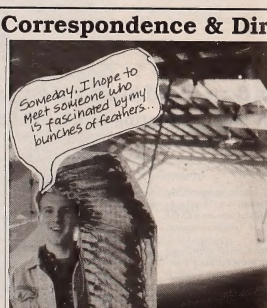
Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers
Photography Editor: Margaret 'Wurtie' Wurts
News — Sports
Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan — Doug Hoffburger & Matt Murray
Features — Arts & Entertainment
Justin 'M' Cann — George Jamison
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Avertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the Editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 8 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8565.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

Birthday Ball: A Dead Tradition?

A copy of this letter was sent to the Washington College Student Government Association and President Trout's office earlier this week.



To the Editor:

The Ballroom Dance Club of Washington College would like to express discontent with the changes in the traditional format of the Birthday Ball.

Historically, the Birthday Ball has been a very formal event, staged not only to raise money for the college, but also to bring together Chestertown, the college community, and its alumni. It is a celebration of the birthday of George Washington, long time benefactor and friend to the college, and a celebration of our continued commitment to an excellence in education and community.

The gentle music, elaborate dresses, and tailored suits remind the community of its traditions and old ideals and bring together a group of people committed to the continued existence of a level of quality found in the past. To radically change the format of the Ball would be to ignore its purpose and send the signal that traditions of this institution mean very little in the long run.

William T. Ball, Jr.
President of Dance Club

Native American poet Lance Henson sparked controversy last year when he announced that certain Indian garments on permanent display in Miller Library should be returned to the Sioux Nation. Patrick W. Attenasio, last year's Editor-in-"Chief", here models one of the headdresses in question. Watch for Amanda Burt's follow-up story in next week's issue.

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

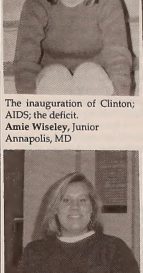
It must be an exciting time to be a liberal. For the first time in twelve years, there is a Democrat in the White House, and there is an electric charge in liberal circles. The liberal press is cautiously elated. There is a definite sense that a change has occurred in American political life.

It hardly matters that Bill Clinton won with a plurality of the vote. The liberal Democrats are now able to push through items on their agenda which were inconceivable only a short two months ago. The gag rule on abortion information was swept away with a stroke of a pen, and so too was the ban on fetal tissue research. The President also did not hesitate to address the issue of legitimizing the status of gays in the military.

There are some who question the wisdom of this and assert that the President will waste political capital on an unimportant issue. This is poppycock, of course. The Democrats in Congress who oppose the President on this issue do so cynically, knowing that a little gay bashing will go a long way towards winning the support of knuckle-dragging morons everywhere. Besides, if we can have gays in Congress, why not the Army? Certainly a gay PFC is less of a compromise to national security (whatever that is nowadays) than a gay Representative. This issue will be forgotten in four years.

The Clintons will make their mark on American life not only politically, but also culturally as well. Jeans will become acceptable attire for semi-formal settings. The Hillary Clinton look will be in as well, with sale of headbands and blazers booming. Jogging will become fashionable again. The sales of Big Macs will soar. It will be okay to have inhaled pot, as Vice President Gore has admitted to doing.

As an aside, I would like to point out that it has been quite some time since a couple of child-rearing age has resided in the White House. Remember how the nation went ga ga over the Kennedy kids? Well if the Clintons suffer a dip in the polls, all they have to do is opt to have another child. America loves babies, and a Presidential baby would resonate very well with the American public. Bush's post-Iraq popularity would seem paltry by comparison. Would it be an utterly crass political move? Yes. Would it work? Undoubtedly.

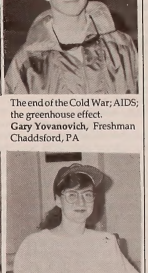


The President is the sort of person who prefers substance over style, and yet by seeking to emulate Reagan's early activism in office he shows that he has given much thought on how to be an effective President. If all else failed, he can rely on his hair. Clinton, like Reagan, has really Presidential hair. Whenever Reagan was at a loss for words, forgot his lines or had an attack of senile dementia

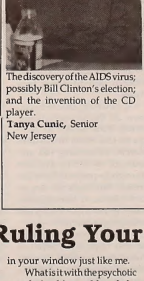
See "Koon," page 9

CAMPUS VOICES

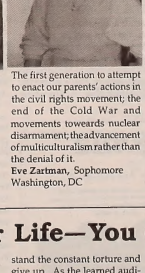
By Dude



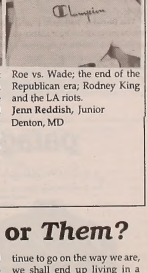
What do you think the three most influential events to our generation have been?



The inauguration of Clinton; AIDS; the deficit.
Amie Wiseley, Junior
Annapolis, MD



AIDS; the Gulf War; MTV.
Daniel Ames, Freshman
Baltimore, MD



The end of the Cold War; AIDS; the greenhouse effect.
Gary Yovanovich, Freshman
Chaddsford, PA

The discovery of the AIDS virus; possibly Bill Clinton's election; and the invention of the CD player.
Tanya Cunic, Senior
New Jersey

The first generation to attempt to enact our parents' actions in the civil rights movement; the end of the Cold War and movements towards nuclear disarmament; the advancement of multiculturalism rather than the denial of it.
Eve Zartman, Sophomore
Washington, DC

Roe vs. Wade; the end of the Republican era; Rodney King and the LA riots.
Jenn Reddish, Junior
Denton, MD

Open Forum: Who's Ruling Your Life—You or Them?

Marianne Culbertson is a Sophomore from Timonium, Maryland who defies description. Read this one twice. . . . It'll sink in -JMC

Last week I received a letter from my grandmother in which she stated her belief that I am a slut and that I am currently the lowest form of human life. She formulated this opinion when she entered my room upon dropping me off at the beginning of the semester. You see, when she stopped ranting about raising my GPA, a fact about which I am aware, she noticed that I had a WANTED poster of Jim Morrison on my wall. Quoted underneath is the following: "Wanted for lewd and lascivious behavior, simulation of masturbation and oral copulation, a felony." Point being that this poster, an obvious political statement, caused her to draw the conclusion that yes, my sexual practices are unacceptable. In essence, all you mature male monetary contributors to this college who have naked babes posted on your walls, be warned. At any moment your relatives, being the product of a lost and tortured civilization, may decide that you are gigolos and that you too should hang a red light in your window just like me.

Marianne Culbertson

What is it with the psychotic people in this world and the fact that most of their outbursts are directed towards the younger generation? Just what kind of results do they expect to get from negative reinforcement like this? Granted, there are some of you out there with liberal parents, but the majority of us have been badgered at one time or another by someone who believes they are an authority on the lives that we are living. I am pleased to say that I have never been driven to an attempt at suicide; I consider myself lucky.

There is a small population out there who, like the little match girl (haven't heard that one in a while have you?), can't stand the constant torture and give up. As the learned audience may know, the parents of the little match girl considered her to be a possession and thus forced her to live her life at their direction. Frankly I think freezing to death would be an exhilarating experience—lying on a snowy concrete porch step until silent, relieving numbness steals my senses and turns off my thoughts. I can just see my lips swelling up to the color of grape Kool-Aid, my tongue shrivelled hard to close the back of my throat so I can't taste the flavor.

How are those of us in the younger generation, who are constantly being reminded that we are not doing well enough at anything and that if we continue to go on the way we are, we shall end up living in a cardboard box on Alley Road, supposed to believe the human race is anything but damned? I personally feel that we (the younger generation) have two choices.

First, we can all sit down and write letters to all our friends and acquaintances, lamenting our past futile accomplishments, woes, and sorrows. Then after stuffing them into a beat up Tretorn Box from 1986, we can send our box of torment air-mail to that authority figure who has incessantly tried to live our lives for us. Meanwhile, while the box is being served in-flight cocktails ,we shall all

See "Authority," page 9

'Temporary Headline': Freak On Freaks

Doug "Dude" Smith is a senior English major who is obsessed with freaks. This essay is a postmodern study, as indicated by the innovative headline, in his experience with the Jim Rose Circus Sideshow.

I used to know a guy named Mike Smutko (his real name) who could perform any number of cigarette tricks. He once ate a lit cigarette in order to avoid detection by a teacher, and would often demonstrate his technique, flipping a burning Marlboro in and out of his mouth.[1] The one time I tried it, I wound up with a cigarette burn on my upper lip. Ever since then, I have followed performers who risked permanent bodily damage for their art.

I remember the feeling of disappointment that coursed through my body when they took "That's Incredible" (not to be confused with "Real People"; God, what a silly piece of crap) off the air. You remember... John Davidson, Fran Tarkenton, and Cathie Lee Crosby (not to be confused with Kathy Lee Gifford, of Slim-Fast fame) hosting an hour jam-packed with people who could drag Mack trucks with their teeth, or eat fire, or catch bullets in their teeth, alongside stories featuring such run-of-the-mill dreck as ghosts, spontaneous combustion, and Bigfoot. But even "That's Incredible" was inherently disappointing; the tricks weren't really performed live.

The magician David Copperfield once remarked, "I made the Statue of Liberty disappear, and people didn't believe it. I could've made New York City disappear, and the public wouldn't have believed it. They would've said I'd done it with video cameras."[2] I read later that the man who caught bullets in his mouth actually relied on trick cameras. Eating fire is easy enough to do, being merely an extension of my good friend Mike's cigarette trick, further aided by a torch's ability to burn off the oxygen in the body in a relatively brief amount of time. I found myself on the horns of a dilemma: how was I, as a legitimate spectacle-seeker, supposed to amuse myself?

Dude

Circuses used to feature sideshows, where you would find sword-swallowers, fire-eaters, as well as people more "structurally impaired."[3] You can't get this stuff at Ringling Brothers. These are people who get squeamish when a German with a whip sticks his hand in a lion's mouth. That's where the Jim Rose Circus Sideshow comes into the picture. This is the real thing. Gunther Gebel-Williams can save the dog-and-cat show for "Stupid Pet Tricks."

If you were one of the many people who went to last summer's Lollapalooza festival, you might have caught their act. If you shelled out 30 bucks to see that sad attempt to recapture the past and didn't catch their act, then you are a sucker. You should be giving me your money. You know me, and I'd probably put it to better use.[4] I wasn't foolish enough to see them on that particular tour, but all I could wonder after witnessing the show was, why hadn't these guys headlined?

I guess I should explain. Elaborate would probably be a better term... you can't explain someone jamming a meat skewer through their face for a paying audience of people. You could draw analogies to primitive cultures practicing ritual scarification and body modification, and how modern society, having refined these practices to a token handful (tattoos, circumcision, ear-piercing) while simultaneously stripping them of their meaning, now feels a need to return to the atavistic simplicity of early civilization, as evidenced by the rise of such groups as the modern primitives and New Agers.

I, however, choose to perceive all that as pseudo-intellectual horsehockey, to paraphrase Col. Potter in that commercial advertising old episodes of M*A*S*H, available through the people at Time-Life books.[5] But that's not important. Maybe to some glasses-wearing computer intellectual brainiac guy, but not to me.

I read somewhere that myopia is purely a result of civilization. It seems they did this experiment with Eskimos who hadn't been civilized at the time, and civilized them. At first all the Eskimos had relatively perfect vision, but upon exposure to civilization, succeeding generations gradually got worse and worse, until they all were more or less blind. Snowblind. Blind as moles. Blind as bats. They wound up developing a highly refined sense of sonar in order to get around in the world they created underneath the surface of the earth. They became a race of mole-people. Then they killed all of the scientists and most of the smart people. Except me. I escaped. But I'm getting ahead of myself.

The Jim Rose Circus Sideshow. Counter-clockwise from bottom: Lyle; the Torture King; Slug; Elvis/Matt Shields; Matt "the Tube" Crowley; Dude (pre-hair cut); Pat Attenasio, former Elm Editor and Sophie Kerr recipient, 1992. Photo Credit: Some longhaired American Indian that works at the Tower Records at Tyson's Corner with Christina, and drank some bile beer. He knows Elvis, too, who is now working as a substitue teacher in Northern Virginia.

Jim Rose Circus Sideshow is self-consciously not performance art. They are more followers of P.T. Barnum than Chris Burden. They aren't making a statement, they are simply making a living. But by now, the question on the tip of any red-blooded American's tongue must be, what exactly do they DO? What separates them from us in the grand scheme of things? Why should you give them your money, as opposed to your long-suffering and humble narrator?

Well, let's see... there's Jim "the Human Dartboard" Rose, of course, a performer and explorer of the pain threshold in his own right but also the barker (that's "announcer" in circus lingo) of the whole troupe. That's why he gets his name over all the other people. He's the front man. He staples dollar bills to his forehead. He sticks his face in freshly ground glass, and then picks the fattest person in the crowd to stand on his head. Mitch Mitchell was an incredible drummer, but there was a reason why they called it the Jimi Hendrix Experience.

Rose is the guy who probes the dark recesses of humanity[6] to find the other guys in the sideshow. Plus he's the only guy with a real name, with the exception of my personal favorite, Matt "the Tube" Crowley. He's the guy who blows up rubber hot water bottles with sheer lung power,[7] and asks members of the audience to smash his fingers with soup cans. Then there's the bile beer "the Tube" brews for the crowd, courtesy of an enormous syringe containing a 40 ounce bottle of Miller High Life and liberal doses of Hershey's chocolate syrup, ketchup, and Maalox, which is injected into his stomach through a rubber tube (hence the name) fed through his nostril and through his throat, THEN sucked back up and drained into glasses which the audience is dared to try. And there is no shortage of volunteers. I myself didn't sample any of the "bile beer," but I met someone who did, who described it as being "rather sweet." Not having imbibed it myself, I can only say it was rather green. Luminois green, like a radium dial on a clock.

Then there is the aptly named Torture King, who sticks needles through almost every

See "Freaks," page 8

patagonia®
SYNCHILLA® CLASSICS
The Synchilla® Snap-T-Neck has seen most of the known world. It could well be the ultimate multi-purpose utility garment. Now available in prints or solids.
20% Discount with W.C.I.D.
BAY TO BAY TRADERS
Cannon St. Court
Chestertown, MD
(410) 778-3442
"the patagonia place"
and other wonderful things
NOT TO SCALE
We're Located Behind the IRONSTONE CAFE

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 5 & SAT 6 PETE KENNEDY Simply One of the Best Performers You'll See Anywhere!!!
THURS 11 JULIE HOWARD Marvelous Voice...
Great Variety of Tunes, folk, rock, blues, originals!!

StartNow: This Week, Plastics

Christabel Garcia-Zamor is a junior majoring in International studies. This new weekly column is design to provide facts and ideas to update you on the state of the environment, its impact on your life, and how you can help to save both during your stay here at Washington College.

"The journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step." -Lau Tzu

Welcome to Start Now!, the new environmental update to be featured weekly here at Washington College. I decided to write this column because I am firmly convinced that everybody cares about the environment and would like to make a difference. For those who feel this way and simply lack some innovative techniques on how to help out in conservation, this column will provide you with facts that affect you, and actual things you can do in your daily life here at Washington College to save the environment and your personal health. Without a healthy earth, we could not survive.

This week, here is what you should know and what you can do about it... PLASTIC. What is it made of ? Where can it be found? Here are some scary facts about its toxicity.

As I sit here and write this column, I am amazed to note how much around me is composed of plastic! The computer, my watch, the buttons on my shirt, my artificial leather sandals, the smoke detector, the window frame, the chair I am sitting on, the ceiling and light covers, the telephone, the trash bags in the cans (which are also made of plastic), the floormat, all my writing utensils, the microwave and refrigerator...nearly 75 percent of everything around me is composed entirely or in part of plastic! The situation is the same for every one of us here at WC.

Just creating plastic destroys the environment. The manufacturing of foam plastics releases chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) into the stratosphere, where a single molecule of CFC can destroy many ozone molecules, thus thinning the protective layer that shields us from radiation. The result has been a large increase in skin cancer, eye problems and the suppression of photosynthesis.

The heat generated from the increased radiation is melting our ice caps, and water levels are rising at an average of seven feet per year. If global warming continues at its present rate, by the year 2050 cities will become unbearable, with Washington, DC estimated to experience twelve days of the year at or above 100 degrees Fahrenheit, and eighty five days above ninety degrees Fahrenheit.

These chemicals are also deposited into our streams and dumped anywhere else manufacturers can illegally stash them. These substances kill or mutate organisms whose existence in the food chain impacts us. Eight out of ten Americans live near a hazardous waste site. There are over 15,000 uncontrolled hazzardous waste landfills and 80,000 contaminated lagoons in the United States. The lesser known fact about the chemicals produced by the production of plastic is that the majority of them are classified by the United States government as toxic waste.

Americans throw away a total of 2.5 million plastic bottles every hour, amounting to 30 percent of everything we throw away, and that amount is growing. There is no such thing as bio-degradable plastic— this just means that a biodegradable additive, such as cornstarch, has been added. Plastic will not biodegrade.

In addition, plastic is very difficult to recycle because it is made from petroleum, and there have been thousands of different combinations created, with each combination exhibiting different physical and chemical properties. It is impossible to restore all of these to their original form. To date, 7 million artificial chemical compounds have been synthesized. Also note that petroleum is a non-renewable substance that is more urgently needed for heating and transportation.

Here is how you can make a difference:

•Bring your own cloth, netted, or re-usable plastic bag with you when you go shopping. So many people are doing it now that you will not look like a geek. If you must get a bag, ask for paper. Cloth carryalls can be purchased at the bookstore, netted bags at Creative Cookery on Cross St., and nylon fiber bags can be obtained at Superfresh. (The WC bookstore bags are particularly durable for re-use).

•If you buy six-packs of beer or soda, cut the holes out in each one. Some 45,000 tons of plastic waste are dumped into the worlds oceans every year. Up to one million sea birds and 100,000 marine mammals are killed each year by six-pack yokes.

•Do not use Saran Wrap or other commercial plastic wraps. Avoid buying individually wrapped fruit and buy pieces loose instead of putting them into plastic bags. Saran wrap and other soft plastics (like the new soft-drink bottles) contain vinyl chloride, a toxic carcinogen which tends to leak into fatty substances (like cooking oil) and many other substances when heated. This means that microwaving with Saran Wrap, etc., is extremely dangerous.

•Use non-disposable razors. They cost about five dollars and you can replace the blade instead of throwing a plastic one away. It is not unusual for a person to use and throw away over 3,500 plastic shavers in a lifetime.

•Use fountain pens instead of throwing away plastic ones.

•Have a baby? Use cloth diapers. Disposable diapers are estimated to take up to 500 years to decompose in a landfill. They can also be irritating and potentially carcinogenic when it comes into contact with skin. Sixteen billion disposable diapers are dumped into landfills in the United States each year —enough to stretch to the moon and back seven times.

•Eating fast food? Do you really need that straw?

•Save plastic bags for toting or trash collection.

•Save film containers for storage of small sewing beads or other items.

•Getting carry-out from the dining hall? Instead of styrofoam, get a re-usable plastic container from the administrative staff.

•Use cellulose storage baggies instead of plastic. Call Seventh Generation Inc. for a catalog at 1-800 456-1177.

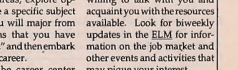
•If you cannot avoid buying some plastic, recycle it. Plastic food and household containers (laundry, shampoo, motor oil, shrink-wrap) can all be recycled if they feature a number on the bottom with the little recycling arrows. Make sure you collect plastic to be recycled alongside your aluminum recycling bins in your dorm.

READ ALL ABOUT IT:
Making Peace With the Planet, by Barry Commonder; If You Love This Planet, by Helen Caldicott, M.D.; Ecologue, Ed. by Bruce N. Anderson; The Natural House Book, by David Pearson.

Career News

Marie Mohler
Career Center Intern

Marie Mohler is a senior Psychology major interning at the Center for Career Development. This week begins a bi-weekly column updating all students on opportunities and resources at the center, located in the Spanish House.



If you think the Center for Career Development is a "senior center" where seniors go for job placement, think again. Although this is one of the many valuable resources available at the center, these resources are not limited to seniors.

Career development is a four year process that begins when you launch your college career at freshman orientation. The purpose of a liberal arts education is to sample many of the subject areas, explore options, choose a specific subject in which you will major from those options that you have "taste-tested," and then embark on a related career.

What the career center does is enhance your awareness, understanding, and accessibility to the large number of resources and options available for personal growth and career development. In addition, the center will help you choose the career avenue that is best for you.

For more information about the career center, there are flyers of weekly events and activities posted around campus, and announcements are often made via your mailbox. These flyers include information about job opportunities, available internships, life/work planning workshops, interviews, and much more.

Stop by the Career Center, conveniently located in the Spanish House on campus, and visit Dr. Cades and Vicky Sawyer, who will be more than willing to talk with you and acquaint you with the resources available. Look for biweekly updates in the ELM for information on the job market and other events and activities that may pique your interest.

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal Electrologist – Louise Leaverton, L.E.

Week at a Glance

February 5 - 11

Film Series:

Korczak

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

5 Friday

The Coffee House presents Friday Night Live, featuring Dark Horse Running. 9 p.m.-1 a.m. Free

6 Saturday

Alumni Basketball Game, Cain Gymnasium, 5 p.m.

7 Sunday

The Reverand Jesse Jackson will speak at Towson State University's Towson Center at 8 p.m. $

8 Monday

O'Neil Literary House Monday Series presents... Writing for the Non-Literary: Turning Declarative Sentences Into Dollars. A talk by John Boddie, '60. O'Neil Literary House. Tea is at 4 p.m., lecture is at 4:30p.m.

9 Tuesday

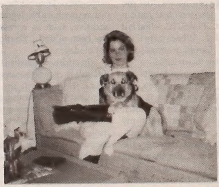
Gender Relations Awareness Alliance presents... Defining Feminism. Sophie Kerr Room, Miller Library, 7 p.m.

10 Wednesday

Career Developments presents Careers in Banking. Info Session with Steve Tacka. Sophie Kerr Room, Miller Library, 7 p.m.

Snickers Comedy Club presents John Henson. C-House, 8:30 p.m. $1 donation requested.

11 Thursday



GALA Meeting--Business at 9:00, Movie and Discussion at 9:30 Casey Academic Center, Commons Room

Friday Night Live

In their four year collaboration in Dark Horse Running, Dirk Schwenk and Penny Weintraub have generated a poise and style that is magnetic. On stage, they make a seamless transition between the sadly poignant "Last Saturday" and a rousing cover of Stevie Ray Vaughn's "Mary Had A Little Lamb." This is the kind of dynamic change which defines the performance and songwriting of this talented pair. "Often in my songs, I create characters and let them define the action, complete with their flashes of anger, joys, fears. . . the stuff people and relationships are shaped by," says Dirk, the principle songwriter for the act. While, at times, his character sketches are placed in historical settings or far away places, they are always developed in a personal way that allows the listener to step into their world for a moment. "And yes, one of them is usually me."

Student Profile: H. Lynn Clifford

H. Lynn Clifford is known around campus as a mover and a shaker. And why not? She hardly has any time for herself. Whether it be working on her thesis or attending one of the many meetings of the many activities that she is involved in, it is hard for a lot of people to get in touch with her. Lynn is a senior Psychology major with a Gender Studies minor that likes to make things happen. She started the Womens' Issues Discussion Group because she felt that women should have a place for open, intimate conversation, with other women, about their lives and troubles. She later decided to change the group in order to help men and women learn to understand themselves and each other. She called it the Gender Relations Awareness Alliance. Since its inception, the group has brought many notable speakers to campus. Besides founding and running GRAA, Lynn also holds positions on the Student Affairs Committee and the Academic Council Committee. She has been riding horses since she was two years of age and she is a devout vegetarian, not because it is trendy but because she follows its philosophy. After graduation, Lynn plans on driving west for a few months, with only her dog, Madison, for company. She plans to do a little soul-searching on this trip which she describes as "a human challenge and her challenge as a woman." Eventually, Lynn would like to earn a Ph. D. in alternative types of therapy. This means that she would like to help people learn to integrate back into society and to help them help themselves. And her longer ranged goals include writing a few books and, eventually, setting up a Conservation Center for Wolves.

A View Of Chestertown

George Jamison
A&E Editor

This past week, a very rare and unique painting was unveiled on campus. The 27-by-65 inch painting is actually four glued pieces of canvas. The importance of this painting not only lies in its depiction of Chestertown in the late-1700's; it also shows the orginal building that was Washington College. Dr. Robert J. H. Janson-La Palme, an Art Historian and professor at WC, explained the history and importance of this painting, and also the tremendous work that it took to eventually bring this painting back to Chestertown.

Janson-La Palme, being interested in the history of WC, wanted to find out what the original building looked like in 1788, the founding year of WC. However, this building was destroyed by fire in 1827 and was later replaced by William Smith Hall. Through an archeological investigation, Janson-La Palme found that the building existed on the same location as the Hill Dorms and that it measured 160 feet across. Also through his investigations of the building, Janson-La Palme learned about the painting, which was then owned by Rev. Dr. Richard Hooker Wilmer. In 1986, Janson-La Palme went to see the painting and after some persuasion by the college, Wilmer gave the Painting to good ol' Washington College. It was then kept in storage until the arrival of President Charles Trout, and he agreed that the painting should be properly restored. The restoration was completed in December of 1992, after a year and a half of work.

The importance of this painting lies in the depiction of the college building on the horizon line in careful detail and the entire town of Chestertown beneath it. It also depicts a view of the Chester River, a farm to the south of town, the Hynson-Ringgold House, the Emannuel Church, a tiny bit of the Kent County School, the parent of WC, and also the very house from which the painting was originaly removed.

The painting will remain in the entry of Bunting Hall until such time as the renovation of William Smith Hall is completed.

Boddie Kicks off Monday Series

On Monday, February 8, the O'Neill Literary House Monday Series will present Washington College alumnus John Boddie '60. Boddie received his B.A. in Economics just before the 1960's became "memorable." Today, he is the owner of Unusual Software, a consulting firm whose clients include AT&T, Xerox, Du Pont, CTE, and SmithKline Beecham.

He has written a book on computer systems development that was chosen as an alternative selection by a national book club and has since been translated into Japanese. He has written individual articles for several computer industry publications, including Computerworld, PC Magazine, and American Programmer. His second book, The Information Asset: Rational DP Funding and Other Radical Notions, is scheduled for publication by Prentice Hall during the first quarter of 1993. Boddie's talk, Writing for the Non-Literary: Turning Declarative Sentences into Dollars, will begin at 4:30, following tea at 4 p.m. His talk will cover topics from some examples of the ways in which writing and presentation skills lead to both personal and professional advancement, to the challenges that the current uses of computers and multi-media and the way they are spreading into everyday life.

Hunt Finds Nazis Tiresome

Gerard Hunt
AV Guy

If films aimed at the entertainment value of the movie industry are the only type of movie you wish to watch, then rent a movie. If you are interested in good movies that present an alternative view on world events, then Norman James may be the place to go. Although the story of a German-Jew was shown two weeks ago, I recommend returning to see what life was like for those who did not escape the city of Warsaw when the Nazis invaded. Once again, this is a true story. The title character, Dr. Korczak, is a well known doctor and radio personality who avoids several opportunities to escape the ghetto. He stays to help the children of an orphanage he runs, and fights for their welfare. Korczak's dedication is possibly the only uplifting feature of this movie, but then again, how uplifting can the true story of a Polish Jew in World War II be? The movie itself is put together very well and filmed in black and white to add to the horror of the events.

Unfortunately for the movie, most people are more than aware of the atrocities committed by the Nazis and have been sensitized against shock from a story of this nature. Perhaps it is because everyone has read, or seen, the Diary of Anne Frank ad nauseum. At least that story had suspense. When watching Korczak, it is painfully obvious that everyone in the ghetto will die, and this can make it difficult to sit through. Perhaps it is intended that we know in order to illustrate the courage and dedication of Korczak. There was little he could do, but he faced his fate with dignity.

Maybe the ending they use is symbolic enough, with the group disappearing into the fog. It does not matter that I have told the ending because the point of the movie is not the outcome, but the strength and courage of Korczak in making the best of a hopeless situation. I wish I could speak more highly of the film; after all, it is a good movie, but only if you are interested in the Jewish experience in the holocaust.

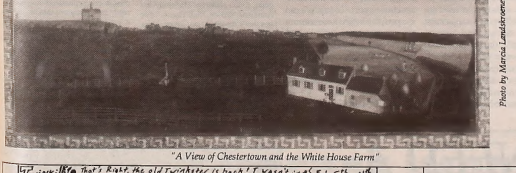


Photo by Marcia Landskroner

"A View of Chestertown and the White House Farm"

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday

238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620

778-6188

"Freaks," from page 4

part of his body, including his eye sockets and voicebox. He also walks on razor-sharp swords (yawn) and does the old "lightbulb in the mouth" trick we all remember Jackie Coogan as Uncle Fester performing on the "Addams Family."[8] The Torture King is the spiritual backbone of the Sideshow, an ascetic. Sort of like Siddhartha in that book. You know, Siddhartha. Then there's Slug, who eats bugs, swallows swords and plays keyboards. And then there's the Amazing Mr. Lifto, who plays Keith Richards to Rose's Mick Jagger. And what does Lifto do? Well, he... lifts things.

With hooks.

Set into various parts of his anatomy.

And which parts would those be?

Let's just say that during the Lifto segment, the spectator transcends being just a member of the audience. It's more like an audience of the member. Yeah. It hurts to watch, but at the same time it's strangely cathartic. Kind of like watching any example of "physical humor" on "America's Funniest Home Videos." Lifto is a freak. In my book, anybody who has a hole in his tongue is a fullblown freak. Raising a suitcase with a coat-hanger stuck through it just sort of clinches things. Reminds me of the old Eddie Murphy routine about the guy who shot the Pope: somebody who wanted to go to Hell but didn't want to stand in line.

I was able to meet the performers after the show; the only question I got to ask Lifto before he limped off was, "That's gotta hurt, right?" His answer? "It does." Dumb question. It should be noted, however, that Lifto had no shortage of women. He was a regular babe magnet, especially with all that steel set into his body. Makes you wonder how he practices safe sex... hell, it makes me wonder how he gets through the metal detector at the airport.

The appeal of seeing something like this live, on stage, in the flesh, is the same reason Evel Knievel's attempt to cross Snake River on a rocket is infinitely cooler than any stunt he performed successfully. There's always the chance that somebody's going to fuck up. My buddy Mike had another trick which he stopped performing soon after I met him. It entailed filling his mouth with butane from a cigarette lighter and then lighting it while he exhaled, spitting out a huge ball of fire. It should be noted here that Mike had a full moustache despite the fact he was only fourteen. The one and only time I saw him attempt this stunt was in the cafeteria of Mount Vernon High School in front of the entire A lunch (we had three lunch shifts: A, B and the ever popular C lunch), and he burned off half of his facial hair. Needless to say, he had to spend the rest of the day walking around with half a moustache.

Once in a while you have to toss a pebble into the well to prove how deep it is.

Another true story: Harry Houdini—a true showman and professional in every sense of the word, a man who used to lock himself up in straitjackets (plural),[9] chains, and boxes, have people dump him into freezing water while he held his breath, escape, and then wait underwater until he figured the crowd had had enough suspense—used to have a bit where he'd call out people in the audience to punch him as hard as they could in the stomach. He discontinued this portion of his routine when a skeptic suckerpunched him in the gut after a show, rupturing his appendix and killing him. Slight career setback.

G.G. Allin, famous rockstar/convict/sicko, is notorious for playing concerts where, among other things, he threatens to commit suicide on-stage. He has yet to deliver, but the joke's on his fans: he plans to take as many of them with him as possible. I'm sure the Jim Rose Circus Sideshow folks are professionals and wouldn't do anything they weren't sure of, but you tend to lose sight of that when the Torture King bleeds real blood, or people you know chug a glass of bile beer.

In the modern world, we are constantly surrounded by death. I saw a woman gunned down in Washington, D.C. over Christmas break, the first of what could prove to be another record-breaking year in the nation's Murder Capital, and it seemed like high theatre.[10] If anything, it didn't seem real. After the last decade and a half of slasher films, the blood somehow didn't look right.[11] The thought that someone could die (or at least hurt themselves really bad) on stage takes me back to the glory days of the Roman Empire and Dr. Amt's "Ancient World" class. Gladiators are considered barbaric, because they made murder a spectator sport. Today, we can see people like Jim Rose commit acts of potential suicide and actual self-mutilation. That's progress. People who write off this kind of thing as disgusting or stupid have missed the point.[12]

Jim Rose and his crew have as much right to do what they do as you have to light up a cigarette or walk down a street or vote for the candidate of your choice in an election, all of which are potentially fatal acts. If you don't like it, don't watch it. Don't give them your money. Give me your money. I'll promise not to hang irons from my nipples, or from any other part of my anatomy. These people do what they do because they like it, and without a doubt they'll continue to do whether or not you or I are there to watch them. Maybe it is a return to primitivism; maybe it is a spiritual lancing of our festering society. All I know is it sure beats boxing.

End Notes

[1]The other thing that I remember about Mike was that he had a sidekick... more like a permanent growth on his personal space... who was almost midget, as close to being an albino as one can be without actually being an albino, and a dead ringer for Tom Petty. He also shared his name with one of our nation's most renowned Chief Justices. Really. No fooling. I went to public school.

[2] Actually he didn't say this, but I'm sure he would if I asked him to.

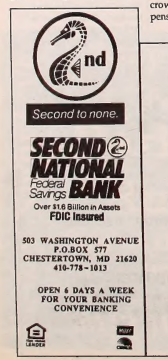
[3]Deliberate attempt at political correctness. Really I'm talking about freaks of nature. Alligator people. Hermaphrodites. Two headed babies preserved in jars of formaldehyde. That kind of shit.

[4] Made you look.

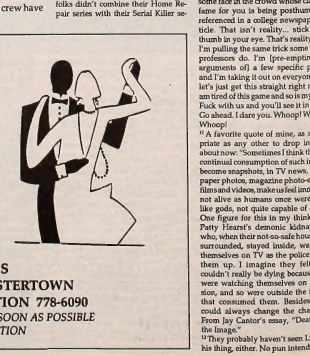
[5] Not having seen the show in about five years, the communist's repeated hammering of randomly selected ideoticlines has definitely killed any interest I have in reviewing the wacky misadventures of the 4077th gang. If I hear Mike-Farrell-as-B.J.-Honeycutsay "Yes yes that's the one" one more time, I'm going to kill someone. Hopefully the Annoying Girl on "Full House." Yes yes that's the one... You know, I just found out she's really TWINS. Child labor laws, it seems. What about us, huh? What about our rights? The American legal system just coddles criminals. My favorite movie of all time is "Death Wish," second favorite "The Star Chamber." Too bad the Time-Life folks didn't combine their Home Repair series with their Serial Killer series...sort of a how-to manual. Now I'm just gonna have to settle for playing my Joe-T records backwards for inspiration.

[6] Or in the case of the Torture King, the dark dumpsters of humanity.

[7] One cannot help recalling a similar feat by legendary Russian performer Vselav Botkin. Having no library in the desolate cave where I live like Timon in his log cabin, I am compelled, for the purpose of quick citation to quote an outdated (1977) edition of the Guinness Book of World Records: "Botkin, 1 hope, sufficiently approximates the current text, or is at least faithful to its spirit: 'HOT WATER BOTTLE BLOW. Englishman Stuart Hughes is one of two masters of this esoteric art. The bottles can measure more than 3 feet long before they burst." For a photographic appraisal of Hughes' feat, see page 470 of this edition.



[8] Did they do this in the movie? I never saw it. I'm a purist, I guess. Angelica Huston as Morticia never really worked for me. Carolyn Jones was and will always be the sexiest woman on TV. No, really.



[9] Jim Rose escapes from straitjackets, too. You can see his shoulder pop out of its socket while he's doing it. He doesn't do it underwater, but then again, if you want Houdini, grab a shovel.

[10] Before I start receiving hate mail and death threats from the percentage of readers out there who write hate letters and death threats for this kind of thing, I should point out that the average American witnesses over 11,000 murders on television by the age of fourteen. (statistics taken from the Society for the Eradication of Television Fact Sheet). I'm a month short of twenty two. You do the math. We're desensitizing ourselves to death. It's a horrible thought, but anybody who claims to feel any genuine sympathy or emotion for one example of the constant churning of the Grim Reaper around you should be locked in the trunk. Not to return to the M*A*S*H theme, but when they killed off McLean Stevenson's character, I received several irate letters saying things like "You can't do this, Col. Blake is like family." Actual physical threats were issued. The writers' response: "Lots of people have died in every episode of the series already several seasons into its run. If you have a hard time dealing with a go to whom the phrase 'bigger and better things' translates into 'Hello, Larry'," then something like Vietnam is a waste you tears on people who deserve them, not some face in the crowd whose claim to fame is you is being posthumously referenced in a college newspaper article. That isn't reality... stick your thumb in your eye. That's reality. Ya. I'm pulling the same trick some of my professors do. I'm (pre-empting the arguments of) a few specific people and I'm taking it out on everyone. But let's just get this straight right now: I am tired of this game and so is my staff. Fuck with us and you'll see it in print. Go ahead. I dare you. Whoop! Whoop! Whoop!

[11] A favorite quote of mine, as appropriate as any other to drop in right about now: "Sometimes I think that the continual consumption of such images become snapshots, in TV news, newspaper photos, magazine photo-essays, films and videos, make us feel immortal; not alive as humans once were, and like gods, not quite capable of death." One figure for this in my thinking is Patty Hearst's demonic kidnappers who, when their not-so-safe house was surrounded, stayed inside, watching themselves on TV as the police burst them up. I imagine they felt they couldn't really be dying because they were watching themselves on television, and so were outside the flames that consumed them. Besides, they could always change the channel." From Jay Cantor's essay, "Death and the Image."

[12] They probably haven't seen Lifto do his thing, either. No pun intended.

"Authority," from page 3

take those lives away from the authority figures and give our souls to yet another unknown figure on high.

Second, we can accept that through the duration of our lives we will be tortured by such simply grotesque things as hangnails which bleed and peel, bleed and peel, till there is nothing but pulp left, all of course resulting in the inevitable end, as it is mankind's destiny to be killed off.

So, shall we sit and wait for the inevitable while enduring grotesque torture or pull out our old shoeboxes and avoid the whole damn thing? I personally will opt for the third selection, which I didn't mention before: As the red light bulb in my window is currently dimming, I shall replace it with a green one and rebel against the present past and future animosity of the older generations taking my life for my own. No, I will not be accepting propositions of any kind, as I am turning to abstinence as a result of my authority figures' influence over me.

"Faculty," from page 1

design for self-study without reservations." The faculty and administration are currently forming task forces to deal with each aspects of the college-wide academic review.

He added that data from the various college reports put out in current years, which is maintained by Helen Kerr, Director of Institutional Research, "has been rather tightly held in the past," Wubbels said. "This seems to be rather counterproductive — we can't do Middle States at all if we continue to hoard data ... and I feel, if there's any question, we should err on the side of generosity."

"Certain information, such as faculty salaries by individual, and student academic records by individual, will be kept confidential," said Wubbels, adding that other archives should be opened to the ELM.

• Dean Wubbels also reported for the Long-Range Planning Committee, which has created five new task forces: Admissions, Image and Marketing; Student Learning; Student Life; Student Futures; and Budget and Financing.

• Another new administrative committee was announced by Senior Vice President for Management and Finance Gene Hessey. The Safety Committee will have its first meeting in the next few weeks; issues will include regular review of accident reports, inspection of the campus, and training sessions for employees.

SGA Senators suggested at their Tuesday meeting that a student(s) be included on this committee.

• Professor Nancy Tatum expressed concern about the speed, or lack thereof, of the mail service. Professor Steven Cades explained that the change in the handling of the mail was responsible for the consequential speed decrease: while formerly handled by college employees, the Post Office now collects and delivers the mail on its regular route. Hessey said he would address the matter with the Postmaster of Chestertown.

"Koon," from page 3

he could just kick back and count on his hair to pull him through. All the really great Presidents had great hair; Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Kennedy. Bush had really unpresidential hair, which is probably a big reason why he was a one-term President.

America will be watching Clinton's every move, and we will find much to like, dislike and argue about. The Republicans in congress will sulk for a while, but they will probably find that Clinton will be more accommodating to their desires than Reagan and Bush ever were to those of congressional Democrats.

Who, then, are the big losers in this past election? When one recalls the Republican Convention, the answer shines out like a beacon: right-wing Christians. Whenever a Republican was in the White House, the fundamentalists had a measure of political legitimacy. In Dallas, the Republican platform reflected the importance of this constituency. Now they are clearly on the outs, and many Republicans are wondering if their fundamentalist allies do them more harm than good.

The mistake the Republicans made was to attach too much importance to the fundamentalist vote. My fellow South Carolinian, Lee Atwater, attempted to rectify this by asserting that Republican opposition to abortion was not monolithic and that there was room for ideological diversity within the party. But Bush's handlers during the election were too enamored of the coalition which brought Reagan to Washington to let go of the anti-abortion position. Although it may be argued that the abortion issue is not one which generally works to the benefit of pro-choice candidates, I believe that, given the fact that Clinton's margin of victory was rather narrow, this issue may have worked in his favor.

A 1980 Conservative Digest article asserted that the big issues for fundamentalists were busing, abortion, pornography, education, traditional Biblical moral values and quotas. On the issues of busing and quotas the racism of fundamentalism is exposed. Although Jesus himself asked water of the Samaritan woman and acknowledged no boundaries of race or nationality before God, the Christian lunatic fringe ignores the teachings of Jesus and continually reveal their unchristian xenophobia on these issues.

As far as pornography is concerned, one need look no further than Jimmy Swaggart to see that these folks are hypocritical. At the pulpit they preach about the wages of sin, but in private they're knocking their knockwursts while perusing the latest issue of Nubile Coed Whores.

When a fundamentalist says he's interested in education, what he really means is that he wants to force children to pray in school. And when he says he's in favor of Biblical moral values or family values he really means that he's opposed to premarital sex, homosexuality, birth control, long hair on boys and Madonna.

The agenda of the Christian right is and always has been to take us back to the last century. In the 19th century they sought to take us back to the 18th century, and in a few years they may well regard the 20th century as the good old days of family values and Christian virtue. But the fact is that, although they are loud and obnoxious, they are far outside of the American mainstream.

Most Americans do not live their lives the way that fundamentalist Christians want them to. Furthermore, most Americans resent anyone telling them how to live. This is why the Christian right will never be anything but a sideshow in American politics. They will try to regroup, they will probably succeed in raising more money and they may even retain an important role in the Republican Party. But that's all. If everything goes well, they will be out in the wilderness for a long, long time.

Attention Seniors:

Submit your quote and picture for the Pegasus to Krissie Callahan or Mary Jefferson by Feb. 17

Olde Towne Barbers

Flat Tops — French Braids
Frostings — Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
LEAP OF FAITH
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

FREE IMPRINTING!! of first color on custom T-Shirts
Factory Direct!!
Sports Teams * College Clubs
Fraternity & Sorority Functions
Call now to find out how affordable custom printing really is! Mention this ad and get $25 off your first order! 12 pc. min.
T-Line (410) 778-5622

WAC Women's Hoops Destroys St. Johns; Falls to Bristol, 65-26

Eleanor Shriver
Staff Writer

The Women's Basketball Club continued its season last week with games against St. John's College of Annapolis and Bristol College of Tennessee.

The Lady Hoopsters had their second win of the season at the expense of St. John's. Like the Shorewomen, St. John's is in its first season of intercollegiate competition. The six Shorewomen proved to be too much for the home team despite the fact their bench doubled ours in numbers. Eleanor Shriver, Pam Hendrickson, and Erica Estep all combined for 40 of the teams 52 points. The final was 52-23 and the evening was capped off with a hearty ring of the VICTORY bell!!

This past Monday night, the club met Bristol College in the Cain Athletic Center for the second time this season. The team effort showed on the court with every player contributing to the scoring and rebounding. Nicole Zemanski, Estep, and Shriver led the scoring, while point-guard Hendrickson had a season high seven in rebounding. Kelle Eakin also proved feisty on the inside, grabbing three off the boards. All this hard work was not enough to overcome Bristol as the final score was 65-26.

Coach Cole is more than pleased with the team's progress.

"The gals are playing with a lot of heart and determination, improving on all aspects of the game," Cole said.

Cole also stated her appreciation of the fans' spirit and support. Come and catch the action (not to mention their new uniforms) again this Saturday at 3PM in the Cain Athletic Center as the hoopsters take on Chesapeake College. The Shorewomen's following home contest is on the 13th at 4:30PM vs. St. Johns. (Hint: This game could be their 3rd VICTORY and 1st on the home court.)

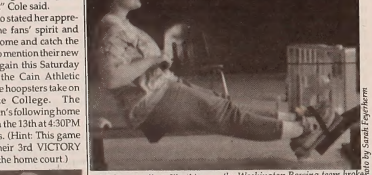
Kelle Eakin sets up for the pass...

CHESTERTOWN POOL & GAMES
Washington College Student Special
MONDAY 2:00pm.-11:00pm.
$2.00 / Hour (with I.D.)
COME SEE OUR GREEN ROOM
932 Washington Avenue, Chestertown, Maryland 21620
NEXT TO AUSTIN Carpet (410)778-9015 ACROSS FROM THE AIRPORT

Washington Crew Sets New World Record; 168 Hours

Doug Hoffberger
Co-Sports Editor

On January 29, at 6:00 p.m., the Washington College Rowing team succeeded in breaking the world record for consecutive hours rowing on an ergometer. Each crew member rowed for an hour at a time. President Trout rowed the first 400 meters and R.J. Eldridge rowed the home stretch. Professor Peter Tapke of Philosophy also displayed his rowing talents during this event.



After Washington College broke the record for the first time back in 1989, other teams and private clubs began vying for this prestigious record. Central Florida broke Washington College's record, then New Zealand broke the record, then the Thames River club took the honor until the WAC crew team came along and topped their mark.

"We wanted to set a record that nobody would be happy to try and break," stated Crew coach Mike Davenport.

During the record breaking period, the Rowing teams also set a record for most time Wayne's World has been watched in one week. Congratulations! Just falling short of this honor were Bugsy and Monty Python's The Holy Grail.

This fall semester the Rowing team held the Highest G.P.A. out of any organization on campus. While this bit of information has little to do with this article, I thought it impressive that even with their rigorous schedule of practices, the team was still able to do extremely well in the academic realm.

The Washington College Rowing team has had their share of ergothons and probably will not try and break the record again if their standing record of 168 hours is topped. They may want to try and go for the largest Ju-JU Bee sculpture record. Whatever floats their boat. (No pun intended.)

With great efforts like this one, the Washington Rowing team broke the world record with 168 hours on an ergometer.

Photo by Sarah Feyrherm

Swimmers Continue to Set Records and Personal Bests

Kim Lessard
Swimming Coach

On Wednesday, the women's swim team handily defeated Bryn Mawr College by a margin of 130-94. The girls "gave 110 percent" in this winning effort recording some of their fastest times. The men's opponent cancelled, but in swimming all exhibition events, the men recorded some of their fastest times.

Jen Green and Colleen Roberts recorded first place finishes respectively in the 100 back, 200 back, the 100 breast, and the 400 I.M. Colleen Roberts recorded the third fastest time for the 400 I.M. in Washington College's history. The 200 free relay team of Karen Pendergrast, Denise Hakansor, Robin Woolens, and Ramsey Bigham took yet another first. Bigham and Prendergrast continue to improve with their season's best swims.

Swimming all exhibition events, the men recorded some of their best times to date. Dave Cola smashed the school record by 26 seconds in the 1650 freestyle, & that's a mile to you and me kids. Dave Czekajswam his personal best in the 100 backstroke and the 1650 freestyle. Rounding out the men's personal triumphs was the team captain, Chris Freisheim, who etched his name in the W.C. history books with the 2nd fastest ever 400 I.M. time. Congratulations are in order to all the swimmers.

Jennifer Green waits for her race to begin. Green and the Shorewomen swam Bryn Mawr on Wednesday

Photo by Sarah Feyrherm

Men's Basketball Thrashes Ursinus After OT Loss to Hopkins

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

On Saturday, the Shoremen basketball team traveled to Ursinus College. Washington won the MAC Southeast matchup by a score of 68-51 to even their record at 9-9.

Ursinus stayed close in the first half, and Washington only led by five points at halftime. However, in the second half, defensive pressure from the Shoremen blitzed the host team, holding them to a mere 26% field goal percentage for the half.

"We got off to a slow start," Coach Tom Finnegan said. "But we played very well in the second half, as we ran our offense extremely well, and we shot very well."

Darren Vican led all scorers with 19 points to go along with 12 rebounds. Peter Basel scored 18 including one 3-pointer. Geoff Rupert and Charles Cummings also reached double figures with 10 points each.

As a team, Washington shot a strong 59.6% from the field as well as shooting 4-9 from 3-point land. Edmund Hicks (six points), Jason Ronstadt (three) and Mark Kenah (two) rounded out the scoring column for the Shoremen.

The Ursinus victory helped the team bounce back from a difficult loss to Johns Hopkins on January 27. In overtime, the Blue Jays defeated Washington 68-61.

With 1:09 left in overtime, Geoff Rupert hit a turn-around jumper to pull to within 62-61. However, Hopkins scored the last six points of the game to clinch the victory.

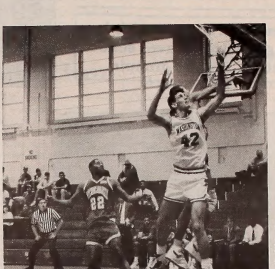


photo by Austin Walmsley

Darren Vican led all scorers with 19 points against Ursinus. He also scored 14 against Hopkins

"I thought we had a chance to win it," Coach Finnegan said. "In the overtime, what it amounted to was our opportunities to score. We missed our shots, and they scored."

Washington led 29-26 at halftime. Hopkins scored the first ten points of the second half to take a 36-29 lead with just under 16 minutes remaining. However, led by two Jay Devin 3-pointers, the Shoremen went on a 15-4 run to take a 44-40 lead with 9:15 left in regulation. Over the last nine minutes, Hopkins outscored the hosts 25-21 to send the game to overtime tied at 55.

Luke Busby turned in a sensational effort for the Blue Jays, scoring 27 points. Darren Vican led Washington with 14 points, and Cummings and Rupert both scored 13.

Even with the Hopkins loss, the Shoremen still remain at .500 after defeating Ursinus, and they are 3-1 in MAC Southeast games. Coach Finnegan believes the team is improving.

"I think we're playing a lot harder, and we're starting to come together defensively," he said. "The big thing to keep in mind at this point is we're 9-9, and we've only played six home games."

Washington faces Swarthmore in the Cain Dome on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Also on Saturday, there will be a women's basketball game at 3:00 p.m., and the Alumni game will be at 5:00 p.m. Directly preceding the varsity men's game, there will be a presentation to honor Darren Vican's 1,000th point.

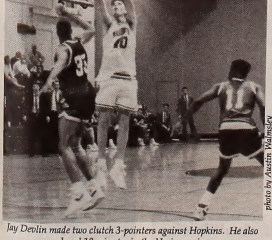

photo by Austin Walmsley

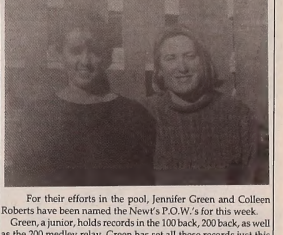
Jay Devlin made two clutch 3-pointers against Hopkins. He also played 18 minutes in the Ursinus win.



Sports Staff Needs Writers

If the student body does'nt want to see their sports section turned into a comic book type paper with all pictures and no text, then people should take the initiative to come see us or call ext. 8857.

We're easy to work with and I could go on for days telling you how funny we are. At any rate we need you!

NEWT'S
Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

For their efforts in the pool, Jennifer Green and Colleen Roberts have been named the Newt's P.O.W.'s for this week.

Green, a junior, holds records in the 100 back, 200 back, as well as the 200 medley relay. Green has set all these records just this year, and every meet she seems to better her times, therefore beating her own records. She also took the only first place finish versus a very strong Dickinson team.

Colleen Roberts, a freshmen, currently holds records in the 100 breast, 200 breast, and the 200 I.M. She is also part of the record setting 200 medley relay team along with Green. Look for these two girls to place at the MAC championships!

This section will no longer contain the humor that has been ever-present in the past. The sports reading public has given the sports staff negative feedback. "We mock what we don't understand." From now on the readers can simply leaf through the section stating, "Wow, he can really rebound", or "Gee, they're fast swimmers" instead of "Oh my, that's hilarious yet informative journalism" or "Yes, I like what you've done here." After all, that's what the sports reading public wants(?)

Tuesday - Saturday
Piercing - Hair
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Bandanna's)
Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0898

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Men's Hoops Stomps Ursinus

See Article, pg. 11

WC Rowing team breaks world record

WC • ELM

Sports

Vaughn, unable to cope with loss of editing position leaves school to become Reggae groupie.

Women's Basketball Demolishes St. John's by 29 points but falls to Bristol

See Article, page 10

Eleanor Shriver , in her first ever Elm photo, puts up a text-book shot while Pam Hendrickson boxes out for the doubtful rebound. Hendrickson and Shriver are both in the top three on the team in scoring. The women's basketball team defeated St. John's this week but suffered a setback with a loss to Bristol College.

Scores

Men's B-Ball

	OT
Washington	61
J. Hopkins	68
Washington	68
Ursinus	51

Women's B-Ball

Washington	52
St. Johns (MD)	23
Washington	26
Bristol Coll.	65

Upcoming Events

Swimming vs. Lebanon Valley Sat. @ 1p.m.

Men's B-Ball vs. Swarthmore Sat. @ 7:30 p.m.

Women's B-Ball vs. Chesapeake Sat. @ 3 p.m.

Ice Hockey vs. Salisbury State Mon. @ 7 p.m.

Jen Green & Colleen Roberts: NEWT's Players of the Week

Sports Staff Needs Writers

Call Matt at ext. 8857

"BEEF means never having to say you're sorry."

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: freezing rain
H 30s; NE winds 15-20 mph
Weekend: cloudy, breezy
H 30s-40s Lows in 20s

Volume 64, Number Seventeen • February 12, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Schroeder Family Seeks Legal Action

Charlie Linehan
Co-News Editor

On December 21 of last year, the President's Office of Washington College received a letter from Ernie Crowfoot, attorney-at-law. The letter contained a statement of intention to sue Washington College, filed at the request of the parents of the late Edward A. Schroeder.

The Schroeders, whose son was the victim of a fatal accident last semester while testing a piece of lighting equipment in Tawes Theatre, have filed the suit in the belief that Ed's death was caused by the college's negligence. Should the case ever go to court, Washington College could join the ranks of schools who, regardless of the outcome of a particular lawsuit, have had their budgets drastically reduced in an effort to defend themselves against such legal action.

The letter, which came as a surprise to the administration, was immediately referred to Ed Athey, principal in the firm of Fleetwood, Athey, Macbeth, and McCown. According to Athey, the letter was subsequently forwarded to the school's insurance carrier, which will handle preliminary investigations of the matter.

The extent of the action which has been taken thus far in the case does not necessarily mean that it will ever go to court. According to Mr. Athey, "It is not at all unusual to receive a letter like this and for the case to be dropped further down the road."

Possible events on which the case could turn would be the disclosure of the coroner's report as well as that of MOSHA (Maryland Occupational Safety and Health Administration), the latter of which was just released this past week.

According to Gene Hessey, Senior Vice President for Management and Finance, Washington College has been fined $1,200 by MOSHA for "failure to have electrical devices checked before use."

The particular device to which the report referred was the chandelier with which Mr. Schroeder was working on the night of his death.

Although President Trout was out of town when the MOSHA report was released,

See "Schroeder," page 8

Convocation, Forum to Celebrate George Washington's Birthday

Armacost, Elion, & Mikulski are Honorees

Calendar of Events, Convocation Weekend

Friday 19

2 p.m. Informal talk with Ambassador Armacost and students, moderated by Dr. Dan Premo, in Hynson Lounge. Refreshments will be served.

3:30 p.m. Student reception for Dr. Elion, basement of West

Saturday 20

10 a.m. Board of Visitors and Governors meeting

2 p.m. Convocation, Tawes Theatre (see article, this page)

3:30 p.m. President's Forum, CAC Forum Room

4:30 p.m. Reception, Casey Gallery

9 p.m. Birthday Ball, Main Dining Room

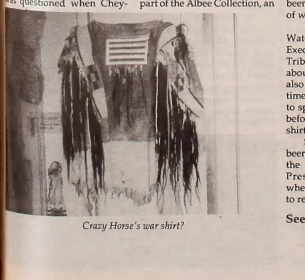
Three national figures will be honored at Washington College for their achievements in the fields of international affairs, medical research, and public service during George Washington's Birthday Convocation on Saturday, February 20. Convocation begins at 2 p.m. in the Gibson Performing Arts Center, and the public is cordially invited to attend. Remarks will be interpreted for the deaf.

Distinguished guests include Michael H. Armacost, U.S. Ambassador to Japan, Nobel Laureate Gertrude B. Elion, and Senator Barbara Ann Mikulski.

Instead of the customary keynote address, each honoree recipient will give brief remarks. Immediately following Convocation, each will join Washington College President Charles H. Trout for a President's Forum on "The Limits of Change." A reception will follow.

Armacost has had a distinguished career in international relations and political science. Prior to his current appointment to Japan in 1989, he was Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs, working under Secretary George Schultz for five years. He was Ambassador to the Philippine Islands during the critical period prior to the presidential election of Corazon Aquino. Before his ambassadorial appointments, he served on the Policy Planning Staff at the U.S. Department of State, as a member of the National Security Council Staff and as a Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense. Ambassador Armacost has published several commentaries on national security and foreign affairs. He will receive the honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Senator Mikulski got her start in politics as a social worker leading community efforts to stop a 16-lane highway from leveling historic Fells Point. Her fighting spirit has served her and her constituents well in a career that has taken her from the Baltimore City Council, to ten years in the House of Representatives, and now to a second term in the United States Senate. As chair of a Senate Appropriations subcommittee, she has assumed a leadership role on issues such as housing, community development, homeless assistance, pollution control, and expansion of the U.S. space program. A supporter of minority and women's rights, health care reform, and environmental protection, Senator Mikulski will receive the honorary Doctor of Laws Degree.



The co-recipient of the 1988 Nobel Prize in Physiology or Medicine, Gertrude Belle Elion

See "Birthday," page 9

Crazy Horse Saga Continues

Amanda Burt
Co-News Editor

Last year Washington College's right to possess certain Native American artifacts was questioned when Cheyenne poet Lance Henson visited the college to deliver a poetry reading on March 26.

Crazy Horse's war shirt?

He was specifically concerned with a war shirt that is on display in Miller library as part of the Albee Collection, an exhibit which showcases various different Native American artifacts. The war shirt is believed to have been worn by Sioux Chief Crazy Horse when he was killed and may have been stolen as one of the spoils of war.

Henson contacted Marla Waters, the fifth member on the Executive Board for the Sioux Tribal Nation to inform her about the shirt. Elm reporters also spoke with Waters at that time, and she said that she had to speak with the tribal elders before any effort to reclaim the shirt could proceed.

Since no formal claim has been made by the Sioux during the last year, the Elm asked President Trout last week whether he knew of any plans to repatriate the war shirt. He

See "Shirt," page 9

Inside

How Do YOU define Feminism Today? 4

She Went to Madrid to Learn About the Shore 4

You Recycle Cans, Why Not Recycle Jeans? 5

Two Alumni Come to Town to Give you a Job 7

Happy Valentines Weekend

Before I talk about anything else, let me bring up this 'dead issue': the crosswalk. Am I the only one who's noticed that cars approaching the X-walk are running more and more red lights? It's common to speed up at a yellow light. But it's also common for students to watch the globes overhead and start crossing the instant the light turns yellow, glibly assuming that cars are going to stop. Not so. They'll run that sucker going 60 to keep from waiting the 14 seconds it takes to stop. So PLEASE be careful when you cross.

That said, I'll tackle this one: Pledge season. For the undoctrined, this does not mean avid dusting. It means that the six official (and various unofficial) Greek organizations on campus are in the process of recruiting and inducting new members into a fraternal or sororal organization. As far as I understand it, rush is coming to a close, after which time "rushees" make their bids and begin, if selected, to officially pledge the organization of their choice.

Fine. I'm not even going to comment on how it must feel for the various (mostly) freshmen involved to be required to pull stupid stunts 24-7 if asked. Yes, I realize there's more to it than that, there's secret handshakes or whatever too. [Okay, okay, I admit it. I also know that there's community service, required study sessions, and genuine warm-fuzzy get-to-know-each-other stuff that's all very healthy for all involved.]

I would like to make the following 'request,' however. Even if the members of the organizations and their pledges have no problem staying up all night to do whatever it is they do, some of us don't have to. This is not a value judgment. But the last two years in a row, I was either awakened or otherwise disturbed by pledges of one sort or another

a) singing, chanting or bellowing at the top of their lungs outside my window or in my hallway

b) just plain screaming "oh god I am so drunk" en masse between wherever and home

c) etc. This covers any and all naked Greek rituals that take place in other people's buildings, as well as the common need to use the bathroom of the building you happen to be near (and then forgetting that other people really live there and vomiting or pissing on things not meant to be so debased, like say the floor).

Now look, be reasonable here. I'm not anti-Greek, but I am pro-respect, and I get the feeling that deep down, most of the Greek organizations are, too. But something in those ritual whatevers late at night is just, well, loud.

So if you want to go on a quest for so & so's panties [I'm not making this up] at 3 a.m., great. As long as she doesn't mind, and as long as you don't wake anyone up who hasn't agreed to be awakened.

Speaking of having a sense of humor, why didn't anyone go to the Comedy Club on Wednesday? I didn't go because I was making what you have in your hands (God I hope it's a newspaper). But I heard there were only 12 people. And nobody went to see the great band in the C-House Friday night -- and they were even FREE! Since I didn't feel like drinking, it was the perfect way to relax -- but here's the beauty part -- my friend H. (who actually is 21) could and did drink. It's not dry. It's just empty.

One more note: next weekend, Convocation Weekend, etc., there will be a lot of Board members and influential alumni on campus. Many of them want to hear what the students are thinking -- so tell them! Use the "President's Forum" (new name?) or the reception afterwards to voice your concerns to the people who have to approve all the big stuff, and who may have some fingers on some other switches, too.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers
Photography Editor: Margaret 'Wistie' Wurts
News
Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan | Doug Hoffburger & Matt Murray
Features
Justin 'M' Cann | Arts & Entertainment
George Jamison
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Avertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quicknet. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-3585.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

Dale Adams: No Offense Intended

To the Editor:

As President of the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange and as a student of Washington College, I feel it is my obligation to inform you about an incident that occurred in the re-decorating of the Coffee House last semester.

Members of the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange kindly volunteered to decorate a reserved space in the CoffeeHouse. A misunderstanding occurred as personal views were expressed on the wall rather than the agreed general views of the group as a whole. Some of those ideas appeared offensive to various people, and since they did not represent the group's ideology according to the constitution, we chose to 'white wash' the entire project and start fresh.

The CoffeeHouse now contains a display by Dale Adams which we consider to be a direct manifestation of all of the members' ideals, e.g. "Educate to Elevate."

We regret the fact that the display may have offended people, as no offense on the part of the group was intended.

Dawn O. Israel, President
Dale Adams Heritage Exchange

Premo Contra Controversy

To the Editor:

I have a correction and a comment on two matters about which you wrote in the last issue of The Elm.

First the correction. In your discussion of the Grinnell in London program on page one, you state that Professor David Newell was the "Academic Council Nominee to attend the program." In fact, Professor Newell's appointment had been determined by agreement between the WC Administration and Grinnell College before any discussion of the Grinnell program occurred in Academic Council.

My comment to the concluding paragraphs of your editorial. Although many of your readers, faculty among them, would agree with your characterization of faculty meetings as "one big sedative," I would suggest that your search for a "wellspring of controversy" is misdirected. Like most legislative assemblies, the real work of the faculty (and most of its controversy) occurs in its committees. Committee motions brought before the faculty generally reflect a degree of compromise, but I can assure you that the process does not guarantee uncritical approval. Having said that, I am concerned that present forms of faculty meetings, especially the "rush to adjournment before the dinner hour," may indeed act to discourage spontaneous discussion of issues that should be of interest to the faculty. You may hear more about that before the end of the semester.

Daniel L. Premo, Chair
Department of Political Science

Note: the "dinner hour" quote refers to a remark made by President Trout about keeping the time spent at faculty meetings to a minimum.--Ed.

OPINION POLICY

Letters Policy: The deadline for letters to the Editor is 6 p.m. Wednesday for publication in that Friday's Elm. The Elm reserves the right to edit letters for length and clarity. No unsigned letters will be accepted unless deemed fit by the Editors.

Open Forum: Longer opinion pieces, solicited and unsolicited, are published in the Open Forum column. No specific view or subject matter is deemed more acceptable than another.

These columns are open to any member of the Washington College Community. The opinions and ideas of the authors do not necessarily reflect the ideology of The Elm or its staff.

The weekly editorial is the sole responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief.

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

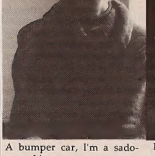
The Clinton administration has been in power for a considerable period of time now, and what has it accomplished? Nothing, absolutely nothing. I am shocked at the foot dragging attitude of the Clinton White House, and I am appalled at how quickly Clinton has gone back on his promises to the American people.

I know that there are some who will say that the only reason I am critical of Clinton is that I seek to position myself for another run for the presidency in 1996. That is an outrageous lie! I have other reasons as well.

I have undergone one of those fundamental changes of character which happen so often in American political life.[1] The other night I was at home watching Rush Limbaugh on TV (heckling him as usual) when suddenly a gang of aliens from the planet Nixon came in and strapped me to my recliner.[2] The head alien[3] sawed off the top of my head with a Ginsu™ knife AND STOLE MY BRAIN!!! They then replaced my brain with a synthetic brain substitute made of texturized vegetable protein and low-fat granola.

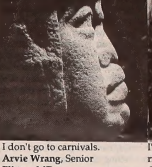
The next day I went down to the courthouse and registered Republican. I also began to see Clinton in an entirely different light. He is not really the moderate Southern Democrat which he outwardly appears to be. He is actually a nattering nabob of negativism who is opposed to family values, the American way, babies, motherhood, the Church, and Sesame Street.

It may seem that I am not giving Clinton enough of a chance, and that I am merely jumping on the big media bandwagon in criticizing him so early in his tenure in office. Be that as it may, I feel that the public has a right to know the truth about Bill Clinton, which is that he is actually a goddamn communist agent out to subvert the basic principles of Christian decency which are the foundations of our Republic![4]



It is clear to me now that Clinton seeks to involve us in another Vietnam in the Balkans.[5] By doing so he hopes to generate another anti-war movement and thereby activate revolutionary passions among the young and gullible. The ultimate goal of this insidious plot is to have revive the cryogenically preserved Abbie Hoffman and have him organize another attempt to levitate the Pentagon. That will open up a lot of valuable real estate, which will promptly be handed over to the Trilateral Commission, who will then proceed to build a huge facility to introduce massive amounts of tiuoride into the water supply, which will in turn cause our

See "Crisis," page 9



CAMPUS VOICES

By Dude

If you were a carnival ride, what ride would you be?

A bumper car, I'm a sado-masochist.
Christine Pabon, Faculty
Chestertown

I don't go to carnivals.
Arvie Wrang, Senior
Elkton, MD

I'd be a funhouse. I'd be the best ride in the park.
Cindy Matalucci, Freshman
Cape May Courthouse, NJ

Rollercoaster? (No...) Ferris wheel? (No...) A merry-go-round? OK, a merry-go-round.
Lisa Chobody, Sophomore
Stamford, CT

The Anaconda
Heather Feezer, Junior
Marriottsville, MD

The Rebel Yell
Cary Kelly, Sophomore
Salem, VA

I think that it would be the ferris wheel. I would not be an up-side-down ride.
Jemima LaClair, Sophomore
Kent Island, MD

Open Forum: Mr. Clinton Goes to Town

Senior "ChrisMarvChief" Rasmussen, in addition to having three nicknames, has an internship at the Maryland General Assembly, a major in political science, and an addiction to television.

I've been asked to write about the second most important media event of the week. The first, in case you haven't watched ABC's relentless promotion, was Oprah Winfrey's live, unedited interview with Michael Jackson. Jackson was going to "bare his soul" in this ninety minute interview, as if he hasn't inflicted enough damage on this country's culture with his Superbowl halftime show. An sample of this interrogation: Winfrey: "Are you a virgin?" Jackson: "I'm a gentleman."

By the way, what's the point of the halftime show during the Superbowl? It's always overproduced, even though this one mercifully didn't have "Up With People." Moreover, it has nothing to do with the game. For example, what is a musical number called "Heal the World" doing in between an event in which twenty-two unnaturally big players throw each other to the ground in a game which can be safely characterized as a metaphor for war? It's not that I don't like football. I love it. I like boxing too, but "We Are the World" isn't played between rounds. If I really wanted to watch an overdone event with big stars and bad muscial numbers, I'd watch Ishtar.

Christian Rasmussen

The event I actually was asked to write about was Clinton's first televised town meeting, in which he acted like Phil Donahue and avoided the press. His performance, at first glance, was terrific. He seemed to answer questions directly and with some amount of clarity. Considering the questions were of great diversity (meat contamination in Washington and laying off workers at Boeing, for example), it was an impressive performance. Stylistically, he used the format of a town meeting forum as well as he did during the campaign. He's comfortable with the format, and it shows.

Part of the problem I had with the town meeting was that he seemed to present himself mostly as a candidate for President, rather than someone who had already won the job. While he appeared to answer questions directly, he instead avoided saying what he would specifically do as President.

On domestic issues, he promised to disclose all in his State of the Union address. Unfortunately, with promises as diverse and sometimes contradictory as creating jobs, guaranteeing health care, reducing the deficit, etc., President Clinton has a difficult time actually providing a workable policy to achieve all these things at once. He did implicitly reject the middle class tax cut (while not ruling out tax increases for the middle class, provided there also is sacrifice for others), a campaign promise which played a role in defeating Tsongas in the New Hampshire primary. He also provided a rationale for cutting the budget deficit, citing the increasingly bleak budget numbers which came after the election ($50 billion more) and the cost of interest payments in the budget. How the budget cutting will help the economy, and whether the cuts will actually make a difference, were questions Clinton didn't have to answer.

He seemed direct on the recent controversy regarding

See "Clinton," page 9

Can We (Re)Define the Feminist Movement? GRAA Tried Wednesday

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

I will make no pretense of being neutral on this issue. I consider myself a feminist and I am not ashamed to say it. The stigma attached to feminism persists because of misconceptions about its definition and goals and because militant and radical feminist groups are highly visible; some people tend to take them for the norm.

I am a feminist because I believe, with the founders of our country, that all men are created equal. I am open-minded enough to take the word "men" at face-value. "He" is traditionally a gender-neutral pronoun; therefore, in this context, I take "men" to mean "people."

However, whether or not we are all created equal, there is not yet equal opportunity for all in this country. Although I believe that the goals of feminism go beyond obtaining economic or legal rights, this is a fundamental issue that requires action from men and women. Elimination of gender bias is essential to furthering any human rights, as is the elimination of race and class bigotry.

Gender Relations Awareness Alliance President Lynn Clifford opened Tuesday night's panel discussion by saying that some of the publicity had advertised the event's title as "Defining Feminism." "That's a pretty impossible task," she said, and said that the group's goal that evening was to Re-Define feminism.

Can a re-definition occur without a definition? That's a difficult question and perhaps an unfair one. Suffice it to say that feminism has, and has had, such a myriad of definitions that it is "pretty impossible" to choose just one to cover all the bases.

That's why she and Emily Moser, the evening's moderator, had the panel start off by telling the audience what their definition of feminism was, and whether or not they'd consider themselves to be a feminist. I'll try to let the speakers' comments stand for themselves.

"If you asked me if I was a feminist, I would say no," said Dr. Kevin Brien, who is currently teaching a course on Philosophy of Gender. "But if you asked me what kind of feminist I was, I would say a 'humanist feminist.'"

Brien discussed the stigma attached to anyone calling (her)self a feminist; one of his female friends in the sixties attended a radical feminist's lecture with him. "All I know is, I'm not a feminist," she muttered. He countered this with an anecdote which had Karl Marx, in an interview, exclaim, "All I know is, I'm not a Marxist."

However, the different schools of feminism are tied together for Brien in that "there should be a moral commitment to combat the historical dominance of men over women."

Professor Tex Andrews of the Art Department said that his views mirrored Brien's; Andrews includes feminist theory in his "Art and Criticism 1945 to the Present" course.

He explained his position by recounting some personal history. His divorced mother, a successful television executive, raised Andrews and instilled in him very positive views about women and their potential. But "She always maintained that if she could only get married, she could give it all up."

Although Andrews assumed that all women worked, or wanted to work, outside the home, his own wife is paying phenomenal day-care costs, and they are expecting a second child. As a result, Ms. Klapthor (his wife) is considering staying home with the children.

"A lot of assumptions that I made are being turned upside-down — it's a matter of viewing everything that people do, not just what women do — and revaluing what women do in the home."

Andrews stresses that housework and childcare are not just "extra" responsibilities; they can constitute a full-time job if just one member of the household is left in charge of that sphere. "It isn't just equality in the workplace that's an issue here," he said.

Dr. Audrey Fessler, the female professor on the panel, teaches English and focuses on gender and Victorian studies both in the classroom and in personal research. She too sees a common thread between the branches of feminism.

"While there are disagreements among the various schools of feminism, as in the French school, the American school, and so on, I see that they have this in common: A feminist looks around the world and says, 'There is not parity in this world,' and realizes that that parity or lack of parity is based on gender.

"Feminists are people who realize that and believe that some social correctives should be put in place to remedy that," she said. "If you were to ask me if I'm a feminist, my answer would be, 'Of course!'... By that definition, everyone I know is a feminist — that changes when that word becomes politically charged.

"It has become dangerous to be a feminist."

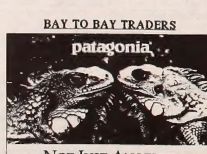
The two students on the panel, both senior English majors, were Nora Sullivan and Charlie Linehan. Although Sullivan pulled that favorite paper-writing trick of English majors around the world, that is, providing a dictionary definition of feminism, she wasn't content to stick just with that.

See "Feminism," pg. 9

Madrid Gives WC Poet Fresh Look at the Shore

Tanya L. Cunic
Staff Writer

Madrid, Spain has been described by the Spanish poet Lorca as "duende." Translated loosely, "duende" is the soulfulness of the Spanish life, character and arts. This spirituality attracted Kathy Wagner, Assistant Director of the O'Neil Literary House, to spend the spring semester of 1992 in Madrid.



Kathy Wagner, Poet and Professor

Kathy Wagner, who has often written poetry about Maryland's Eastern Shore, felt by distancing herself from her subject matter she could approach her poetry from a different perspective. While she admits the Eastern Shore continually provides her with poetic inspiration, the urban setting of Madrid infused her poetry with "duende."

During her stay in Spain, which was made possible by Washington College's Faculty Enhancement Fund, Ms. Wagner worked on her collection of poetry. She hopes to have this collection published later in the year. However, she is still working on the rough drafts because she is currently co-editing and writing the introduction for a book of Shakespearean quotes.

After returning from Spain, Ms. Wagner recalled "seeing things differently" and was "amazed at the vitality" of the students at Washington College. These sentiments were reconfirmed in the past weeks in regard to the events concerning the Literary House. She is "optimistic about the continual good will that surrounds the House."

BAY TO BAY TRADERS

NOT JUST ANOTHER PRETTY FACE

CANNON STREET COURTYARD
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
LOCATED BEHIND DONUT DUCAFE

20 % SALE
THROUGH FEBRUARY
ON
PATAGONIA
RAY BAN JANSPORT
ATLANTIS MAD BOMBER
BUILA GREAT LAKES
FUNCTIONAL GEAR FOR ACTIVE SPORTS IN ALL CONDITIONS

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Andy's

337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm

FRI 12 MARC MOSS A New Andy's Favorite from Newark. Powerful Rock Originals!!
SAT 13 DARREN DEFOORE Country Rock,Folk
THURS 18 MIKE KELLY+JOHN RENEHIEM
778-6779

Start Now! This Week:

How to Recycle Your Clothes

Christabel Garcia-Zamor

Do you know what is in the fabric of the clothes you're buying? Many "all natural" fabrics require the use of chemicals in either their production or upkeep. Think twice before you buy clothes which require dry cleaning, because this process involves the use of carcinogenic chemicals (the characteristic smell is chemical residue).

Even plain white undershirts (which are bleached with dioxins, a carcinogen, by the way) or other so called "100% cotton" clothing is not necessarily safe. The cotton industry is the third largest user of pesticides in the world. The cotton industry has been known to use organo-chlorines; organophosphates; dioxin-containing sprays and other weedicides; herbicides; fungicides; pesticides and fertilizers in the production of cotton, which often arrives straight onto your body in the form of clothing, sometimes even unwashed before use.

Tests have not been done by state and federal governments to determine if any or to what extent residues have appeared in final cotton products which, in addition to clothes, are things like cottonseed oil, which make up a great percentage of cooking oils and margarines). Before you wear any clothing product, it is suggested you wash it several times before use to remove these possible residues.

Another option which decreases your chance of coming into contact with these chemical residues (and which lowers the unnecessary extent of your consumerism and support of the factories which release harmful byproducts in their production of new fabrics) is recycling your own clothes. It is possible to maintain an environmentally healthy wardrobe of unique garments for a small price.

Recycling clothes means donating your old clothes to the organizations to aid the poor, and purchasing clothes at vintage clothing stores, thrift stores, or consignment shops. Especially creative people often use the fabric from their old clothes in the production of paper, fabric pouches, patchwork quilts, and in other crafts. If you are in need of new clothes and you haven't considered this option before, you should know that there is a fabulous set of shops right here in Chestertown that might suit your needs. It is not just "old clothes" you find at these sorts of shops. First of all, get the image of dimly lit racks of ill organized, musty looking clothes out of your head. These stores clean all garments before they put them up for sale, and they are neatly organized and in good repair.

You can find the most unusual hats, dresses, jewelry, slacks, and suits at these sorts of stores. The selection is varied, from bright Hawaiian prints to tight sixties tee shirts, leather jackets to black velvet cocktail dresses ... satiny black antique tuxedos to wool blazers ... mink hats to sterling silver broaches. You can even try bargaining down their very low prices if you are really poor. It is a good idea to call shops ahead (especially if they are antique stores with limited clothing) to check up on the types of stuff they have, and their hours, which vary.

We are very lucky to have here in Chestertown a vintage clothing store which is leaps and bounds ahead of the rest. If you visit no other, I strongly suggest you visit Lucinda's Vintage Clothing Store, on High street. I am consistently pleased by their vast collection and reasonable prices. Men here at the college who haven't gotten their sweethearts any Valentine's day gift (remember ... Sunday!) should note that Lucinda's also has tons of antique jewelry.

Also try to avoid "faddish" clothing which goes out of style very quickly. I went into a store called Contempo Casuals and fell in love with this pair of jeans with (what I thought was) leather patches. After looking at the label, I found out that the "leather" was polyurethene, a highly flammable suspected carcinogen.

Note that purchasing antique furniture and other collectibles is another way to avoid buying new (often plastic) products. You would be shocked at the number of antique stores in the Chestertown and surrounding vicinity. There are simply too may to list here, but if you would like more information on those in the area, call extension 8531, and I would be more than happy to tell you about the best shops and which ones might carry products to suit your needs. It is often cheaper and more satisfying to buy an sturdy object of history than a cheap object reminiscent of chemical technology.

WHERE TO FIND "Recycled Clothes"

In Chestertown:

Lucinda's Vintage Clothing: On High St. next to the Feast of Reason (unlisted #)

Classy Closet Consignment Shop: On High St. next to the movie theater

Hidden Treasures Thrift Shop: 605 High St. 778-1219

Nearly New: Corner of High St. and Spring St. 778-1781

Outside of Chestertown (makes a cool day trip with a friend):

Second Chance Shoppe: 102 W. Water Street, Centerville. 758-0694

Rags and Riches Antiques and Collectibles: Rt. 18 Main St., Grasonville 827-6368

New to You East: Rt. 18 Grasonville 482-7170

American PennyRoyal: 5 N. Harrison St. Easton 822-5030

Galena Antiques Center: 108 N. Main St. Galena 648-5781

Read All About It:

Ecologue, Edited by Bruce N. Anderson. Pages 54-55. 1990. If You Love This Planet, by Helen Caldicott, M.D. Pages 67-68. 1992

Brief Beef

SGA News

- Congratulations to three new Dorm Senators: Scott Ross Koon and Eric Dalessio, both in Kent House; and Karla Pozo, East Hall. Thanks to all who expressed interest.
- Another Cardinal representative is still needed. Contact Kristin Kujawski at ext. 8601 or Jen Del Nero at ext. 8500.
- New freshman class officers were recently sworn in: André Taylor, President; and Lisa Chobody, Vice-President. Congrats.
- Any students interested in serving on Middle States Task Forces as part of the college's re-accreditation process should contact Jen Del Nero at ext. 8500. The task forces are as follows: Mission, Goals and Objectives; Academic Program; Recruitment and Admissions; Student Life; Faculty; Academic Support Services; Administration and Governance; Finance and Planning; and Plant and Equipment. Contact Del Nero or Dean Gene Wubbels for more information.

Crime Report

Director of Security Jerry Roderick told The Elm Wednesday that there has been a series of thefts reported on the East side of 213 (in Caroline through Minta Martin vicinity). "Money is being stolen out of rooms being left unlocked and unoccupied," Roderick said. The money was reportedly taken from wallets and purses left in the open in unlocked rooms. Roderick strongly encourages all students to lock their doors, particularly when leaving rooms vacant.

Spring '93 Stock Market Game

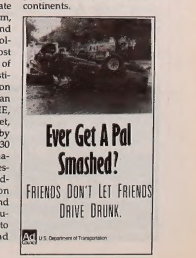
The Stock Market Game begins February 19th and ends April 29th. Players, who may be individuals or groups of two or more persons, use $100,000 in computer money to trade NASDAQ stocks and stocks listed on the New York and American Stock Exchanges.

Stocks bought and sold during the ten week period are subject to normal brokerage fees. Computer printouts showing the current value of each team's portfolio are provided weekly. Instructions and game materials are also provided.

There is a $15 registration fee per team. A prize will be given to the first place Washington College team. Anyone who is interested in playing please call Dawn Baker at 778-7888.

The Investment Club Team, including Chris Vaughn and Andrew Evans, won the Fall '92 competition, according to Jay Wright. Wright himself was the winner of a regional version of the game.

You Can Afford to Travel Abroad



Don't let the cost of overseas travel keep you in the States this summer. Make an international trip affordable and more meaningful by working in the country you want to explore. The Work Abroad Program, offered exclusively by the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE), enables college students to work temporarily in Britain, Ireland, France, Germany, New Zealand, Costa Rica, and Jamaica.

Last year, approximately 5,000 students from colleges and universities across the United States took advantage of this unique opportunity to help finance their international adventures and gain a true insider's perspective of another country.

As a participant in the Work Abroad Program, you are responsible for finding your own job. However, CIEE provides you with a program handbook, thorough in-country orientation, current job and accommodation listings, and general advice and support services.

To be eligible to participate in the Work Abroad Program, you must be 18 or older and enrolled full-time in a U.S. college or university. The only cost to you is the program fee of $125 and airfare to your destination. More information on the Work Abroad Program can be obtained by writing to CIEE, WA-122, 205 East 42nd Street, New York, NY 10017, or by phoning (212) 661-1414 ext. 1130

The Council on International Education Exchange, established in 1947, is a worldwide nonprofit organization dedicated to developing and supporting international educational exchange as a means to build understanding and peaceful cooperation between nations. With a membership of over 200 educational institutions, it administers study, work, volunteer, and travel programs in 33 countries on six continents.

Week at a Glance

February 12 - 18

Film Series: Howard's End

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

12 Friday

Auditions for Adulto Orgasmo Escapes from the Zoo. Tawes Theatre, 6:00 p.m. If interested and cannot attend, contact Heather Lynch at 778-5954.

The O'Neill Literary House presents The Third Annual Love/Hate Poetry Reading. Literary House, 9:00 p.m.

13 Saturday

Tickets go on sale for the Grateful Dead. Contact local Ticketmaster/Ticketron for details.

Sweetheart Auction to benefit Church Hill Theatre. Proceeds will help underwrite the cost of a children's series and a seat-covering project. 7:30 p.m. info. 758-1331

14 Sunday

St. Valentine's Day. Give that special someone a special something (no double entendre suggested)

Dr. Kevin Brien, professor of philosophy, will speak to the Unitarians on Zen Buddhism. Topic will be "The Skinny Little Frog: A Zen Buddhist Story" Casey Academic Center, 10:30 a.m. †

15 Monday

O'Neill Literary House Monday Series presents Words as Seen Things in Modern American Poetry. A talk with WC Professor Robert Schruer. O'Neill Literary House, tea at 4:00, talk at 4:30.

The Career Development Center presents University of Denver Publishing Institute: Info Session. A talk with Kim Bland, WC '91. Career Library, Spanish House, 4:30 p.m.†

16 Tuesday

The McLain Program in Environmental Studies presents Wetland Functions and Values. A lecture by Mark L. Kraus, Ph.D., Director of Education, Environmental Concern, Inc., St. Michael's, MD. Dunning Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Student Activities offers a ride to see Arun Gandhi, grandson of Mohatma Gandhi. Van leaves the Casey Academic Center at 5:00 p.m.

The Career Development Center presents Teach for America:Info Session. A talk with Audra Philippon, WC '88, Regional Director of the Baltimore area. Commons Room, Casey Academic Center, 4:30.†

17 Wednesday

The William James Forum presents The Ecological Crisis: A Philosophical Overview. A lecture by Dr. Tom Regan, Professor of Philosophy, North Carolina State University at Raleigh. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 7:30 p.m.

The O'Neill Literary House presents A Freshman Reading. O'Neill Literary House, 8:00 p.m.

The Career Development Center presents Life Work Training Seminar. Career Library, Spanish House, 2:30-4:30 p.m.

18 Thursday

The Washington College Dining Service and the Chestertown Seventh Day Adventist Church present Heart Healthy Vegetarian Cooking Seminar. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 6:00-8:00. $15 registration fee.†

† See related article

Auditions for

Adulto Orgasmo Escapes from the Zoo

Tawes Theatre, 6:00 p.m. tonight—If interested and cannot attend, contact Heather Lynch at 778-5954.

Writers' Union presents

The Third Annual Love/Hate Poetry Reading

Lit House, Tonight at 9:00 p.m.

A&E

We Need Writers

If you or anyone you know is interested in writing for the ELM, contact George Jamison at extension 8585.

No experience or intelligence necessary, but creativity is a must. Must be punctual, clean, and fond of guys with big hair

Student Profile: Dawn Israel

"I am grateful to be black and a woman"
—Maya Angelou

A senior English major, Dawn came to Washington College from Baltimore, MD. But after four long years, she is very ready to leave WAC and make her mark on the world. Dawn is now the President of the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange, and is also one of the founders of that organization. She has been a manager for WC's Basketball team for the last three years.

Because of her love of children, Dawn has been involved with the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Organization, WC's Target Tutoring Program, and has been a Peer Mentor for the NAACP.

After graduation, Dawn plans on working at a publishing firm in New York City for a few years and then attending graduate school to study Women's Literature and African American Literature. Her long-range goals include starting her own publishing company and teaching Women's literature and African American literature somewhere. She would eventually love to work with children.

She includes as her passions reading and basketball(she particularly loves "Michael Jordan's sweet smile"). One of her favorite authors is Maya Angelou, who spoke at Clinton's Inauguration, because of the way she overcame her rape, picked up her life, and her strength to go on.

Dawn would also like to add that her four years at Washington College were tough and that the greatest things given to her are the lifelong friendships.

WC Grads Bring Good News:

Info Sessions for Prospective Teachers and Publishers

George Jamison
A&E Editor

Employment opportunities abound this week at Washington College with thanks to the Career Development Center. Two WC graduates will be speaking on their respective places of employment.

First, on Monday February 15, at 4:30 p.m., Kim Bland will deliver an informational session concerning the University of Denver Publishing Institute. She graduated from Washington College in 1991 with an English Major. Upon graduating, Bland attended The University of Denver Publishing Institute. She then went on to the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions, where she worked as an editorial assistant. She is now trying to build her credentials as a free lance editor.

The Publishing Institute concentrates on book publishing, although the yearbook project provides an opportunity to work in a magazine format and time frame. The Institute offers "hands on" workshops with practical experience in all phases of the publishing process: editing a manuscript, designing and producing a book, drawing up a marketing plan for a soon-to-be-published book, writing press releases, advertisements and sales copy. Through these workshops, students not only learn what is involved in each particular process but have a chance to try their hands at actually performing these tasks. In this way, students can identify their areas of strength and interest, going into the job market with a clear focus on the kinds of jobs in which they can best succeed. Throughout the process, lecturers and workshop leaders provide explicit feedback and professional guidance.

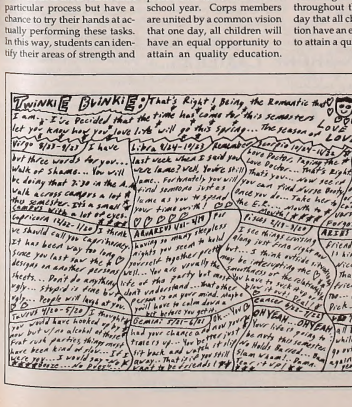
Also, on Tuesday, February 16, at 4:30 p.m., Audra Philippon will deliver an informational session about Teach For America. She graduated as valedictorian with a Sociology major from Washington College in 1988. Since that time she has worked in journalism and in the film industry in California. She joined Teach For America as a charter corps member, in 1990, and since that time she has directed the summer training program and has become the Director of the Baltimore Area Teach For America.

Teach For America is a national teachers corps of dedicated individuals from all academic majors and ethnic backgrounds who commit two years to teach in under-resourced urban and rural public schools. Teach For America currently has teachers in urban sites in Baltimore, Houston, Los Angeles, New York City, Oakland, and Washington, D.C; in rural areas of Arkansas, Georgia, North Carolina, and the Rio Grande Valley in Texas; and in Louisiana. Teach For America is presently investigating new placement sites for the 1993-94 school year. Corps members are united by a common vision that one day, all children will have an equal opportunity to attain an quality education. Corps members are motivated less by where and what subject they will be teaching than by their desire to teach where they are most needed. Driven to do whatever it takes to meet the needs of students in our nation's most under-resourced schools, corps members demonstrate an immense degree of flexibility from the time of application until the end of their two-year commitment.

A college student proposed the creation of Teach For America in her senior thesis in the spring of 1989, and a group of recent graduates made the idea a reality. Since its inception, Teach For America has inspired 8,600 individuals to apply to the program and has trained 1,800 of them in twelve communities and nine states. The five hundred charter corps members, who came together for the first time at Teach For America's first Pre-Service Institute during the summer of 1990, have completed their two-year commitments. Some of them plan to continue in teaching for a few more years, while others think they may have found a life-long calling. Some have left the classroom for graduate school or to work in a different capacity in the field of education, while others have chosen different fields of interest entirely. All of them see the world through a different lens than they did prior to entering the classroom. As individuals and as a group, they will work throughout their lives for the day that all children in this nation have an equal opportunity to attain a quality education.

Animal Rights Defender to Speak on the Ecological Crisis

Professor Tom Regan, a leading environmentalist and the best-known supporter of animal rights in America, will speak this Wednesday in the Hynson Lounge of Hodson Hall at 7:30 p.m. The lecture, The Ecological Crises: A Philosophical Overview, is being co-sponsored by the William James Forum and the Goldstein Program in Public Affairs and is open to all free of charge. The program has been arranged in conjunction with a new course in Environmental Ethics being offered this semester, a course linked with the evolving program in Chesapeake Bay Studies at the College. Regan's book, Earthhound: Introductory Essays in Environmental Ethics, is a required text in the new course. A graduate of Theil College, Professor Regan obtained his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Virginia. He taught for two years at Sweet Briar College before joining the faculty of the North Carolina State University at Raleigh, where he is now Professor of Philosophy. Regan has also taught at Brooklyn College and the University of Calgary. Among Regan's twenty-one books, either published or in preparation, the best known is The Case for Animal Rights, which appeared in 1983 and was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize. This concern for animal rights is part of a worldwide environmental movement aiming to halt the massive destruction of non-human life taking place on the planet. Dr. Regan has lectured widely at home and abroad and has received the Gandhi Award from the Farm Animal Reform Movement, among many other honors.



Zen Guru to Deliver Lecture on Frogs

Dr. Kevin Brien, Associate Professor of Philosophy at Washington College, will speak at the next meeting for worship of the new Unitarian Fellowship of the Chester River on Sunday, February 14. The meeting will begin at 10:30 a.m. in the Casey Academic Center of Washington College.

Dr. Brien's topic will be "The Skinny Little Frog: A Zen Buddist Story." Professor Brien regularly covers Buddism in his two-semester course sequence on comparative religion.

The holder of B.A., M.A., and PhD degrees from Boston University, Dr. Brien came to Washington College in 1986. In addition to comparitive religion, he regularly teaches courses in ancient philosopy, philosophy of science, and philosophy of art.

Brien's book Marx, Reason, and the Art of Freedom was published in 1988, and he was awarded the Lindback Prize for distinguished teaching in 1991. He plans to visit India during his sabbatical leave next year.

TWINKIE
That's Right, Being the Romantic that I am...
Feb. 12-13
Let's Decided that the Pride has Come to this Semesters
Love Sept. 9-10
Let you know how much we love each other
Love: 9/10-11/10
Love: 11/10-12/10
Love: 11/27-12/1
Love: 12/1-12/2
Love: 12/2-12/3
Love: 12/3-12/4
Love: 12/4-12/5
Love: 12/5-12/6
Love: 12/6-12/7
Love: 12/7-12/8
Love: 12/8-12/9
Love: 12/9-12/10
Love: 12/10-12/11
Love: 12/11-12/12
Love: 12/12-12/13
Love: 12/13-12/14
Love: 12/14-12/15
Love: 12/15-12/16
Love: 12/16-12/17
Love: 12/17-12/18
Love: 12/18-12/19
Love: 12/19-12/20
Love: 12/20-12/21
Love: 12/21-12/22
Love: 12/22-12/23
Love: 12/23-12/24
Love: 12/24-12/25
Love: 12/25-12/26
Love: 12/26-12/27
Love: 12/27-12/28
Love: 12/28-12/29
Love: 12/29-12/30
Love: 12/30-12/31
Love: 12/31-1/1
Love: 1/1-1/2
Love: 1/2-1/3
Love: 1/3-1/4
Love: 1/4-1/5
Love: 1/5-1/6
Love: 1/6-1/7
Love: 1/7-1/8
Love: 1/8-1/9
Love: 1/9-1/10
Love: 1/10-1/11
Love: 1/11-1/12
Love: 1/12-1/13
Love: 1/13-1/14
Love: 1/14-1/15
Love: 1/15-1/16
Love: 1/16-1/17
Love: 1/17-1/18
Love: 1/18-1/19
Love: 1/19-1/20
Love: 1/20-1/21
Love: 1/21-1/22
Love: 1/22-1/23
Love: 1/23-1/24
Love: 1/24-1/25
Love: 1/25-1/26
Love: 1/26-1/27
Love: 1/27-1/28
Love: 1/28-1/29
Love: 1/29-1/30
Love: 1/30-1/31
Love: 1/31-2/1
Love: 2/1-2/2
Love: 2/2-2/3
Love: 2/3-2/4
Love: 2/4-2/5
Love: 2/5-2/6
Love: 2/6-2/7
Love: 2/7-2/8
Love: 2/8-2/9
Love: 2/9-2/10
Love: 2/10-2/11
Love: 2/11-2/12
Love: 2/12-2/13
Love: 2/13-2/14
Love: 2/14-2/15
Love: 2/15-2/16
Love: 2/16-2/17
Love: 2/17-2/18
Love: 2/18-2/19
Love: 2/19-2/20
Love: 2/20-2/21
Love: 2/21-2/22
Love: 2/22-2/23
Love: 2/23-2/24
Love: 2/24-2/25
Love: 2/25-2/26
Love: 2/26-2/27
Love: 2/27-2/28
Love: 2/28-3/1
Love: 3/1-3/2
Love: 3/2-3/3
Love: 3/3-3/4
Love: 3/4-3/5
Love: 3/5-3/6
Love: 3/6-3/7
Love: 3/7-3/8
Love: 3/8-3/9
Love: 3/9-3/10
Love: 3/10-3/11
Love: 3/11-3/12
Love: 3/12-3/13
Love: 3/13-3/14
Love: 3/14-3/15
Love: 3/15-3/16
Love: 3/16-3/17
Love: 3/17-3/18
Love: 3/18-3/19
Love: 3/19-3/20
Love: 3/20-3/21
Love: 3/21-3/22
Love: 3/22-3/23
Love: 3/23-3/24
Love: 3/24-3/25
Love: 3/25-3/26
Love: 3/26-3/27
Love: 3/27-3/28
Love: 3/28-3/29
Love: 3/29-3/30
Love: 3/30-3/31
Love: 3/31-4/1
Love: 4/1-4/2
Love: 4/2-4/3
Love: 4/3-4/4
Love: 4/4-4/5
Love: 4/5-4/6
Love: 4/6-4/7
Love: 4/7-4/8
Love: 4/8-4/9
Love: 4/9-4/10
Love: 4/10-4/11
Love: 4/11-4/12
Love: 4/12-4/13
Love: 4/13-4/14
Love: 4/14-4/15
Love: 4/15-4/16
Love: 4/16-4/17
Love: 4/17-4/18
Love: 4/18-4/19
Love: 4/19-4/20
Love: 4/20-4/21
Love: 4/21-4/22
Love: 4/22-4/23
Love: 4/23-4/24
Love: 4/24-4/25
Love: 4/25-4/26
Love: 4/26-4/27
Love: 4/27-4/28
Love: 4/28-4/29
Love: 4/29-4/30
Love: 4/30-5/1
Love: 5/1-5/2
Love: 5/2-5/3
Love: 5/3-5/4
Love: 5/4-5/5
Love: 5/5-5/6
Love: 5/6-5/7
Love: 5/7-5/8
Love: 5/8-5/9
Love: 5/9-5/10
Love: 5/10-5/11
Love: 5/11-5/12
Love: 5/12-5/13
Love: 5/13-5/14
Love: 5/14-5/15
Love: 5/15-5/16
Love: 5/16-5/17
Love: 5/17-5/18
Love: 5/18-5/19
Love: 5/19-5/20
Love: 5/20-5/21
Love: 5/21-5/22
Love: 5/22-5/23
Love: 5/23-5/24
Love: 5/24-5/25
Love: 5/25-5/26
Love: 5/26-5/27
Love: 5/27-5/28
Love: 5/28-5/29
Love: 5/29-5/30
Love: 5/30-5/31
Love: 5/31-6/1
Love: 6/1-6/2
Love: 6/2-6/3
Love: 6/3-6/4
Love: 6/4-6/5
Love: 6/5-6/6
Love: 6/6-6/7
Love: 6/7-6/8
Love: 6/8-6/9
Love: 6/9-6/10
Love: 6/10-6/11
Love: 6/11-6/12
Love: 6/12-6/13
Love: 6/13-6/14
Love: 6/14-6/15
Love: 6/15-6/16
Love: 6/16-6/17
Love: 6/17-6/18
Love: 6/18-6/19
Love: 6/19-6/20
Love: 6/20-6/21
Love: 6/21-6/22
Love: 6/22-6/23
Love: 6/23-6/24
Love: 6/24-6/25
Love: 6/25-6/26
Love: 6/26-6/27
Love: 6/27-6/28
Love: 6/28-6/29
Love: 6/29-6/30
Love: 6/30-7/1
Love: 7/1-7/2
Love: 7/2-7/3
Love: 7/3-7/4
Love: 7/4-7/5
Love: 7/5-7/6
Love: 7/6-7/7
Love: 7/7-7/8
Love: 7/8-7/9
Love: 7/9-7/10
Love: 7/10-7/11
Love: 7/11-7/12
Love: 7/12-7/13
Love: 7/13-7/14
Love: 7/14-7/15
Love: 7/15-7/16
Love: 7/16-7/17
Love: 7/17-7/18
Love: 7/18-7/19
Love: 7/19-7/20
Love: 7/20-7/21
Love: 7/21-7/22
Love: 7/22-7/23
Love: 7/23-7/24
Love: 7/24-7/25
Love: 7/25-7/26
Love: 7/26-7/27
Love: 7/27-7/28
Love: 7/28-7/29
Love: 7/29-7/30
Love: 7/30-7/31
Love: 7/31-8/1
Love: 8/1-8/2
Love: 8/2-8/3
Love: 8/3-8/4
Love: 8/4-8/5
Love: 8/5-8/6
Love: 8/6-8/7
Love: 8/7-8/8
Love: 8/8-8/9
Love: 8/9-8/10
Love: 8/10-8/11
Love: 8/11-8/12
Love: 8/12-8/13
Love: 8/13-8/14
Love: 8/14-8/15
Love: 8/15-8/16
Love: 8/16-8/17
Love: 8/17-8/18
Love: 8/18-8/19
Love: 8/19-8/20
Love: 8/20-8/21
Love: 8/21-8/22
Love: 8/22-8/23
Love: 8/23-8/24
Love: 8/24-8/25
Love: 8/25-8/26
Love: 8/26-8/27
Love: 8/27-8/28
Love: 8/28-8/29
Love: 8/29-8/30
Love: 8/30-8/31
Love: 8/31-9/1
Love: 9/1-9/2
Love: 9/2-9/3
Love: 9/3-9/4
Love: 9/4-9/5
Love: 9/5-9/6
Love: 9/6-9/7
Love: 9/7-9/8
Love: 9/8-9/9
Love: 9/9-9/10
Love: 9/10-9/11
Love: 9/11-9/12
Love: 9/12-9/13
Love: 9/13-9/14
Love: 9/14-9/15
Love: 9/15-9/16
Love: 9/16-9/17
Love: 9/17-9/18
Love: 9/18-9/19
Love: 9/19-9/20
Love: 9/20-9/21
Love: 9/21-9/22
Love: 9/22-9/23
Love: 9/23-9/24
Love: 9/24-9/25
Love: 9/25-9/26
Love: 9/26-9/27
Love: 9/27-9/28
Love: 9/28-9/29
Love: 9/29-9/30
Love: 9/30-10/1
Love: 10/1-10/2
Love: 10/2-10/3
Love: 10/3-10/4
Love: 10/4-10/5
Love: 10/5-10/6
Love: 10/6-10/7
Love: 10/7-10/8
Love: 10/8-10/9
Love: 10/9-10/10
Love: 10/10-10/11
Love: 10/11-10/12
Love: 10/12-10/13
Love: 10/13-10/14
Love: 10/14-10/15
Love: 10/15-10/16
Love: 10/16-10/17
Love: 10/17-10/18
Love: 10/18-10/19
Love: 10/19-10/20
Love: 10/20-10/21
Love: 10/21-10/22
Love: 10/22-10/23
Love: 10/23-10/24
Love: 10/24-10/25
Love: 10/25-10/26
Love: 10/26-10/27
Love: 10/27-10/28
Love: 10/28-10/29
Love: 10/29-10/30
Love: 10/30-10/31
Love: 10/31-11/1
Love: 11/1-11/2
Love: 11/2-11/3
Love: 11/3-11/4
Love: 11/4-11/5
Love: 11/5-11/6
Love: 11/6-11/7
Love: 11/7-11/8
Love: 11/8-11/9
Love: 11/9-11/10
Love: 11/10-11/11
Love: 11/11-11/12
Love: 11/12-11/13
Love: 11/13-11/14
Love: 11/14-11/15
Love: 11/15-11/16
Love: 11/16-11/17
Love: 11/17-11/18
Love: 11/18-11/19
Love: 11/19-11/20
Love: 11/20-11/21
Love: 11/21-11/22
Love: 11/22-11/23
Love: 11/23-11/24
Love: 11/24-11/25
Love: 11/25-11/26
Love: 11/26-11/27
Love: 11/27-11/28
Love: 11/28-11/29
Love: 11/29-11/30
Love: 11/30

Healthy Vegetarian Cooking Seminar

Two sessions on healthy vegetarian cooking will be offered to the WC Community. Instructor Cheryl Thomas Cavinessis aRegistered Dietetic Technician and author of two vegetarian menu planners: Quick and Easy Cooking and Fabulous Foods for Family and Friends. Over 100,000 copies of her cookbooks have been sold, and copies will be available for purchase and signature.

The first session is Thursday, February 18, from 6 - 8 p.m.

This dinner-theatre style vegetarian buffet dinner with hands-on demonstration will demonstrate how to decrease the risk and aid in the treatment of heart disease, cancer, osteoporosis, obesity and hypertension. Weight loss through vegetarian cooking will also be covered.

The February 25 session, also on a Thursday from 6 to 8, will focus on meatless menu planning and will feature a similar buffet dinner/demonstration. Topics covered will include how to read food labels, tips on purchasing and food storage, and how to stay healthy when eating out.

Come hungry and let your taste buds enjoy the fight against fat and cholesterol! A $15 registration fee per session includes the buffet dinner and packet with handouts each seminar. Both seminar-dinners will be held in Hynson Lounge and are co-sponsored by the WC Dining Services and the Chestertown Seventh Day Adventist Church.

To register, call 410-556-6742 or 410-778-1897.

Fifteen WC Slots Open for Grinnell-in-London Program

On February 1st, the faculty approved participation by up to 15 Washington College students in the Grinnell-in-London (GIL) program. Professor David Newell of the Phil-losophy Department will be teaching two courses in the GIL program. This well-established program runs during the Fall semester only, and this is a one-time opportunity for Washington College to participate in this program. It is possible — but by no means a safe assumption — that Washington College will mount its own program in London at some future date.

This program should be regarded as a serious academic endeavor. It is more challenging academically than the corresponding program at the home campus. Eligibility requirements include the following: minimum GPA: 2.50; academic status: Sophomore, Junior, or Senior status as of Fall 1993 and in good academic standing.

Students wishing to apply should complete the program application form, which is available in the Dean's Office or from any Department Chair. The deadline for submission at the Dean's Office is no later than Monday, March 1,1993, at 4:30 p.m.

Seniors may apply to the Academic Standing Committee to waive the 2 course-in-residence rule.

All department chairs have a copy of the GIL program brochure. We also have copies available in the Dean's Office. The descriptions for the courses that Professor Newell will teach in London are available with the program brochure. The courses all carry four semester credits and are offered in Phase I (eleven weeks in which all students take three courses) and Phase II (five weeks in which all students take one course each). The course listings are as follows:

Phase I Courses

Anthropology 295A: Prehistory of Britain (Mr. Whitaker, Grinnell)

Anthropology 295B: Cultures in Contact: Britain and the Arab Middle East (Ms. Kamp, Grinnell)

Art 295: English Medieval Art 1000-1600 (1/2 course credit; Ms. Tudor-Craig, British)

English 121: Introduction to Shakespeare (Ms. Vinter, British)

Philosophy316: Medical Ethics (Mr. Newell, Washington College)

Political Science 211: Policy Making in British Government (1/2 course credit with additional 1/2 course project option; Mr. Jones, British)

Religious Studies 295A: The Bible and Its Painters (Mr. Haas, Grinnell)

Religious Studies 293B: The British Reformation Then and Now (Mr. Haas, Grinnell)

Theatre 225: British Theatre in Performance (Mr. Pinner, British)

Phase II Courses

Anthropology 295 C: Symbols of Power in Early Britain (Ms. Kamp and Mr. Whitaker, Grinnell)

English 295: The Romantic Landscape (Ms. Vinter, British)

Philosophy 307: Philosophy of Art (Mr. Newell, Washington College)

Religious Studies 395: Cathedrals: Religion, Art, and Architecture (Mr. Haas, Grinnell)

There are a few internships in GIL listed in the brochure, but these are not open to Washington College Students. Further Facts:

Washington College students in the GIL would pay tuition to Washington College at the regular WC rate. The program dates are August 23 through December 18. Living costs in London will vary with your choices but they are usually somewhat higher than in the United States. Students are guided to rent flats in groups in London.

The total cost-of-living expenses for the 16-week period in Fall 1992 averaged $3,787 and ranged from $1,080 to $7,200. Your costs will vary of course with the currency exchange rate. The flight over and back is a charter at a low rate. Local travel and expenses for program activities such as theatre or concert tickets are covered by the program.

Washington College limits the grant part of any financial aid award to be used for an off-campus program at another institution to $2000 per year (or $2000 per semester if only one semester is involved). If you need clarification of a financial aid question, contact Jean Narcum in the Admission's office.

If you wish to proceed, immediately sit down with academic advisor and determine whether the courses offered in GIL in Fall 1993 will fit into and enrich your total matriculation at Washington College. Feel free to call on any other sources of academic or personal advice. If you have not yet declared a major, you must still come up with a plausible and defensible plan for fitting the GIL work into your major(s). This may require that you consult with the department chair of your intended program.

If your academic advisor endorses your plans, complete the application form and immediately submit the forms for letters of recommendation to two faculty who have taught you in a course and who know you well.

"Schroeder," from pg. 1

he commented on the letter of intent to sue prior to his departure. "This most recent development deeply saddens me, as it is yet another indication of the litigious age in which we live," remarked Trout.

"I remember speaking at Ed's graveside and thinking it wonderful that so many Washington College students and alumni had made the long trip in support of the Schroeder family," he said. "In light of that memory, the letter of intent to sue comes as an even bigger blow to me personally. I wish I could change the current situation but I can't — people will do what they choose to do and if this develops into a lawsuit, the college will vigorously defend itself."

$5 off any service over $20 with ad
(one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2695 Chestertown, MD 21620

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists Materials
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
P.O. Box 402 211 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

'Crisis," from page 3

meth to conduct radio waves from the secret moon based transmitter operated by Iranian moderates?" Meanwhile, Clinton will have turned the country over into the hands of Satan worshipers.

The scary thing is, we won't be able to stop him, because by that point the entire US Army will be fighting against Serbia, the hub of our national security apparatus will be two hundred feet off the ground, and the radio waves from the moonbase will have reduced us to zombies who will all dress, speak and act in the manner of Senator Paul Simon.

Do we really want the sinister specter of Communism to wrap its deadly tentacles right around the heart of the human spirit in a nasty, capricious, Godless and conceited attempt to create a "new man" upon the graves of those foolish enough to stand in the way? I say NO!

By now, I'm sure most of you see through Clinton's thinly veiled attempt to hand the country over to the secular humanists,[1] but you may wonder what we can do about it. There is of course, a simple answer. As you may know, Balkan food is extremely high in fat, as it is composed primarily of tasty but deadly dishes such as lamb sausage cooked in lard. All we need to do is ship massive quantities of really fat laden food to the Serbians. I believe that the Burger King bacon double cheese burger, with thirty-eight grams of fat per serving, would be ideally suited for this purpose.

We would also send the Serbians free packs of unfiltered cigarettes with the Surgeon General's warning cleverly concealed beneath a sticker which would read "Really Macho Ethnic Cleansers smoke four packs a day!"[2] At the same time we would put the Bosnians and the Croatians on a high fiber, low fat macrobiotic diet. In a short time the Serbian Army would be composed of overweight invalids incapable of turning over in their hospital beds for a sponge bath, let alone conducting an offensive war.

And what about Clinton's other policies? How do they fit into the insidious Afrocentric Politically-Correct Feminist Communist agenda? It's simple, really. By allowing homosexuals, sodomites, transsexuals and transvestites into the military Clinton not only seeks to undermine the morale of our troops who soon will be fighting in the Balkans, but he also seeks to promote military training for homosexuals.

These militant homosexuals will then leave the service, arm themselves and mobilize into pink brigades. These brigades will then act as fashion police, who will force the entire country to dress in a decidedly natty fashion. This is not so bad in itself, but Fruit of the Loom will go out of business as American men are forced to wear more trendy underpants. This will undoubtedly have a ripple effect in the national economy, which will in turn cause another worldwide recession, which will decrease Japanese demand for lumber, which will in turn mean less clear cutting of timber in the Pacific Northwest, which will have the effect of saving the spotted owl from extinction, which will make Al Gore happy, which will in turn make Al Gore more visible, which will finally cause record labels to attach warning labels to compact discs which will be encoded with subliminal messages by the above mentioned Iranian moderates which will cause the American youth to start listening exclusively to Pat Boone.

And we wouldn't want that, now would we?

End notes

[1] What follows is purely fictional. It is not in any way to be confused with reality

[2] I do not now, nor have I ever, actually chewed a sticker.

[3] Who looked an awful lot like Agnew.

[4] And I take back anything favorable I have ever said about his hair.

[5] Of course, none of this may actually come to pass, but do we really want to take that chance? I don't think so.

[6] Who are, as I may have mentioned, actually Satan worshippers.

[7] In Serbo-Croatian, of course.

"Clinton," from page 3

gays in the military, but in fact his answers advocated the present policy. His thought he provided a rationale for ending the ban and wisely linked it with heterosexual sexual harassment, a problem the military has been pathetic in addressing. his answer advocated the six-month review on current discrimination within the armed forces, in which openly gay men and women can be put on reserve or transferred.

He seemed reluctant to address this issue directly. Indeed, he said that he was "frankly appalled" at the time spent on this problem in the first week. He had originally wanted to put the problem off for six months, anyway, he said. The compromise, which does do a great deal (the military cannot expel soldiers for being homosexual), stops short of ending discrimination. While an important step, it is merely a delay, putting off important questions for six months.

Finally, he slid around two questions on foreign policy. Responding to a Croatian-American who was critical of Warren Christopher's recent proposal on American diplomatic intervention, Clinton defended his Secretary of State. The problem is that Secretary Christopher's plan only differs slightly from Bush's (greater involvement in peace talks which aren't going anywhere, guaranteeing the hypothetical peace plan with US peacekeeping forces, and promising full involvement if the Serbs move south), and does nothing to end the current atrocities. There is no plan, for example, to use US forces in the way that Clinton proposed during his campaign.

He may not have a choice, however, because the Russians are increasingly reluctant to support UN-sponsored force. By ruling out the use of force at this time, however, Christopher and Clinton may be removing potential leverage the United States could use to prod the Serbs into an agreement.

Clinton also answered a question in regard to Haiti. His current policy has more in common with Bush's than the policy he proposed during the campaign. His answer was that his administration was attempting to bring democracy to Haiti, but gave no concrete examples of what he was actually doing. There is little change, meanwhile, in the policy toward Haitian refugees. indeed, the US embargoed the country to prevent refugees.

In short, this was a town meeting in which President Clinton seemed unwilling to provide specifics. He was vague toward what he would actually propose, and when he did provide specifics he advocated policies which were designed to delay actual solutions. Also, he seemed to implicitly contradict many of his campaign proposals. There are, I think, two reasons for this. First, the guy has only been President for three weeks. It is a bit soon for me to demand specifics on his economic program. I'm being a bit premature and impatient, I realize. I voted for Clinton, and I am still enthusiastic about his Presidency. I'm willing to give him a break, but his role in the town meeting was billed as an explanation of his programs. It wasn't. Second, he's finding that proposing and actually doing are two entirely different things. For example, it's easy to advocate force against Serbia or to allow Haitian refugees into the country, but the political realities are somewhat different.

The town meeting seemed to reveal that Clinton, at this point, is a President who is acting like a candidate. You won,

"Feminism," from pg. 4

"It's very important not to stay with just one definition," she said. "It should change and evolve as women are learning more about themselves, personally an as a community."

Sullivan considers herself a feminist.

Linehan said that he agreed with Sullivan's dictionary, which pointed toward equality in the workplace as a major goal. His situation, he said, was quite similar to Andrews'. Linehan's mother also divorced when he was very young, and she is a professional actress.

He also assumed certain things about women's potential and women's rights; and he believes that feminism is shifting directions as "a lot of those goals" are being realized. "What you have are some people who are going with that change, and some people who are being radical and resisting it."

"Women are still facing oppression, but we've 'made it over the hump,'" Linehan said. "Not that it's time to slow down, but it's gotten easier in a lot of ways."

Is he a feminist? Not really, he says. "To label yourself as a feminist is almost to empower the issue — I naturally assume that men and women are equal."

With this buzzword 'equality' coming up in all of our vocabularies, it's interesting to consider what Brein pointed out: that the standard for this equality seems to be men.

There were a lot of issues brought up by the audience and discussed between audience and panel members. If I wrote down every intelligent thing that was said, I'd have a short book. But let me list some key ideas from that session for everyone, whether or not they consider themselves feminist, to mull over:

- Is the portrayal of women in popular culture degrading or empowering?
- What are the correlations between sexism and racism?
- What's the role/responsibility of men in determining the future of women?
- How has the antifeminist backlash hurt or helped the cause?
- Are humans genetically programmed to act in proscribed gender roles?

The list could go on. Make your own. But here's two questions I'll leave you with. What do you know about feminism? What do you assume? Correcting that difference is of utmost importance for even a misogynist.

"Shirt," from page 1

said that he was not aware of any pending claim and stressed that the college has a responsibility to be the steward of the Albee Collection, as there is a deed of gift involved.

Trout added that before any artifact could be returned, the claim would have to be legitimate and some effort would have to be made to authenticate the objects. He also said that he does not want the college to be the custodian of stolen goods.

If the shirt is determined to rightfully be the property of the Sioux, Trout noted that the college would not put up obstacles to prevent its return, provided that there are no legal problems and that the Board of Visitors and Governors approves the move. He also said the proper steps would have to be taken with the donor of the collection to ensure that the college is in good faith with the deed of gift.

"As far as the college is concerned, we don't have a Native American Studies or Indian program, and I can't argue that having the artifacts is central to the mission of the college," he said.

The Elm also recently contacted Waters, who said that she notified certain Sioux about the artifacts. At press time, persons connected to the estate of Crazy Horse had no comment.

"Birthday," from page 1

is a pioneer in the field of medical research. When Elion joined the Welcome Research Laboratories in 1944, she began to study nucleic acid metabolism. Her work, and that of her colleague George H. Hitchings, with whom she shared the Nobel Prize, led to the development of new compounds to combat leukemia, organ transplant rejection, malaria, gout, and the herpes virus.

Elion revolutionized the field of cancer chemotherapy with the synthesis and development of 6-mercaptopurine (6-MP), which in 1951 was tested in children with acute leukemia and is still in use today. By altering enzyme structures, she developed several new compounds used to treat other illnesses. Elion's work with antiviral drugs led to the development of acyclovir, the first selective antiviral agent against the herpes virus infections, and set the stage for the development of AZT, the first effective treatment for AIDS. She will receive the honorary Doctor of Science degree.

How 'Bout Them Puckheads?

Tim Reardon
Staff Chump

On Monday night, the Washington College Ice Hockey team played their final game in Easton versus the Seagulls of Salisbury State. It was the second meeting between these two clubs, Washington being victorious in the first game 3-2. Salisbury was not about to let the Shoremen take two games from them. But much to the chagrin of the lowly Gulls, Washington pounded them 8-5.

Salisbury, determined to start off right, scored the game's first goal. Washington then scored the next goal with Jamie "Jeff Hanson" Baker sliding it past a helpless Salisbury goalie. The Seagulls scored the next goal to make the score 2-1 but would never regain the lead after that point.

WC then tied the score at 2-2 and never looked back. In the second period, the Shoremen took the lead for the first time and did not relinquish it. The third goal was scored by Chris Head on a pretty upper-shelf wristshot. Washington then made the score 4-2 when Jamie Diller fed Tim Reardon with a beautiful cross ice pass with Reardon sliding it past the awestruck goaltender. With about four minutes left in the second period, the excitement started for both teams. After the whistle had blown, a few choice words were exchanged between Tim "I like to fight" Reardon and some Salisbury player. A scuffle followed and both players ended up on the ice. Then some unsavory Salisbury players started kicking Reardon which sent Chris "Bring on Lennox Lewis" Head into action by giving one of their players a haymaker to the side of the head. After the ensuing rumble Reardon and Head were ejected along with two Salisbury players.

The second period ended with the score 4-2 and Washington having seven skaters opposed to the 20 Salisbury players. The Shoremen were determined not to let that affect them. But Salisbury scored the first goal of the third period to make the score 4-3. Gary Yovanovich then scored his second goal of the game which made the score 5-3. Salisbury, firm on not letting the game out of hand, scored another goal which tallied the score to 5-4.

But the Seagulls could not capitalize when Washington scored again as Jamie Baker tallied to make it 6-4. Baker also had four assists in the game. The Gulls scored one more goal but that was it. The seventh goal was scored by Jamie Diller, who wound up with one goal and three assists. The Shoremen hammered the last nail in the coffin when Yovanovich scored his third goal of the game for the first hat-trick of his illustrious career.

The final score of the game was 8-5, making Washington's record 2-2 on the season with one game remaining. The WAC play at Navy on Sunday, February 28th at 11 a.m. So come to lovely A-Town and watch the Shoremen play in their final game of the 1993 season.

Hooray for the Cheerleaders

Doug Hoffberger
Co-Sports Editor

Finally, the Washington College Cheerleading team is receiving their long overdue press. The removal of the tyrannical editorship of Vaughn and Reardon to a more "reader friendly" choice of Hoffberger and Murray allows teams such as Cheerleading to receive their deserved recognition.

At every home basketball game, notice them or not, the Cheerleaders are out on the floor performing neck-breaking stunts to gain the crowd's enthusiasm. The team would like to receive varsity status in order to be qualified to compete in national competition.

"For now, we're just girls in skirts hanging out and cheering on the Basketball team," commented Co-captain Brenda Stanley.

Stanley, along with Co-captain Denise Coleman, choreographs all the stunts and stunts performed by the all-woman team. "We try and do a stunt with every cheer," says Stanley. Personally, I like that "Be aggressive cheer." The women usually spend about 30 min. perfecting each stunt they perform. The Cheerleaders try and perform about three floor excersizes each half, along with numerous opponent-taunting cheers, as well as splits and somersaults galore.

Seth Engel commented, "I appreciate what these girls do and I only wish that they could come and cheer the rugby team on." Seth, never end your sentence in a preposition.

Compiling the team are Seniors: Traci Castello, Tamara Michner and Anne McDermut; Juniors: Brenda Stanley, Denise Coleman and Heather Coursey; Sophomore Shane Dwyer; and Freshmen Caron Woodward, Suzanne Basel, Shryonna Johnson, and Robin Diamond.

The women ask for more cheerleaders, and encourage anyone who is athletically inclined and is outgoing to become part of the most spirited team on campus. Cheerleading is not the joke that people think.

"Cheerleading is a serious committment," adds Stanley. Brenda, you may want to coin that phrase and possibly produce some bumperstickers to make some money and take all the girls on a well-deserved vacation. The next time you see a cheerleader, tell them that you appreciate what they are doing and to keep up the good work.

Women's Softball Looks Forward to '93 Season

Bob Brown
Staff Writer

The Washington College softball program, which has struggled in recent years, will be taken over this year by rookie coach Ms. Lanée Cole. Coach Cole, who also coaches the Women's Basketball team, coached softball for three years at the high school level in Missouri.

Coach Cole has enjoyed the student-athletes and the atmosphere at Washington. "I love the school and what it stands for," she said.

While the softball team has faced its share of adversity in the past, including a pitcher sidelined with shoulder surgery, Coach Cole is nonetheless hopeful.

"I'm very optimistic about the chances of improvement for this team," Cole said, "We have two pitchers this year who I think are very promising."

Those two pitchers are right-handers senior Diana Holten and sophomore Andrea Nolan.

Despite her hopes for a successful season, Coach Cole admits that she has a young team on her hands.

"I've got a lot of freshman working out but I have some positions already filled with experienced players."

Among those are senior second baseman Lori Hasting and sophmore shortstop Tara Rathal.

"I think we are going to have a good year," Coach Cole said. "Just like baseball, that will all depend on the pitching. But I love the game of softball, I'm looking forward to the challenge and having some fun. I want to help this program to reach its potential and bring the team up to a respectable, competitive level, and we're going to do it."

Pip's Discount Liquors
Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER – CHILLED WINES
Quantity DISCOUNTS BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES
TELEPHONE 778-6125
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA CHESTERTOWN
Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist
Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal
Electrologist –
Louise Leaverton, L.E.

Swimming Beats Lebanon Valley

Brandon White
Staff Writer

The aquawomen started the meet off strong with Prendergast, Roberts, Dow, and Bigham taking first in the 400 medley relay. Draper swam the 1000 freestyle for the first time and took first place. Hakanson then swam the 200 freestyle and took second while Woollens finished forth. Both Green and Bigham swam the 50 freestyle and placed first and second respectively.

Colleen Roberts shaved one second off her time in the 200 IM to move into second place on the All Time WC charts. Roberts later swam the 200 breast stroke and shaved three seconds off her best time to take first place. The high point of the meet came when Hakenson, Wollens, Bigham, and Draper swam in the final relay to take the victory for the aqua-women.

"Today was a true team effort, many of the women swimming events for the first time or events they did not like to help win the meet," Coach Kim Lessard said.

The men's team also had a good day, winning 110-65. Dave Czekai and Dave Kraft turned out to be the aqua-stars of the meet. Czekai continued to knock off time in the 100 freestyle, shaving an astonishing 13 seconds off of his best time. Czekai then swam the 100 butterfly to finish second behind freshman Scott Steinmuller's first place. They both recorded the second and fifth fasted times in WC history.

Freshman Dave Kraft started off the 400 medley relay in MAC qualifying time and was then anchored by Steinmuller and and Chris Freisheim to take first. Krafta&c qualfied for the MACs in the 200 backstroke. Dave Cola continues to tear up the conference placing first in the 200 freestroke and 500 freestroke.

McCarthy recorded WC's fasted All-Time 200 freestroke time, while Freersheim lowered his 500 freestroke time. Ward, McCarthy, Cola and Craft swam the 400 freestroke and took first in the final event of the meet. The next Aqua meet is on Feb 13th at 1:00. Come out and support the Aqua-people!

Men's Hoops Tops Swarthmore

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

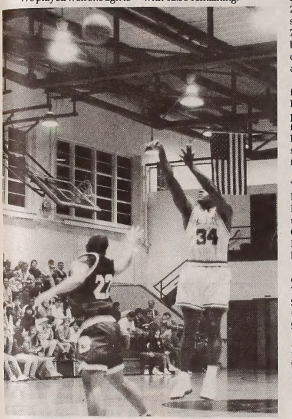
Last Saturday, the Shoremen men's basketball team hosted Swarthmore in an important MAC Southeast match. Winning 78-74, Washington evened their overall record at 10-10 and improved their conference record to 4-2 with games remaining against Haverford, Johns Hopkins, Ursinus and Widener.

"We played well enough to win," said Coach Tom Finnegan, who was happy with the win but unimpressed with the style of play.

Washington cruised to a 41-31 lead at halftime behind 14 first-half points from Geoff Rupert, but they unfortunately displayed one of their major weaknesses in the beginning of the second half. Swarthmore started the half on an 18-5 run to give the visitors a 49-46 lead with 12:50 remaining.

"It's been one of our problems," Finnegan said. "We haven't been able to finish anybody off."

However, trailing by three, Jay Devlin ignited a Washington rally with three 3-pointers, which sparked a 22-5 Shoremen run, giving them back the lead at 64-54 with 6:00 left in the game.

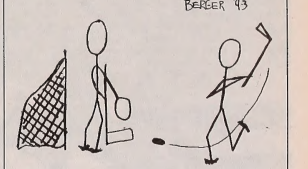


Over the next 3:30, Swarthmore closed the gap again, tieing the score at 69 with 2:32 left. Washington scored six unanswered points to take a 75-69 lead with 1:09 remaining, but Swarthmore once again came back to pull within 75-74 after an Erik DeLue basket.

Rupert made one of two foul-shots to take a two point lead. Swarthmore had an opportunity to tie the game with four seconds left, but Jay Rose's lay-up fell short, and Peter Basel scored a breakaway lay-up to finish the game.

Rupert (24 points), Darren Vican (18), Jay Devlin (15) and Basel (15) led the Shoremen. Rounding out the scoring column for the home team were Charles Cummings (4) and Ed Hicks (2). DeLue scored 24 to lead Swarthmore.

Last week, the Shoremen dropped a 65-61 decision to Widener in another MAC Southeast game. However, the team came back with the Swarthmore win.



Results from Wednesday's Haverford game were not available at press time. The next game for the men's basketball team will be Saturday at Johns Hopkins, and the next home game will be next Wednesday versus Ursinus.

Charles Cummings gets "nice"

NEWT'S Player of the Week

Newt's Chestertown Bar
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

This week the awe-inspiring play of the Washington Ice Hockey team has earned them a new title of Newt's Team of the Week. With a win over the Salisbury State Seagulls, the Shoreman Hockey club improves their record to 2-2.

The Seagulls what a horrible nickname. Lab rats probably would be better. I mean what do seagulls do? I'll tell you what they do, they scavange and they peck, and scavange and peck, and scavange and peck ... Forget it. Out of rage I'm bringing back the comedy into this paper. That's right next week this paper's going to be funny, real funny!

Anyway, back to the feature. Leading the way for the Shoreman was Gary Yovanovich, who, like some kind of awesome machine, produced three goals. Reardon, Head, Diller, and Baker all tallied scores and assists as well. Maybe this team should call themselves the Washington College Toughguys. Maybe they should try for a piece of me. That's it for this week, I'm getting too fired up. Smell you later!

LAST CHANCE TO ORDER
NEED A TUX?
For the Birthday Ball Or ANY Special Occasion!!
Play It Safe and Come to the Local Experts!!

BRAMBLES
DOWNTOWN, CHESTERTOWN
CALL FOR INFORMATION 778-6090
PLEASE HAVE ORDERS IN AS SOON AS POSSIBLE FOR BEST SELECTION

Tuesday - Saturday
Evening or Day Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0888

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Swarthmore bows to resilient Shoremen in Men's hoops

See Article, pg. 11

Ice Hockey fights way to victory

WC • ELM

Sports

Vaughn, down and out on life, seeks Brian Bird for lucky horseshoe! Bird tries for Lotto!

Men's and Women's Swimming Stomps over Lebanon Valley

Photo by Sarah Feyerherm

My geometry teacher would have been proud of this quintessential trapezoidal figure. Here the Washington College Cheerleading squad display their enthusiasm for the Men's Basketball team. It's amazing that these girls perform all their hair-raising stunts without the aid of spotters. Look for their displayed efforts at the next Hoops game.

Scores

Men's B-Ball
Washington 78
Swarthmore 74

Washington 61
Widener 65

Swimming
Men's
Washington 104
Leb. Valley 81

Women's
Washington 110
Leb. Valley 65

Ice Hockey
Washington 8
Salisbury St. 5

Men's B-Ball
Upcoming games
at Hopkins
Feb 13 7:30 p.m.
vs. Ursinus
Feb 17 7:30 p.m.
vs. Widener
Feb 20 3:30 p.m.

Sports staff needs writers

ext 8857

ask for Matt

Ice Hockey: NEWT's Team of the Week

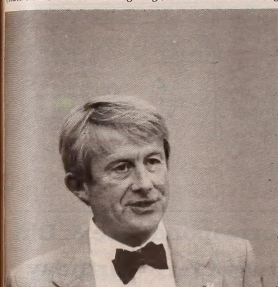
"We worry about what's inside our boats first."

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: mostly sunny & cont. cold; H low-mid 30s
Weekend: cont. cloudy & cold; chance/snow; L20 H 30

Volume 64, Number Eighteen • February 19, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland



Chuck Trout and SGA Share Concerns

Hit list includes Birthday Ball & Family Day

by Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Following a (very) brief (half-hour) SGA meeting Tuesday, President Charles H. Trout was invited to sit with the Senators and field questions about the students' concerns.

The February 16 meeting was marked by concerns about traditions at Washington College, the most mentioned being

President Charles H. Trout

Birthday Ball and Family Day (or lack thereof).

"There have been some real communication blocks" between students and administrators, said SGA President Jen Del Nero, and Trout was invited to the meeting to try to iron out some of those concerns.

Family Day, traditionally held in conjunction with the SGA luau in April of each year, was canceled due to budgetary and organizational concerns. Sophomore Class President Max Walton in December proposed an SGA-sponsored and -organized "Washington College Day," and felt his efforts thwarted on all sides.

Trout was asked to defend his position. "I think a project like that is extremely complex ... it's complicated in part because in order for the college to put the name 'Parents' Day' or 'Washington College Day' on it, we need to have the involvement of the entire staff," including not only students, but faculty, the Dean's office, the Deans of Students, the Alumni Office, Development, the President's Office, etc.

Decisions of the magnitude of canceling Parents' Day or nixing the "fancier Birthday Ball of previous years" are made in Executive Council, which consists of Trout; Dean and Provost Dean Gene Wubbels; Senior Vice President for Management and Finance Gene Hessey; Vice President for Admissions and Financial Aid Kevin Coveney; Vice President for Development and College Relations Shawn Lyons; and Dean of Students Maureen Kelley McIntire.

"Sometimes there is a good deal of kind of student movement that doesn't actually get [to Executive Council]," Trout said.

Walton felt that "there have been a number of events that have had problems running smoothly because they were stalled from getting through Executive Council." He named the Birthday Ball, the Connells concert, and the Coffee House renovation project as examples.

Trout advised any student with a concern that may need to be addressed by the council to talk to Joe Holt, Executive Assistant to the President. "I think this is a college that prides itself on some versatility," he said, and noted that Holt would be able to tell students what office(s) they should approach with their concerns.

Del Nero asked about the possibility of an administration-student liaison, and Trout informed her that she, as SGA President, should feel that she is that liaison. In addition, Del Nero requested that minutes (minus confidential discussions about personnel, etc.) be sent to the SGA.

Returning to the Parents' Day dilemma, Walton stated

See "Trout," page 8

Bring Your Birthday Suit & Have A Ball

Lisa Chobody
Freshman Class VP

Once again it is time for Washington College's annual George Washington Birthday Ball organized by the Freshman class. The Birthday Ball this year brings a fresh change. Promising to be infused with the energy, vitality, and spirit that characterizes Young America (the theme of 1993's Birthday Ball), even the decorations will have their own spark.

In keeping with this theme, there will be a wide variety of music at this year's ball. Davis DJs will be on the mike, with emphasis on contemporary music.

A pre-ball party for ticket holders will be held in the WC Deli at 8 p.m.; drinks will be $.50.

The Ball starts at 9 p.m. in Hodson Hall's main dining room. Dress is formal, and tickets can be purchased at the door for $5 per person or $8 per couple.

The Ball has been made possible with help from the Alumni Office and WC Dining Services.

Valentine's Weekend Thefts

According to Security Director Jerry Roderick, four items at a net value of approximately $2,000 were stolen from campus grounds last weekend.

On Friday, February 14, two mountain bikes were stolen from dormitory hallways. The bikes, one taken from Worcester and one from the main lounge in Kent, were left unlocked. This continues a series of bike thefts started the beginning of last semester.

Roderick advises all bicycle owners to secure their property or keep bikes in rooms. The bikes are valued at $2-500 each.

Also over the weekend, a lacrosse net was removed from its cage on one of the practice fields. The stolen net is Athletic Department property and is valued at $150.

On Monday, RA Tim Stoltzfus of second floor Worcester reported that an external hard drive was stolen from the upstairs computing lounge. The security cable was cut and the hard drive was disconnected and removed from the unlocked room.

The serial number is XN10043 — if anyone notices a "new" hard drive in a residence hall or for sale, please report to Security at ext- 7810.

Miscellaneous items, such as lacrosse sticks, also were stolen from hallways in dorms. Any information leading to the return of any of these items is appreciated. Roderick would like to remind all campus residents to secure their doors and property, especially when leaving the building.

Inside

What The Huck? An Ex-Professor's Rant 4

Dean Maxcy Announces New OΔK Members 4

Sepia Tones Bring their Jazz to Campus Sunday 7

What's the Deal With Grammy Nominations? 8

Traditionally, this space has been filled by the editorial. If you read the teeny tiny little print in the box below, it says, "Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief." That's me, Tarin, so PLEASE stop asking me if I wrote the editorial. That's a pretty moot question.

Traditionally, the Birthday Ball was put on by several groups working together: Development, the Alumni Office and the Freshman Class. SO stop acting so surprised that André Taylor (frosh pres.) had something to do with it. He isn't the first, and he's doing a great job. (Of course, traditionally speaking, I've never had any desire — or money — to go, but this year I'm there, so go figure). Why not go?

Traditionally, Family Day was held in April, same day as the SGA luau. My freshman year, there was this kickass reggae band and the dancing in the grass at the boathouse went on until way past dark. Last year, well, it rained. Boo. This year, well....

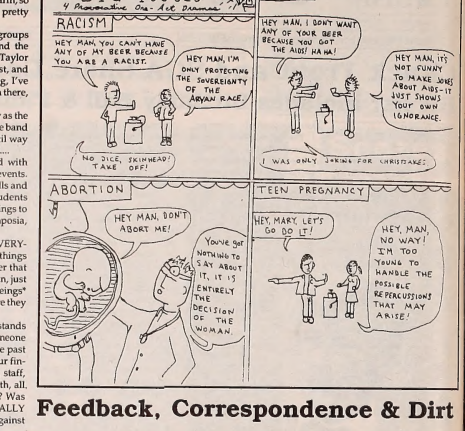
Traditionally, the students are practically prevented with force from initiating and conducting their own full-scale events. Two notable exceptions last semester included the Connells and the C-House project. Why aren't a group of talented students with a large budget and big ideas allowed to do mass mailings to alumni and parents and organize their own seminars, symposia, meals, bands, etc. for a gigantic, multi-faceted party?

Traditionally, the administration gets blamed for EVERYTHING from failed classes to headcolds, not to mention things they might actually be responsible for. When you consider that Security and Health Services are parts of the administration, just imagine the infinite number of things that the "human beings" (yes, it's true) running this show must get called out on. Are they really out to get us, the students?

Traditionally, in our blame-oriented society, everyone stands around pointing fingers and nothing gets done. Picture someone (one person) at WC you think has screwed you over in the past year (metaphorically speaking, please). Mentally point your finger at that person. Now picture everyone, all students, staff, faculty, etc., standing on the big lawn in front of Bill Smith, all. pointing a finger at someone. Who gets pointed at the most? Was (Trout, Sansing, Maxcy, Roderick, Dr. Bauman, whoever) REALLY out to get YOU? Do they really have the time to plot against specific students?

Traditionally, students graduate in four years (with a few notable exceptions). Most members of the faculty, staff, and administration are here several times that long. Yes, specific students can and do make a difference in the lives of those people. But when you're crunching numbers, what does the sad-sack story of one p'ced student mean to a 35-year career of balancing the budget?

Traditionally, small schools, especially anywhere near the South (Maryland's geographical location is completely relative) are very friendly places to be. Now, put everyone on the front lawn again. Instead of pointing your finger, take somebody's hand. I'm not talking Lovefest '93 here (that comes later). I'm talking introduce yourself to someone you don't know. Introduce them to someone you do know. Take a moment to say thank you to the men and women who clean up after you, feed you, teach you, house you, and who make sure WC runs smoothly enough to (hopefully) matriculate you. (Am I the only one who think that sounds vaguely obscene?) Okay, now all of a sudden everyone's naked.



Traditionally, May day at Washington College is one big nude party. Okay, so maybe nobody but students really participates anymore. But if the only tradition that's left is, in the end, the end (of the year, silly), then I guess the only thing to do is say

THE END.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers
Photography Editor: Margaret 'Wistie' Wurts
News Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan
Sports Doug Heifburger & Matt Murray
Features Justin 'M' Cann
Arts & Entertainment George Jamison
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jona
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-3341.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

The Horse Isn't Dead Yet

To the Editor:

As a Washington College alum I was upset and saddened upon learning of the College's unpublicized decision not to host its traditional Birthday Ball this year — unless you want to consider "the fun student dance in the dining hall" as an appropriate substitute.

Historically, the Birthday Ball was held to celebrate the birthday of George Washington, long time benefactor and friend to the College, but more importantly, it was a formal event to bring together Chestertown, the college community and its alumni.

Undoubtedly, the Trout administration will cite financial concerns and poor attendance that prompted its decision to discontinue the annual gala; however, the lack of attendance may be attributed to the fact that the community and alumni is disenchanted with the manner in which the administration has methodically destroyed long time traditions at Washington College.

Trout's apparent disregard for custom even extends to the selection of a first year student to orchestrate the event. Freshman Class President André Taylor, who is coordinator of this year's Birthday Ball, admits he received little support or guidance from the administration. "With the limited amount of money I was given I had to cut out a lot of decorations and other things that have always been a part of a traditional Birthday Ball."

As Elm editor J. Tarin Towers states in her editorial of February 5th ("Playing with a Full Deck") "The Birthday Ball isn't a ritualistic shindig that can fall by the wayside unnoticed." William Ball Jr., President of the Dance Club, adds, "To radically change the format of the Ball would be to ignore its purpose and send the signal that traditions of this institution mean very little in the long run." (Letters, "Birthday Ball: A Dead Tradition?", Feb. 5, 1993)

Another longtime tradition, the annual Christmas Dinner for faculty and staff, was not held this year. This and "most of the other special events which faculty enjoy as perks have been recently canceled" ("Not Playing With a Full Deck").

Ms. Towers emphasized, "It doesn't take the eyes of a hawk to see that the ratio of traditional events canceled or downsized to those that have occurred or will occur in full force is a strikingly unbalanced one."

See "Bramble," page 4

Birthday Ball... Not!

To the Editor:

The last three issues of the Kent County News have held a calender listing announcing/advertising the "Washington College Birthday Ball." To people who live in and around Chestertown, alumni, and faculty, those words conjure up a vision of a formal, black tie affair, with live orchestra — very elegant, very festive. Calling a student dance with a DJ playing rock music is a misrepresentation, at best. To those of us who know what a ball is, it is an insult. Advertising this year's event as The Annual Birthday Ball is egregious. George Washington (who attended and hosted many balls) must be turning over in his grave.

Karen Lynn Smith
Professor

For more letters, see page four

Crisis

Scott Ross Koon

This past Monday President Clinton took the politically courageous step of following up on his campaign promise to raise taxes on the rich. For the past twenty years or so, Americans would have been reluctant to elect a man who promised to raise taxes on the rich, because they were likely to feel that they themselves could possibly become rich, in which case they would certainly want lower taxes.

Today that is no longer the case. American oligopolistic capitalism has placed considerable barriers in the way of working class people seeking to open their own businesses. As a result, wage earning Americans no longer view becoming rich as possible, and therefore they are willing to take the intermediate step of bettering their own condition by creating a kinder, gentler welfare state.

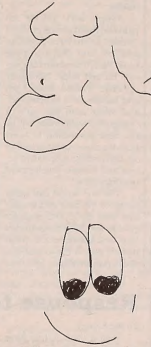
There are those in the business community who think that this is a lousy idea. They see a tax increase on wealthy Americans as inevitably leading to a decrease in consumer spending. More importantly, the items which the rich buy (such as luxury cars and extravagant housing) are more profitable to those corporations which produce those goods than those which are marketed for the average consumer.

This fear of decreases in the rate of profit for American companies which produce consumer goods caused many investors to sell stocks, which caused both the Dow Jones Industrials and the S&P 500 stock index to decline by 2.4%. Gold rose by $3.40 per ounce. This would seem to indicate that the investors who sold their stocks bought gold.

This seems to me to be a contradiction, in that while the economy is supposedly in a tenuous recovery and needs more domestic investment, individual investors find it in their best interest not to invest in the productive sector of the economy. Another contradiction appears to be that while it seems that businessmen have been complaining for ages about the size of the deficit, once concrete steps are taken to shrink the deficit they become frightened.

Both of these contradictions arise from the more fundamental contradiction that while any economic enterprise assumes an amount of risk, people are by nature adverse to risks, especially if they are wealthy and have a lot to lose. The risk-taking "entrepreneur" which capitalist propagandists love to rhapsodize about is largely a mythical figure who does not now exist and probably never has existed.

It is precisely this aversion to risk which has generated the huge budget deficit which America is saddled with today. On the one hand American capitalists faced a desire to control spending, on the other hand they did not want to cut funding for armaments programs which had become so profitable for the defence and aerospace corporations they controlled.

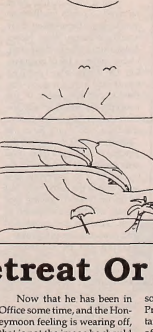


This question arose in the late seventies and was resolved in the early eighties. When faced with the prospect of investing in American industries which faced stiff competition from overseas and investing in

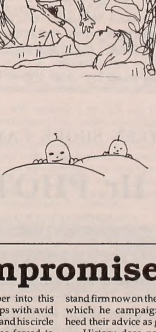
See "Crisis," page 9

CAMPUS VOICES

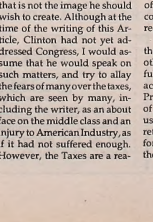
By Dude



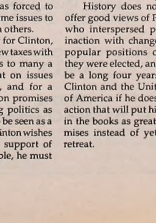
Draw a picture.



Emily Moser Freshman
Gettysburg, PA



Andrea Nolan Sophomore
Columbia, MD



Brenda Stanley Junior
Federalsburg, MD

Adam Brown Senior
Cincinnati, OH

Matt Langan Senior
Vienna, VA

Dawn Israel Senior
Baltimore, MD

Open Forum: Retreat Or Compromise

David Powell is a Freshman from Ocean City, New Jersey who wanted an opportunity to respond to Scott Koon's Crisis.

On Monday of this week, President Clinton finally released his plan on the economy. Containing a new revelation of possible higher taxes for more groups than planned, and a controversial tax on energy, it shocked many, including members of the middle class and leaders in business and industry. Although it was a milestone for Clinton to speak as a President and not as a candidate, and his time to address America with his actions and not just his ideas, his taxing of the middle class, at least, shows a "Politics-as-usual" attitude on the part of Clinton.

David Powell

Now that he has been in Office some time, and the Honeymoon feeling is wearing off, that is not the image he should wish to create. Although at the time of the writing of this Article, Clinton had not yet addressed Congress, I would assume that he would speak on such matters, and try to allay the fears of many over the taxes, which are seen by many, including the writer, as an about face on the middle class and an injury to American Industry, as if it had not suffered enough. However, the Taxes are a reason to look deeper into this Presidency. Perhaps with avid taxers in Congress and his circle of advisers, he was forced to compromise on some issues to receive support on others.

Unfortunately for Clinton, the joining of the new taxes with other issues seems to many a full-fledged retreat on issues across the board, and for a President elected on promises of change, playing politics as usual may come to be seen as a retreat in itself. If Clinton wishes for the continued support of the American people, he must stand firm now on the issues on which he campaigned, and heed their advice as guidance.

History does not usually offer good views of Presidents who interspersed periods of inaction with changes on the popular positions on which they were elected, and it could be a long four years for Mr. Clinton and the United States of America if he does not take action that will put his policies in the books as great compromises instead of yet another retreat.

Omicron Delta Kappa Inducts New Members

To the Editor:
The Alpha Psi Circle at Washington College of Omicron Delta Kappa, the National Leadership Honor Society, proudly announces the election of the following students for membership:

Seniors-
Christy Albright
Carolyn Athey
Amanda Burt
Kristin Coyne
Michelle Croiser
Melanie Green
Lori Hastings
Ashley Holladay
Tina McCuen
Melissa Sirick
Monique Ware
Bridgette Winchester

Juniors-
Salwa Amer
Lionel Dyson
Michael Frey
Thane Glenn
Renee Guckert
John Harris
Jennifer Hozik
Douglas Peterson
John Phoebus
Jennifer Reddish
Stephany Slaughter
J. Tarin Towers

All these men and women are in the top one third of their class and have attained special distinction in at least two areas of collegiate and/or community activities. Above all exemplary character is a primary consideration for membership in this society.

Respectfully,
Edward E. Maxcy
Faculty Secretary for ODK

The ELM Congratulates all new members of OΔK

The World According to Huck

To the Editor:

I intend to circulate this letter fairly widely, as well as to the "perpetrators." The February 5 edition of The Elm indicates that both the civilizing and the educational mission of the College "needs work," to put it mildly.

People who "get off" on pain and mutilation are indeed "freaks" (as the lot on page four admits), and that two-page boast should send warning signals far and wide. "Strangely cathartic" indeed. Masochism and sadism are a matched set, and what with the pace of "progress," sadie-masie will be the next perversion to burst from the closet, with the leather set demanding affirmative action and suitable employment opportunities.

The real world can easily outgross the pain and mutilation that these WC students paid to see. Real governments hire real torturers, and could deliver real thrills to said students, presumably on either end of the process. If you have wondered how people are recruited for this type of work, or who makes — and who buys — "snuff videos"...

A revolting fascination with pain and mutilation is more offensive, but no less depressing, than the pitiful demonstration of credulity in the unwitting service of a political agenda presented on page five. "The heat generated from the increased radiation is melting our icecaps, and water levels are rising at an average rate of seven feet per year." Oh, right!

A trip to the foot of High Street would revel to most morons, but evidently not all of them, that sea level is essentially where it was in colonial days, and a third-grade exercise in arithmetic would further reveal that, at "an average of seven feet per year," the campus should be an archipelago of enlightenment by now.

Imagine trying to explain to a mind like that the process by which — and the scale at which — atmospheric ozone is naturally and continuously created and destroyed. Hopeless. Such is the state of science education that college students are prepared to swallow whole and regurgitate undigested any factoid laid before them, provided that it is politically-correct.

Saving the Earth and Feeling Good About Yourself by shopping with a net bag and eschewing drinking straws seems harmless enough, provided that these earnest morons keep their enthusiasm to themselves. But we can't Save the Earth unless "everybody" does it. Mobilizations and mass movements are the name of the game, for people-manipulators.

Match cruelty and political-correctness, and the Red Guards "transform" into the Green Guards. Watch for it.

Dr. Susan Huck
Church Hill

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

Response to My Church Hill Fan

To the Editor:

Well, it's wonderful to have received so much feedback so quickly since the creation of my weekly column, Start Now!. Aside from all the positive stuff, I have gotten a bit of negative, too. On Wednesday I received a post card from someone who thinks, perhaps, some of the concepts discussed are a bit too extravagant (boy, will they love this issue's column!) Since my "admirer" went through all the trouble to mail me a letter (that was unsigned) I decided to respond to it so everyone else who thinks the same way, but is uncomfortable voicing that to me, will have a response as well. His/her documentation and concerns are as follows: "Living can be hazardous. [Your column displays] chemophobia, the fear of chemicals. 1) Nearly all clothing, whatever it is made of, is 'flammable' — it will burn. 2) Lots of interesting things happen to cotton between the field and your body. 3) The number of people who have gotten cancer from their clothing is really non-existent. 4) Your next investigative report should be on peanuts and peanut butter — loaded with "aflotoxins" and a real 'carcinogen', but still, no cancer. 5) There is also sunlight. People do get cancer from sunlight!"

Well! First of all, I hope everyone realizes that this column is not a preach session. I try to give documented facts with credible resources (which are listed at the end of every article). Start Now! presents ideas to think about while going about your daily activities — I am not screaming at everyone about how they personally are destroying the environment. I have never stated something as ludicrous as "by using disposable razors you personally are killing the earth and you MUST be stopped!" Little things added together can make big changes, and I am simply contributing some interesting facts.

To address the concerns voiced ... I mentioned the bit about the polyurethane leather pants simply because it grosses me out to wear synthetic material. I would be a bit unhappy if I was out dancing and the man next to me bumped his cigarette onto my cool polyurethane leather pants and they procured a large hole with funky fumes.

I addressed some of the treatments of cotton in last week's Elm. I never said that "people get cancer from clothes", I made available factual information about the treatment of fibers that make up their clothes. I have gotten a rash from wearing a tee shirt that was unwashed before use, and if anyone else found the odor or feel of new clothes offensive I was explaining some reasons why it might be happening. I will look into the "peanut" concern. And finally, who doesn't know about the connection between cancer and sunlight? That has been drilled into me since my mom took me to the beach when I was seven! I am attempting to make publicly available some of the lesser known facts about products we all use.

Feel free to respond soon, whoever you might be, but I would rather do lunch than exchange impersonal letters and editorials. You apparently know where I can be found.

Christabel Garcia-Zamor
Columnist, The Elm

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 19 THE BAY COUNTRY GENTLEMEN Bluegrass and Country with some talented musicians.
SAT 20 THE ANGIE MILLER BAND We love Angie!! Jazzy Folk/Rock.

Start Now! This week:

For Her: Menstruating Women Beware!

When was the last time you saw a list of ingredients on a box of tampons ? Despite the fact that they are worn internally, there is no law requiring such a declaration by manufacturers. Many tampons are manufactured out of rayon and cotton bleached with chlorine. When this chlorine is mixed with paper pulp, it forms a chemical called dioxin — one of the most mutagenic carcinogens known.

When a women uses a tampon, this chemical can leach into the bloodstream, via the vaginal mucosa, and settle in specific tissues, possibly leading to cancer (which may form five to fifty years later). Remember also that plastic applicators, notorious carriers of vinyl chloride, are cast aside to sit in landfills for the next five hundred years.

Sanitary napkins, often coated with plastic, also contain the same compound, and the extent to which they are carcinogenic is yet undetermined, although it is well known that the plastic portion of them will join the plastic tampon applicators in the dump. What is an environmentally conscious woman to do?

There is nothing we women can do to change the natural processes of our bodies, but at least we can ensure that our response to them is a non-toxic one. For the past four years, many Swedish women have switched from tampons and napkins to "cups" and "sponges". The Keeper' Menstrual Cup is an ounce-sized reusable rubber menstrual cup worn internally and emptied several times a day. It looks like a small, deep diaphragm and is made from pure high grade rubber which lasts for ten years. This product has been quietly marketed for the last forty years and is FDA accepted. It costs $25, and can be purchased from Keeper Company, Inc. (P.O. Box 20023, Cincinnati, OH 455220. (513) 221-1464).

Cosmetic sea sponges are reusable natural sponges that are used instead of tampons. It is inserted dry, removed every few hours, thoroughly washed and squeezed dry, and then reinserted. It must be sterilized monthly in boiling water. This product sells for $1.75, and lasts a very long time. Calliste Natural Sea Sponges can be purchased from The Wishing Well Distributing Company. (P.O. Box 529, Graton, CA. 9544. (707) 823-9510).

Christabel Garcia-Zamor

For those of us who are not quite that motivated, there remain several more options. If you must wear tampons or sanitary napkins, be sure that they are all cotton, and if possible, not bleached. The only way to be sure of this is if it is clearly marked on the box (which it usually is not).

Seventh Generation sells Forever maxi-pads and panty-liners bleached by a process that uses less wood pulp without sacrificing absorbency. They are guaranteed ninety-nine percent biodegradable and are dioxin free. Six boxes of maxi pads costs $14.50, and four boxes of panty liners costs $12.50, all postage and handling included. Economically speaking, that is really good, considering that pads usually cost about $3.00 per box, and you would be saving money and the environment. Initial catalog is $2.00, unless placing an order immediately. (Colchester, Vt. 05446-1672. (800) 456-1177).

Okay, now for those of us who like the environment, but will only drive to Rite-Aid in our attempts to save it... Avoid tampons and pads that contain dyes, fragrances, deodorants, and superabsorbant fibers (often associated with Toxic Shock Syndrome). Kotex Security tampons and O.B. (which has no applicator) use cotton and rayon. The Kotex package says, "no superabsorbant materials." Buy tampons with cardboard applicators (if you're not brave enough for O.B.). Remember to avoid those with plastic applicators because they are non-biodegradable and non-renewable (Kotex Tampon Original Regular are 100% cotton with a cardboard applicator).

One last thing that needs to be said for women who douche (ick!). Strong chemical preparations (even in the "100% natural" ones) cause chemical vaginitis (irritation and swelling of delicate vaginal linings). The FDA has said publicly that "the there is no need to douche," and blames "ignorance and commercial advertising" for the practice. Regular bathing and wearing loose fitting natural fiber clothes is the best alternative.

If you must commit this gross practice, at least do it non-toxically. Home Health Products, Inc. sell Hygenia Hygenic Cleansing Douche, a 100% natural with active lactobacillus-acidophilus yogurt cells in dry vinegar. No chemicals, preservatives, colors, or fragrances. It costs $4.95 for eight five gram envelopes from Home Health Products, Inc. (1160-A, Millers Lane, P.O. Box 3130, Virginia Beach, VA. 23454. (800) 468-7313). I would strongly suggest consulting your physician before using any such product that interferes with your body's natural processes.

Read All About It:
Ecologue, Edited by Bruce N. Anderson. Pages 73-74. 1990.
If You Love This Planet, by Helen Caldicott, M.D. Page 56. 1992.

Brief Beef

Hot Off the Lit House Press

As the new year rolls along, the Lit House Press is busier than ever. The Printer's Devils Press Club, which was formed last semester under the supervision of Mike Kaylor, continues to be a success. Kaylor is the Director of the Literary House Press Room and the Master Printer to the College.

The Printer's Devils have two field trips planned for this semester. The first is a visit with Leonard Baskin, the famous print artist and bookmaker at the University of Delaware. The second trip will be to the Library of Congress, where the "devils" will view books from the Vatican Library.

The Press is also planning to start printing the 1992-93 poetry postcard series. They are currently printing illustrations for their second book, Remembering Ed Ruhe, which will be printed in the spring. The first book, Taking the Boat Downriver, was published last summer. In addition, the press is working on several other printing projects as well, including at least one manuscript.

–Jennifer Waldych

The Society of Junior Fellows

The Society of Junior Fellows is now accepting applications for membership from second semester sophomores and juniors. Established in 1990, the society recognizes scholars in the collegiate environment who are dedicated to the exchange of ideas.

In addition to sponsoring speakers and other activities on campus, the Society provides grants for its members to pursue independent research and supplements pay for those who receive internships.

To be eligible, students must have a cumulative GPA of 3.2, and they should demonstrate leadership in extra-curricular activities as well as community outreach programs.

Applications for consideration must be submitted to Davy McCall, curator, Society of Junior Fellows, by March 5. All applications must be accompanied by a letter of recommendation from the Department Chair in the applicant's major.

Fraternity Update

The brothers of Kappa Alpha inducted nine new pledges for the spring semester on Friday, February 12. They include Chris Eaton, Aaron Grayson, Matt Needham, Mark Murphy, Matt Murray, Chris Shepherd, André Taylor, Max Walton, and Norris Wright.

P.J. Mullin, who was inducted in the fall, and Christian Thornton, who will be inducted in one week, will bring the total to twelve pledges.

REMEMBER! Those of you who received bids from KA still have one week to accept them. Those rushees who deferred and decide to finally take our bid will be inducted with Thornton on February 26. It is then that we will start you on your journey toward becoming a brother in the campus' oldest fraternity, which is one of the most prestigious in America.

Convocation:

Featuring Ambassador Armacost, Dr. Elion, and Senator Mikulski. Saturday, 2pm.

Career Brief: Career Updates Available on News Server

YOU have hit the jack pot, (only if you don't know it yet. We get a month into the second semester, and thoughts of summer are probably ice ages away. But now is the time to apply for summer jobs and internships. It's important to use your summers as an undergraduate to gain experience in career-related fields of interest. The Center for Career Development has created a "1993 Summer Jobs" file in a program called The News. The program can be accessed by any computer on campus that is connected to the network. The News file shows local job listings, as well as many opportunities that exist across the country. Included are a variety of interests, from Federal Government opportunities to biological research to counseling, lifeguarding, and coaching at a number of summer camps across the nation.

Here is an outlined procedure that explains how to access this wonderful resource:

- When seated at any Macintosh computer that is connected to the network, click on the apple.
- GO to 'CHOOSER".
- Click on 'Appleshare'.
- Under Appletalk Zone, Click on 'Computing Center'.
- Under File Server (upper right), click on 'Computing Center' again.
- Now click on 'OKAY'.
- Click on 'Guest or Registered User', whichever you are.
- Click on 'THE NEWS'.
- 'THE NEWS' file will appear over to your right. Click on it.
- You are now into the summer jobs and camps file and are free to explore.

To cash in on summer job and internship listing opportunities, follow these instructions or contact Dr. Cades or Vicky Sawyer at the Career Center for more information. Current part-time job listings can also be found in The News file.

Week at a Glance

February 19- 25

Film Series: Raise the Red Lantern
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

19 Friday

Washington College Board of Visitors and Governors. On Campus.

The Louis Goldstein Program in Public Affairs presents A Talk with Ambassador Michael H. Armacost. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 2:00 p.m.

20 Saturday

Birthday Convocation. Honored Guests: Ambassador Michael H. Armatrout, Dr. Gertrude Belle Elion, and Senator Barbara A. Mikulski. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 2:00 p.m.

President's Forum. Casey Academic Center, Forum. 3:30 p.m.

21 Sunday

The African-American History and Culture Committee and the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange present The Sepia Tones featuring Marlon Saunders. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 2:00 p.m.

22 Monday

The O'Neill Literary House Monday Series presents Investment Strategies of the Great Writers. A talk with Marty Williams, '75. O'Neill Literary House Tea at 4:00 p.m., Talk at 4:30 p.m.

The Dance on Film Series. T.B.A. Casey Academic Center Forum, 6:30 p.m.

Health Service Task Force Meeting. Casey Academic Center, Commons Room, 6:00 p.m.

23 Tuesday

Washington College students present an African-American Poetry Reading. Casey Academic Center Commons Room. 4:30 p.m.

Student Government Association Meeting. Casey Academic Center Forum. 9:30 p.m.

24 Wednesday

The William James Forum presents Bosnia and Somalia: Why is it So Hard to End Torture and Genocide? A talk by Dr. Paul Churchill, Chairman, Department of Philosophy, George Washington University. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 7:30 p.m.

25 Thursday

The Gender Relations Awareness Alliance and Health Services present the film AIDS: The Women Speak. Discussion to follow film. Casey Academic Center Forum, 7:00 p.m.

The McClain Program in Environmental Studies in conjuncture with the Chesapeake Bay Maritime Museum presents Clams, Crabs, Eels, and Menhaden: The Biology and Harvesting of Commercial Species of the Chesapeake Bay. A presentation by Alice Jones Lippson and Robert L. Lippson, scientists, illustrators, and authors. Dunning Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m.

The Washington College Drama Department presents Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m.

Washington College

Birthday Ball

Hodson Hall, 9:00pm

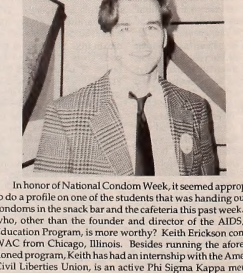
Semi-Formal Attire Required

Tickets Available at Door: $5 for one – $8 for couple

Pre-Ball Party at WC Deli • 50¢ Drinks

Washington College

A&E



Freshmen Writers Take the Stage

Tara Kidwell
Staff Writer

The Freshman Reading which took place Wednesday night at the O'Neill Literary House was first-rate. The readers were Jean Doughty, Kerri Haskins, Emily Moser, Mark Murphy, Jennifer Waldych, Mark Stephens, and Ryan Walker. From the amusing to the moving, the group ranged in style and tastes, everyone had a wonderful time.

The poetry was enchanting and the short stories were fabulous. Not to give those who read big egos, but I can truly say the diversity which they offer will make the competition tough in the next few years as they grow in their personal style. All in all after the first edge of nervousness wore off the confidence began to build and made the reading a personable occasion which lasted well after the reading.

Student Profile: Keith Erickson

In honor of National Condom Week, it seemed appropriate to do a profile on one of the students that was handing out free condoms in the snack bar and the cafeteria this past week. And who, other than the founder and director of the AIDS/Peer Education Program, is more worthy? Keith Erickson comes to WAC from Chicago, Illinois. Besides running the aforementioned program, Keith has had an internship with the American Civil Liberties Union, is an active Phi Sigma Kappa member, and is a culinary genius.

An avid chain-smoker and Clinton supporter, Keith keeps himself busy with a double major in History and Business, a minor in Philosophy, and working on an aqua-culture farm. In his spare time, he plays pool for the Blue Bird Pool League, enjoys Chips-Ahoy™ cookies and fruit roll-ups, and likes to steal his roommates food, who say that he resembles the government—always in debt.

Keith's idols include his father, Peter Pan, and Frank Creegan. His favorite movie is Last of the Mohicans and is adamantly opposed to the idea of a dry campus. After graduation, Keith is planning on joining the Peace Corps and eventually scuba diving. And when asked for a final statement, Keith is reported saying: "To my brothers and pledges— Titties and beer".

Psychic Predicts The End

Tara Kidwell
Staff Writer

The movie Howard's End is a delightful portrayal of E. M. Forster's novel of the same title. The direction and cinematography make this movie a treat for the eyes. The acting is superb. Having read the book and eagerly awaited the showing of the movie, I was impressed by the director's final product. True to the book in every sense, there are no deviant sub-plots, no maligning of characters, and the dialogue transferred wonderfully creating a worthy Oscar nominee.

A brilliant selection of actresses and actors complements the story line. From the decadent Wilcox family life to the impoverished life of the Bast's, Howard's End brings life to a enchanting array of characters.

Emma Thompson, as Helen defines the ideal suffragette while her sister Meg, portrayed by Helena Bonham Carter, gives dynamic expression to a woman who is caught between an old world lifestyle and the driving ideas of the Suffragette movement. Mr. Wilcox, played by Anthony Hopkins, epitomizes the rich bourgeois while Mrs. Wilcox, performed by Vanessa Redgrave, masterfully depicts the life of a family matron.

The story is set in England at the turn of the century, and it deals with themes prevalent to the times. From life among the upper class to the trials of the struggling clerk, your emotions will be moved by the injustices to humanity as well as powerful statements on feminism made by Forster. This is an exquisite film with an elegance which is just not seen in many films today.

Howard's End is up for several Oscar nominations including: Best Picture, Best Actress: Emma Thompson, Best Supporting Actress: Vanessa Redgrave. Emma Thompson has already won a Golden Globe Award for her portrayal of Helen Schlegel.

Bored? Leave Chestertown

Joy Yarusi
Staff Writer

Having been accosted by the Arts and Entertainment Editor a few too many times, I decided to get him off my back and write something. And I decided that since Chestertown, being the booming metropolis that it is, offers no entertainment value whatsoever, I would write about things to do outside of Chestertown.

Washington D.C., Baltimore, Annapolis, and Philadelphia are only minutes away and these cities offer endless opportunities. Whether it be dance clubs or museums, shopping or simply sight seeing, Chestertown is no match for the more populated areas of this region. Chestertown, in all of its old town glory, cannot match even small cities like Dover, Newark, or St. Michael's. These meager cities only offer movie theaters, bars or shopping, but at least you will get out of Chestertown for awhile. And if you have an inkling to see a movie in the near future, I suggest the newly released, Vanished.

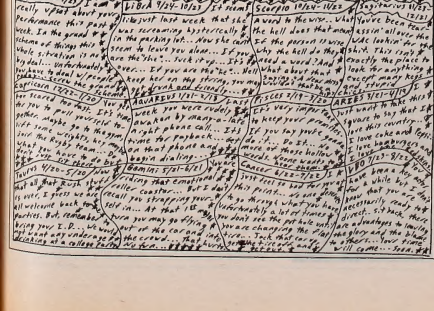
"I'll never leave you again" is the phrase that Keifer Sutherland opens the movie with and later regrets. He and his girlfriend are taking a road trip through the state of Washington when they make a stop at a rest area. She goes in for a soda and never returns. Jeff Bridges is the psychotic Biology professor, obsessed with spiders and women, that kidnaps Sutherland's girlfriend. After three years of an endless search, Sutherland's character deteriorates into virtual insanity. Bridges seeks him out and further tests his sanity by playing twisted mind games by alluding to the belief that his girlfriend is still alive. The movie becomes a warped and frightening re-creation of what actually happened to Sutherland's girlfriend.

The only real problem that I had with this movie is the character development of Jeff Bridges, or the lack there of. The only reasoning that appears in the film is when he states: "You know when you are a child and you are standing on the edge of a balcony and you want to jump off. Well, I jumped off."

After becoming terrified to fly from seeing the movie Alive, I am now very apprehensive about using any sort of public road stop to buy a soda. I left the theatre recalling the many times I've made small talk with strangers at train stations, airports, etc. I recalled the hundreds of times that I have gone into a bar and have been hit upon. And I also recalled the many times that I picked up unknown hitch-hikers out of a rainstorm to spare them from a violent cold and risk a possible death. And haven't we all? Vanished will make you extra cautious if you're a female, so it's probably pretty wise to check it out and receive a not too gentle reminder of reality. It's playing in Annapolis and the other larger cities in the area. And if you're a male, the filming of Washington is really pretty neat!

Churchill Speaks...

Dr. Paul Churchill, chairman of the Philosophy department at George Washington University, will speak on Wednesday, February14, on "Bosnia and Somalia: Why it it So Hard to End Torture and Genocide?" The program, sponsored by the William James Forum of Washington College, begins in the Hynson Lounge at 7:30 p.m. Dr. Churchill, who holds his bachelor's, master's, and doctor's degrees from Johns Hopkins University, came to George Washington University in 1975. He is the editor of a book, The Ethics of Liberal Democracy. His research interests center on questions of nuclear deterrence and on the philosophy of non-violence, both in western and non-western cultures.



Jazz Concert Appears at WAC

The Sepia Tones featuring Marlon Saunders will present a jazz concert on Sunday, February 21 at 2:00 p.m. in Tawes Theater. The concert is being sponsored by the African-American History and Culture Committee, and the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange and is free and open to the public.

The Sepia Tones, with members Lenora Helm, Rosa Russ, Arif St. Michael, and Marlon Saunders, blends the styles of jazz, blues, soulful R&B, and gospel creating a unique style all their own.

These four vocalists have worked on the road and in the studio with some of the music industry's finest artist. These artists include Branford Marsalis, Freddy Jackson, Living Colour, Degrees of Motion, Patti Austin, C&C Music Factory, Samantha Fox, and Billy Joel, to name a few.

Sepia Tones have most recently been in the studio recording their artist demo. The quartet's talents are being extended into the songwriting, arrangement, and production of the project. Sepia Tones plan to showcase their demo project in New York City this spring. For more information on this concert call the Campus Special Events Coordinator at (410)778-7849.

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents
THE DISTINGUISHED GENTLEMAN'
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown
gallery 59
Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483
Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

The Grammys Changed My Life

The nominations for the Grammy Awards came out last month and after a lot of deliberation[1], I decided to annoy myself by hunting them down. And that is exactly what I did. Yet again this year, the Grammies have nominated individuals that, even though certain individuals think that they are appropriate nominations, are either unwarranted, unreasonable, or years past their importance, simply because they have sold a few million records. Oh, don't get me wrong, some of the artists definitely need to be rewarded, but, again, I must question the views of the nominating committee.

First, the nominations for the Best Song and Best Single[2]. Eric Clapton should have been nominated eons ago but since the commercial success of Unplugged has skyrocketed him into popularity, he is nominated. Celine Dion and Peabo Bryson, in my opinion, deserve this award not only for the beauty of the song but to add to the honors of one of our generations greatest films.[3] K.D. Lang, after a lot of publicity concerning her sexuality and her choice of friends (Madonna, Sandra Bernhardt, et. al.), broke out of her country-based anonymity. Vanessa Williams, the ex-Miss America, overcame her scandal and received nomination. And, finally, Billy Ray Cyrus. What a waste of sperm.[4]

The nominations of the best album[5] are not really surprising. Clapton proves that society, yet again, is years behind the times. Lang found out scandal and lesbianism can be profitable. Annie Lennox proves that doing it solo can surpass anything that she has ever done.[6] U2's super-talent helps keep them the mega-stars that they deserve to be. And the soundtrack to Beauty and the Beast brings back the fairy tale motif that is needed, especially in this age of crime, pestilence, and disappointment.

The nominations for New Artist[7], Rock-Duo or Group[8], Hard Rock[9], and Metal[10] really confused me. My confusion lies in the fact that some of these artists are not New (Kriss Kross-at least they seem like they have been around for entirely too long), or Rock (En Vogue, Los Lobos(?), Red Hot Chili Peppers), or Hard Rock(Alice in Chains, Nirvana, Red Hot Chili Peppers), or Metal(Helmet, Ministry, Nine Inch Nails, Soundgarden). Maybe you can make sense and give me the reasoning.[11]

The rest of the major nominations(Rhythm and Blues-Duo or Group[12], Rap-Duo or Group[13], Jazz Instrumental[14], Country Vocalist-Female[15], and Country Vocalist-Male[16]), in order to be fair, do not effect me in the least, but I will mention them even if they are quite boring.

And finally, my favorite category: Alternative Albums. There was a time when I lamented the fact that there were no awards for alternative bands. But now that they have become so popular, I guess the music industry finally feels that "alternative" music is worthy for distinction. However, to my chagrin, I am disappointed in this years selection. It is not that I do not worship the ground that some, in fact all, of these performers walk on but I feel that they are being cheated. Why? These honors have come entirely too late. Like Clapton, The 13-52's, The Cure, Morrissey, Tom Waits, and XTC have been around for a long period of time. And now that they are "commercial", they finally get the recognition that they deserve. However, I started to think about this in a very pragmatic fashion and I came to a few conclusions. At first, I was excited to see that these five incredible performers have finally been honored. Hell, they have given our generation some of the greatest music to identify with. But then, I thought about it some more and I became incensed. Why shouldn't I become incensed? Five groups/artists that I have worshipped from afar are being honored with the same manner that Billy Ray Cyrus is being honored. How would you feel if any of your favorite artists(not to mention five!) were nominated for a Grammy in the same year that Billy Ray Cyrus' Achy Breaky Heart is nominated for the Best Single Record and Best Song Grammy? You would feel like I do: depressed and dejected.

Oh, don't get me wrong, I enjoy Achy Breaky Heart for what it is(a cheesy, over-played, non-artistic money-maker inspired by pop culture) and that as all.[17] But when Billy Ray Cyrus(a no talent, over-paid, Garth Brooks-wanna-be) is nominated for an award that is supposed to represent excellence in the music business, I start to question my own taste in music (and I use that phrase lightly). To me, this means that Billy Ray Cyrus is actually considered to be in the same category as the "legends" of music history. This also means that the industry is so capitalistically oriented that songs/artists that sell a few million records, no matter how trite, how unnecessary, or how bad, can actually be considered "legendary". And finally, this means that because of a few of my favorite performers have been nominated for Grammies this year, to me, they have lost all of their meaning.

That's it. The idolatry is over. I am officially giving away all of my records, tapes, and CD's. I am tearing down my shrines (those of you who have seen my room will understand). I have given up my "alternative" lifestyle. I am rushing to the nearest mall and buying a J. Crew™ hat, Bugle Boy™ jeans, and a pair of Air Jordan™ sneakers. I am throwing away all of my torn jeans, my black clothing, and my hairspray. I am running to the closest record store and snatching up an Eric Clapton Unplugged CD before they are all gone.

I am adopting an entirely new lifestyle. My melancholy is over. I am devoting my life to being HAPPY and NORMAL. I will forget all of the hours I spent listening to the depressing swoons of Morrissey, the dark lullabies of The Cure, the quirky ramblings of the B-52's, the acid-inspired jingles of Tom Waits, or the satirical quips of XTC. I will never wear my Doc Martins™ again! I will even start wearing a hat and matching socks. I have found the answers for what I have been searching. Thank you Grammy Awards. You are my Savior.

Footnotes

1-Actually, it was a suggestion from the editor.

2-Eric Clapton Tears in Heaven, Celine Dion and Peabo Bryson Beauty and the Beast, K.D. Lang Constant Craving, Vanessa Williams Save the Best for Last, and Billy Ray Cyrus Achy Breaky Heart.

3-Yes, I have seen this film more than twenty films and it still makes me cry.

4-What a waste of sperm.

5-Eric Clapton Unplugged, K.D. Lang Ingenue, Annie Lennox Diva, U2 Achtung Baby, and Various Artists Beauty and the Beast.

6-Congratulations must be given because of Annie's birth of a baby girl this past week.

7-Arrested Development, Billy Ray Cyrus, Sophie B. Hawkins, Kriss Kross, Jon Secada.

8-En Vogue, Little Village, Los Lobos, Red Hot Chili Peppers, U2.

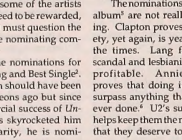
9-Alice in Chains, Faith No More, Guns-n-Roses, Nirvana, Pearl Jam, and Red Hot Chili Peppers.

10-Helmet, Megadeth, Ministry, Nine Inch Nails, Soundgarden.

11-Knowing the reasoning is the least of my worries.

12-Arrested Development, Boyz II Men, Pariah Carey and Trey Lorenz, En Vogue, and Luther Vandross and Janet Jackson.

13-Arrested Development, Beastie Boys, Kriss Kross, House of Pain, and Public Enemy.



14-Eddie Daniels and Gary Barton, Charlie Haden Quartet West, Joe Henderson, Branford Marsalis, and Arturo Sandoval.

15-Mary Chapin-Carpenter, Wynonna Judd, Reba McEntire, Lorrie Morgan, Pam Tillis.

16-Garth Brooks, Billy Ray Cyrus, Vince Gill, Randy Travis Tritt.

17-I do not now nor have I ever liked Billy Ray Cyrus.

BAY TO BAY TRADERS

NOT JUST ANOTHER PRETTY FACE

CANNON STREET COURTYARD
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
LOCATED BEHIND RIGHTS MUSIC CAFE

20 % SALE
THROUGH FEBRUARY
ON
PATAGONIA
RAY BAN JANSPORT
ATLANTIS MAD BOMBER
BULA GREAT LAKES
FUNCTIONAL GEAR FOR ACTIVE SPORTS IN ALL CONDITIONS

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist — Permanent Hair Removal Electrologist – Louise Leaverton, L.E.
Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow

Calendar of Events, Convocation Weekend

Friday 19

2 p.m. Informal talk with Ambassador Armacost and students, moderated by Dr. Dan Premo, in Hynson Lounge. Refreshments will be served.

3:30 p.m. Student reception for Dr. Elion, basement of West

Saturday 20

10 a.m. Board of Visitors and Governors meeting

2 p.m. Convocation, Tawes Theatre (see article, this page)

3:30 p.m. President's Forum, CAC Forum Room

4:30 p.m. Reception, Casey Gallery

9 p.m. Birthday Ball, Main Dining Room

"Koon," from page 3

the defence industry where international competition for the American market was limited because of national security concerns, American investors chose to reap the relatively risk free investment.

So when we ask how to reduce the deficit, we should ask ourselves where all the money we borrowed and spent went. It did not go to the poor, for if you ask them they will tell you that they are still poor and in fact finished the last decade in a worse position than when they entered it. The money in fact wound up in the hands of America's wealthiest citizens, in the form of dividends from defence stocks and profits which arose from the sale of those over valued stocks.

Viewed in this light, there is no question as to what should be done in order to reduce the deficit. The money which was borrowed was used to end the Cold War. Now that the war is over, America should reclaim its public wealth. There was a time when calling someone a war profiteer was considered the worst sort of insult. To me this still holds true, for I can think of few things more scandalous than whipping the nation up into a patriotic frenzy of xenophobia, making a killing from the sales of arms to the Government and then expecting the poorest members of society to pay by increasing sin taxes and cutting social spending to the bone.

As of this writing, I have not read the text of the state-of-

"SGA," from page 1

that he "really wants to see a day provided for students, faculty, parents and alumni to mix."

Reunion, said Trout, is the traditional time of year that alumns return to campus, but that "some sort of formal Homecoming really is lacking," especially in comparison to football schools.

"We want to be made into loyal alumns," said Del Nero. "But more attention to the needs of current students is necessary for that to happen, she added.

"I think that for a very old school, we are lacking ... traditions," said Talbot Dorm Senator Doug Peterson.

Trout wanted to examine the whole issue: "What are the central defining things that unify our college?" he asked. He mentioned the lack of an on-campus chapel as a topic to be evaluated, as well as a need to revamp the Homecoming and Reunion functions for alumni.

As for actually existent traditions, Trout named the Birthday Ball, the Luau [held on Family Day], the Victory Bell and the Sophie Kerr Prize.

"All of these are really traditions in a way," he said, "but how much do we really play them up and showcase them — and how much do we really stick with them?"

Exemplary of that phenomenon, he said, was the "demise of the luau. It was really student-induced — there's no enthusiasm at the luau anymore."

Peterson restated his belief that "students that are involved in organizations should really be given a chance to shine publicly."

He and several others said that a day or weekend featuring several sports contests, as well as Greek-sponsored events and a dramatic production, would make parents and alumni more likely to come to WC for a visit.

Trout said he would like to see something similar happen with Fall Parents' Day. The fall event is held for first-year students, said Trout, "but why not include everyone?"

Off-campus Senator Jane Kennedy brought up Birthday Ball again; as a senior, she said, she was especially disappointed in the version planned for Saturday.

"I thought we would continue what we've been doing," said Trout. "Student attendance is not what it has been — it's expensive.

"The original purpose of [the Birthday Ball] was to raise scholarship money," he said. "We have not succeeded."

"I'm in the hole on the Birthday Ball," he concluded.

Parliamentarian Will Phipps asked the president what his personal goals for his years here are. "What mark do you want to make on Washington College?"

Trout said he was particularly interested in the ongoing Strategic Long-Range Planning process. The resolution passed by the Board of Visitors and Governors at the Fall meeting to increase the college population to 1,200 students by the year 2,000 is a main objective.

He was especially fervent about the prospects of adding 25-40 new faculty and "250-300 new beds," both of which the-union address. Knowing that, you may find it remarkably prescient that I am willing to categorically state that nothing Clinton said or proposed will help the economy in a significant way.

This is not because I don't believe in government intervention in the economy or any of that rubbish, but rather because the problem is simply too big to fix. The gross public debt of the U.S. Treasury in the third quarter of last year was $4,064,600,000,000. That is a lot of money.

Moreover, the elimination of the deficit will have to be based on increases in revenue and not decreases in spending. This is because there is no program which can be cut in any significant way without offending an interest group. It cannot be done, and it will never be done. Therefore taxes are the only alternative.

Oddly enough, one can still read conservative columnists whining about the fact that Reagan created ten million jobs and wasn't he wonderful and Clinton has no job creation record and blah blah blah. But even if one accepts the "new jobs" figure at ten million, the government still borrowed $406,460 for every job which it allegedly created. In other words, if the Government had borrowed the same amount of money and used it to create ten million government jobs, each worker would have made $195.41 an hour.

So the debt did not create jobs, and it didn't go to social programs. It was used primarily as an economic giveaway to the ruling class. Of course, while raising taxes on the rich is unquestionably the correct thing to do morally, it won't help the economy any. Although some misinformed people in the media erroneously believe that America is recovering economically, common sense dictates that the country only does as well as General Motors is doing. Last year GM lost $23,000,000 and change. That's a lot of money.

And its only going to get worse. During the period from 1945 to 1991 the world witnessed an unprecedented degree of cooperation and friendliness between the the capitalist powers in Europe, North America and Japan. This was largely due to the presence of the Soviet Union. Now that the need to limit economic competition has passed, it will become more cutthroat.

This will greatly increase economic instability, and the decision of America not to invest heavily in skill-intensive industries in the commercial sector will not stand us in good stead. Twenty years from now, the concern will not be the deficit so much as the brain drain. America's most talented workers will be unable to find profitable work here and will emigrate. The only ones left will be those who possess neither the intellectual skills or the vocational training to make themselves desirable to foreign employers. Undoubtedly all of these people will run for public office.

"Bramble," from page 2

This trend to ignore tradition has not been limited merely to special events (such as the Birthday Ball, etc.) As Kent County News editor H. Hurtt Deringer stated in an editorial (Sept.11, 1992), "For 70 years Washington College athletics were tied to what we will call the Kibler-Russel-Dumschott-Athey tradition. The college ignored successful basketball coach and alumnus Tom Finnegan, the logical selection, as Athletic Director. A committee selected Geoff Miller, the 'outsider' who was going to be good for Washington College." Quite the contrary; if anything he has been a detriment.

Upon Chuck Trout's arrival at Washington College in the fall of 1990, Miller wasted little time convincing Trout to abolish the long-standing tradition of having "part-time volunteers" from the local community as head coaches.

As recently as 1988, Washington College alum Karen Perkinson McGee wrote a feature in the Washington College Magazine on the importance and tradition of part-time coaches at Washington College ("Part-time Coaches Juggle Careers and Families for WC Sports"). McGee states: "Sometimes the best you can get are part-time coaches: local folks with an interest in a given sport who are willing to relieve full-time staff of the burden of coaching a second sport." She further stresses: "At a small school in a small town, part-time coaches make good sports possible."

Ironically, part-time volunteers have made their mark on Washington College athletics. The greatest lacrosse coach ever to coach at Washington College was Don Kelly, a local car dealer. Nancy Dick, a health department nurse and former president of the Sho'men Club and Jenny Butler, only the second woman to be inducted into WC's Hall of Fame, established women's lacrosse and women's softball, respectively. All three were part-time coaches.

The 10th-oldest college in the nation has survived because of its rich history and traditions; however, the Trout administration seems intent on destroying many of the traditions needlessly that have made Washington College a special institution of higher learning. Cost effective measures can be applied without diminishing quality. Trout should take more care and thought before he discards that which should be preserved. I, like André Taylor, think "It would be a shame if this was the last Birthday Ball Washington College has."

Holly Bramble
Class of 1974

SOME OF OUR STUDENTS ARE STAR PUPILS.

From 90210 to your zip code, a Motorcycle RiderCourse can make you a better and safer rider—like Brian Austin Green of Fox TV's Beverly Hills, 90210. So call 1-800-447-4700 today to become the star of your class.

MOTORCYCLE SAFETY FOUNDATION

Women's Crew Faces Season Of Unknowns

Duke Krieger
Staff Writer

The Women's Varsity Crew may not win a single race this year. They also may win every single one, or a lot in between. In some respects, they've already won.

With their coach, Glenn Merry, pushing them to their physical, emotional and mental boundaries, and beyond, they've already beat one important thing. Fear.

The women are only rowing one boat this spring, refining to a fast, lean crew. Eleven women strong, they'll go with an 8-seat boat, with three spare oarswomen. Those eleven are Tonya Howell, Mary Bird, Jen Dougherty, Jenny Sue LeSchander, Sue Czechowski, Jen Flozik, Melissa Olsen, Kathy Mullen, Kara Wiesenbaugh, Stacy Sherman and Alexandra Geller. At Coxswain, there's Lisa Brown, Amy Bortmes and Renee Kuhnel.

The team will have a tough season, with serious competition against schools such as George Washington University and Georgetown. Coach Merry pointed out that one of the keys to the women's success will be to avoid beating themselves and not worrying about the competition.

"We take it one practice at a time," Coach Merry said. "We worry about what's inside our boat first."

The women are in excellent condition after a winter of hard workouts and ergometer pieces. They are going to continue on this tough regimen by going to Spring Break training in Florida where they'll row their first race of the season in the Metro Cup.

But what make's these women different, when every other school is doing the same thing?

According to Coach Merry, as any of these oarswomen will point out, is that they are a team, not a team of individuals. They eat together, workout together, party together.

Also, more importantly to Coach Merry, is that they have mental strength and a lot of heart. He points out their ninth place finish out of 40 boats last year at the Head of the Charles—one of the biggest races of the fall.

Coach Merry feels that they have a 100 percent chance of success this season. He says it while leaning back in his chair, with his hands folded behind his head. Maybe he knows something the rest of us don't.

Men's Lacrosse Starts '93 Pre-Season

Bob Brown
Staff Writer

Coach Terry Corcoran's 11th season as head coach of the Men's Lacrosse team begins Friday, February 26, when the Shoremen travel to Penn State for their first preseason game.

The first game of the regular season is an away game March 10 against Johns Hopkins. The Hopkins match will start off a schedule laden with tough opponents.

Coach Terry Corcoran, in his 11th season, looks to lead an experienced squad back to the NCAA Division III Tournament.

"Hopkins and Navy will be tough games," Corcoran said. "Hopkins could be ranked in the top two or three in Division I this year and Navy has what they consider the best team they've had in a long time, so they'll both be tough."

Last year, the team finished 10-4 while ranking 10th in NCAA Division III. This year, Corcoran is looking for even better things from his players.

"This is a veteran group we have returning this year," he said. "We only lost two players, (senior goalie John Kelly and senior defenseman Kevin Doyle) so we are optimistic that we can take a step up in the level of play over the last few years when we had younger, less experienced teams."

One of the things the coaching staff is stressing with this year's team is mental toughness.

"We're trying to prepare our players to be mentally strong in games by expecting a higher degree of concentration and focus in practices and a better level of execution," Corcoran said. "With the older group of players we have this season, we feel we can expect this of them."

Some of the key veteran players on this year's team are junior attackmen Jason Paige and Chris Cote. Last year, Paige and Cote combined for 106 points. Paige was named an All-MAC attackman in 1992 when he tallied 40 goals and 16 assists, leading the Shoremen in most offensive categories.

Other important members of this year's squad will be sophomore midfielder Greg Lawler (48 points) and senior defenseman Scott Overend (72 groundballs).

The goalie situation has yet to be determined.

While this is a veteran group, Coach Corcoran is excited about the group of freshman players.

"We have a nice group of freshman, but it's too early to tell how much of a contribution they'll make," he said. "In the past we've been a program that had freshmen play for us and had freshmen log some significant playing time. This year, it will be tougher though, considering how many veterans we have.

The team will play its home opener Saturday, March 13 against Western Maryland.

Marymount Meet Divided Men Win, Women Loose

Four new school records were set last weekend, as the WC Aquamen crushed Marymount. Peter Ward, Jason Campbell, Scott Steinmuller and Dave Cola broke the 200 medley record by one second. Captain Chris Freisheim shattered the school record in the 400 IM by a full eight seconds, which seats him eighth in the conference. Ward continued on record setting pace in the 100 backstroke, while Steinmuller tied Cola's 100 butterfly record. Dave Cola swam a season best in the 500 freestyle that seats him in the top five in the conference. McCarthy also swam a personal best time in the 50 freestyle to take first, and then joined Cola, Freshein, and Campbell to take first in the 200 freestyle relay.

"Even though it wasn't a close meet, the men swam really well. They are ready for the MAC's," Coach Kim Lessard said.

The Aquawomen had a much closer bout with Marymount, falling short by a margin of 111-90. Despite the aquawomen winning 6 out of 11 races, they were unable to pull out the victory.

In the 200 medley relay, Jen Green, Colleen Roberts, Amy Draper and Denise Hakanson took first place with a new school record. Roberts added her second school record ot the meet in the 100 breaststroke. Roberts also won the 200 IM with her season best time.

Jen Dow swam the 1000 freestyle and took first, then took first in the 100 butterfly. Dow joined Green, Robin Woollens, and Ramsey Bigham to take first in the 200 freestyle relay. Green continued her winning ways taking first in the 100 backstroke with Captain Prendergast placing second. Though the women lost, Coach Lessard had positive feelings about the meet.

Rugby Ready

Brandon White
Staff Writer

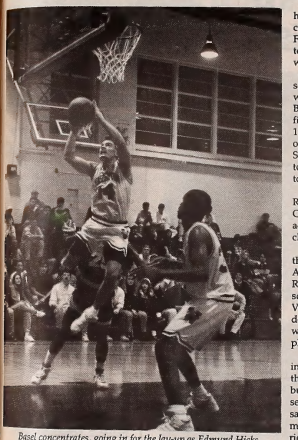
The WC Rugby Club released its 1993 Spring schedule this week. The club presently has five matches scheduled for this semester. Matches include The Severn River Tournament on Feb. 27th; Lynchburg College on March 2nd; Vassar College, at home, on April 3rd; UMBC on April 24th, and the third annual President's Cup to be held on May 1st. TH, Tom Leighty, and Collen are the elected captains for the '93 season. Other key players returning this year are: The "Jimfellas" Nate Harned and Chris Mihavetz; Shawn "the ham" Hamill; little Skippy, Dan Kretzer; and President Ciaran O'Keefe. Come to Worton park on April 3rd and see the hard-hitting rugby team in action!

Second to none.

SECOND NATIONAL Federal Savings BANK
Over $1.6 Billion in Assets
FDIC Insured

503 WASHINGTON AVENUE
P.O.BOX 577
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
410-778-1013

OPEN 6 DAYS A WEEK
FOR YOUR BANKING
CONVENIENCE



EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

Olde Towne Barbers
Flat Tops French Braids
Frostings Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

Sho'men Fall to Jays, Defeat Red Wave

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

Right now, men's basketball head coach Tom Finnegan is doing his math homework.

Basel concentrates, going in for the lay-up as Edmund Hicks looks on. Basel scored 22 against Hopkins.

Most importantly, he knows two Widener losses this week combined with two Washington wins gives his team a shot at the playoffs.

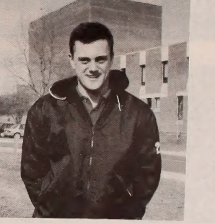
He realizes Peter Basel and Geoff Rupert are still giving strong performances, averaging over 15 points per game, but he also knows his team can't continue to give up scoring binges to teams such as Hopkins.

Last Saturday, the Bluejays (17-5) all but buried the Shoremen (11-11) on a 25-8 run in the last 11:24 of the first half, giving them a 17-point halftime lead.

Against Hopkins, they made a good turn around in the second half behind an 18 point outing from Basel, but they still fell short 72-63.

"We were down 17 at the half and we made a decent comeback in the second half," Finnegan said. "We managed to get it back to three points with about 2:00 left to go."

Basel scored to make the score 61-58 in favor of Hopkins with 2:00 left. However, the Bluejays scored to push to a five point lead at 63-58 with 1:10 remaining. Johns Hopkins outscored the visiting Shoremen 9-5 in the last minute to hold on for a nine point victory.



Besides Basel's 18 points, Rupert scored 15, Charles Cummings and Darren Vican added 14, and Mike Swanson chipped in two.

Haverford College visited the Cain Dome on February 10. Although the hosts defeated the Red Wave 77-66 with Basel scoring 22 and Cummings, Vican and Rupert all reaching double figures, Coach Finnegan was not happy with the team's play.

"I felt we played pretty well in the first half, and we were on the verge of blowing it open, but we stopped playing in the second half," Coach Finnegan said. "I think the poor performance against Haverford carried over into Hopkins."

Results from Washington's game against Ursinus on Wednesday were not available at press time. The Shoremen will play their last game of the season tomorrow against Widener at 3:30 p.m. It is an afternoon game, but the team needs support, as a win could possibly put them into the playoffs.

NEWT'S Player of the Week

With so many close and hard-fought contests this week, the sports staff had a heck of a time deciding who should gain entry into the Newt's P.O.W. Hall of Fame. The Sega match-up between Welch and Mater produced sparks. The Rec. sports league continued to be dominated by the High Street faction, with the exception of Zulu Nation over team Phi Delt. In all the commotion we did manage to come up with a stellar choice.

Peter Basel had a fine week, averaging 20 points per game against Haverford and Hopkins. Dave Cola also had a great week, but both of these men have graced this page before. Therefore, it must go to another (and we don't care if McCarthy swam his first butterfly since middle school—you still can't get your name in the paper Ty!).

Last Saturday, the men's swim team destroyed Marymount in large part to Jason Campbell. All year, Campbell has been scoring points in a big way (and we mean big!). The 8-foot-3 sophomore (actually, it's more like 6-foot-6) is so huge, he can probably go the length of the pool in four strokes.

In defeating Marymount, the team moved to 7-2 on the season—the best record for a sports team this year at Washington. Campbell won the 200 individual medley in a time of 2:12, the 100 breaststroke in 1:05, and he set a new school record in the 200 medley relay along with Peter Ward, Scott Steinmuller and Dave Cola in 1:44.

Campbell currently holds six school records and he has qualified to swim in seven events at the MAC Championships next week.

(note to Athletic Department—with a .777 winning percentage, could the men's swim team be the best team on campus???)

FREE IMPRINTING!! of first color on custom T-Shirts
Factory Direct!!
Sports Teams * College Clubs
Fraternity & Sorority Functions
Call now to find out how affordable custom printing really is!
Mention this ad and get $25 off your first order! 12 pc. min.
T-Line (410) 778-5622

Tuesday - Saturday
Passing in Regs
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown, MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Janet Thompson
(301) 778-0888

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Men's B-Ball Defeats Haverford;Falls in Close Game to Johns Hopkins--Still has a Shot at the Playoffs

See Article, pg. 11

Spring Sports Kicks Into Gear

WC • ELM

Sports

Vaughn--Super NES Player of the Week

Swimming Demolishes Marymount; Looks to MAC Meet

Showing his great pitching form, Keith Whiteford hurls his screwball towards home. With his pitching prowess, we're pretty sure the batter must have missed. Whiteford leads a young pitching staff this year for the Shoremen and should have a good influence on the freshman pitching corps. Look for a preview on the Washington College baseball team coming soon.

Scores

Men's B-Ball

Washington	77
Haverford	66
Washington	63
J. Hopkins	72

Swimming

Men's

Washington	99
Marymount	11

Women's

Washington	90
Leb. Valley	111

Upcoming games

Men's Basketball
vs. Widener
Feb 20 3:30 p.m.

Swimming
Middle Atlantic Conference Championships
Feb 26-28
at Dickinson Coll.

Lacrosse Begins, Looking Towards Hopkins

Jason Campbell: NEWT's Player of the Week

I locked the barn door... Now where's my horse?

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: 90% chance/snow H mid-upper 20s; E winds
Weekend: mostly sunny & cold; H 20s-30s; L teens-20s

Volume 64, Number Nineteen • February 26, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Is Buying Alcohol for Your Club Illegal?

Martha Kimura
Staff Writer

Washington college holds a liquor license from the Kent County Liquor Association that authorizes the Washington College Dining Services to serve alcohol in accordance with the Maryland State law anywhere on the college campus.

In response to the inquiries made after the Blackhearts Ball about the alcohol policy, the Elm reviewed the policy with John Phoebus, SGA Treasurer; Maureen Kelley McIntire of Student Affairs; and Gene Hessey, Senior Vice President for Management and Finance.

The College has placed other restrictions on the consumption of alcohol, namely the open container clause. This clause prohibits students from carrying open beer cans on campus. Any other container such as the Washington College mugs can be used in the transport of a beverage.

In addition, all multi-quart containers are banned from use at campus parties unless the event is to be catered by the WCDS.

The alcohol policy states that a person twenty-one or older may purchase two alcoholic beverages in the CoffeeHouse on weekends at one time (with proper identification). This policy was instituted to place the responsibility back on the students. "Students believe that the college has a very strict alcohol policy, I think that the college is very lenient on the alcohol policy and encourages the students to drink with responsibility and discretion," Phoebus said.

For the Blackhearts Ball last Friday, a memo was sent last week to Gene Hessey from Bob Day asking for a statement on the official alcohol policy, in particular asking if money from the English Department or from the Sophie Kerr fund could be used in purchasing alcohol for the party. Gene Hessey answered in a general form stating that school money was not generally used for such purposes.

SGA funding is a different matter. Any money given by the SGA can be used at the club's or organization's discretion.

In the future, the administration hopes that drinking at Washington College will become more centered at the CoffeeHouse instead of off-campus or in the dorms. The Student Activities office has been bringing in bands, holding dances, and hosting parties to encourage the students to come together as a group and party.

"Hopefully, in the spring when it gets warmer, we will be able to have more parties outside where everyone can get together. I hope that at these parties, the focus will be on a band or some other form of entertainment instead of on drinking, although there will definitely be alcohol," said Phoebus.

Student Harrassed Monday

Martha Kimura
with J. Tarin Towers

On Monday, April 22, a female resident of first floor Caroline House, who wishes to remain anonymous, was harassed by a male townsperson. This harassment occured intermittently from late in the afternoon until twelve-thirty at night, and finally ceased after the man wrote a degrading message on the woman's window in catsup. Campus security was called at around 12:15 a.m. and took twenty minutes to respond.

According to Security Director Jerry Roderick, "there is a history of harassment from the suspect, and this crime is being investigated."

The harassment began late Monday afternoon when the resident and her boyfriend were shopping at Kent Plaza. As they got into their car, another car containing three men came alongside the vehicle and hostile words were exchanged. The couple quickly left.

See "Harassment," page 8

Thievery Continues

J Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

On Friday, February 19, between 5 and 5:30 p.m., a MacIntosh SE was stolen from the Elm office in the basement of Reid Hall. The serial number is F8146JBM5010. The equipment taken, valued at approximately $1500, included the computer, keyboard, mouse and several hundred dollars worth of software (including the Elm's layout templates).

Anyone who may have seen a computer being removed from Reid Hall on Friday evening should contact Security Director Jerry Roderick at ext. 7810 or Elm editor Tarin Towers at ext. 8585.

• Last week five thefts were reported from cubbyholes in the lobby of Hodson Hall. Several bookbags containing texts and personal items, as well as a jacket, were removed while the owners were in the Dining Hall. Roderick encourages students to keep their possessions with them in the Dining Hall and not to carry valuables in their bookbags.

See "Theft," page 8

Sophomores Rescue Parents' Day From Certain Death

Max Walton
Sophomore Class President

On Saturday April 17, Washington College will be holding the first SGA Parents' Day. This day, primarily planned by the Sophomore class, was opposed by the administration because of time concerns and financial restraints. Noting that the time-honored traditions of the Birthday Ball and the Luau have either been drastically downscaled or canceled because of budget cuts, the SGA strongly supported the Sophomore class in this endeavor. The administration, faced with unanimous support by the SGA for the Sophomore class, finally relented.

The SGA Parents' Day will be an all-day event. Tentatively, the day will start with field day activities on the front lawn.

These activities will be similar to the Greek Games, but will be open to all students, faculty, alumni, and parents.

Following a brunch, there will be numerous athletic home games such as Lacrosse, Baseball, and Softball, as well as four academic forums where students will give presentations on topics and special projects. Dinner will be a western Barbecue co-sponsored by the Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

There also will be the production of the play Cinders by the Drama Department. The evening will end with a starlight dance to be held either on the Miller Library Terrace or in the Casey Academic Center.

The SGA hopes that this day will become a new tradition at Washington College in which students, faculty , alumni, and parents can take pride. Students are encouraged to tell their parents and friends. Because this day is a student organized event, student participation is a must. Students who have ideas are encouraged to get involved and to speak with their SGA senator.

Inside

Letters, Letters, and More Letters 2,4,8

Crisis: Will Your Degree Do You Any Good? 3

It's A Beautiful Day In The Neighborhood 5

Glass Menagerie: See It This Weekend 7

Spring '93 SGA Club Funding Allocations 9

So you think you're safe, ay?

I am writing this editorial on someone else's computer. Normally, it would be your computer -- that is, a Mac SE paid for partially by student activities fees from past years and owned by the Washington College Elm. Friday, however, "my" Mac got stolen. I'm talking, I left here (the office) at 5:10, and Moonpile comes in at 5:30 to find a big ol' empty desk. I don't know if any of you have ever experienced empty-desk syndrome, or something similar, but I'll give you an analogy:

"Hey Nancy, um, did you move your car anytime in the last, say, half hour?"

"Move my car -- no, what are you talking about?"

"Well, it's like, not there."

"Shut up."

"No, I'm serious!"

"Get out!"

"Nancy, I'm not kidding, your car, like, isn't there."

And so you go to the lot where your car was not even a half-hour ago. The lot's still there, but your car -- who knows?

Now picture this: your car was not only your car, it not only had all your favorite tapes in it, but it was also, well, the college culture van. You got to drive it as long as you made sure that it got to where it had to be on time.

Maybe now you can tell what it must have been like to go out Friday night only to have one of your friends ask you if you 'borrowed' the layout computer. I walk/am dragged into the Elm office Friday night, get to the door, open it and voila, the Elm is gone. My CD player was still in there for Chrissakes! What the hell, I mean, there sat a semester and a half (almost -- calm down) of hard work and one day "poof" it's gone.

Did you ever, ever leave the Culture Van unlocked? I didn't think so. Neither did I. Why would someone want to destroy what has been called one of WC's only lasting traditions, namely by stealing all the programs which make them capable of its execution? You got me. But if anyone runs across a "new" SE with lotsa cool software, don't buy it; it's already yours. Call Security and take a polaroid of the thief/ thieves.

You know why there's an Elm this week? Because one of our computing friends happens to have a IIsi and we just happened to have a copy of last week's layout. Wistie is at least a demigoddess, and I am further grateful to everyone who typed in their stuff on disk this week...

Now Hear This:

Take this simple true or false quiz to see how safe you and your property are from harm:

My door cannot be carded.

I have a flashlight in reach of my bed.

I know where the nearest fire alarm and fire extinguisher are:

1. in my dorm
2. wherever I am right now

I never leave my door unlocked if I'll be gone anywhere further than the bathroom.

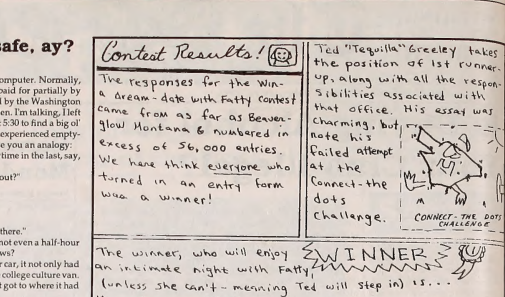
I always know if my roommate will be coming in to bed or not and near what time he or she usually arrives.

I never lose my keys because they're always in the same place.

I always shut doors which are propped, even in other dorms and on weekends.

I always report suspicious behavior (i.e. strangers lurking near girls' dorms) to Security.

I know Security's extension by heart.



I never leave my wallet or purse lying around in my room where someone could walk in and take it.

Unless you answered "true" to nearly all of these questions, you should reevaluate how safe you actually are on campus.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers
Photography Editor: Margaret 'Wistie' Wurts
News Doug Hoffburger & Matt Murray
Sports Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan
Features Arts & Entertainment
Justin 'M' Cann George Jamison
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8565.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

Blackhearts: We Can't Drink and You Can't Crash

To the Editor:

Currently there has been much talk regarding tradition on campus of Washington College. People are complaining that the birthday Ball is fading and the elimination of Parent's Day is an unfortunate one [see Max Walton's article, page One — Ed.]. The tradition that has maintained its prominence on campus is the Blackhearts Ball. However, rather than ridding the campus of this event, the administration offered myself and the other organizers of this event mass confusion.

The first question that needed to be answered was where should this event be held. The basement of the theater was not an option because of the current investigation regarding the death of Ed Schroeder. The organizers suggested the basement of Minta Martin or Reid but the administration strongly encouraged us to hold the Ball in the Cardinal Lounge so the noise level wouldn't bother the dorm residents. (Great idea, if we only wanted to invite thirty people.) Well, that was unacceptable to the organizers, and thanks to Bob Day, Kathy Wagner, and to the administration's kind graces, we were able to have the party at the Literary House.

The next massive confusion was the alcohol policy. What is it? Where is it? Who exactly knows what it says? [see Martha Kimura's article, page One.— Ed.] Gene Hessey supposedly sent one clarifying memo, Student Affairs Claimed they never received it, Student Activities said nothing had changed, and the SGA thought it was all a rumor. Supposedly the new alcohol policy states BYOB or the alcohol must be ordered through dining services. Someone else told me SGA club funding was not allowed to be spent on alcohol. I was also informed that the administration is being evasive for insurance purposes. Administrative evasiveness and ignorance is essentially irresponsible. Refusing to acknowledge or announce changes in the alcohol is refusing to acknowledge that this policy directly affects student life. So, I will ask Student Affairs once again to send out a memo regarding (possible) changes in the alcohol policy. Hopefully, this will prevent any further needless hassle.

Finally, the third question is directed to all you people who felt the need to crash Blackhearts. Why do some of you insist on crashing every single year? Why do you get angry when we tell you nicely to leave? Quite frankly, I have never been invited to a fraternity or sorority function and I have never crashed. I suggest some people (and you know who you are) rethink your hypocrisy. If we are not good enough for you the rest of the year, why are we good enough for one night? I have no problem with anyone who is a member of a fraternity or sorority, but certain members of these groups must learn that although this college may be dominated by the Greek system, it is not exclusively Greek. Please learn to respect other group functions, the disrespect you display is juvenile.

In closing, I would like to thank everyone who made Blackhearts Ball a success. I would especially like to thank Bob Day and Kathy Wagner for supporting this event, the band for playing on such short notice, and everyone who decorated, worked the door, and cleaned the mess. I wish I had the whole paper to list your names. In fact of dying administratively-organized traditions, a student-organized tradition has prevailed once again.

Tanya L. Cunic
Senior

More letters on page 4

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

Most students today shop around for higher education. This is a lengthy process which involves sending out lots of applications, writing lots of admissions essays and often visiting the schools which appeal most to the prospective student. And while the consumers of higher education are often very critical of what each individual school has to offer, few actually question why they need to attend college in the first place.

Most students attend college because that is what is expected of them by their family and society at large. I don't have any empirical evidence to support this view, only overwhelming anecdotal evidence. Most college-bound young adults accept higher education not as a good in itself, but as a means to achieving a solid middle class life-style.

This is where the big lie of the education business comes in to play. American colleges and universities matriculate thousands of liberal-arts graduates every year, and yet it seems that few ask the questions which one thinks would occur naturally to someone in the education business. Who are we educating, why are we educating them and what should we teach them?

Unfortunately, these questions are not often asked. In fact, it would seem that these questions are only asked every hundred years or so. What has happened in the historical development of the process of education has been that it has been removed and isolated from the processes involved in the development of the material basis of modern society. As a result, the development of the educational system lags behind that of the productive system by as much as a hundred years in some areas and by as little as one year in others.

The causes of this uneven development are to be found in sixteenth-century Europe. At that time, education was not meant to enhance a given society's industrial capacity but rather the ability of its elites to govern effectively. From its beginnings, higher education served to socialize elites into their proper place in society at that stage of historical development.

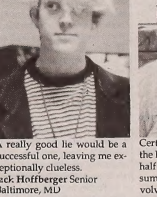
To some degree, education was seen as good in and of itself. Erasmus wrote that "The first and most important function of education is to ensure that the youthful spirit may be given the seeds of piety; the next that it may live and learn the liberal studies; the third, that it may be prepared for the duties of life; and fourth, that it may, from earliest childhood, become habituated in good manners."

See "Koon," page 5

CAMPUS VOICES

By Dude

What is your favorite rumor or lie of this semester?



Gore is going to do something about the environment.
Nikki Goenaga Senior
Miami, FL

I saw Ciaran playing with his pet gerbils with no clothes on.
Chris "Meat" Spezio Senior
Long Island, NY

Trout's a cross-dresser. That's a good rumor.
Dennis Kelleher Senior
Wilmington, DE

A really good lie would be a successful one, leaving me exceptionally clueless.
Jack Hoffberger Senior
Baltimore, MD

Certain unnamed members of the Dining Hall staff frolicking half naked in the bushes three summers ago. The people involved know who they are.
Tom Shepherd Senior
Charlottesville, VA

"I'm 21...Really." At least that's the one I get the most.
Seth Engel Senior
Fairfax, VA

Open Forum: The Giant Flaming Head

Ryan Walker

My epiphany began when, after walking down Miller-Dunning Boulevard, wondering about the landscapers, and playing the 'I-won't-look-at-you-if-you-don't-look-at-me game with some professors and students, I was confronted with one of the more vexing decisions a Washington Collegian must make: whether to enter Dunning by way of the stairway's left appendage, or its right, or whether to just plunge straight down to the basement.

Normally, I would consider it a misfortune that the otherwise eager passage to my science distribution course, "Rock, Scissors, and Paper 001", would be stalled as I decided which of the three roads to take. This incident however, was different, for as I paused, my eyes found their way to the engraved "Dynning" in the stone above the entrance, and on this engraving a very fortunate meditation began.

I had been told, and it seemed reasonable enough at the time, that the substitution of "Y" for "U" was simply a quirk of language, something about the name having to be translated from Romanian to English, and so naturally the letters would be different. But that day it dawned on me: names don't get translated, and even if they did, why would only one letter change?

Luckily, no sooner did this dilemma arise than a resolution was granted by my nimble mind. Certainly the contractors, knowing the building was being donated by a man named Dunning, and fortunate enough to find a stone bearing a similar name, realized that it wasn't a time to be picky. You just don't find stones with names on them that often, never mind appropriate ones, so why push it? I probably would have settled for "Dulang" or "Skunning" if I found them first.

It was at this point that a giant flaming head, as wide as Dunning, appeared above. I tapped the landscaper on the shoulder, jumping up and down, hyperventilating, and pointing with both arms to the giant flaming head. "Yeah, so it's a giant flaming head," the landscaper said.

The GFH cleared its throat and spoke unto me in the wisest of voices, "There are some things you should know first and then there are other things too. You should know from McIlvaine and Macadam's One Thousand American Fungi that the pileus of a laccata is 'fleshy, convex, sometimes expanded, even or slightly umbilicate, smooth, or minutely tomentose-scaly, hygrophanous when moist, dull reddish-yellow or reddish flesh-colored, sometimes striatulate when dry, pallid or pale dull ochraceous.' And stop whining. The food here is good. Try getting that stuff in Russia. And the lines. Shut up about the lines. Try waiting in line in Russia. And the reading for your ten o'clock class. Try reading that stuff in Russian. See how far you get. Snow? You don't want to walk to class in the snow. One word: Russia. More words: there are Russians that could top this dusting just by shaking their head. Hail noise. You don't know what noise is til you've been to Russia. Your measly ear drums never took such a beating. Health services? They live to a hundred and twenty in Russia, do you think they get free aspirin? Your article was edited — you didn't think it should be? They'll edit your toes off in Russia. Not enough minorities coming to campus? Do you think they would want to go to Russia and try and translate a foreign language they don't have a clue about while they wait in line for no food on a cold, dandruff covered field while their ear hairs die off, their head aches, and their toes are heisted? Get real. Now go to class you whiny sniveling little snot-nosed capitalist excrement and be glad you're there."

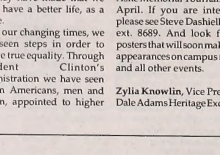
Take Time Out For Black History This Month & on Sunday

To the Editor:

Are you aware of the celebrations that have been observed this month of February, throughout the homes of proud African Americans worldwide? This month is Black History month!!

February is the month that was designated as Black History Month, in hopes to stir a cultural awareness of the tremendously influences that African Americans have contributed to the success of the world.

In the short period that we have been in this new year of 1993, African Americans have been devastated due to the recent loses of some of our most influential pioneers, including Thurgood Marshall, Dizzy Gillespie, Arthur Ashe, and Mother Hale. We still celebrate despite these loses because we can be proud of the sacrifices that they have made that we might have a better life, as a people.



In our changing times, we have seen steps in order to achieve true equality. Through President Clinton's Administration we have seen African Americans, men and women, appointed to higher positions.

From the time when African Americans were still walking in their kingdoms, to their labors on the plantations where they built America and were paid in full by the lashes on their backs, protesting through Selma and the streets of Harlem for Civil Rights, to the present times where we have set precedents at the Olympics in Barcelona and on the campus of Washington College; all peoples can be proud of the strides that African Americans have made.

The members of Dale Adams Heritage Exchange would like to invite you to join us for our Thurgood Marshall Memorial Service in Tawes Theater on February 28, 1993 at four o'clock P.M. We would also look forward to everyone's participation in our Arthur Ashe Memorial Tournament in April. If you are interested please see Steve Dashiell or call ext. 8689. And look for the posters that will soon make their appearances on campus for this and all other events.

Zylia Knowlin, Vice President
Dale Adams Heritage Exchange

BAY TO BAY TRADERS

NOT JUST ANOTHER PRETTY FACE

CANNON STREET COURTYARD
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
LOCATED BEHIND WONTON'S CAFE

20 % SALE
THROUGH FEBRUARY
ON
PATAGONIA
RAY BAN JANSPORT
ATLANTIS MAD BOMBER
BULA GREAT LAKES

FUNCTIONAL GEAR FOR ACTIVE SPORTS IN ALL CONDITIONS

There's No Such Thing as 'A Little Harrassment'

To the Editor:

There is a serious problem still thriving in our society; this problem effects men and women of all colors and ages, and it is one of the most dangerous issues we face because it so often passes by unnoticed or rationalized, or is passed off as justified.

Walking to the library one evening last week, I heard a fraternity in the revelry of rushing. A group of young men were standing at the foot of the George Washington monument when I heard them scream: "What do you smell?!?!" ... answered by words which froze my blood in their veins, "We smell...We smell pussy!!"

A rush of anxiety and confusion spilt over me at that point: were they referring to the woman who was walking by them? I was afraid, not so much by the language — that angered me — but by the tone of their voices. I did not hear the intelligent, rational, and compassionate voices of fellow human beings, but of primal, irrational, and at that point, imbalanced men who were making women — ALL women, the object if their derision and power-tripping.

The word "pussy," used in this context, does not look any kinder on paper. Neither does "titties." I was appalled when I read Keith Erickson's Student Profile in last week's paper; I am disappointed by his comment, which denotes the perspective so many people still hold in their own minds without question or examination.

I write this article to suggest that we all examine our intentions, and our thoughts, our words, and our actions. Sexism, racism, and all other forms of oppression deny the human right to equality. I suggest that women be considered as what they are: whole. I, nor any women on this planet, should ever be segregated into pieces.

A "little bit" of abuse is detrimental, regardless of what shade you color it; and it is not possible for a "little bit" of sexual degradation (you choose the sex) to be productive. "If you are not a part of the solution, you are part of the problem."

This, on the most basic level, requires that you honor and respect yourself enough to value others as they are — white, black, old, young, man, or woman. We must draw the line at the beginning, or else lose sight of the honor and respect which is due every individual in this world.

"A society or nation consists of two kinds of people, called man ands woman. Can we shut our eyes to one portion of a group while advancing the other, and still bring progress to the whole group? Can half a community ascend to the skies, while the other half remains chained to the dust? The road of progress must be trodden by both sexes together, marching arm in arm as comrades..." Mustafa Kemal, September 1925.

See "Clifford," page 8

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Andy's

337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm

FRI 26 JENIFER FERGUSON AND BAND Urban Folk Rock!!
SAT 27 GAIL BLISS & THE LONE STARLETS Swing and Dance.

778-6779

Thanks But No Thanks

To the Editor,

After reading the last few issues of the Elm, I actually found myself feeling bad about the job I was doing with the Birthday Ball. I knew that somehow, someway I may have overlooked all the help offered by the numerous critics of my plans. So I began checking all my message tapes. Guess what, there were no messages from that concerned member of the faculty that found it necessary to write a letter to the Elm last week. Nor were there any messages from any students who were screaming that this year's Birthday Ball was an outrage. Once again I was stumped. If all these people cared so much about their traditions, they must have tried to contact me directly in order to voice their opinions or to offer help. Then it occured to me, the mail! I had not checked the mail in a long time, since I never receive mail, so they must have sent it through the mail. Well, when I checked my box, the only things I found were two letters informing me of the topic of next Freshman Common Seminar.

I will get to the point now since I am sure that you all are eagerly waiting to get to the all important sports page. My point is, that out of all the 'nay sayers' that took it upon themselves to attack our plans for this years Ball with ill-timed letters to the Elm, none of them volunteered any of their time, money or ideas. Personally, I feel if you do not at least make an attempt to help change something that you do not approve of, than you should remain silent.

To all those whose stuck behind the freshman class and attended the Birthday Ball, or even those who could not make it, but still offered their help and support to our efforts, I would like you to know that it turned out to be a very successful event attended by staff, students, faculty, and administration. In all, over 250 of your classmates and friends decided to get dressed up and party with the rest of the Washington College family. So to all you 'nay sayers' I would like to apologize for the success of the Ball. I know that you worked hard to ruin it.

Andre Taylor
Freshmen Class President

This Week: Ecotourism on the Eastern Shore

Ever feel the desire to get out of stuffy dorms on the weekends and enjoy some nature? Here are some ideas for environmentally low impact healthy fun.

Boating is a very fun thing to do, and it is free if you go to school here. Just go down to the boathouse with a friend and check out a canoe. You can paddle back into the swampy reeds where there is always something interesting to see. Although one tends to see more when it is warmer, it can be fun to see how the animals are adjusting to the colder weather. I have seen osprey swooping down into the water and grabbing fish, snakes, turtles, and of course, fish.

Christabel Garcia-Zamor

Way back in the reeds are the remnants of an old factory dump as well, which has made for some pretty fascinating antique finds. I have found old carriage wheels, old glass bottles, and tin containers half submerged in the water or on the bank. Not only do you find some cool things, but you are cleaning up the environment by taking them back with you.

Like animals? Crimson Stables on Route 291 is only a seven-minute drive from campus and offers affordable horseback riding in a beautiful area of the woods (call 778-7304 for reservations). There are two wildlife sanctuaries in the area as well. Remington Farms is a really cool drive through sanctuary where you can watch the animals abound. I have seen lots of deer, geese, weird bugs, a fox, and a beaver.

To get there, get onto High Street going towards Rock Hall (Rt. 20) and drive for about ten minutes. After crossing a small bridge, you will see the entrance gate and sign on the right. The Wildfowl Trust of North America is located at Horsehead Farm in Grasonville. For more information on this sanctuary, call 827-6694.

There are several cool docks where I have often brought a bagged lunch and sat at to watch the water and wildfowl. Stillpond Public Landing is really only an extended curb alongside the road, but it overlooks a fantastic pond which is great to walk along the outskirts of. A friend of mine found a very old railroad tie washed ashore one day.

To get there, get on 213 towards Superfresh, and turn left at the corner of Suds n Soda. Follow this road, through Worton, and make a right at the stop sign. Next make your first left (there will be a sign up that directs you towards the Coast Guard). Make a right at Stillpond Road, drive a minute or two, then veer left over the bridge. The landing will be on your left next to the pond. Another landing to go to is near Pomona. Get onto 213 towards Getty Gas station. Make a right on Cross Street at your second stop light. Drive through town and take this road out for about ten minutes. Veer left after the Pomona Store. Follow the road out all the way until it finally curls through some houses and opens up into a public landing. Definitely a beautiful view.

If you want to go somewhere in walking distance, the cemetery in back of the playing field is quite educational. It is really neat to look at the history held in Chestertown by reading gravestones for people who lived over a hundred years ago! There are a lot more cemeteries, too, dating even further back if your curiosity is piqued. Alternatively, you might consider packing up a lunch and going down to the docks at the end of High Street.

Here during the summer ? Don't miss Bay Day in Rock Hall! There is lots of food and community craftwork, as well as gorgeous scenery opening out to the Bay. During the warmer months a ferry also runs out of Rock Hall to Baltimore ... take a ride over the water and see the National Aquarium !

"Koon," From page 3

To some degree Erasmus's ideas have become canonical; for nearly four hundred years religious indoctrination, learning for its own sake, vocational development and elite-class development have been the functions of the liberal arts education.

The essential problem today is that the ordering of these priorities is out of alignment with the actual needs of the productive sector of our society. One of the contradictions of capitalism is that, for it to develop, it needed an extant system of higher education, and yet its development in its modern stage has been considerably arrested by the conservatism which is promulgated by the ethos of that educational system. Today the purposes of education enunciated by Erasmus do not suffice, and yet they remain entrenched in the modern educational system.

Do we, as a society, really need to concern ourselves with instilling Christian piety? Most nineteenth-century educators believed so and many still do; I do not. There is enough hatred, xenophobia, violence, provincialism and religious fervor in the world already. Higher education need not complicate this situation by advancing archaic religious ideas which do not serve to enhance a student's moral character or maximize aptitude. Religious instruction may produce people like Martin Luther King Jr., but for every King there are dozens of Torquemadas who cannot or will not accept the fact that we live in a society based on tolerance and liberty.

This is one reason to question anyone who desires to construct religious facilities on campus. It may seem tangential to the topic at hand, but since this has become an issue on campus I may as well bring it up. While the idea of a nondenominational chapel may be appealing, in practice such facilities become de facto Christian houses of worship. Traditionally the college has done quite nicely without a chapel; to build one as we enter the Twenty-first century seems silly. There are a number of established houses of worship in Chestertown which students (including myself) can and do avail themselves of. This helps to unite the school and the town. If one seeks to unite the campus, a better idea would be to construct a secular facility.

The second of Erasmus's priorities was to promote liberal education. While this is certainly no vice, to rank it ahead of vocational training is erroneous in this day and age. As I mentioned earlier, most students see degrees not as an end unto themselves but as a vocational requirement. Yet while liberal-arts graduates are churned out in legions by American colleges and universities, liberal arts degrees are not those which are most sought after by employers. A 1987 poll of 535 American companies shows that only 23.6% of CEOs encourage the hiring of liberal arts graduates. This is because the bottom line for businesses comes in the form of profits, not the self-actualization of its employees.

The other goal of education outlined by Erasmus is to instill good manners. Essentially this is the class component of higher education, and it is with us today. The dictates of production would seem to favor the education of the most promising of students rather than merely those who can afford education. This is not really the practice of education in America, however. The actual practice is to educate not only those who are meritorious, but also those who have the proper class qualifications regardless of merit. This occurs even at the most selective of institutions. The most recent data I could find from Harvard suggests that while 13.6% of its students were the progeny of alumni, less than half of these would have actually qualified for entrance if merit had been the only consideration.

All of these factors combine to produce the schism between the goals of education and the needs of the productive sector. The essential conservatism of colleges may be seen at formal occasions such as convocation. The faculty are forced to wear archaic clothes to signify the direct link between the modern university and its renaissance progenitors. Antiquated regalia such as maces and scepters are also present to symbolize the ancient role of educating social elites. And, quite naturally, a prayer is said in order to evoke the traditional ties to organized Christianity.

As this college and others plan for the future, we should look in part to the past for guidance and historical context. But we need not be shackled to tradition. Perhaps one of the real reasons for the shift to the service economy has been that we as a nation have been concerned with abstractions rather than applicable information. As we plan for the future, we need to realize that the product of this institution is educated women and men, and that this product has an important role to play in our society.

Which is more important to society, a college which produces top-notch people to work in the productive sector of the economy, or a college which produces top-notch players for major league indoor lacrosse? To answer this question is in large part to define the purpose of this and other institutions of higher education.

$5 off any service over $20 with ad
(one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2665
Clarence J. Mitchell, III
Owner/Operator

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists' Materials
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
130 Box 402 300 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Pip's Discount Liquors
Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER – CHILLED WINES
Quantity Discounts Below Our Regular Low Prices
TELEPHONE 778-5122
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA, CHESTERTOWN

Week at a Glance

February 26 - March 4

Film Series:

Toto Le Heros

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

26 Friday

The Washington College Drama Department presents Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m.†

27 Saturday

The Washington College Drama Department presents Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m.†

The Church Hill Theatre presents Sweet Chariot. Award winning drama on the life of Harriet Tubman. Church Hill Theatre, 8:00 p.m. †

28 Sunday

The Dale Adams Heritage Exchange presents It's So Hard To Say Goodbye: A Tribute. Norman James Theatre, William Smith Hall, 4:00 p.m.

1 Monday

March Fool's Day (Just Kidding)

Recover from weekend.

2 Tuesday

The Career Development Center presents Drop-in Workshop: A Discussion of Internships. Career Library, Spanish House, 3:30 p.m.

3 Wednesday

The Career Development Center presents Life/Work Planning Workshop. Career Library, Spanish House, 1:30-3:30. Contact Dawn Baker for details at ext. 7888.

The League of Women Voters present Voting Issues. A discussion of term limitations and open or closed primary elections. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 3:30 p.m.

4 Thursday

The Career Development Center presents Life/Work Planning Workshop. Career Library, Spanish House, 2:30-4:30. Contact Dawn Baker for details at ext. 7888.

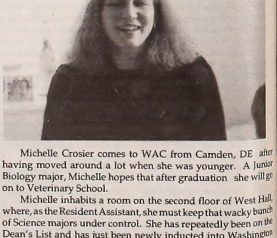
The Washington College Concert Series presents The Ravel Trio. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m. †

Dale Adams Heritage Exchange Presents

It's So Hard To Say Goodbye:

A Tribute

Sunday, February 28 at 4:00



Norman James Theatre

A&E

Sweet Chariot To Play In Church Hill

On February 17, 1993, at 8:00 p.m., The Church Hill Theater presents Vivian Gist, an Annapolis actress who will appear as Harriet Tubman in a performance of Sweet Chariot. The script, written by Margaret Driggs, the only Eastern Shore winner of the Maryland State Arts Council 1992 award in playwriting, has received three New York readings by the Playrights Preview Company, and will be performed in June at the University of Mississippi, and at the Festival of Southern Playrights in Oxford, Mississippi in July. The Spaniard Neck Foundation, a Queen Anne's County organization dedicated to finding housing for the homeless, is sponsoring Sweet Chariot as a fund raiser. "This is an inspiring and exciting evening of theatre," said Foundation president Mary Wood of Centreville, "and for a worthy cause. Get your tickets early so you won't be disappointed." Tickets are available at Corsica bookshop, Centreville; Crackerjacks, Easton and The Finishing Touch, Chestertown, or by calling the box office at 758-1331 and placing an order.

Student Profile: Michelle Crosier

Michelle Crosier comes to WAC from Camden, DE after having moved around a lot when she was younger. A junior Biology major, Michelle hopes that after graduation she will go on to Veterinary School.

Michelle inhabits a room on the second floor of West Hall, where, as the Resident Assistant, she must keep that wacky bunch of Science majors under control. She has repeatedly been on the Dean's List and has just been newly inducted into Washington College's Society of Junior Fellows and Omicron Delta Kappa, a national leadership fraternity.

She also is a member of the Zeta Tau Alpha fraternity and was just elected the new President of the WC Panhellenic Association. In her spare time, she basically exists in Dunning Hall, being the student preparatore for the Chemistry labs.

She loves horses and thus loves to go horse-back riding. And without much spare time, she can still find time to be an avid soap opera watcher. She enjoys travelling when she can and adores sea food. And when asked who she admires: "My grandmother."

Green Presents The Glass Menagerie

Alex Baez
Staff Writer

This weekend's production of The Glass Menagerie, the senior project of Melanie Green, presents an adept, faithful rendition of Tennessee Williams' classic. The play itself relies highly on the power of language to convey interwoven images and information. The actors and director seem aware of this, and do not overwhelm the language, but instead enhance it with careful interpretation that sticks close to the "bones" of the work.

Although my viewing of a dress rehearsal was naturally characterized by frequent breaks for various adjustments of lighting and other factors, it is clear, in piecing these segments together, that the final product will be a taut and coherent production. The adjustments and experiments in lighting often drew the attention to the fine set. Extrapolation on the merits of this set are apropos in any case, as this set is arresting and clear as an actual character. The production's tendency towards minimalism is first noticeable in this set: a careful, asymmetrical composition of clean lines and captivating yellows and browns. The set continues to draw one's eye into itself and the play's meaning.

Later, the cut-out view of a living and dining room becomes suffused with a range of tones from pale soggy yellows to rich ambers to buttercup tones which somehow manage to convey the spirit of the tentative, restless, vaguely hopeful souls of its inhabitors. Sometimes, unexpectedly, the whole set submerges into the aquatic translucence of a watery, dreamy blue. Finally, the set even manages, with the stoic verticals of the outdoor fence when suffused with light, to unite with the structure of the high wooden verticals of the theater wall itself.

All of these fortunate effects build to create constant commentary on the course of

See "Play," page 8

It's Always Ground-hog's Day

Gerard Hunt
Flick Guy

Bill Murray returns to the screen in Groundhog's Day as a prima donna weatherman trapped in the Twilight Zone. For some unexplained reason he keeps re-living the same day over and over again. Now this in itself is very interesting, although definitely not original. Then again, originality is not one of Hollywood's best traits. I remember a few years ago HBO's The Hitchhiker did a story on a man who kept getting his wife killed until he changed his mannerisms, basically he had to stop being such a yuppie.

In Groundhog's Day, no one's fortune hangs in the balance quite that severely, unless you consider falling in love with Bill Murray a horrible thing. Bill just keeps going through the same day until he becomes a better person, how quaint. I do not feel guilty about giving the ending away because it is incredibly predictable. He gets Andy McDowell to fall in love with him, big shock. Given the luxury of reliving a day infinitely, I think that I could get Andy McDowell to smoke a cigarette through her nose.

Of course, as in the movie, the journey to this moment would be the fun part, and I must say that the movie is funny. Murray's transition from a lettuce head to a saint with a cause is an epic journey of the mind to learn how to deal with people, whether just to be friendly and civil or to use people for a specific purpose. I left the theater wishing I could have time like that on my hands to get a few things accomplished. Who knows, given an eternity in a single day, maybe I could become the lizard king.

Concert Series

This Wednesday, March 3, at 8:00 p.m., in Tawes Theatre of the Gibson Performing Arts Center, the Washington College Concert Series presents The Ravel Trio. The Ravel Trio was established in 1989 by three Set Prize Winners of the Concert Artist Guild New York Competition, cellist Semyon Fridman, harpist Marie-Pierre Langlamet, and flutist Sandra Miller. During its 1990-91 debut season, the Ravel Trio enthralled audiences in New York, Washington, and the South with a broad repertoire of original works and transcriptions from the seventeenth to the twentieth centuries. In addition, the Ravel Trio has commissioned works from two American composers, Nathan Currier and Lawrence Weiner. Each an outstanding solo virtuoso, they bring their talents together into an unusual and delightful chamber ensemble.

It's Never Too Late to Become A Fan

Mary and Mike are juniors (although Mike is technically a senior for the $5/hr pay), sociology majors, and avid 90210™ fans (they've even played the 90210™ board?) game.

A typical conversation about the happenings on 90210™. These are solely our views and may not reflect anyone else's on the entire planet(Thank Gawd!!!-George).

Mike: You go first.
Mary: No. Jerry (avid 90210™ anti-fan club member) what do you think of 90210™ this season?
Jerry: I don't watch it and I think that they should all die.
Mary: That's rude.
Mike: But it's true.
Mur: Let's start with the Christmas special-the It's a Wonderful Life episode.
Mike: It was great, I loved it. Actually, it was BAD™. I was hoping that they would all get killed by the truck or the bus or the garbage truck.
Mur: It was a garbage truck.
Mike: Like the garbage truck is really going to go through the bus.
Mur: That's right, the angel thing saved their lives. Miramwas that her name?
Mike: Yeah, I think so-the stupid thing. And Donnuh (pronounced Donnuh) actually organized everything. Donnuh finally got a brain.
Mur: She has been using a brain lately.(who's?-G.)
Mike: Yeah, but it's going to go away soon.
Mur: AND she's been getting on David (that sounds kinky-G.)....'Davidddd don't go record a record with Serge, hang out with Dylan and his dead dad." (Said in my best 90210™ impersonation). Her radio show is annoying, too. Talking about panties and make-up. What's next90210 Tampons™? (Smells like Shannon Dougherty™ perfume?-G.)
Mike: Yeah, Dave should get a damn backbone.
Mur: So, that was the Christmas special.
Mike: Okay, on a scale of 1 to 10 how would you rate the Christmas special?
Mur: What's our scale of?
Mike: 1 to 10
Mur: No, I meant is it a scale of bad acting or actual redeeming qualities?
Mike: It's a scale of 90210™-ness.
Mur: Oh gawd, a 9.
Mike: I give it a 90210™. He he he. (not funny-G.)
Mur: What happened after that?
Mike: Let's talk about Andreuh and her leg? Her car accident. I missed that episode.
Mur: So did I. (so did I-G.) Did they ever show it? Or did she just appear in a wheel chair for,like one episode? No, she was in the hospital first-they all came to visit her. What were we talking about-oh yeah, the stars. (important accident information: you see, the only thing that Andreuh remembers from the accident are the stars

See "Chumps," page 8

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
THE DISTINGUISHED GENTLEMAN
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5 9

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
236 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

Get Some Sensitivity

To the Editor:

I was appalled by President Trout's statement about the death of Ed Schroeder in the 12 February Elm. The tone seemed to be: "We went to the funeral, what more could people want?" There is much more.

Obviously, legal matters are for the lawyers. However, it would be right and adult to indicate that we all continue to mourn the death of a vibrant and gifted member of our community.

Ed Weissman, Professor
Department of Political Science

"Harassment," from page 1

The other car followed them until the couple pulled into the parking lot between O'Neill Literary House and Caroline. At approximately 9:40 p.m., the resident heard screeching wheels outside of her window, looked out, and saw the same man. She then left her dorm hoping that the man would leave, only to be followed until she and her boyfriend reached Louie's Side Pocket at Washington Square Plaza near Superfresh.

When they returned to the dorm at around twelve-thirty, they noticed the red words written on the window. The resident called campus security and let the phone ring for several minutes until she hung up and tried the Kent County Dispatcher. The dispatcher told her that they would try to get a hold of the single security officer who was on duty on Monday night.

Twenty minutes after the initial attempt was made by the resident to get help, Security responded. "I was really upset. I was being harassed, and as far as I am concerned, harassment is only a step away from violence. It really bothers me that it took twenty minutes to get help," the victim told the Elm.

"We must have had an unfortunate equipment failure," said Roderick. He noted that batteries sometimes fail in the officers' radio units. "We're trying to implement something to make our communication system a little more foolproof."

He noted that, should a student be unable to reach Security, they are encouraged to contact Kent Central Dispatchers at 778-1241.

"Play," from page 7

action and thought of the play. The relatively simple plot is likewise characterized by understatement. But "still waters run deep," as the mother says of her daughter, Laura. Interactive sequences are broken by highly poetic narrative segments, creating an aura of eerie unreality. All three characters are burdened by the frustration of half-abandoned desires. Laura, a shy girl, is ashamed of her crippled condition and has receded into an aimless existence in the house. Her brother, trying to fill the void left by his vagrant father, works at a dull job that he longs to escape. The mother of this brood dreams of bygone days as an eligible, well-to-do Southern belle with plenty of "gentlemen callers."

The actors have achieved a warm dynamism with each other that is so essential in a play revolving around the small, tight crew of three characters. Lisa Swann, in the role of the young, stay-at-home introvert, Laura, is appropriately delicate and angst-ridden while demonstrating a quiet nobility. Richard McKee, as Laura's brother, Tom, aptly conveys both the repressive nature of his warehouse-worker lifestyle, and his fiery longing for adventure. His body interestingly mirrors the switches between these two moods that alternately consume him.

Judy Sommerfeld, in the role of their desperately nostalgic, loquacious mother, establishes herself as the center of physical action of the play. Down to her aged Southern accent, she carries the part with intelligence and winning expression. Her pliable face has an enviable capacity to deliver much import, even when she is silent. Finally, Chris Goldenberg, as Jim O'Connor, an upbeat guest of this self-absorbed party, is a vivid contrast to them with his easy, convivial nature. He falls into his role with the ease of donning a second skin, and it is invigorating to find his personage upon the stage.

Green's production of Glass Menagerie is thoughtful, quiet, and artistic. It will please lovers of Williams' classic play.

"Chumps," from page 7

that were hanging from the rear-view mirror of the car that hit her-G.)

Mike: She was going thru hypnotherapy-and it wasn't a joke. It was really serious. Oh!

Brandon(Brendent Brendon?)'s gambling addiction. Let's talk about that.

Mur: Okay-Brandon's got a gambling addiction and no one knows (I do-G.)

Mike: Steve, Dylan, and Nat know.

Mur: Who's Nat?

Mike: The owner of the Peach Pit™, stupid name for a place to eat. (I agree-G.)

Mur: Oh, that's right. I think Mr. Walsh knows.

Mike: No he doesn't or he would have done something about it and act as a responsible parent and send him off to Paris like he did Brendush. He'll help Dylan but not his own son and take Dylan into his house and . . . (I am soooooo confused-G.)

Mur: Well Dylan IS his-Both: "SON"(what?-G.)

Mike: Brandon doesn't have sideburns anymore.(I do-G.) That's why he doesn't like him. (Who? His father?-G.)

Mur: Yes he does they're just smaller.

Mike: But they're not DYLAN sideburns.

Mur: I think that they should be bushy sideburns.

Mike: Like Elvis™?

Mur: No bushier.

Mike: Lambchops!! Brandon with lambchops. I think that he and Andreuh should sleep together.

Mur: But she's seeing that guy from Yale.

Mike: She's a Yale-ie.

Mur: She went to THE party and felt POOR. The little Beverly Hills bitch felt poor. I can't believe that. (like you can believe most of 90210™-G.)

Mike: Andreuh works hard-she's not rich.(But she is a bitch-G.)

Mur: She doesn't work. Brandon is the only one who works.

Mike: And Brendah squirts things on people at the jewelry store. And people hate her-it's because of her crossed-eyes and her bad outfits. They kept making her look worse and worse. That's how we knew which one Dylan would dump because Brendah kept looking nasty and Kelly kept looking better.

Mur: But Kelly has . . .

Both: PROBLEM AREAS.(Like you don't?-G.)

Mike: She has a problem anus (like you don't-G.).

Mur: Well Brendah has long bangs that hang in her face . . . (like you don't-G.)

Mike: Her Tammy Faye Bakker Eyelashes™ that double as bangs. Let's talk about the episode two weeks ago . . . DYLAN'S DAD BLEW UP!

Mur: Yeah that old guy on the boat next to them said. . . "You better move your car, sonny"

Mike: Dylan said. . . "No I'll do it, my daddy's great, I love my . . ."

Both: Dylan's father sings. . . "TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALL GAME." (gag-G.)

Mike: Dylan screams. . . "NOOO don't do it, I hate it when you do that, you've been giving me nightmares since I was 2!!!!!!!!!" How was that Dylan impersonation?(Bob Dylan?-G.)

Mur: We have to talk about the Anti-Dylan. . . he was great! (Anti-Bob Dylan?-G.)

Mike: We should petition to get the Anti-Dylan on the show and get rid of the real Dylan. (Bob Dylan on 90210™?-G.) He reminded my of the-Buffy-the-Vampire-Slayer-Dylan™.(Bob Dylan was in Buffy the Vampire Slayer?-G.)

Mur: Except he needed a Zappa dot™. With fluffy sideburns. (Bob Dylan has a Zappa dot™ and fluffy sideburns?-G.)

Mike: "I am the sideburn king . . ." Let's do future predictions:

Mur: I think that Donnuh and Nat (Peach Pit™ owner-G.) will hook up this summer on a very special 90210™. Brandon will realize that he is really Luke Perry and leave on a very special 90210™. And, on a very special 90210™, Brendah, Donnuh, and Kelly will leave 90210™ to become the 90's version of CHARLIE'S ANGELS™.(Freeze Donna-G.)

Mike: Dylan will shave his sideburns, they will be put into little plastic Baggies™, and mailed to Tijuana with his dead dad's body parts. Brandon will have to start selling his body to pay off his gambling debts, but he'll realize that he won't be able to make any money because he shaved off his sideburns. So, who's cuter Jason Priestley or Luke Perry? The question MUST be answered this season! (Does anyone really care?-G.)

Mur: Are we done?

Mike: Yeah. (Thank Gawd-G.)

"Crime," from page 1

• Sunday, February 21, a breaking-and-entering occurred at the Lifetime Fitness Center. Approximately $220 cash, revenues from community members who use the LFC, was taken from one of the offices.

• In good news, the O'Neill Literary House will be open seven days a week from 8 a.m. until 2 a.m. The house was closed at midnight previously this semester because of the vandalistic fires last fall. A petition submitted by members of the Writers' Union and submitted to Director Bob Day resulted in the later hours.

"Clifford," from page 4

"Because women's work is never done and is underpaid or unpaid or boring or repetitious and we're the first to get the sack and what we look like is more important than what we do and if we get raped it's our fault and if we get bashed it must have provoked it and if we raise our voices we're raging bitches and if we enjoy sex we're nymphos and if we don't we're frigid and if we love women it's because we can't get a 'real' man and if we ask our doctor too many questions we are neurotic and/or pushy and if we expect community care for our children we are selfish and if we stand up for our rights we are aggressive and 'unfeminine' and if we don't we are typical weak females and if we want to get married we want to trap a man and if we don't we are unnatural and because we still can't get safe contraceptive but men can walk on the moon and if we can't cope and don't want pregnancy we're made to feel guilty about abortion and – for lots of other reasons we are part of the women's liberation movement." – Anonymous

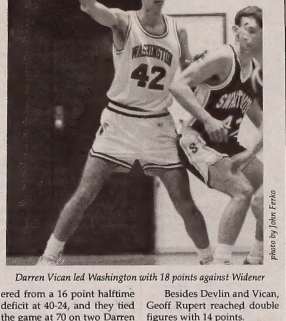
Lynn Clifford
President of G.R.A.A.

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

Shoremen Basketball Falls To Widener In One-Game Playoff

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

On Tuesday, the Washington College men's basketball team finished the season with a 68-51 playoff loss to Widener University. The Shoremen suffered through a 29 percent shooting night from the field, and Darren Vican was the only Washington player to reach double figures with 18 points.



Widener jumped out to a 48-25 halftime lead, shooting 64 percent from the field for the half. Chris Carideo led the Pioneers with 20 points, and Wellington Hughes (13 points) and Jeff Macalis (11) also reached double figures.

For Washington, Jay Devlin was the second-leading scorer with nine points. Peter Basel, playing in his last game for the Shoremen, added seven. Jerry "Chairman of the Boards" Davis exploded for a career-high seven points and three rebounds in eight minutes of play. Geoff Rupert and Charles Cummings rounded out the scoring column for Washington with five points each.

Last Saturday, Washington earned the right to play Widener on Tuesday with an overtime win against the Pioneers.

Jay Devlin made two free throws with 23 seconds left in the second overtime, which gave Washington an 88-84 lead. The shots iced the contest for the Shoremen and gave the sophomore forward 24 points for the game.

Washington slowly recovered from a 16 point halftime deficit at 40-24, and they tied the game at 70 on two Darren Vican (28 points) free throws with 36 seconds left in regulation.

photos by John Forlo

Darren Vican led Washington with 18 points against Widener

The Shoremen took an 81-78 lead with 32 seconds remaining in the first overtime, but Widener tied the game at 82 with eight seconds left to send it to double overtime.

Washington outscored the Pioneers 7-5 in the second overtime to earn the victory.

Besides Devlin and Vican, Geoff Rupert reached double figures with 14 points.

On Wednesday, February 17, the Shoremen defeated Ursinus 83-41. Rupert had 22 points, and eleven Washington players reached the scoring column for the win.

Washington finishes the season with a 13-12 record. Peter Basel and Geoff Rupert lead the team in scoring average with 15.1 points per game and 15.0 ppg respectively.

Club Funding

Club	Allocation (in $)
Amnesty International	600
Anthropological Society	350
Big Brother/Big Sister	400
Campus Christian Fellowship	200
Dale Adams	450
Debate Society	50
French Club	350
GALA	550
Gender Studies Reading Group	320
German Club	350
Hands Out	330
Hillel	400
Historical Society	500
Interfraternity Council	300
International Relations Club	900
Investment Club	500
Margaret Horsley Society	400
Middle East Club	575
Model OAU	350
Model UN	750
Newman Club	250
Omicron Delta Kappa	250
Panhel	350
Phi Sigma Tau	200
Pi Sigma Alpha	100
Press Club	350
Psi Chi	300
Psychology Club	300
Sane Freeze	225
Sigma Delta Pi	300
Spanish Club	400
Terra Firma	150
Visual Artists Union	300
Wac Happenings	600
William James Forum	1,250
Writer's Theatre	50
TOTALS	14,000

The following clubs were tabled for further deliberation in next Tuesday's SGA meeting: Tennis Club, Dance Club, International House, Karate Club, Lacrosse Club, Rugby Club

Shoremen Split Swim Meet With Western Maryland

The Washington College men's swimming team defeated Western Maryland 121.5-55.5, but the women's team fell by a score of 93-78 on February 17.

Jason Campbell won the 50 and 100 freestyle along with the 100 breaststroke to lead the men. Andy McKim, swimming in his last meet at Washington College, swam a personal best in the 100 breaststroke for third place and finished fourth in the 50 freestyle. Dave Cola was the only other multiple winner for the Shoremen in individual events, winning the 200 and 500 freestyle.

Other winners for Washington were Scott Steinmuller in the 100 butterfly, the 400 medley relay (Steinmuller, Dave Czekaj, Julien Gaudion, Ty McCarthy), Peter Ward in the 200 individual medley, McCarthy in the 200 backstroke and the 200 freestyle relay (Ward, Chris Freisheim, Cola, McCarthy).

Dave Kraft, Mike Frey and Jon O'Connor also scored points for the Shoremen.

"They are ready for the Championships!" Coach Kim Lessard said.

On the women's side, the only individual winners were Colleen Roberts in the 100 breaststroke and Jennifer Green in the 100 freestyle. The 200 medley relay (Karen Prendergast, Roberts, Jen Dow and Ramsey Bigham) and the 200 freestyle relay (Amy Draper, Denise Hakanson, Bigham and Green) also won.

Predergast also scored in the 100 backstroke and the 200 individual medley. Green and Roberts both place in the 200 freestyle. Hakanson, Draper and Bigham all scored in the 50 freestyle.

Hakanson also placed third in the 100 backstroke, and Draper finished second in the 100 butterfly. Dow placed in the 200 individual medley and the 500 freestyle. Robin Woollens finished fifth in both the 100 freestyle and the 100 breaststroke.

FAMILY BOOKNOOK
All "in stock" Books DISCOUNTED!
Hard Cover Books - 15% Off
New Paperback Books - 10% Off
Pre-Read Paperback Books - 50% Off
Discover our Pre-Read Paperbacks. Credit for Your Gently Read Paperbacks - BROWSERS WELCOME!
Washington Square Shopping Center - near Super Fresh

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming * Coloring * Cutting
Also
Manicures * Earpiercing * Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist
Esthetician - Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal
Electrologist -
Louise Leaverton, L.E.

Freshman Contribute To Washington Swimming In '93
Four Rookies Look Good for MACs

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

The old axiom for college coaches says the best thing about freshman is they become sophomores. With that thought in mind, Swimming Coach Kim Lessard can't wait until next year.

However, first and foremost, the third-year men's head coach can't wait until this weekend when her rookie phenoms look to showcase their talents at the MAC Championships. And her freshmen are itching to jump in the water.

"I think it (MAC's) will be a good experience," David Kraft said. "It should establish us as one of the conference powers."

On the men's side, five freshman put the team over the hump, adding to a core group of sophomores Jason Campbell, Dave Cola, Dave Czekaj, Chris Freisheim and Ty McCarthy. This year, the men's team finished 8-2.

"It's good to know you've turned the team from 2-8 to 8-2 and to know you're going to have a strong program the rest of the time you're here," Kraft said.

On the women's side, four freshman make up half of the team, as only eight women compete. Even with a disappointing team record this season, these freshman look forward to the years to come.

"I think it's an excellent class," Colleen Roberts said. "We have a strong team, and we'll only get better."

Of the total 20 members of the swimming teams, nine are freshman, and of the 15 swimmers going to MAC's, seven are freshman.

For the men, Peter Ward, Julien Gaudion, Scott Steinmuller and Kraft will all travel to MAC Championships with impressive credentials.

Ward holds five school records, swimming the fastest times in school history in the 100 and 200 backstroke, the 200 individual medley, 200 medley relay and 400 freestyle relay. He could be only the second man in Washington history to score in all three of his individual events at MAC's.

"Peter is incredibly talented, and he has helped to push WC's relay's into the top five this year," Coach Lessard said.

Gaudion stands as Washington's second breaststroker behind Jason Campbell. He was a key strategy move in the upset over Dickinson this year, as he swam in the medley relay to free Campbell for other events. In his first MAC Championship, he has a legitimate shot to score in the top 16 in the 100 breaststroke.

Steinmuller holds three school records in the 100 and 200 butterfly and the 200 medley relay. He is the consumate student-athlete, earning Dean's List honors with a 3.8 gpa first semester. Coach Lessard looks for him to have a big impact this weekend, swimming in two relays as well as two individual events.

"This is what we swim for, this is what we train for," Steinmuller said. "This is the time to have fun!"

Kraft has qualified to swim in four events at MAC's, and he has provided depth for a small team all year, scoring points on a consistent basis.

For the women, Jen Dow, Denise Hakanson and Roberts will swim at their first MAC Championship with a chance to finish in the top eight and hopefully contribute to school records in the relay events.

Dow placed first in the 1000 freestyle and 100 butterfly against Marymount two weeks ago, and she has a chance to place in the 100 and 200 butterfly this weekend.

Hakanson qualified in three individual events this year, and she is also a member of the school record 200 medley relay. She is Washington's leading freestyler.

Former Newt's POW Roberts should shine this weekend, as she has a legitimate opportunity to score in three individual events as well as place in a few relays. She is also a member of the 200 medley relay, and she leads the team in the breaststroke and individual medley events.

Coach Lessard is happy with her group of freshman on the women's side, which also includes Robin Woollens of Dover, Delaware. On the men's side, Lessard knew what she wanted when she began recruiting her class of Steinmuller, Kraft, Gaudion, Ward, and Jon O'Connor.

"I wanted those guys bad," she said. "They came and stayed with the team last year, and that group of sophomores really wanted to be a better team, and it just all came together."

Men's Swimming Dives Into Competitive MAC Field of 16

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

Last year, the men's swimming team finished the season with an 2-8 record and placed ninth at the MAC Championships. This year, they ended the year with an 8-2 mark, and their results at MACs should be very different.

"We never dreamed we'd improve this much so soon," Coach Kim Lessard said. 'It's great to have teams say, 'where did they come from?'"

Not only have they improved so much, but if they finish in the top five this weekend to place among the MAC's elite, they will have accomplished the feat with five sophomores and four freshman.

"To see that we've improved so much and to know we've all been a part of it is personally satisfying," Scott Steinmuller said. "To know we're such a young team gives us something to look forward to."

Coach Lessard believes eight of her swimmers can finish in the top eight individually in a 16-team meet, which includes Gettysburg, Franklin & Marshall, Elizabethtown, Swarthmore, Dickinson and Widener.

"It's the first time the men have had an entry in every single event and have a chance to score in every event," Lessard said.

Peter Ward, Julien Gaudion, Scott Steinmuller and David Kraft are freshman swimming in their first MAC Championship.

Ward will swim the 100 and 200 backstroke along with the 200 individual medley. Gaudion adds depth in the 100 and 200 breaststroke. Steinmuller brings school record credentials and will swim the 100 and 200 butterfly and the 200 individual medley. Kraft will swim the 100 and 200 backstroke with the 200 freestyle.

The sophomore class of captain Chris Freisheim, Dave Cola, Jason Campbell, Ty McCarthy and Dave Czekaj should score a lot of points this weekend.

Freisheim will swim the 200 and 400 individual medley with the 100 freestyle. Cola possesses the third best time in the conference in the 200 freestyle, which he will swim with the 500 and 1650 freestyle Campbell brings school records in the 100 and 200 breaststroke, and he will also swim the 50 freestyle. Czekaj should add depth in the 100 and 200 backstroke and the 1650 freestyle McCarthy will swim the 100 freestyle and the 100 and 200 backstroke.

The men are very excited about their chances.

"We're very pumped, and we think we have an excellent chance to get into the top four," McCarthy said.

Freisheim, Prendergast Provide Leadership For Young Squad

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

Chris Freisheim figures his job as the men's swimming captain is a fairly simple one.

"Motivate the team, keep everybody excited for the meets, get people to work hard, keep going when the season gets tough, keep people practicing, and try and make it enjoyable," he said.

He must be doing a pretty good job, as the men's team stands at 8-2 going into this weekend's MAC Championships.

Karen Prendergast will finish her senior year in the top five on Washington's all-time backstroke list. As captain, she's had an impact on this year's young women's team.

"She brings a lot of spirit to the team," Jen Dow said. "She will be missed greatly next year."

Both captains have followed completely different roads to their 1992-93 swimming season. Freisheim stands at the midpoint of a promising college career. Prendergast will leave at the end of the year after a season plagued with illness.

"It was very hard for Karen not being able to swim the first half, especially being captain," Coach Kim Lessard said.

This weekend, she will swim the 100 and 200 backstroke as well as some relays. She swam the same individual events at MACs last year. Hailing from Notre Dame Prep in Timonium, Maryland, Prendergast is a 3-year letter winner who has led the team since returning to the pool in January.

"She has really bounced back and has been a great team leader," Lessard said.

A captain as a sophomore, Freisheim was elected for the position last year. This season, he broke the 400 individual medley school record, and he is a member of two school record relay teams.

Captain Chris Freisheim

Captain Karen Prendergast

In a dual meet against rival Dickinson, Freisheim anchored both the 400 medley relay and 400 freestyle relay to upset victories. He previously held the 1000 freestyle school record until Dave Cola broke it this year. Coach Lessard believes his strengths are his leadership and versatility.

"Chris is an excellent team leader," she said. "He swims any event the team needs him to score points and always gives great relay performances."

Freisheim comes to Washington College from Abington High School in Jenkintown, Pennsylvania, and he is a resident assistant as well as a member of the Athletic-Academic Honor Roll.

Women's Swimming Shoots For Strong MAC

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

The women's swimming team heads to the MAC Championships at Dickinson College this weekend with very specific goals in mind.

"I think we have a pretty good shot to place in the top eight individually," Jennifer Green said. "As for the relays, we're going to try and break all five school records."

The women's team will only take six swimmers—three of which are freshman.

Senior captain Karen Prendergast along with Jennifer Green, a junior, will both swim the 100 and 200 backstroke. Amy Draper, the only sophomore on the squad, will swim the 50 freestyle and both the 100 and 200 butterfly.

Freshmen Colleen Roberts, Jen Dow and Denise Hakanson will be swimming in their first MAC Championship.

Roberts has an excellent chance to place in all three of her individual events which are the 200 breaststroke and the 200 and 400 individual medley. Dow will swim the 100 and 200 butterfly as well as the 200 individual medley. Hakanson will swim the 50 and 100 freestyle along with the 100 backstroke.

All of the swimmers will also compose Washington's five relay teams in addition to their individual events.

Though the women finished their dual meet season at 2-8, they look forward to MAC's.

"We should all do really well," Roberts said. "We've been working hard all year."

Robin Woollens and Ramsey Bigham also swam for the Shorewomen during the season.

Men's Tennis Back On Serve For 1993

Doug Hoffberger
Co-Sports Editor

Coming off their seventh consecutive MAC title and NCAA Team Tournament appearance, the Wac Netters are looking to gain higher rank in the national standings. Currently, the Shoremen hold a preseason ranking of fifth in the nation, after placing ninth at the Division III Tournament last year. The '92 season produced a 20-4 record for the Shoremen, with a sweep of the MAC Southeast conference including wins over Ursinus, Johns Hopkins, Haverford, and Widener. Washington College has not loss to a MAC opponent since Haverford in 1985. Of the four losses appearing on the Shoremen's '92 record, one came to the hands of Div. I Penn. State, while two came Div. III powerhouse Emory.

This spring, the Shoremen have a much harder schedule which in turn should better prepare them for Nationals. Coaches Tim Gray and Todd Heibling, foreseeing the strong competition, have been holding rigorous practices since January. 25. The two hour practices consist of drilling, intersquad match play, as well as conditioning. The Shoremen roster for the spring season includes veterans and this years CO-captains, Alberto Diaz and Trevor "I can't believe we haven't been in the paper before" Hurd, who won Washington's Most Valuable and Most Improved Player awards, respectively. Diaz, who was undefeated in regular season play in the number three position, reached the second round of the individual portion of the NCAA tournament last year. MAC singles champion, and bandwagon basketball fan Trevor Hurd was defeated in the first round of the tournament, losing to one of the top ranked players from Pomona-Pitzer, a California Division III school. As a doubles team, Hurd and Diaz should be one of Division III's strongest teams, earning all-American distinctions by virtue of them being seeded.

Another veteran, Emilio Bogato looks to occupy one of the top four spots on the Shoremen roster. Bogato held a record of 17-6 in singles and 13-6 in doubles last year, and will most surely be an integral part of this year's squad. The loss of last year's number one seed, transfer Frank Hartwig, moves the entire team up one seed. The Netters also lose last years captain Andy Bobutinsky and Sophomore Carlos Nuno who held the number five and six spots, and produced many key wins for the team. Also returning from last year's squad is Nashville, Deepak "Butch" Raja. Raja, who received limited play last year, will compete with Mike "I better know the word of the day" Gill and Tom Mclemore as the number six singles position. Eric Rus, who was unable to play in the fall due to mono., and John Moffat, a resident of Johannesburg, South Africa who just arrived this semester, will vie for the fourth and fifth positions. The bottom three positions of the Shoremen roster looks as though it could be filled by three first year players, a fact that may concern coaches Grey and Heibling.

Spring Break finds the Shoremen very busy, traveling to W&L to play Emory, the eighth-ranked team in the nation. On March 13, the team will travel to Clemson University, on the 15 the team travels to Furman, on the 17 to Newberry, and on March 20, the team will compete in the Emory invitational tournament which counts for individual rankings, but not towards team ranking. The Shoremen most definitely have another promising season in front of them, so let's all do our little thing to get out there and support them!

Shoremen Soccer Surprises 12-Team Field at Gettysburg

Last Sunday, the men's varsity soccer team travelled to Gettysburg for a spring indoor tournament. The team finished second in their six team division with a 2-1-2 record and lost in the first round of the playoffs to eventual champion Gettysburg.

"We were happy because nobody expected us to do that well," starting goalie Chris Downs said.

The Shoremen started the tournament with two consecutive wins over the "Coaches" team (1-2-2) and Western Maryland (1-3-1) by 1-0 and 3-1 scores.

Washington tied the University of Pittsburgh at Bradford (2-2-1) 1-1 before their first loss to Catholic University (1-3-1) by a score of 1-0. The Shoremen finished the first round with a 1-1 tie to Mary Washington (3-0-2). In the playoffs, Gettysburg defeated Washington 2-1.

Goalscorers for the Shoremen were Yoseph Bekele (2), Shawn McMahon (2), Brian Rush (2), Brian Bird and Chip Helm. Goalie Chris Downs allowed six goals in six games for a 1.0 goals against average.

NEWT'S
Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

Ladies and Gentlemen... introducing your Newt's POW all-senior team. Starting at Center, a 6'9", 200 pound senior from Milford, DE, Darren Vican. At power forward, a 6'7", 210 pound senior from Towson, MD, Dan Dutton. At the forward position, a 6'4" senior 210 pound senior from Highbridge, NJ, Mike Swanson. At point guard, hailing from Garden City, NY, a 5'11" 175 pound senior Pete "Richard Pryor" Basel. UH oh, wait a second, that's only 4 players... You guessed it. At the other guard position, a 5'9" 168 pound incredible caps playing junior hailing from Baltimore, MD, Doug " That's right I'm the Co-sports editor" Hoffberger. Well, who did you think I'd put in there?

The four true seniors on this team definitely deserve the praise of all those who were lucky enough to follow the careers and inspired play of these athletes. Peter Basel will be remembered for his countless high scoring games, including a season high 30 points against UMBC. Darren Vican will be remembered as the awesome force inside who had the soft touch of Bill Walton; against Western Maryland, Vican compile an incredible 34 points and 9 rebounds. Mike Swanson's presence on the floor gave the Shoremen a confidence that offensive and defensive rebound were going to be ours. Dan Dutton will be remembered as a definite crowd pleaser, and as a member of the 1990 Championship team, that was ranked third in Division III. If you see one of these seniors around campus, make it your duty to say thanks for the incredible display of talent that they have exhibited over the past four years! Hey Welch and Bucky, your goalies are sieves!

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred

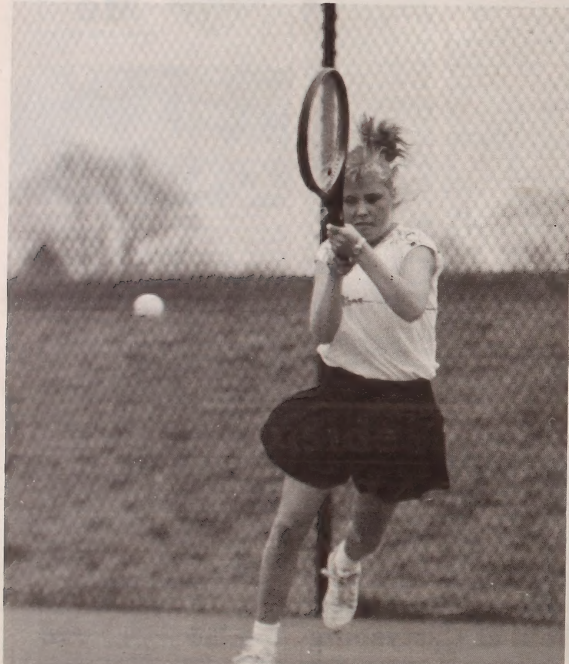
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbers Knot)
Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0888

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Men's B-Ball Splits Games With Widener; Ousted From MAC Playoffs

See Article, pg. 9

Yellow Jackets and High Street Reach Regional Shick's Super Hoops



WC • ELM

Sports

Vaughn's caps play amazingly resembles pitching style of Mike Flanagan; Washed up!

Swimming Shaves And Tapers For Crucial MAC Championships

See Articles on Pg. 10 and 11

Pam Hendrickson leads this year's women's tennis team. Look for a women's tennis preview in the coming weeks. The team hopes to continue their success from past years in 1993.

Scores

Men's B-Ball

Washington	51
Widener	68
	2OT
Washington	89
Widener	87
Washington	83
Ursinus	41

Swimming

Men's

Washington	121.5
Western MD.	55.5

Women's

Washington	78
Western MD.	93

Upcoming Events

Men's Lacrosse
Washington at Pennsylvania
Feb. 26

Indoor Soccer
Washington at Messiah Tourn.
Feb. 27

Vican, Basel, Swanson, Dutton: NEWT's Players of the Week

Baseball, Women's Tennis Previews Coming Soon

"I think it's going to kill us" –President Trout, on red ink

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: 50% chance/rain or snow showers; H 40
Weekend: chance/precipvar cloudy; H 40s, L 30s

Volume 64, Number Nineteen • March 5, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Board, Faculty meetings discuss budgetary problems

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

President Trout revealed at the Faculty Meeting Monday the contents of the Executive Session of the February 20 Board of Visitors and Governors Meeting. While the $22.3 million budget for the upcoming year was approved by the Board, "the projected end-of-year defecit is going to be a good deal more than we anticipated" for fiscal year 1992-93.

When the fiscal year ends in June, red ink in excess of $600,000 will be on the books, "this in spite of the fact that we cut $1.2 million in the fall," said Trout, referring to the 5 percent across-the-board cuts incurred, along with additional selected cuts, in September of last year.

Although "furloughs and layoffs would be the last thing we would resort to," Trout emphasized, "we are instructed to find an additional $100,000 between now and June."

"This is the second year in a row that this has happened," said Trout, who was unsure of where the needed monies would come from. "I know that this cannot go on — I think it's going to kill us."

Trout mentioned the overexpenditure on Financial Aid as a cause for the current imbalance. "We must be on target," he said, referring to the coming years. "We cannot go over again."

The budget for the 1993-94 fiscal year includes no salary increases for faculty (with the exception of those recently promoted). This is the first salary freeze in over twenty years.

Other items on the Board's agenda included the straggegic long-range planning goal to increase the size of the student body to approximately 1,200 by the year 2000.

Attrition was mentioned as another object of scrutiny. Approximately 61 – 65 percent of each entering class will graduate in four years, said Trout. Accounting for dropouts, transfers, and four-year-plus matriculates, those figures tend to calculate year-abroad students as losses. Still, said Trout, "I think retention at this college is a huge issue and something we need to work on in the 1990s.

Trout mentioned quality of students attended as freshmen and dorm life as factors which may contribute to the attrition rate.

Additional issues before the Board Convocation weekend: the Grinnell-in-London partnership with WC for the fall; a gift by Mr. and Mrs. Dooling of the Board of $100,000 to Miller Library and the Student Affairs Committee's concern over alcohol and drug use among students and the upcoming use of an abuse survey designed for small leveral arts colleges.

As reported by Development in both the Board Meeting and the Faculty Meeting, there has been in excess of $900,000 contributed to the Annual Fund. This is a 10 percent increase over last year's level of giving, and the 900K mark was not reached until June of 1992, reported Vice President for Development and College Relations Sean Lyons. The $1.3 million goal is expected to be reached by increases in alumni giving and in new members of the 1782 Society.

Admissions also painted a glowing picture of the upcoming year: The applications pool is up 18 percent over this time last year, and there is a 10 percent increase in the overall pool's GPA over last year's as well. Diversity in ethnicity and program of study both look promising for the class of '97; financial need for the incoming students cannot yet be estimated, said Vice President for Admissions and Financial Aid Kevin Coveney.

In Academic Council business at Monday's meeting, the Physics Department had some course re-numberings approved, while the Philosophy Department instituted a broader change. The Philosophy 101-102 sequence was dropped from the register; Philosophy 100 will now serve as the distribuion-filling "Introduction to Philosophy along with another course offering in Philosophy.

New members of the Appointments and Tenure Committee were elected by the faculty. For A&T, the new members are as follows: Social Sciences, Sean O'Connor; Math & Science, Rosette Roat; Humanities, Thomas Cousineau; and At-large, Judith Hymes.

Finally, Steven Cades acknowledged the appearance of Muzac between the February faculty meeting and Monday's; and he voiced a concern that six rings is way too many to activate Voicemail in the faculty offices.

Tuition, Room & Board Prices Rise Again

As a part of the 1993-94 budget approved by the Board of Visitors and Governors on February 20, a 5.5 percent tuition increase of $363 per semester, or $726 for the year was also approved. Room and board increases also went up 3.7 percent, or $95 per semester (for a total of $190 for the year.).

President Charles H. Trout Thursday mailed a letter informing parents that "The comprehensive tuition, room, board, and activities fee charge, then, will move from $18,354 this year to $19,270 for 1993-94, or exactly 5 per cent.

"This figure is almost precisely one percent above the average rise in per capita disposable income over the last eight quarters," sadid Trout in his letter.

According to Trout, this is the lowest increase voted by the Board in 18 years.

The letter was accompanied by assurances that financial aid will similarly be adjusted, in spite of the fact that a

See "Tuition," page 13

AMS 491: Porno With DeProspo

New Course Explores Difference Between Art and Filth

Doug Smith
Staff Writer

Ulysses. Tropic of Cancer. Lady Chatterley's Lover. There has always been tension between what is considered art and what is considered pornography, and American culture has often found itself at the mercy of those who are neither artists nor pornographers, deciding which is brilliant and which is filth. We are often frightened of works dealing with objectionable or provocative material, and fail to look at the ways in which its authors manipulate their forms. Like propaganda, pornography is only successful as pornography if we do not examine it close enough to see beyond its surface. The question Richard DeProspo's "Pornography in the U.S." course will be posing next fall is, "Does pornography propagandize in favor of the art, or is the relationship between reading and doing more complicated?" The course seeks to examine the ways in which pornography disseminates its message, and it falls under the heading of American Studies, of which DeProspo is the department chair.

Pornography can come in many forms, and so it is only logical that "Pornography in the U.S." is a multi-media class. The course draws its curricula from a number of controversial works, ranging from "serious," highbrow literature (Nabokov's Lolita, Burroughs' Naked Lunch, Chopin's The Awakening, among others) to more contemporary and less "respectable" texts (Bret Easton Ellis' American Psycho; the work of Andrea Dworkin; Madonna's Sex), and even video and audio works (the films of Catt Shea Rubin; "Basic Instinct"). DeProspo also plans to address the "theoretical and polemical treatments of pornography", notably those of Camille Paglia and Catherine McKinnon. By utilizing such a diverse list of materials, DeProspo hopes to broaden students' ideas of reading to encompass other nontraditional forms of media.

DeProspo believes that resistance to a course like "Pornography in the U.S." stems not from its salacious subject matter but from its roots in the popular culture, "creating a situation where students [entering the class] are potentially smarter than the teacher." He went on to point out that it is this "structural subversion of pedagogical authority" that causes many schools to be leery of teaching pop culture. Other colleges offer extensive studies in the field, including seminars on such figures as Madonna and Prince. DeProspo went on to remark that at Washington College, "studies in pop culture are under-represented to the point of invisibility."

Inside

SGA Election Supplement 6-9

Chief Kicks Off Baseball Season and Steinbrenner 3

Moonpile in Cyberspace: The Revolution Begins... 4

Mary Wood Reads In Her Own Room 11

Next Week: Wal-Mart

Welcome To Cyberspace

Moonpile's article on page four is one that you need to read. Maybe you don't want to, but you need to. The Internet system, whereby you can "talk" to people you have never met from all over the world, is the newest revolution, not only in technology, but in thought. And, as with most social revolutions, this one is beginning its full swing at the thoughtcenters of America and elsewhere: college campuses.

True enough, Bulletin Board Systems and email have been around (at least, in recognizable form) for about fifteen years, but they originated in our lifetime. And not only are they around, but every Washington College student has access to them, bringing us closer to the "real" or pehaps to the "virtual" world.

President Clinton's Public Works plan for a nationwide fiber optic network brings the nation to your living room more than tv can — you not only get the media's opinion of current crises, you'll have the opportunity to get a sampling of opinions from all over the country about every issue that strikes your fancy. And journalism, too, will become more accessible....

Have you ever disled a phone number of someone you've never met, just because you liked their name, or wanted to talk? Have you ever done this with someone from another state, another time zone, another country? Even if you could afford to do this, where would you get the numbers?

All you have to do is buy a QuickMail account. This gives you access not only to WC's intra/internal system, but the ability to log onto several network connections and read library data from say, the University of North Carolina. Perhaps it isn't necessary yet for you to have an email address, but it is becoming more and more clear that not only is it necessary for you to know what that means, but that the day is coming when you will have your own email address. Memorized.

Internet has given Washington College access to Gopher Systems, or fileservers: to bulletin board systems where interaction with people from Italy to Australia (often by way of Iowa) is possible via mail or in realtime (similar to intracampus Broadcast). And many students have been lured in by "MUDding," which is a set of interactive computerized Dungeons & Dragons' type games. Again, students meet people from all over the world this way simply by logging on to the system.

And, if you're into popular culture, alternative or underground realities (including things as diverse as Rave and cyberpunk) are the next wave. In a fashion similar to that whereby "alternative" music became no longer the alternative, but the predominant choice, these virtual worlds of thought and action are gaining a momentum that is bringing them out from under and into your living room.

It's no accident that college students are the most frequent users of Internet technology. They're younger, more adventurous, and have more imagination to throw into a parallel world that exists only in words. And here I'm not talking about role-playing games, or a fiction of any kind, but an entire universe which exists only over the phone lines and at computer terminals, with a difference between this fact and science fiction which is important to remember: these people are real.

A final note: yes, I am a frequent user of Internet and Telnet. You can find me on the University of Iowa BBS as Artemis, hanging out in the Art> or Literature> discussion rooms (big surprise there). Am I addicted? Yes, in spurts. But this is different (qualitatively) from just playing D&D all day (something I could never manage to get into). I am addicted over the computer screen not simply to the words, which are a major fascination with me, but to something I also am fascinated with in real life: people.

And this is addressed to the parents, alumni and Board members who reprimanded me for using the "F" word perhaps a little too unconsciently.... I've found a new word, my friends. A word which has the power of a general "F@#$ you" to all, a raging glory of anger or emotion which addresses the intended objects of fury without, as they say, having to compromise one's vocabulary by swearing. Since the content of this editorial is certainly not angry enough to merit use of my new word, please pause while I vent this brief rant, and then watch the usage of the "obligatory fuck."

THIS WEEK'S EDITORIAL RANT IS BROUGHT TO YOU BY...

WHOEVER pulled two, count 'em, two fire alarms Wednesday night while we were laying out the paper deserves to be run over by the clue steamroller™ until they're an inch thick. Thank you, the pleasure I got out of the 5 am fire alarm was that Brian "Layout God" Matheson and I were no longer the only ones awake. But I mean, sheesh, I don't care if you're pledging Popdeom, you don't have the right to disturb everyone's sleep and jeopardize the operation of a college office. (yes, that means the Elm.) BTW pulling false fire alarms is a federal offense.

ObFuck.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers
Photography Editor: Margaret "Wistie" Wurts
News
Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan Doug Hoffburger & Matt Murray
Features Arts & Entertainment
Justin 'M' Cann George Jamison
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Cehreit Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 6 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8585.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback Correspondence & Dirt

Alcohol Policy Fails To Address Reality

To the Editor:

John Phoebus's statement that our current alcohol policy is lenient only proves how clueless he actually is. It is surprising that a member of the SGA Executive Board does not understand the social implications of such a policy. Perhaps John is simply attempting to remain in good graces with the administration. After all, RA Applications are due March 14.

During my four years at Washington College, I have witnessed a significant transformation in the social atmosphere of the campus. The CoffeeHouse has died and the college has become a suitcase campus. This is a direct result of our current "lenient" alcohol policy. A dry campus would only continue to plague the social life of WC.

I would like to thank Phoebus for his parental concern. I promise to use discretion and to drink responsibly, thanks for the advice. Parties have moved off-campus or into the dorms as a result of the alcohol policy. Most students will not "come together as a group and party" at a college-sponsored event until the current policy is changed. Activities that are successful are usually supplemented by another party providing alcohol.

It is sad that Phoebus does not accurately represent the student body, as his position requires. Students that do not drink are able to understand the social implications of our alcohol policy, it is disappointing that John Phoebus does not. I will keep his comment in mind the next time he runs for a Student Government position.

Gordy Scherer
Senior

Zetas Welcome New Pledges

The sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha have had much to cheer about over the last few weeks. We have twelve pledges to welcome and they are as follows: Jen Oberle, Kristen McMenamin, Heather Harper, Denise Hakanson, Christy Belliveau, Kim Morgan, Krissie Callahan, Melissa Burow, Liza Whayland, Donica Collier, Nicole Zemanski, and Rebecca Herrara. On Saturday, February 20th the sisters of Gamma Beta attended the annual ZTA Day. The Gamma Beta chapter attained the following awards:100 percent Initiation, Song Contest, Scholarship, and Financial Excellence. The Zeta Lady award is given to the outstanding woman in academics and leadership within the province. This award went to Miriam Jeelin. We congratulate her and all of the ZTAs for their efforts.

Vote
For SGA Executive Board March 11

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

Last Friday's bombing of the World Trade Center has justifiably caused great concern. Although the past fifty years has seen the emergence of terrorism as an important world phenomenon, most major terrorist attacks have occurred in Europe, the Middle East, and Africa. Hopefully this latest bombing will not be the beginning of a string of terrorist attacks on American soil, but if it is, then it is important to consider and understand the mentality of the terrorist and the circumstances under which terrorism flourishes.

Traditionally, terrorism has taken many forms, from hostage-taking and bank-robbery to assassination. Usually a terrorist's attack is not a goal in and of itself, but is a vehicle to broadcast another political message. This is usually because terrorists lack the wherewithal to actually inflict severe damage.

The bombing of the World Trade Center is not typical in this regard, which is another reason to examine it closely. The bomb at the World Trade Center created a 100 ft. by 200 ft. crater five stories deep. This indicates that it is almost assuredly not the product of an isolated looney, but rather an organization with not inconsiderable material and intellectual resources.

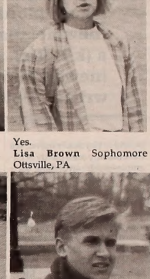
Furthermore, this attack is noteworthy in that it was not immediately followed by a credible message of responsibility. This indicates that the terrorists feel that the bomb is the message, and that to say anything more would be redundant. This would lead one to conclude that the message is that there will be another message.

The choice of the World Trade Center as a target is also of interest. When terrorists plan an attack (or at least when competent terrorists plan an attack) target selection is of the utmost importance. Bombing a civilian airliner, for example, may be seen by a terrorist as an appropriate method of responding to shooting down a civilian plane. Bombing the World Trade Center is obviously a message to economic and political elites not only in America, but also the world.

The location of the blast is also significant. The damage done to the World Trade Center may be as high as $100,000,000. Because the bomb was located in the basement in such a way as to maximize structural damage, it indicates that the terrorist not only has significant material resources, but also the knowledge necessary to maximize damage.

Even the bomb itself offers clues to the nature of the terrorists. The bomb was composed of ammonium nitrate,

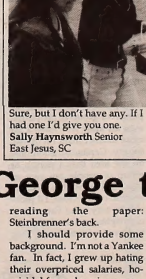
See "Koon," page 13



CAMPUS VOICES

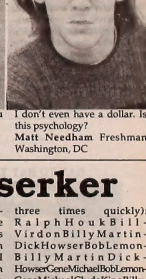
By Dude

I just found out I'm being audited by the IRS. Can I borrow a dollar?



Sorry, I don't have a dollar.
Whitney Myrus Senior
DeKuyter NJ

Yes.
Lisa Brown Sophomore
Ottsville, PA



I have coupons. Sawry.
Emily Grush Freshman
Charleston, SC

Sure, but I don't have any. If I had one I'd give you one.
Sally Farnsworth Senior
East Jesus, SC

Some day soon. I'll give you some money.
Christian Kubick Junior
Short Hills, NJ

I don't even have a dollar. Is this psychology?
Matt Needham Freshman
Washington, DC

Open Forum: George the Berserker

ChrisMarvChief Rasmussen is Senior Political Science major who is probably getting pretty darned tired of us here at the Elm calling him ChrisMarvChief every chance we get. Actually, we called him just "Chief" in the by-box because that fit a whole heck of a lot better.

"I don't think he's a bad person... just a damaged one. This is all Psychology I, understand, but he had a very tough and very rich daddy. And in the dark night of his shredded soul, I believe Steinbrenner wonders, would he have made it had he not been born so rich and privileged? And what rips at him, of course, is this: He'll never know. I know, though. Not a chance." -William Goldman

I'm bored. In the last four years, most of the things that I've loved to dislike have ceased to exist. The Soviet Union is out of power and Bob Saget doesn't get mentioned by the press anymore. Perot is irritating, but he finished third (even though he doesn't seem to accept it). Even the Republicans have been voted out of office.

Chief

(They seem to be happy about the fact that they're united again in their dislike of Clinton. If they enjoy being out of office so much, they should stay there. I wouldn't mind.) For the last three months, I've been itching for something that would put me out of my misery. Finally, a man has returned whose very mention makes me recoil while reading the paper: Steinbrenner's back.

I should provide some background. I'm not a Yankee fan. In fact, I grew up hating their overpriced salaries, homicidal fans, obnoxious press, incompetent announcers (more on Phil Rizzuto later), and arrogant style.

I didn't like Billy Martin. One isn't supposed to say bad things about the dead, but not saying anything bad about Billy? That's stretching it.

I didn't like Reggie Jackson. He was like Jose Canseco, except more pretentious. I hated when they chanted "Reg-gie" at Yankee Stadium; to some Yankee fans, it's the only two syllable word they've ever said.

I don't think Phil Rizzuto is qualified to be in the Hall of Fame (if he played for the St. Louis Browns, he wouldn't get mentioned). Rizzuto may have been a good shortstop for several years, but he's hurt the game far, far more with his announcing. David Letterman once told the following joke: "I heard the doctors revived a man after being dead for four and a half minutes. When they asked him what it was like being dead, he said it was like listening to the New York Yankees announcer Phil Rizzuto during a rain delay."

But... I mostly didn't like George, and now he's back. Why didn't I like him? Part of it was how he handled his employees. To borrow a quote, George was like the salt of the Earth. His players and managers, however, were like an open wound. His constant managerial shuffling, of course, is infamous. As a public service, here is the full list of Steinbrenner managers (special bonus points for saying this once, let alone three times quickly): RalphHoukBill-VirdonBillyMartin-DickHowserBobLemon-BillyMartinDick-HowserGeneMichaelBobLemon-GeneMichaelClydeKingBilly-MartinAgainYogiBerraBillyMartin-LouPinellaBillyMartin(he wasn't dead yet)LouPinella-DallasGreenBuckyDentBuck-Showalter. I think I missed one. By the way, Showalter will probably be replaced...unjustly by someone. It would be Billy Martin, except he's dead. Actually, that might not stop George; he might just bring up Billy's skeletal remains for one more year.

It goes beyond the manager problems, though. What other owner would scream at a coach's wife like George did to Mike Ferraro's in 1980? After

See "Chief," page 12

The Computer and the Changing Concept of Ideas

Justin 'M' Cann
Features Editor

With the introduction of Internet services to the Washington College campus, many of the people in our community have begun to explore the information and ideas available to them instantaneously from around the globe. Many of us have already become 'addicted' to the instantaneous communication with others that the Internet offers.

We are no longer a campus in a small town, we are a campus in a small town hooked up to a large computer network. Our ideas are no longer isolated, and we are no longer isolated from the ideas of others. Most people who have experimented with the Internet quickly realize that this sort of experience will forever change human society. What direction will it lead us in?

The computer has already revolutionized the way we as humans think. It has given us the calculating power necessary to envision such new ways of thinking as Chaos Theory and Virtual Reality. These are just the first steps that will result in a completely new, yet remarkably ancient concept of an Idea. Two major changes will take place. First, ideas will proliferate, spread and mingle much more rapidly than they ever have. Second, an idea will be considered beyond ownership once again. These two fundamental changes will forever alter human society.

Most of us have no problem understanding how ideas will move faster if an idea can be to the influence of their ideas at the same time. Mere seconds separate me from my Finnish friends. Without the computer and the Internet, I would never have known them at all.

It is now possible for anyone on the Internet to publish anything with little or no expense. If I wanted to, I could upload my Senior Obligation, which just so happens to be a collection of poetry, and in effect be "published". What's more is that no one has to pay anything to read my book.

Using this revolutionary new means of publication, I can avoid publishing house censorship of the sort that Ice-T encountered from Time-Warner. Of course, I will not make any money from it, but was I really going to anyway? Of course I won't. We are talking about poetry.

The second change, the eradication of the idea that one person or group of people can own an idea, will leave a far more distinct mark on human society. Capitalism is founded on the idea that a person or group of people can own an idea. (If I owned the idea that you can own an idea, I'd probably be very rich.) Patents and copyrights are the legal embodiments of this concept. They allow those who create something, be it a new industrial device or a book of poetry, to be the only people who can exploit the creation for its value.

Before Capitalism, if Chaucer wrote the Canterbury Tales, he did not own it in the sense that he could sell copies of it for money. If you invented a new type of plough, others would simply copy the design. Now, with more and more people using the Internet and President Clinton kicking around a proposal for a nationwide fiber optic network, Ideas are becoming more like they used to be before the advent of Capitalism.

Merged with the truly incredible speed at which we can communicate our ideas, we are standing on the edge of a truly new concept of the idea. This may take awhile to form, and you can bet that Capitalists will invent better and better ways to maintain the ownership of their (I use the term as the Capitalist would) ideas. However, you can also bet that hackers everywhere will quickly make these "copy protections" a silly and cost-ineffective measure.

What then can we do? How are we to change our entire concept of what an Idea is? How will artists benefit from their art? How will engineers benefit from their designs? Several possibilities come to mind.

First, as before Capitalism, artists may resort to patrons. Wealthy people whose sense of noblesse oblige leads them to support the creation of works of art and the advancement of scientific and philosophical thought, may support those who show promise in these areas. This is a possible scenario, but is quite unlikely, because this arrangement was better suited to manor houses in Medieval Europe than to Twenty-first Century cyberspace.

Second, Art and Philosophy will be forgotten, or at least relegated to people's spare time. No longer will there be professional poets, novelists, philosophers, painters and others. Research and Development will become the jealously guarded secrets of the mega-corporations. This scenario is quite likely. My only hope is that the mega-corporations will realize that the cost of inter-corporation spying and countespying will be prohibitive.

The last option is that we could all realize a new sense of cooperation in the ruins of the Capitalist system. For example, if some biological engineer is working on a project, she might send out her progress reports to all her colleagues in the hope that they may find something pertinent to their own research. A philosopher would send out his book or article for his colleagues to comment on and interact with. Everyone will benefit from everyone else's ideas. This is the spirit of true cooperation that I believe the Internet was founded in.

Of course artists and philosophers will still not have a way to support themselves, and under this system, even engineers and physicists are bereft of income. How will we, as a society, support these people? The answer lies partly in the system of patronage that I outlined above. Society as a whole would support the existence of those who show an aptitude for these endeavors, and share equally in the fruits of these labors, be they poems, novels, superconductors, or spaceships.

Of course the Department of Defense founded the Internet for defense contractors, weapons engineers and other research types at universities everywhere. Just because this spirit of cooperation arose out of Cold War weapons research, does not mean that it cannot be translated into something far more positive.

Most of us have already become be said to physically move. We have already seen plenty of examples of this sort of thing, such as the newsletters faxed (yes, it's a verb now) out of China during the Tiananmen Square demonstration and massacre. In short, if you have a live phone line then you are as close to whoever is on the other end as you are to whoever is in the same room with you. Ideas that were originally from here went to China and came back with a taste of duck sauce.

It is now possible for me to directly influence someone in Iowa or Finland with my ideas. Of course if the connection is two ways, I am opening myself one on the Internet to publish anything with little or no expense. If I wanted to, I could upload my Senior Obligation, which just so happens to be a collection of poetry, and in effect be "published". What's more is that no one has to pay anything to read my book.

:plonk: [USENET: possibly influenced by British slang `plonk' for cheap booze] The sound a {newbie} makes as he falls to the bottom of a {kill file}. Used almost exclusively in the {newsgroup} talk.bizarre, this term (usually written "plonk") is a form of public ridicule.

BAY TO BAY TRADERS

NOT JUST ANOTHER PRETTY FACE

CANNON STREET COURTYARD
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
LOCATED BEHIND WORTON REALTY

20 % SALE
THROUGH FEBRUARY
ON
PATAGONIA
RAY BAN
ATLANTIS
BULA
JANSPORT
MAD BOMBER
GREAT LAKES
FUNCTIONAL GEAR FOR ACTIVE SPORTS IN ALL CONDITIONS

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm

FRI 5 BEN ANDREWS Delta Country Blues

SAT 6 DAVID MASSENGILL Singer/Songwriter. Best Folk Act in New York City Three Years in a Row
778-6779

This Week: Animal Testing and Cruelty-Free Products

It is sad to think how we, as human beings, value our own lives so much, but in doing so devalue the lives of other living creatures. We, for some reason, feel that our looks are more important than the lives of these creatures, and we rely on their inhumane treatment (many times without realizing we are doing so) for our cosmetics and other products.

What I am referring to, of course, is animal testing. Although animal testing is both a grotesque and unnecessary violation of life, it goes on endlessly. We as consumers must realize that there are ways to stop it. Many companies have been boycotted or have just cleaned up their acts, and no longer test on animals. However, the companies listed below still (even upon the outrage of animal lovers and activists) run inhumane, vulgar tests on animals.

Susan Huntley

Surprised? Many of you probably use many of these products without even realizing what they stand for. There are many more companies that do not test on animals than those who do (Come see me for a full list). If they can do it, so can the companies on the offenders' list.

"Few people who learn about the brutality and agony involved in the testing of cosmetics on animals wish to support it. In some tests, caustic detergents, dyes, and other toxic agents are applied repeatedly to open wounds or poured into the eyes of immobilized, unanesthetized rabbits. Other tests involve the forced feeding of deadly doses of toxic chemicals to guinea pigs, rats, mice, dogs, monkeys, and horses. The poisoned and mutilated animals are discarded after testing, dead and alive, like used rags. Tens of thousands of helpless creatures are tortured and killed in these ways each year, in the name of product safety," according to Ecologue.

These tests tell what effects the chemicals have on animals, not human beings. Please, for the sake of these animals, and your own well-being (you can use all-natural, pure, healthy products), do not endorse these products. We are not talking about killing an animal to eat, all you meat lovers. We are talking about the inhumane murder of thousands of creatures smaller than us for the sake of our looks.

Besides, cruelty-free products are not only better for the animals, but for ourselves and the world around us as well. (many of them are all-natural!) You can get cruelty free everything, from deodorant to rug cleaner. My personal favorites? Tom's of Maine and the Body Shop. We as consumers must realize that animal exploitation, in the name of "beauty" is unacceptable!

Health and Beauty Aids Companies Which Still Use Animal Testing

Alberto-Culver	Helena Rubenstein
American Cyanamid	Helene Curtis Industries
Andrea Rabb	Houbigant
Aramis	Jean Patou
Armour-Dial	Jergens
BeautiControl Cosmetics	Johnson & Johnson
Beecham Cosmetics	S.C. Johnson & Son
Bonne Bell	Johnson Products
Boyle-Midway	Jovan
Breck	Lamaur
Bristol-Myers	Lancome
Carter-Wallace	Lever Brothers
Chanel	L'Oreal
Cheesebrough-Ponds	Maybelline
Church & Dwight	Mennen
Clairol	Neutrogena
Clarins of Paris	Nina Ricci
Clinique Laboratories	Pfizer
Clorox	Proctor & Gamble
Colgate-Palmolive	Purex
Cosmair	Quintessence
Coty	Richardson-Vicks
Dana Perfumes	Sea & Ski
Dell Laboratories	Shulton
Diversity Wyandotte	Sterling Drug
Dorothy Grey	Squibb
Dow Chemical	Syntex
Drackette Products	Texize
Economics Laboratory	Vidal Sassoon
Eli Lilly	Warner Lambert
Estee Lauder	Wella
Francis Denny	Westwood Pharmaceuticals
Gillette	Zotos International
Givauden

Source: People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), 1990

Read All About It: Ecologue, by Bruce N. Anderson, 1990. Prentice Hall Press. New York.

Career Update

Marie Mohler
Career Center

I'd like to do a small experiment with you for a moment. To participate, you must think about anything but the career center for a few moments. When thoughts of the Career Center creep into the consciousness of your mind, your time is up. Ready? Go.

How long did it take for you to eventually think of the Career Center? It is almost inevitable, because as soon as you think about what you are not supposed to be thinking about, you've already thought about it. This is the process of paradoxical intervention.

Anyway, now that I have your attention focused on the Career Center, I'd like to take this opportunity to merely list some of its great resources that many students may not even know exist.

The career center presents numerous career briefs throughout the semester. What is a career brief, you might ask? Career briefs are casual drop-in sessions that discuss a wide range of topics such as internships, study abroad, job search,

See "Career," page 13

BRIEF BEEF

Funding Available for Independent Research

The Charles H. Trout Committee on Undergraduate Research is a little-known and underpublicized resource for students in need of financial assistance for independent research projects.

The committee offers students the opportunity to pursue independent research (not related to thesis research), internships, or travel to educational conferences in order to expand their undergraduate experience at Washington College. The committee offers funding for individual students up to $500 for research or internships or up to $250 for travel expenses.

Students receiving funding are then asked to submit a copy of their final work, project or summary of what they learned as a result of the experience afforded them through the use of these funds. In order to apply for funding, a written request must be submitted to the committee. Guidelines for writing the proposal are available though the committee head, Michelle Crosier, at ext. 8803 or through campus mail. Also, questions may be directed to any member of the committee, which includes Jamie Baker, Sue Czechowski, Chris Rummel and Megan Ward. Deadlines for applications are March 8 and April 15.

Army Donates Aberdeen Proving Ground Papers To WC

The United States Army has donated to Washington College's Miller Library a major collection of papers relating to the clean-up of toxic materials from Aberdeen Proving Ground.

The collection of studies produced by the army contains information on ground and water contaminants and what the army has done and is doing about them. The collection, with an index volume, is housed on the first floor of Miller Library near the open reserve collection. Papers cannot be removed from the library but they can be photocopied. Community members are welcome to use Miller Library.

This collection does not include information on the treatment of

Olde Towne Barbers
Flat Tops French Braids
Frostings Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

1993-94 SGA Executive Board Elections

James M. Baker: Candidate for President

Three years ago, during high school, many of my close friends were involved in various forms of extracurricular activities and a few participated in student government. At that time I had little desire to be active in these areas, though this has changed dramatically. I took a year after high school to discover what I wanted to do; I found that I wanted to get back to school and move on with my education. When I came to Washington College I took advantage of this new motivation and have prospered immensely. I have pursued many forms of involvement in this school, and the rewards have been encouraging and inspiring.

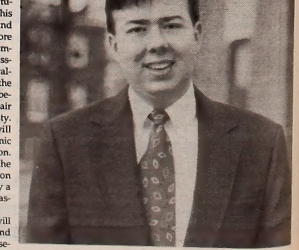
This past fall, I was elected dorm senator for Cecil; for the first time in my life I began to see how students when working together can accomplish a tremendous amount. Leaders of student organizations need the ability to communicate and work well with many different groups. I feel that I work well with others and through this I can accomplish goal set by the students. I can combine this ability with my communication skills to become an ideal liaison among the students, the administration, and the faculty.

As an active member of a very active SGA I have seen the progress we, as a group, have made. There are a few important issues that have arisen this semester and it is crucial that they continue to be addressed. In an SGA meeting that President Trout attended, the issue of communication was brought up. President Trout encouraged the efforts of Jen Del Nero and the Executive Board to aid communication between the students and various branches of the administration. I feel the next SGA President must continue to facilitate these efforts towards communication; my understanding of the issue would help me to address and further the cause.

Another major issue involves traditions at this college. Whether new traditions emerge or older ones are resurrected, I think the college is jeopardizing itself when traditions falter. Common experiences tie the entire school and its alumni together as one cohesive group. The cancelation of the traditional Birthday Ball this year was a disappointment to many people, and though there were valid reasons for the change, the present sense of tradition and the lack of communication within the school led to the sudden disappointment of many members of the college community. The circumstances surrounding this year's Birthday Ball exemplify issues that need further attention. The sense of tradition is the issue, not the nature of the Ball as presented by the freshmen class this year.

My thorough involvement in the SGA this year is evidence of my devotion and enthusiasm for helping the student body and the school in general. I am a member of the Long Range Planning Committee, the Charles Trout Committee on Undergraduate Research, the Student Advisory Council to the Maryland Commission for Higher Education, the Organizations Committee and the Social Committee. Outside SGA I am a Peer Advisor; I have been a member of the Kent and Queen Anne's Rescue Squad; I play on the new Ice Hockey Team; and I have been on the Dean's List for two of my three semesters here. Through current SGA involvement I have worked with members of administration, trustees and faculty. All of these together have given me a balanced comprehensive view of the school. Without being presumptuous, I feel I can anticipate various opinions on this campus and appreciate all the differing views. People I have worked with can attest to the fact that I am open-minded; this is an essential quality for the president of the Student Government Association.

John Phoebus: Candidate for President



My name is John Phoebus, and I am seeking election to the office of SGA President. As you may know, I am currently the Treasurer of the SGA. As a member of the Executive Board, I have allocated funds in a way that will ensure that the SGA balance its budget, something that has not occurred recently. This will not only leave the SGA in better fiscal shape for next year, but will enable the SGA to legitimately request an increase in our budget for next year. I also served two years as dorm senator, was Sophomore class vice-president, and am currently a second-year Resident Assistant. During this time, I have made the contacts with other students, faculty, and administrators that are essential to the SGA President.

Washington College is in a transitional period. Granted, we are not the "party school" that we once were, but currently there is the danger of WC permanently becoming a suitcase college. Fear not! There is still hope that we will not fall to this unfortunate fate. Due to current misconceptions about the alcohol policy, students have turned off-campus to pursue social interests. The SGA is committed to not letting this become the only alternative on a dull weekend night. With a large social budget, the SGA can provide the good entertainment, in the form of bands and dances, that is conspicuously absent at WC parties, but was such a part of our school only a few years ago. While we cannot rewind the clock to the large all-campus parties of the past, the SGA can provide social events that are more appealing than what has been accepted recently.

Crucial to this endeavor is the renovation of the Coffee House into an up-to-date center for student social life. Only by continued student pressure will we convince the administration to begin this renovation and reclaim a spot on this campus for ourselves. However, we cannot wait until the C-House is complete to begin the process of social life renewal at Washington College. Only through the strong leadership of the SGA will changes occur. We must begin with the Senate taking a role in the events that occur on campus to encourage participation and assist in the regulation of such events. We are not a dry campus yet, through creative social planning, the SGA can ensure that we do not follow that path.

With the Middle States' evaluation of the college currently in progress, it is also important that students take an active role in determining the future direction of Washington College as an academic institution. Two major issues in this area are academic rigor and academic honesty. If we ignore these concerns, we risk becoming recognized only as a "pass-through" school with a devalued diploma. I encourage the SGA to continue the work begun by our current SCC Chair to examine academic honesty. In addition I hope we will evaluate the degree of academic rigor present in our institution. We cannot afford to let the Washington College education become "watered down" by a lack of excellence in certain aspects of our academics.

These and other issues will be confronting the SGA and Washington College next semester. I have been intimately involved in the SGA in the last year as Treasurer, during which time I have gained the experience requisite for the office of President, the position at which I feel that I can serve the students of this college best. Due to the transition we are in, next year will be one of the most important years for student leadership at Washington College. Whether this will be effective leadership is up to you. Make the choice for experience and dedication. On March 11, elect John Phoebus as SGA President.

1993-94 SGA Executive Board Elections

SGA Executive Positions

All current undergraduate students at Washington College are members of the Student Government Association. The SGA is comprised of the Senate, the Student Academic Board, and the Student Conduct Council. Senators are elected from residence halls (and off-campus) at the beginning of each academic year. Other members of the Senate include class presidents and the executive board.

The Executive Board, made up of the President, Vice-president, Secretary, Social Chair(s), SCC Chair, and Parliamentarian, has no vote in Senate proceedings; however, it meets weekly as a steering and budget committee. Of these executive board members, the first four are elected. What follows is a round-up of the candidates for each of these positions; elections will be held March 11 in the CAC and the Dining Hall.

The President shall:
- preside over Senate meetings;
- appoint Senate committees and their chairmen and fill vacancies in those Senate committees with the approval of the Senate;
- serve as a non-voting representative to the Board of Visitors and Governors, at faculty meetings, and to the Alumni Council;
- vote during Senate proceeding only to break ties;
- give greeting from the student body at Fall and Spring Convocations;
- oversee cooperation between the Senate, SAB and SCC.

The Vice President shall:
- chair the SAB and preside over meetings of that body;
- chair the Senate in the event of the absence of the President;
- serve as vice-chairperson of the All-Campus Judiciary and as a member of the Academic Council and as a non-voting representative at faculty meetings.

The Treasurer shall:
- handle monetary business of the SGA;
- report the state of the finances at each regular SGA meeting;
- chair the Organizations Committee.

The Secretary shall:
- call the roll at SGA meetings;
- take minutes of all SGA meetings;
- read minutes for Senate approval at the start of each meeting;
- handle all SGA correspondence;
- maintain and make accessible the files;
- chair the Publicity Committee.

The Social Chair(s) shall:
- be responsible for all social activities sponsored by the senate;
- take the necessary steps to coordinate these activities on campus;
- chair the Social Committee.

These essays submitted by the candidates have been edited only for punctuation and spelling.

Eve Zartman: Candidate for President

The role of President of the Student Government Association is a hard one to fill. My involvement in the SGA as Reid Dorm Senator and other connections with campus politics, such as Vice President of the Sophomore Class, have shown me this. Yet it is because of my involvement in these activities that I find myself running for the position of President of the Student Body.

During the course of my political career here at Washington College I have become involved in and sponsored many activities that affect the students here — including the CoffeeHouse interim project and the planning of Spring Parents' Day — and I have learned from experience the trials and tribulations of coordinating administrative, faculty, and student efforts to reach a common goal. I think that the CoffeeHouse project is a perfect example of this; Executive Council had problems with it at the last moment and attempted to cancel the event, but through my work with Jen Del Nero and others I was able to get it back on track, and it turned out to be ten times better because of the extra care we put into it.

As I have attempted to involve myself in a variety of activities, organizations, and events, I have seen, made, learned from, and corrected many of the mistakes that can make an SGA President stumble as she tries to deal fairly with diverse groups of people and issues. I hope to be able to put to work this knowledge and my willingness to fight for student causes on the larger scale that would be open to me as SGA President.

It is my goal to pave the way for easier communication and cooperation between all elements of campus life — faculty and administration as well as the students I would represent. Next year will be my last here because of my accelerated program of study. In giving me your support, you will enable me to fulfill my goal of empowering students and educating us all about the rights we have on campus and how to use them. I believe that I can represent you well and am willing to give your causes the time and effort they deserve. All I need is your vote on March 11, and your input throughout the year to come.

Lionel A. Dyson: Candidate for President

Washington College possesses the unique ability to bring out the best in its students. It has done that for me. In my almost three years at WC, I have benefited enormously from this institution. It is now time for me to pay some of it back. That is why I want to be SGA President.

I have served as Freshman Class and Sophomore Class President, a Member of the Student Judiciary, SGA Parliamentarian and Resident Assistant, among other positions and honors. I am a member of the Society of Junior Fellows, the Political Science Honor Society, ODK, and I have been on the Dean's List four times. I am also the Number III (Secretary) of Kappa Alpha Order and an ardent supporter of Greek organizations at Washington College.

My vision for Washington College in the upcoming year is twofold: improvement in both academic and social life. I am well aware that the foremost purpose of attending college is to receive academic instruction. But a college education is more than four years of lectures and exams terminating in an afternoon graduation ceremony. As much as we are taught by our teachers, we also teach one another. As SGA President, I believe that my job would certainly include facilitating the continued improvement of WC's academic interests, but my greater concern would be to revitalize the moribund social life we now know at WC.

Doing this will require a greater coordination of activities than is currently the case. Social activities could be increased and improved by cross-pollinating the social process, thus lending diversity and strength to the process. For a college with slightly more than nine hundred students, WC is beset with more cliques and groups than are to be found on campuses far larger.

We must deal with the inevitable attemps by the administration to cutback not only on the luxuries of college life but the very necessities. Unless we as students come together, budgetary imperatives will divest us of many of the things we now take for granted. How do we deal with this possibility? We work together. For example, imagine a party in the CoffeeHouse co-hosted by the SGA, Kappa Alpha Order and Theta Chi; a speaker co-sponsored by the Hillel Organization and the Campus Christian Fellowship; a Concert Series performance ushered by the Alpha Chis and the Phi Delts; a Film Series movie where the SGA and the Psychology Club provides popcorn, sodas and candy; a lecture by the William James Forum with standing room only. The possibilities are endless and more importantly, realistic. Such activities would not require additional funding, rather a redirection of existing resources.

To do this I need the support of my fellow students. Together we can make this vision a reality. WC can be what we want it to be, but only if we work, learn, and play together. Elect me, Lionel A. Dyson, SGA President, and Washington College can begin to unlock its enormous potential. Thank you, and in the words of Louis Goldstein, "God bless y'all real good."

no photo available

Week at a Glance

March 5 – March 11

Film Series:

Lovers
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

5 Friday

The Society of Junior Fellows presents LESTER THUROW. The noted economist and Dean of the Sloan School of Management, MIT. Casey Academic Center Forum, 4:30 p.m. Reception immediately following.

The Student Activities Office presents Friday Night Live featuring Kristen Hall. C-House, 9:00-10:15.†

6 Saturday

The Chestertown Arts Leauge begins their juried show in Tawes Theatre. Exhibit will be open through March 20.

7 Sunday

Go to church and repent for last night.

8 Monday

The O'Neill Literary House Monday Series presents A Poetry Reading by Mary Wood, '68. O'Neill Literary House, Tea at 4:00, Talk at 4:30

The McLain Program in Environmental Studies presents Do We Know Enough To Manage The World's Coastal Seas? A talk by Wayne H. Bell, PhD, Vice President for External Relations, Center for Environmental and Estuarine Studies, University of Maryland. Dunning Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m.

9 Tuesday

The Center for Career Development presents Career Brief, Drop-in: Federal Jobs: How To Apply. Career Library, Spanish House, 3:30 p.m. For more information, contact Dawn Baker, ext. 7888.

The O'Neill Literary House Video/Film Series presents Barn Burning. A film by William Faulkner. O'Neill Literary House Reading Room, 7:30 p.m.

The Society of Junior Fellows, the Goldstein Program in Public Affairs, the President's Office, the Development Office, and the Dean's Office present The Place of Malcolm X in Civil Rights History. A symposium with Dr. Clayborne Carson, Director, Martin Luther King Papers Project, Stanford University; Mr. James Early, Public Historian, Smithsonian Institution; Dr. Alice Taylor, Professor of African-American History, Howard University; and Dr. Robert Fallaw, Washington College, moderator. Norman James Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m.

11 Thursday

Spike Lee's Malcolm X. Free with Washington College ID card. Royal Prince Theatre, 7:00 p.m.

Friday Night Live featuring Kristen Hall

Free, at the CoffeeHouse, 9:00pm-10:15pm

A&E

Student Profile: Tanya Allen

". . .muna, muna, muna. . ."

If you do not know Tanya Angell Allen, you might recognize the fish purse that hangs in her window in the Reid dorm. Tanya comes to WAC from Trumbull, Connecticut. She is a junior, an English major, and an aspiring/published writer of poetry, prose, etc. She has been published in New York Times, The Writtenburg Review, and Symbols, a national student literary magazine. She has also won Second Place in the Lyric College Poetry Contest in Poetry.

Around campus she can be found wearing purple, her favorite color, and making strange and funny noises. She is also a member of The Writer's Union, the chairperson of the Health Service Task Force, and is working on a magazine with Tina Dayhoff called THIS.

Since she has arrived at WAC, Tanya has tried to change many of the views on campus, whether it be by her writings, her flamboyancy, or her many organizations/projects. She was instrumental in organizing YAWP (Young Aggressive Writers and Poets), a fleeting organization that united many of the freshman writers her first year. She also had a part in the running of The Bad Poet's Society, another short-lived freshman publication, that brought out the "worst" in people through their writing.

A Dean's List student, she calls herself a "floating leader". If something needs to be done, she will do it. This holds very true when it comes to student rights and student expression, which she handles with the use of humor and controversial methods.

Tanya enjoys wearing her dinosaur slippers and writing upon her arms. And she claims to be shy, unless she is with her friends, then she absolutely adores being obnoxious.

After graduation, she plans on going to grad school and eventually becoming a college professor. One of her dreams is to travel across country in a Winnebago™. And her biggest aspiration is to get people into reading poetry again. She wants to be able to see the poets of our generation on best-seller lists in the years to come.

And finally, she added that she would out and out right marry any man that would change his last name to Kumquat.

Distinguished Alum To Read Poetry

On Monday, March 8, the O'Neill Literary House Monday Series presents a poetry reading by distinguished alumna Mary Wood, class of 1968. Mary Wood graduated with a BA in the Humanities as a non-traditional student. Since that time she has published many literary works, such as the play Remarkable Recovery, the short story A Swim Before Lunch, and the children's book Magic Mystery Swan, inspired by her daughter and her pet.

She has also been involved in many civic activities: she's a founder and the president of Queen Anne's Primary Health Care, Inc.; a board member and president of the Mid-Shore Symphony Society for three years; and a member of the Maryland State Advisory Commission to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. And she is now a board member for Family Services, Inc. in Chestertown.

She has won the Elizabeth Enright Award, from Indiana University, for her short novel Eclipse and The Maryland Playwriting Contest for Crossing the Gulf Stream.

In 1976, Mary Wood did not vote during the Alumni Elections to the Board of Visitors and Governors of WC because there were no women nominated. And then in 1984, she found herself nominated to that same position and eventually won. Since that time she has been a very prominent alumnus and has helped to improve the college. She has given a lot of money to the O'Neill Literary House, of which she continues to be a fan and a supporter. In fact, she provided the funds for one of the rooms to be remodelled. And, that room today, the front room in the Literary House, has been renamed the Mary Wood Reading Room.

The poetry reading begins in the Mary Wood Reading Room of the O'Neill Literary House at 4:30, following tea at 4:00. All of those who would like to thank Mary Wood for her contributions and her undying support are encouraged to attend.

WC Celebrates Black History

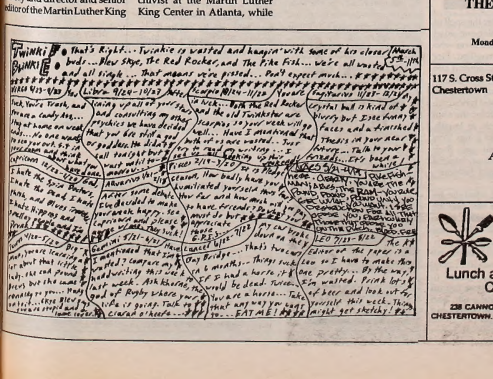
Washington College is celebrating Black History Month this week with a symposium on The Place of Malcolm X in Civil Rights History and a special showing of Malcolm X, the movie, at the Royal Prince Theatre in Chestertown.

Participating in the panel discussion on Tuesday, March 9 are Clayborne Carson, eminent historian and author of Malcolm X: The FBI File; James C. Kelly, a public historian at the Smithsonian Institution; and Olive Taylor, a provost historian at Howard University. Robert Fallaw, chair of the History department, is moderating. The symposium will take place in Norman James Theatre at 8 p.m. and is open to the public at no charge.

Clay Carson, professor of history and director and senior editor of the Martin Luther King Papers Project at Stanford University, is leading the symposium. A civil rights activist during his undergraduate years at UCLA, Carson has focused his scholarly work on the protest movements and political thought of the post-World War II era. His latest book, Malcolm X: The FBI File, was published in 1991. He has also worked as an advisor for "Eyes on the Prize," the public television series on the civil rights movement.

Dr. Carson will be talking to the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange on Tuesday afternoon, and will visit with a few classes on Wednesday.

A long-time advocate and supporter of diversity and equity issues, panelist James Early got his start as an assistant archivist at the Martin Luther King Center in Atlanta, while finishing his degree at Morehouse College. In 1971 he was granted a Ford Foundation Fellowship-Residency at Howard University. He is currently Assistant Secretary for Education and Public Service at the Smithsonian Institution.



Olive Taylor is a professor at Howard University.

The Chestertown movie theater that 30 years ago seated black patrons in the balcony is featuring a film about the fight against segregation. The Royal Prince Theater is showing Malcolm X March 5 through 12, with a private showing for Washington College students on Thursday, March 11. Courtesy of Joyce Hofer-Gafritz, owner of the Royal Prince, students will be admitted free with college ID.

The End Of Comedy: Tony Woods

Tony Woods has been "killing 'em" at comedy clubs throughout the east coast! Tony isn't a mass murderer, he's a hot, young comedian whose approach to humor makes him unique on the comedy scene. So talented is he that he won both the "Coors Lite Great Talent Showcase," and the "Edge Gel National Lampoon Comedy" contests, and was the "Metro Starz Comedian of the Year." He was a Grand Finalist in the "Johnnie Walker Comedy Search" and the "Merit Comedy Contest" in 1990. Tony is in the reserves and was one of our first troops in Saudi Arabia. His comments on the war are based on firsthand knowledge and his ability to see humor in some not-so-humorous situations. Tony has appeared on television on "Showtime Presents The National Lampoon Comedy Playoffs," "It's Showtime at the Apollo," has had featured spots on BET (Black Entertainment Television), and has appeared on "Just for Laughs" on Virginia Cable TV and "Eddie Barnett's Entertainment Special" on Maryland cable TV. In addition, Tony has brought his unique talents to numerous colleges throughout the east coast.

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
MALCOLM X
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

Friday Night Live: See Kristen Hall At the C–House

Tonight the Student Activities Office presents another Friday Night Live. If any of you missed Dark Horse Running last month, I strongly advise you to attend this one. The performer that is appearing this evening will simply provide a good time for all. I am not just saying this because of the huge publicity that has occurred to fear the things they need, but they are richly descriptive and have that different-place, different-time familiarity that sets great, authentic songs apart from words-put-to-music songs. . . " and ". . . by writing exclusively in the first person, she is forever wrestling with mixed emotions, whether she is saying goodbye to an old around campus. I am telling you to get your asses there because I have listened to one of her albums and I was completely impressed. Kristen Hall will knock your underwear off. She did mine. In fact, I have listened to her tape constantly since I have gotten my hands on it. She is incredible. Her voice brings back memories of quality Carly Simon and her music has an Indigo Girls quality about it. She has even opened for the Indigo Girls at a few of their shows.

Kristen Hall comes from Atlanta and she can be categorized as a "solo acoustic artist; a singer/songwriter of unusual quality." According to some press reviews, Hall ". . . writes as emotionally and personally, as only someone who really means the words can. Her songs are about love and vulnerability and the tendency of people lover, falling under the spell of a new one, or creating one-sided conversation with a lover who could be real or imagined. Her voice, a husky and soulful alto that's occasionally reminiscent of Tracy Chapman, adds to the tension that her best lyrics conjure—and, mercifully, she's not one to wax poetic at length. Rather, most of her songs have an earthy tone that make their point in a disarmingly tuneful and country-tinged fashion. . .".

Furthermore, what else are you going to do this evening that will be entertaining, relaxing, and, best of all, FREE. Come show Kristen Hall your support at the Coffee House from 9 p.m. until around 10:15 p.m. Alcohol can be consumed in the C-House for those of you who are debating. Oh, and don't be late. . . you won't want to miss any of this.

Eminent MIT Economist To Speak Friday

Lester C. Thurow, an economics educator with MIT and former presidential economic advisor, will give a talk at Washington College in Chestertown on Friday, March 5. His visit, sponsored by the Society of Junior Fellows, will take place in the Casey Academic Center Forum at 4:30 p.m.

Thurow, Dean of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Sloan School of Management and a faculty member at MIT since 1968, taught at Harvard in the mid-60s.

He is the author and co-author of several books. His best-known work, The Zero Society (1980), posits an economy of limits in which gains achieved must be traded off against losses for other groups.

His latest book, Head to Head: Coming Economic Battles Among Japan, Europe and America (1992), argues that the familiar economic alignments of the 20th century are obsolete and evaluates America's position in the coming world order.

In addition to his formal academic role, focusing on public finance, macroeconomics and income distribution, Thurow carries on his educational activities as an articulate spokesman clarifying and illuminating the discipline of economics for the lay public and providing informed commentary on public policy issues and the state of the economy profession. He currently writes for the Boston Globe and appears regularly on The Nightly Business Report television program.

"Chief," from page 3

Ferraro, the third-base coach, waved a runner around third to get tagged out at the plate, Steinbrenner sought out Ferraro's wife to yell "Your husband@#$%^& up the game for us!" What other owner would pay money to a convicted felon for damaging information on a star player?

Finally, what other owner would act like Steinbrenner recently, who acquires and discards players like a berserk baseball card collector, without rhyme, reason, or intelligence? Steinbrenner pays millions of dollars to a player (usually not a very good one), yells at the player at the slightest hint of non-performance, then discards the player shortly afterward (then, inevitably, the player helps win a title for another team).

That's really why I like having George back. The Yankees were actually picking up young, promising players. They may have been good, if it wasn't for George's return. Whew, that was close. I mean, sure, his son who was supposed to run the team may be genetically deprived, but there's nothing quite like George. Look at his record. He gives up on Steve Balboni, who then helps the Royals win a world title in two years. He gives up on both Dick Howser and Lou Pinella as managers, who then win world championships for their respective teams.

Reggie Jackson and Dave Winfield left when they got tired of George, then later help their respective teams win divisional titles (in Winfield's case, a World Series). George rid himself of Doyle Alexander, who shortly thereafter helped both the Blue Jays and Tigers win divisional titles. Both Goose Gossage and Graig Nettles left New York (they, too, were tired of George), then helped San Diego to win a title the next year. Rickey Henderson was traded to the Oakland A's for a package of nondescript players, then helped the A's win three consecutive AL titles. Don Baylor was traded to the Red Sox in 1986, then helped every team he played for in the rest of his career win a divisional title, and so on.

Meanwhile, Steinbrenner hasn't won a divisional title in over a decade. The fun thing is that he's just so entertaining when he self-destructs. It's kind of like Colonel Klink in Hogan's Heroes. If he was on your side, you'd be pretty pissed off. But, he's not, it's pretty damn funny. George is back, and the Yankees are doomed. Ha. Ha. Ha.

WHEN YOU RIDE DRUNK, ONE MORE FOR THE ROAD CAN HAVE AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT MEANING.

Alcohol quickly affects your judgment, balance, and coordination. Don't drink and ride. Or your last drink might be your last drink.
MOTORCYCLE SAFETY FOUNDATION

Second to none.

SECOND NATIONAL Federal Savings BANK
Over $1.6 Billion in Assets
FDIC Insured
503 WASHINGTON AVENUE
P.O.BOX 577
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
410-778-1013
OPEN 6 DAYS A WEEK FOR YOUR BANKING CONVENIENCE
EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist – Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal – Electrologist – Louise Leaverton, L.E.

...con," from page 3

...ch means that the group ...er made the bomb from fer... ...ser or obtained ammonium... ...rate based explosives. In ei... ...er event, this indicates that ...e the group probably fights ...e name of a foreign cause, ...d operatives obtain their ...erial locally.

Whoever the terrorists are, ...s clear that this country is in ...ep trouble if they keep it up. ...probable that this bombing ...as a warning, and that the ...xt time more substantial ...mage will occur. By target... ...the nation's financial insti...tions, the terrorists could ...ople the American economy ...d therefore the world ...onomy. It is possible that the ...rorists have also targeted ...rious exchanges, corporate ...ities or communications ...cilities.

Most terrorist attacks actu...y do little material damage. ...t this bombing, physical ...acks against America's fi...ancial infrastructure have ...en viewed only as a theoreti...l possibility. Yet outside of ...clear, chemical or biological ...rorism, this type of terror...m has been viewed as the most ...rious threat.

Unfortunately, this threat ...as been viewed more as a ...eoretical threat than an ac...al possibility. As a result most ...f the planning that has been ...voted to counter-terrorism ...as been focused on threats ...sed to Americans residing or ...aveling outside the United ...tates.

During the course of the ...980's, American embassies ...opped up efforts to enhance security. Thirteen of them were relocated to reduce the risk of terrorist attack. Large physical barriers were installed to prevent unauthorized access. Bullet-proof glass, armed guards and even tanks have been placed between embassies and potential terrorists.

Perhaps that is why this last attack occurred in America. So long as our embassies were easy targets, there was little need for terrorists to bother to attack the continental U.S. But now, it may be that it is far easier to attack American interests in America than it is to attack them abroad.

It is impossible to fortify America the way our embassies are fortified. Even if this were possible, even the strongest fortification can be overcome with adequate planning. Therefore the strategy to deter terrorism must rely heavily on intelligence gathered on potentially terrorist organizations and investigation into individual acts of terrorism.

The two strategies are not mutually exclusive. Investigating terrorism is entirely reactive to individual acts of terrorism, and is highly effective in apprehending terrorists. Unfortunately, it can only take place after the damage has already been inflicted. There is also arguably little deterrent value, as most terrorists don't feel that they are likely to be caught, and others are so devoted that they really don't care if they get caught.

The other strategy plays more of a deterrent role, but is controversial. Essentially, this strategy relies heavily on human intelligence, and this usually means infiltrating domestic political organizations which are believed to be potential hotbeds of terrorist activity. In 1984 the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago ruled that the FBI "may investigate any group that advocates the commission, even if not immediately, of terrorist acts in violation of federal law. It need not wait until the bombs begin to go off, or even until the bomb factory is found."

In practice this means abridging people's right to associate freely. Counter-terrorism literature refers to politically radical organizations as havens for "proto-terrorists." The FBI has employed extraordinary measures to monitor these groups. In 1970 the FBI ordered investigations into the backgrounds of every SDS (Students for a Democratic Society) member. The FBI has also paid 1,600 informants $26 million to infiltrate the Socialist Worker's Party. The FBI even bugged Martin Luther King Jr.

The point is that we should not overreact to the threat of terrorism in the United States. If this last attack is not an isolated incident but the beginning of a campaign of terror, it may be tempting to give the police and the FBI broad authority to investigate suspected terrorists. This is a temptation to which we should not succumb, lest we destroy the liberties which are the foundation of the political legitimacy of the American republic. And that would be the gravest threat to national security which I can imagine.

"Tuition," from page 1

$1.2 million financial aid overrun is in part responsible for the college's red-ink situation.

Other causes for the defecit (see Faculty Meeting story, this page) enumerated by Trout include low returns on the endowment funds invested in bonds; low interest rates for savings; and questionable security in Maryland State direct aid to Washington College.

"When Cater arrived here, the Board was in hot water with the faculty. The Board voted a 20 percent across-the-board salary increase... The funds functioning as endowment were sunk into bonds that have since come due — and the interest rates on the replacement bonds are nowhere near what they were then," Trout told the Elm Wednesday.

However, Trout continued, the Board is determined to keep the college moving forward despite its troubled financial state. One new full-time faculty member will be added to the Psychology Department, which Trout says is the most over-loaded academically.

Expenses involved in joining the Centennial Conference, as well as in the Middle States Reaccreditation process, are one-time expenditures necessary for the coming year; a "trustee-mandated decision to increase our admissions and development efforts" will increase the funding and perhaps the staff of those two offices.

The above four points, however, are "virtually the only areas in which we see incremental expense in the year ahead," as Trout states in his letter.

Aside from financial aid spending, said Trout Wednesday, "our operating budget is equal to that back in the late eighties," and he notes only a 2.5 percent increase in overall expenditures (again, minus financial aid) over the past four years.

But, Trout says, "We've made a financial commitment to the class of 1996, and we're not about to start cutting their aid."

Trout also notes several money-saving techniques to be employed in combatting the $600,000 defecit anticipated for June 1993 (end of the fiscal year). "Fourteen positions have disappeared through attrition," the letter states, and no faculty salary increase (except for "a handful" who were promoted this year) is in the budget.

Over $1 million has been slashed from the budget since September in an effort to balance the college books while continuing to give students the $5,272 million in financial aid again budgeted for next year. Financial aid for next year represents 24 percent of the total operating budget.

"Career," from page 5

interviewing, Peace Corps, and Outward Bound.

Another resource available is the Credentials Files. For seniors especially, this is a great way to organize and keep all your recommendations in one file so that even when you graduate, you can call at any time and have them sent to your potential employers.

Having your recommendations sent in a confidential folder makes them appear more official than if you were to send them out on your own. The latter is always an option, this is just to make you aware of the other possibilities available to you. The Career Center has a file for each and every senior on hand already. Contact Vicky Sawyer or Dr. Cades in the Career Center to activate this process.

Other options to consider are the Life/Work Planning and Job Search Workshops that the career center presents. These workshops aid students in getting to know their personal interests, goals, needs, and desires so that they can find a job that will satisfy these preferences without playing the post-graduate Russian roulette, hit-or-miss game. It is important to find a job that suits you and your needs rather than mold yourself into the job. To do this, you need to go through some self-exploration. Self-exploration tools are one of the career center's specialties.

Men's Swimming Finishes in Seventh Place in 15 Team Field; Women Bounce Back From Disappointing Season To Place 10th

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

Dave Cola became the first-ever male swimmer from Washington College to win an individual event at the Middle Atlantic Conference Championships, and the men's team improved on last year's finish with seventh place.

As a team, the men finished seventh, only 11 points out of fourth.

"I figure that we're the youngest team in the conference. We have two more years and we're just going to improve," Cola said. "We had a few things happen that could have changed things very easily. I was very pleased that we were right up there with everybody."

In winning the 500 freestyle, Cola broke the school record twice, hitting 4:55 in the preliminaries and 4:51.19 in the finals. He also won the silver medal in the 1650 freestyle, shattering the school record by 45 seconds in a time of 17:07.

"It was really exciting. I was surprised, but the way that I felt, I thought that I could (win the 500)," Cola said. "I already feel the pressure for next year."

In the 200 freestyle, he broke another school record in 1:48.9 for fifth place. He rounded out the meet contributing to the fifth place 400 freestyle relay, fifth in the 400 medley relay and third in the 200 medley relay.

The 200 medley relay became the first relay team to medal in Washington history. Cola, Peter Ward, Jason Campbell and Scott Steinmuller placed third in a school record time of 1:40.3. The same foursome swam fifth in the 400 medley relay in 3:41.

Cola joined Campbell, Chris Freisheim and Ty McCarthy in the 400 freestyle relay to take fifth in a time of 3:19.

Steinmuller set a school record in the 100 butterfly in 54.4 to win the bronze medal as a freshman. He took nine seconds off his 200 butterfly for fifth in 2:04. His third school record of the day came in the 200 individual medley in a time of 2:06.6, which placed him 12th. He joined Freisheim, Campbell and McCarthy for fifth place in the 200 freestyle relay in school record time of 1:30.5.

Campbell placed fourth in the 100 breaststroke in a school record time of 1:02.2. He also placed 13th in the 50 freestyle in 22.8.

Peter Ward swam the meet with a pulled hamstring. Even with the injury, he placed fifth in the 100 backstroke with a school record time of 55.8 He also contributed to the 200 medley relay.

"We don't know how Peter swam his events so well," Coach Kim Lessard said. "He couldn't even walk. Who knows what he would have done with no injury."

Other scorers for Washington included Freisheim with 11th in the 400 individual medley and 16th in the 100 freestyle; McCarthy in the 100 backstroke and Czekaj with 11th in the 1650 freestyle. David Kraft joined McCarthy, Freisheim and Cola for a new school record in the 800 freestyle relay.

"The race between fourth and seventh was incredible and went down to the last relay," Coach Lessard said. "No one could believe how well this group was swimming with only freshmen and sophomores. I'm so very proud and excited about what they will do next year."

On the women's side, Washington held on for 10th place. Following a tough year of illness, injury and low numbers, Coach Lessard reacted positively to the meet.

"I'm so pleased with their results," she said. "They are a talented group of women and hung in there with the best of them when it counts."

Colleen Roberts placed all three of her individual events with eighth in the 400 individual medley, 11th in the individual medley and 10th the 200 breaststroke.

Jen Green broke both 100 and 200 backstroke school records with times of 1:03.7 and 2:19.7 respectively, for ninth and sixth.

"It is so exciting to see keep improving even as a ior," Coach Lessard said.

Jen Dow added 12th in 100 butterfly and 13th in 200 butterfly. Amy Draper finished 16th in the 200 butterfly.

Green, Roberts, Draper Denise Hakanson broke school record in the 200 medley relay to place eighth. Draper, Green and Roberts ished eighth in the 800 freestyle relay. Dow, Draper, Green Hakanson placed 10th in the 200 freestyle relay.

Lacrosse Falls

The Washington College Lacrosse Team began their 1993 season with an exhibition versus the University of Pennsylvania. Although the Quakers edged out the Shoremen 13-12, Coach Terry Corcoran was very pleased with their stellar efforts against the Division I team. In the effort, 20 out of 42 players were able to see field time.

"We played at a very high level of intensity especially the defense, they played especially physical," Coach Corcoran said.

Attackman Jason Paige led all scorers with six goals and one assist. Midfielders Chris Cote and Ted "Them Bones" Greeley chipped in with two goals each, and Greg Mouracade added a goal and an assist. attackman Harris Murphy helped the offensive effort with a goal and five assists.

Defensively, the Shoremen were led by Scott Overend and the goal keeping abilities of Andy Manos and Jon Lundberg.

The Shoremen played without their top offensive threat midfielder Greg Lawler and Senior midfielder John Hernandez. Both are expected tobe back for next week's home opener versus Johns Hopkins.

Soccer Shocks Indoor World For Second Consecutive Week

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

On Saturday, the Washington College soccer team traveled to Messiah College for another outdoor tournament. The young squad, which is composed of all freshman, again surprised the tournament field, as they finished the day seeded fifth out of 12 teams.

"I am very pleased with the way our team played this weekend," Coach Todd Helbling said. "Although we are an entirely freshman squad, it is obvious our guys are not intimidated by anyone."

The tournament was divided into three brackets of four teams each, with the top two teams in each division reaching the playoffs at the end of the day. The Shoremen faced a tough bracket, consisting of Susquehanna, Scranton and Muhlenberg.

In the first match, Washington defeated Susquehanna 3-1 on the strength of two goals from Brian Bird and one tally from Shawn Clink.

The next game pitted the Shoremen against Scranton. Washington blitzed Scranton for four goals from Yoseph Bekele (2), Shawn Clink and Shawn McMahon. Winning 4-1 against one of the top teams in the MAC, Washington boosted their confidence and assured a playoff spot for the afternoon.

"They are beginning to realize we can compete with the top teams in our area, and I feel this is a good indication of things to come," Helbling said.

The Washington defense led by Chip Fleim, Brian Rush, Geoff Bley and goalkeeper Chris Downs held the opposition to a 2.75 goals against average.

However, immediately following the Scranton match, the Shoremen had to play one of the top teams in the MAC in Muhlenberg. The result was a 6-1 loss for Washington.

"We simply ran out of gas," Helbling said. "We have nothing to be ashamed of at all. We beat a very good Scranton team and then had to play 30 more minutes against an even better Muhlenberg team."

The Shoremen earned the fifth seed for the playoffs, and they played Western Maryland in their first game. Unfortunately, Washington fell by a score of 3-1.

The next intercollegiate clash for Washington will be

Hockey Falls To Naval Academy 7-5 At Annapolis

Tim Reardon
Staff Writer

On Sunday, the Washington College Ice Hockey team wrapped up their season with a 7-5 defeat to the Midshipmen of Navy. It was a hard-fought game that could have gone either way. In the first meeting between the two teams Washington lost 8-4, so it was a much improved effort.

The Shoremen started the scoring when Tim Reardon scored on a wristshot that sailed right by the Navy goalie. Navy then evened up the score at 1-1 early in the first period.

Washington's next goal was scored by Gary Yovanovich with an assist from Than Parker. At the end of the first period the score was tied 2-2, with WC dominating most of the period.

Washington opened up the scoring when Chris "My first complete game" Head stung a slap shot past the helpless Midshipmen. That made the score 3-2, but W.C. continued the scoring when Yovanovich netted his second goal of the game.

But some lapses Washington's game enab Navy to capitalize and sc four unanswered goals to win the score 6-4. Washing closed the gap to 6-5 w Reardon scored his second of the game but it was enough. Navy scored ag quickly and the final score 7-5.

The Shoremen had seve opportunities to tie the sc late in the game, but two goa were disallowed and time out.

The team ended the seas with a 2-3 record, with hi wins coming over the Seag of Salisbury State. Overall team had a successful first s son and hopes to do better year.

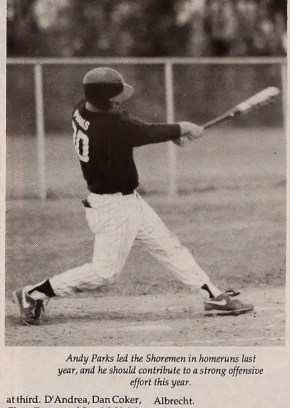
Thanks to all the fans coming to the games and che ing for the team. Fan-of-t year goes to Slammer for all great support. The team ho more people will become terested and come out and p for the team next year.

Shoremen Look To Topple Jays From Perch On Diamond In '93

ast Murray
Sports Editor

The Shoremen baseball am returns 11 players from st year's 12-16 club which fin- shed 5-5 in MAC Southeast ay. Johns Hopkins won the ivision last year, and the Blue ays are favored this year.

Leading the pitching will Keith Whiteford. Last sea- n, Whiteford led the team in innings pitched with 81, and he had the lowest earned run av- erage with a 2.11. He has been named to the MAC All-Con- ference team for two years.



"Keith will be counted on to pitch the most important games on the schedule," Coach Ed Athey said. "And Joe Boan can help tremendously if he can return to his sophomore year form when he won seven games."

Other returning pitchers are Gerry Scully, Jerry Hunt, Matty Conway and Mike D'Andrea. Washington also adds three freshman to the pitching corps in Kevin Roland, Todd Hall and Doug "Billy" Baker.

Returning to head the of- fensive attack are Mike Hanifee (.333 batting average), Andy Parks (four homeruns), Joe Boan (21 RBI) and Conway (29 runs scored). The Shoremen batted .287 as a team last year, scoring just over six runs per game. Coach Athey hopes for an even better output this year.

Hitting must improve for Washington College to compete in the Middle Atlantic Con- ference Southeast Division Championship," Athey said.

In the field, the catching duties will be shared by sophomore Max Walton and freshman Brian Rush. Anchored he infield, Parks will start at first base, Hanifee at second, Conway at shortstop and Boan

Andy Parks led the Shoremen in homeruns last year, and he should contribute to a strong offensive effort this year.

at third. D'Andrea, Dan Coker, Chris Eaton and Ian McVeigh should provide depth for the infield positions.

In the outfield, it's harder to say who will play where on opening day.

"In the outfield, real com- petition is taking place for all three positions," Athey said.

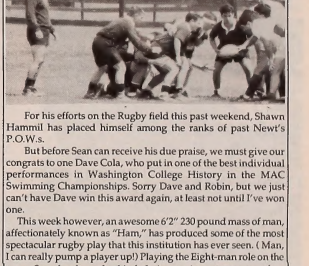
Whiteford, Scully, Hunt, Coker and Kyle Hutchinson all saw playing time last year. Freshman vying for positions include Blair, Chad Campbell, Gary Yovonovich and Chuck Albrecht.

The Shoremen leave for Ocala, Florida on March 12. For one week, they will play eight games with two a piece sched- uled for Wooster College, Western New England, Skidmore and the University of New Haven.

Washington opens the regular season on March 24 with a double header at Western Maryland College. Their home opener will be March 25 against Tufts University.

Women's Tennis Prepares For '93

izzy O'Hara
Staff Writer



Tim Gray and the rest of the Washington College Women's Tennis team are anx- iously awaiting the beginning of their action packed Spring 1993 Season. The first official match will be at Towson State on Monday March 8, and a lengthy Spring Break trip south awaits the team after their first match. During their journey south, the women will first stop in Lexington, Virginia to meet with the women of Washington and Lee University on Satur- day, March 12. Next, it is on- ward to battle it out with the teams of Newberry College on March 15 and spend St. Patrick's Day with a match against Erskine College. The last two matches for the Spring Break tour will be held at Emory Uni- versity against Trinity of Texas and Smith College. Washing- ton and Lee and Trinity of Texas are Top 10, while Smith College hold a position on the Top 20 list.

Pam Hendrickson will once again hold the number one spot on the team. Jen Sloan will hold the number two spot while Diana Clausen will be in the number three position. Tina Lennon will be the number four player for the team and it seems the number five and six posi- tions are still being decided upon between Melissa Harmeyer, Vicky Roth, Kim Prettyman and Ann-Marie Malena.

Gray explained "this is a rebuilding year for me being that I have only been here for a year and week so far, but I have high hopes for this season and especially for the Fall 1993 Season when my recruits will be all lined up and ready to go." You can see the Spring 1993 Women's Tennis Teammeet their first contender, Towson State on Monday, March 8.

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

For his efforts on the Rugby field this past weekend, Shawn Hammil has placed himself among the ranks of past Newt's P.O.W.s.

But before Sean can receive his due praise, we must give our congrats to one Dave Cola, who put in one of the best individual performances in Washington College History in the MAC Swimming Championships. Sorry Dave and Robin, but we just can't have Dave win this award again, at least not until I've won one.

This week however, an awesome 6'2" 230 pound mass of man, affectionately known as "Ham," has produced some of the most spectacular rugby play that this institution has ever seen. (Man, I can really pump a player up!) Playing the Eight-man role on the team, Sean has brought this fairly inexperienced team together. Although he did not score in last week's efforts, he was part of every scoring drive and defensive struggle.

Captain Ciaran O'Keefe commented, "Sean amazed me last weekend, at times he played like a back and at other times he played like a forward. He displayed great rugby sense." Person- ally I'd like to know about his caps sense, we'll talk later Sean. The Rugby team still has five more games left this season, so have a cream soda, eat a sandwich, do something, but get out and support Rugby in their efforts!

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Bonbonniere)
Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0888

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Men's Swimming Improves on Last Year's Finish With MAC 7th; Women End Season in 10th

See Article, pg. 14

Baseball gets into swing of things see article on p. 15

WC • ELM

Sports

Vaughn to appear on 'Star Search' In Couples' Dancing. We give him 4 Stars...but will Ed?

Lacrosse Opens Its Exhibition Season With Tough Loss To Penn

Amy McLeary taunts a defender screaming, "Take that corny defense and stick it where the sun don't shine." McLeary, a senior veteran, looks to lead the Shorewomen to the playoffs this year. In the past, McLeary has been at the top of the team in scoring. Look for a women's lacrosse preview coming in future weeks.

Scores

Ice Hockey

Washington	5
Navy	7

Swimming Men's

MAC 7th Place

Swimming Women's

MAC 10th Place

Men's Lacrosse

Washington	12
Pennsylvania	13

Soccer

Washington	3
Susquehanna	1
Washington	4
Scranton	1
Washington	1
Muhlenberg	6
Washington	1
Western MD.	3

Look For Women's Lacrosse Preview Coming Soon

Shawn Hamill: NEWT's Player of the Week

Everyday low-low price: It's free to you, the reader.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: Mostly cloudy, 30% chance/snow; H 40s
Weekend: Rain & Snow emtime; H 30s, L 20s

Volume 64, Number Twenty • March 12, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Why Wal-Mart? A Brief History and Update

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Grateful acknowledgments to the Kent County News and David O'Dell for providing much of the information in this article.

When the airport on the Scheeler property on Route 213 north of Chestertown decided to close last fall to move to a new location, speculation began immediately as to what would be done with the land.

In January, the firm of Colton-Laskin Developers, or CL-1 Incorporated, applied for the land's annexation to Chestertown. While a specific use of the property was not mentioned, it was to be within the limits of the "commercial" zoning designation the Scheeler property retained.

The application was denied by the Chestertown Planning Commission. Around the same time, rumors that CL-1 was acting on behalf of Wal-Mart began, and it was soon released that the firm was in fact seeking to purchase the land for the Wal-Mart corporation, the single largest retailer in the United States.

CL-1 submitted a site plan to the Kent County Planning Commission, an advisory group to the Kent County Commissioners, who have final jurisdiction over land within the county not zoned into a specific town (such as the Scheeler Property). Planning approved the site plan for the proposed store February 4.

At the same time, various groups were working on text amendments to the county zoning laws to try to put a cap on the size of future buildings. In November, the Coalition for the Preservation of Chestertown submitted an amendment to Planning which would limit the size of a free-standing store to 10,000 square feet and a shopping center to 20,000 square feet. These sizes are relatively small; in January the coalition amended their own amendment to a cap of 25,000 and 50,000 square feet for a store and a shopping center, respectively.

In February the County Commissioners proposed their own amendment, which would have put the cap at 50,000 square feet for a free-standing store and 150,000 square feet for a shopping center (with no single store above 50,000 feet allowed in the shopping center).

According to the January 20 issue of the Kent County News, the proposed Wal-Mart plan contains 98,358 square feet of store space and 766 parking spaces, with 58,000 square feet and 393 additional parking spaces outlined as a "Supercenter Expansion" possibility.

Kent Plaza's total square footage is roughly 150,000; Washington Square Plaza's total is 120,000 square feet.

McCrory's, before the August fire, held 13,000 square feet of space; the old SuperFresh lot held 20,002 square feet, and the soon-to-close Ames store holds 43,200. These three vacancies add up to 76,202 square feet total, about three-quarters of the proposed Wal-Mart, or less than half of its total with expansion.

March 2, the Coalition withdrew their text amendment in favor of the one proposed by the Commissioners; by a two-to-one vote, the Commissioners vetoed their own amendment to the zoning code. The amendment may not even have affected the Wal-Mart; it could have been "grandfathered" to allow that single store access to Kent County.

But rumors of Wal-Mart's threat to move "across the river to Queen Anne" if blocked by Kent County influenced those commissioners who voted.

The Commissioners have granted access to the store's construction; now CL-1 must apply to the Maryland Court of Appeals for permission to build a Wal-Mart at the Scheeler airport property.

The decision is not the end of the story, however; the Coalition for the Preservation of Chestertown has appealed both the Planning Commission's approval of the site plan for Wal-Mart and the County Zoning Administrator's decision to permit the store to build in Kent County.

• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •

The above article provided "just the facts." But if you've been into almost any store in Chestertown lately, you've seen the proliferation of "No Wal-Mart" signs (like the one illustrated on page two) and heard the townspeople debate just what Wal-Mart may do to Chestertown if it comes.

What is Wal-Mart? Wal-Mart is the biggest retailer in America, period. Bigger than Sears Roebuck, K-Mart, or Dollar General. From the Kent County News, February 3 issue: "As of January 1992, the chain operated operated well over 3,500 acres of retail space nationwide — 1,720 discount department stores, 208 warehouse clubs and four "HYPERMART USA" stores.

"Net 1991 sales topped $43.9 billion."

Wal-Mart is a megastore, a discount store which sells

See "Wal-Mart," page 9

Help Miss Bessie Out

Tina Balin
Staff Writer

On Monday, March 1st, 1993, close to midnight, the familiar fire siren sounded. The fraternity pledges ran to pay their respects to George Washington. While the pledges made us laugh, the fire affected someone close to the college — Mrs. Bessie Maples and her family.

The fire started close to12 am, and was caused by an electrical malfunction. "Miss Bessie"'s youngest son, Trey, was awoken by the smell of smoke, and then woke Mrs. Maples up. Fire fighters, fire trucks, and two volunteers in particular showed up at the scene.

WC students and Chestertown Volunteer Firefighters Kristin McMenamine and David Littleton quickly arrived at Miss Bessie's house and were a great emotional support to Miss Bessie and her family. Fire fighters were at the house until 2:30 in the morning partially because the fire took a long time to put out and partially because they want to en-

See "Bessie," page 9

What's All The Hubbub, Bub?

Jason Ronstadt
Staff Writer

In the February 12th issue of this year's Elm, there was a formal apology made by the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange. This apology was directed to anyone who might have taken offense at the way in which certain members of the Exchange chose to decorate their portion of the Coffee House. What was missing from this letter to the editor was a description of what was actually put on the wall, and how it got there.

Apparently, a couple of members of the Exchange took it upon themselves to paint several Afrocentric statements on the wall. Some of the phrases used were, "Cleopatra's Daughters," "Support Black Colleges," and " " While some of these phrases are not openly offensive to anyone, the fact remains that they are personal opinions which do not concur with what has been the staple ideology of the group, whose credo aims to celebrate the various cultures and to promote racial harmony.

Soon after the wall was completed, Dawn Israel, President of Dale Adams, heard by word of mouth about what had been written. "When I first saw the wall I almost cried," said Israel. "I agreed with some of the stuff that was written, but that's Dawn, it's not what Dale Adams is about."

Other members of Dale Adams were also unhappy with the final results and it was eventually agreed that the wall would be 'white washed', and that the group would start anew in their efforts to contribute to the decoration of the Coffeehouse. When the second effort was finished the wall read "Educate to Elevate." Said Israel, "We wanted to send out a message that crossed color lines and applied to everyone."

It is hard to think of a group on campus with a more noble objective than the celebration of various cultures and the promotion of racial harmony. Why then is it that the enrollment of this society is so small? And why is it that some of the present members of Dale Adams act before thinking on matters which are so paramount to the very purpose their own group? The Dale Adams Heritage Exchange is a truly wonderful idea. Hopefully, the conflicts within the group have been settled and the group will continue to grow thanks to the support which it so much deserves.

Inside

More on Wal-Mart 3&4

Linehan On Tradition and the art of Discipline 4

The Budget's Affect on Students and Faculty 5

Outdoor Security Phones Get the Go-Ahead 5

Happy Spring Break: No ELM Next Week

This Editorial has Nothing to Do with Wal-Mart

The conditions of our town, county, state and country all seem to be lying on the brink of significant change. The outcome may be good or bad. The economy is either well on its way to recovery, or not, depending on which set of experts one listens to. Campaigning for the next Governor of Maryland is beginning, and issues from the "W" word to sludge to the brick plant are stirring up some deep-set feelings among local residents.

Similarly, Washington College is sitting at a crossroads. It's going to get bigger; this has already been decided by the Board of Visitors and Governors in the form of a resolution to explore expansion to 1,200 students by the year 2,000, including the appropriate increases in faculty, staff, housing, and yes, parking. A capital campaign to be launched around commencement time in 1994 has also been resolved, to support the "strategic long-range planning" goal of the Board and the college.

The Daily Hall/William Smith project is also on the horizons; this will affect more than white elephants.

An issue currently closer at hand, however, is the Middle States Re-Accreditation process. To my knowledge, every public and private school from elementary on up has to go through this evaluation process in order to receive any governmental support. This process has college personnell and outside reviewers hold the inner workings of the school up to the light to reveal the assets and weaknesses of the academic sector of the institution.

In many ways, I feel that this is the area of the college which is ironically ignored. Budgetary concerns have overshadowed many other reforms which may be strongly needed. Ever since I arrived on campus, the word "debt" has been whispered in the caverns of the school, and it is being addressed in the form of cuts, cuts and more cuts.

But what of the students? They're only here for four years, and all too often we're treated that way. But in order to cultivate those loyal alumni which become so important to the omnipresent "college-as-a-business" aspect of the institution, they better damn well treat us right as students. And in order for the degree to continue to be worth the paper it's printed on, the level of academic rigor has got to increase. Period. As a friend of mine said the other day, "Washington College is riding on its old reputation, but they're not upholding the standards that they used to, and they need to do that in order to maintain any respect at all in the academic world."

So student life and academic life are inextricably intertwined. I enjoy myself here, no doubt. I'm still glad I chose WC, but so many of my friends came here for the sole reason that they could get in (as opposed to their top ten choices) that I sometimes wonder what I'm doing here. Will my degree mean anything? To me, yes. To the Development Office, sure. But to the academic and/or employment world outside of Maryland? God, I hope so.

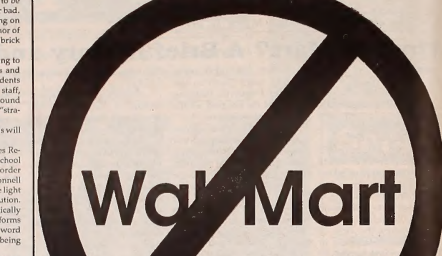
Luckily, these issues are currently being examined by task forces added to the Long-Range Planning Committee. But they need your input.

Major issues on my agenda:

Dorms and dorm life. Face it, some of them are shitty places to live. They're old, and badly in need of renovation (does Queen Anne's House jump to mind?); or they're so loud, RA or not, that their studious residents flee in droves in the middle of the night to the lounges of other dorms.

Alcohol policy. It is too strict! I'd like those who think it is to look at other campuses. Why do they have off-campus frat housing? Because drinking is categorically banned on-campus, even in dorm rooms. RAs don't have the "closed-door policy" if we don't see it, we don't see it" that most RAs do here. Instead, at some schools, they monitor the main entrances and confiscate alcohol, with instant social probation if the policy is violated. So you can't have a keg in your room. BFD, I say. But drinking, underage and legal, is going to occur here, and students and administrators alike need to find responsible ways to deal with that fact. And no, I am not kissing any administrative butt here. I plead the fifth on my own activity which may or may not involve alcohol. But you must realize, it is rather generous, comparatively speaking, for the staff to let you get 'faced in your own rooms (and others' for that matter.

Academic Honesty. Is is easy to cheat here? Let's talk about it.



Academic Rigor. How hard is it to make Dean's List here? Are classes really that hard? Do a lot of deadbeats with money slip into the system? Do comps mean anything? Do grades mean anything? How can some people AP out of their first year (Advanced Placement) and some people AP into a fifth (Academic Probation)?

Is there one of these issues that really gets your goat? Talk to your SGA Senator; talk to Joe Holt; talk to Dean Wubeh. In order for anything to get done, the students' views need to be heard above the CA-CHING! of the money-counting machines.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers
Photography Editor: Margaret 'Wistie' Wurts
News: Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan
Sports: Doug Hoffburger & Matt Murray
Features: Justin 'M' Cann
Arts & Entertainment: George Jamison
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advrtising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gelvert Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Opinion Forum, and Campus Visions do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday at 5:00 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quicknet. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspapers are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8280.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback Correspondence & Dirt

Cruel & Unusual Punishment

To the Editor:

It's Monday, March 8th, ten o'clock at night. Just now I was sitting in my room, when there was a knock at the door. A good friend and neighbor came in to tell me some unbelievable news. He's packed up and ready to go, just like that. Poof. He is leaving — or rather, has been asked to leave, for a year. The reasons behind his departure are personal, but if you know the story, then I am talking to you. I believe my friend has been treated unjustly, and I'm not the only one who feels this way. I will not bring stories, names or rumors into this letter, I am only writing it because I am extremely upset right now. I am voicing my opinion so that maybe my friend's case will get the legitimate treatment it deserves, and so that the next time a situation of this sort arises, and I hope that it does not, it will be handled better.

Because there were no witnesses, there are only the words of the parties involved. It is one side versus the other. The next time there is such a lynching as this, may I suggest that the committees involved are unbiased. This whole situation reeks of corruption. Correct procedures were not followed. My friend's case was decided before he even got to say a word. I will feel sorry when there is a person who has truly been a victim of the crimes my friend supposedly committed. He is "doing time" for a crime that he was never truly proven guilty of. However, I will not comment on my friend's guilt or innocence, only on how badly the situation was handled by the administration. I am ashamed that such injustice could ever happen at a school that I used to be proud of. If you know the true person you have accused, and his side of the story, you will realize what great atrocities have been committed.

He left quietly, and quickly. He did not bring a lawyer into the case. He felt he did not need to. He trusted the deans, and I am sorry for him. I am apologizing to my friend on behalf of this school. And I am advising him not to return to WAC after his year of leave is complete. This school does not deserve him. We will not lose our friend this way. We will not let his academic career be disrupted, or his future be postponed by this injustice. This is not over yet.

Susan Huntley
& 2nd floor of Caroline House

KA News

The Brothers of Kappa Alpha Order (Beta Omega) have inducted three more pledges for the Spring semester. Brian Hill, Vincent Ramuno, and Christian Thornton became pledges into the Secret Society of Kappa Alpha Order on the February 26.

KA Brother David Littleton, recently paid a community service visit to the Upper Eastern Shore Mental Health Hospital to celebrate those patient's birthdays that fell in February.

The Brothers of KA would like to extend hearty congratulations to KA alumnus Joseph Van Name (WC class of '90), who became Commander of the Wood Province, of which Beta Omega is a member.

This newspaper neither supports nor opposes the idea of a Wal-Mart coming to Kent County. We have tried to provide a variety of opinions on this issue.

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

The controversy which began with rumors of Wal-Mart's interest in establishing a store in Chestertown has now reached its acme. Some contend that Wal-Mart would be a boon to the community because it would provide jobs, while others vehemently argue that Wal-Mart endangers the town's small retailers and would make Chestertown less (and I hate to use the word) quaint.

I have been interested in this controversy since it began, primarily since it amuses me. It amuses me to see people who have been very satisfied with the American way of life suddenly do an about face and say "Capitalism is great, just so long as I don't have to live with the consequences." Personally, I couldn't care less if Sam Walton and the entire Wal-Mart chain fell off the face of the Earth tomorrow. He and his chain of stores epitomize the capitalist system which I have dedicated my life to change.

If the capitalist system and the mentality of the American consumer changes the entire country into mini-malls and outlet stores, don't come a-whinin' about it to me, 'cause I'll just laugh in your face and say "I told you so, you silly dork. But did you listen to me? Noooo! You were just too preoccupied with your acquisition of trinkets and baubles to notice that the entire country had become a blandly homogeneous commercial district without the likes of you ever getting off their corpulent rumps to offer so much as a titter of dissent!"

Alright, maybe I'm being a little smug here, but I think you catch my drift. In all seriousness, I find the position of those who oppose Wal-Mart to be fraught with contradictions. Sure, I'm not fond of Wal-Mart or any other major capitalist enterprise, but then again I'd like to see the end of the entire laissez-faire capitalist system. For the affluent to argue against free enterprise is self-contradictory. So I decided to weigh the relative merits of a Chestertown Wal-Mart against its shortcomings.

And what I found was remarkably one-sided; there is incontrovertible evidence to support the proposition that a net increase in retail merchandising enhances the commercial viability of small American towns. One particularly interesting book which I read in preparation for this column was The Impact of Population Change on Business Activity in Rural America by Kenneth M. Johnson.

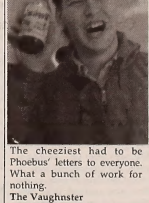
While the major point of this work is entirely theoretical in nature and therefore beyond the scope of this column, the author suggests that there is a strong relationship between population changes and changes in the scale of retail operations. While the primary dynamic is that areas which decline in population also scale back their retail activity, there is also evidence to suggest that an increase in retail activity enhances the area's attractiveness to prospective residents: "population gains are common

See "Koon," page 10

CAMPUS VOICES

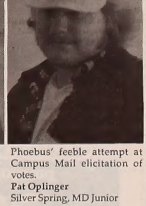
By Dude

What do you think the low point of the 1993 SGA elections were?



The fake throw-up on Eve Zartman's head in Kent House, and the beard.
Becky Bryant
Richmond, VA Junior

Too many signs on the floor. They get too slimy looking.
Lizzie O'Hara
Washington, DC Senior



Moustaches.
Andrew Stone
Maryland resident Junior

The cheeziest had to be Phoebus' letters to everyone. What a bunch of work for nothing.
The Vaughnster
Baltimore, MD Senior

Just seeing Eve Zartman's face all over campus was annoying to say the least.
Charlie "Love" Linehan
Baltimore, MD Senior

Phoebus' feeble attempt at Campus Mail elicitation of votes.
Pat Oplinger
Silver Spring, MD Junior

Open Forum: On Sam Walton's Behalf

Geoff Donahue is a senior Business major currently working on a thesis. He is also a volunteer firefighter

Unless you have been in a state of white-eyed rollback, you have probably heard at least some expression of the controversy, stemming from the proposal to build a Wal-Mart mega-store in Chestertown.

Many of the local residents claim that the arrival of this mega-store will force many of the small downtown stores out-of-business. Well, the fact of the matter is: Wal-Mart is a discount retail store, whose claim to fame is low prices which are achieved through the bulk purchase of merchandise. The downtown stores, The Butterfly Bush, Rhode's Antiques, Forney's Jewelers, Corsica Bookstore, The General Store, Dockside Emporium, Creative

Geoff Donahue

Cookery, Paul's Shoe Store, etc. are all specialty stores. Though these stores may have a few items in common, the bulk of their merchandise is not discount store material. (When is the last time you paid $250 for a decoy duck, hand-carved in Rock Hall at a Wal-Mart or other discount store?)

The residents of Kent and northern Queen Anne's Counties have a very limited number of discount stores in which to shop. To further reduce the number of places to shop, Ames is soon closing its doors. In addition, Roses has filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy, and could subsequently be closed as well. I have also heard rumors that Peebles might be closing its Chestertown store as well. Essentially, this will force the local consumers to go elsewhere to do their shopping, namely Dover, Elkton, and/or Easton. What I am trying to illustrate here is that the people of this community need a place to buy everyday items. The downtown stores fail to offer this, as they cater primarily to tourists and transients.

The only downtown store which will feel any significant impact of a Wal-Mart is the Dollar General store. To be quite honest, The Dollar General store is drastically understocked, though it is conveniently located for lesser mobile individuals from town. Dollar General will, in all probability, be the only downtown casualty, if the Wal-Mart plans go through.

Despite the fact that many people argue that Wal-Mart employs predominantly part-time personnel for near minimum wage, it does at least offer employment. What kind of employment does a small Mom and Pop specialty store offer? (maybe one or two? and they aren't the highest paying jobs, either.) The local area is abundant in unskilled labor, so why not put it to use?

Another fact that bothers me is that America is supposed to be the land of opportunity and freedom, and so many people are trying to block this mega-store. What happened to a competitive marketplace?

See "Donahue," page 4

"Donahue," from page 3

What is occurring here is a ploy started by the Democrats to enhance governmental control ... which is the last thing in the world we need. (If you don't see my point, here it is in laymen's terms: The anti-progress bunch opposing Wal-Mart tried to railroad legislation through the local level which would place a size limit on commercial buildings of 50,000 square feet, which is about 48,000 square feet less than the proposed Wal-Mart. This measure is a restrictive measure attempting to limit competition.)

Another positive aspect of a Wal-Mart is that it will attract people to Kent County, and Chestertown in particular. This will inevitably bring in money from outside the community, which will help boost the local economy.

As a direct result of this, other businesses may seek to locate here to reap some of the benefits. According to other rumors, a Chi-Chi's is proposed for the Wal-Mart complex (for those of you experiencing white-eyed rollback, as previously mentioned, Chi-Chi's is a restaurant chain serving Mexican cuisine) This too, will create employment opportunities. Other rumors include a McDonald's. Anyway, this illustrates my point, that Wal-Mart will attract other businesses, and create jobs!

Another benefit of Wal-Mart is that it will create job opportunities for local contractors, such as David A. Bramble's, etc. This will provide steadier jobs for construction employees, who are often plagued by slumps. This will also help bring money into the local economy, though only temporarily.

I am not saying a Wal-Mart is exactly what Kent County needs, but it does offer many opportunities which shouldn't be overlooked. I do realize Chestertown has a great deal of vacant stores, but these stores are not suitable for Wal-Mart's plans — though it would be nice to have all of these properties occupied before building additional ones. But, let's face it, if the shoe isn't comfortable, don't wear it, provided you can afford the alternatives, which Wal-Mart can.

The community has a title for many years, and passed up many opportunities along the way. It is time for Chestertown to step forward. I am sure controversy plagued the construction of Kent Plaza, as well as Washington Square, but I'd be willing to bet that those who opposed these strip-malls are the same people shopping in them today, and I can almost assure you, that the people who are now in an uproar over Wal-Mart will patronize it as well. So let's hear it for Sam ((Walton)...R.I.P.) and roll out the red carpet!!!

BAY TO BAY TRADERS

NOT JUST ANOTHER PRETTY FACE

CANNON STREET COURTYARD
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
LOCATED BEHIND BONSTO'S CAFE

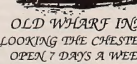
20 % SALE
THROUGH MARCH
ON
PATAGONIA
RAY BAN JANSPORT
ATLANTIS MAD BOMBER
BULA GREAT LAKES

FUNCTIONAL GEAR FOR ACTIVE SPORTS IN ALL CONDITIONS

Tradition, Discipline, and the Spirit of Washington College

Charlie Linehan
Co-News Editor

Tradition. Don't look now, but I think we we have a new buzzword here at Washington College. The Birthday Ball was cancelled this year. That's right, cancelled. Down-scaled doesn't cut it. To me, the best thing about the Birthday Ball was that it was a tradition, something you could count on. And no matter what the administration says, there's no tradition in deejays. Next came the Luau. In the old days, you could count on reggae, raft races, and beer. I'm not knocking the SGA Parents Day planned for the Spring, but I always thought the parents had a pretty good time at the pavilion. I'm also not implying that these cancellations could have been avoided—these are hard financial times and we have to make cuts somewhere. Still, it's sad to see these major events go, at a school which has very little tradition to begin with. But money talks, and the bottom line is, the only lasting tradition is a cheap tradition.



> "The only lasting tradition is a cheap tradition."

So where does that leave us? Pretty well off, actually. Last week, I was sitting in the library when the Chestertown fire siren went off. As it happens, the Sig pledges were in study hall and as soon as the first note reached their ears, they were up and running, stumbling over one another in their rush to reach the statue of George Washington. I walked out of the library with about ten other people just in time to see the entire pledge class ask, in single, anxious voice, "George, are you all right?!" Whether you support Greeks or not, you've got to love that tradition. It's not degrading. It's not overly-exerting. It's original, and it's hilarious. And it's something you can always count on. Twenty years from now, when I come back to visit Washington College, I fully expect, and look forward to, a mad rush for the statue at the first note from the fire siren.

Another inexpensive, lasting tradition, which I feel immensely contributes to the spirit and uniqueness of the college, is May Day. When I was a freshman and the upperclassmen started asking us if we planned to get naked on May Day, I thought, "This is a joke—like selling pool passes to the freshmen in high school." I couldn't believe it when, on the first of May, Greg Ruppert and Matt Petz, devoid of clothing, played through my Forms of Lit. class in the midst of their traditional game of naked campus golf. I was even more amazed that night, when a good portion of the student body convened naked on the Cater Walk for May Day festivities.

And then there's the Blackhearts Ball. While the Birthday Ball came to a close this year,

See "Tradition," page 8

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Andy's

337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm

FRI 12 SWAMP WEASELS Rock and Roll!!

SAT 13 BITTER CREEK Bluegrass with class

778-6779

Wal-Mart: Take a Very Close Look At Possible Consequences

Sherry Menton
Staff Writer

I don't have a lot of statistics or economic theories to draw on, and I admit that I don't know the blow-by-blow of the Wal-Mart battle. I have some small amount of common sense, however, and that's something this debate needs.

It is true that the less affluent residents of Chestertown would benefit from having an affordable "we stock everything under the sun" store within walking distance. For that matter, it would benefit me and every other college student who has less pocket change than an average nine-year-old.

We have to look at the bigger issues, though, and realize that if a Wal-Mart comes to Chestertown the economic losses will far outweigh the advantages. With a new strip mall north of the downtown area, and an abandoned shopping center right at the end of Spring Street, Chestertown's already in danger of losing the picturesque, historic flavor that attracts tourists. The strength of our Historic District Commission and the care that Chestertown residents have shown in their community's well-being are responsible for what prosperity Chestertown currently enjoys. All in all, Chestertown is a nice place to live. A confirmed city-slicker, I sometimes startle myself by thinking that I'd like to live here someday.

Wal-Mart would change the quality of life in this town — for good or bad, possibly both. Five years from now this town will be radically different if the Wal-Mart project goes through. For that matter, it would be radically different one year from now — if you think WC students and staff complain about construction just wait until they start building a 98,000 square foot mega-store!

In a roundabout way, my point is this: the Wal-Mart controversy should not be a topic for politicizing. If you don't have an opinion now, get the facts, think about them, and form an opinion. Write to the Kent County News, write to the Zoning Board and the Mayor's office. Don't let the future of Chestertown be decided without your input.

This Week: How to Eat Safely and Wisely

Christabel Garcia-Zamor

Did you know that in grain alone, there is enough food to feed approximately 3,500 calories to every man, woman, and child alive? It takes 16 pounds of grain to produce one pound of meat. This process is wasteful, because the amount of original protein within that grain is cut dramatically. Human digestive systems evolved based upon plant-centered diets for thousands of years, and it is only within the last several centuries man has begun to equate meat eating with a position of status.

In addition, eating meat wastes a lot of energy. A one-pound steak that provides approximately 500 calories requires 20 thousand calories of fossil fuel energy to produce. The water that the steak uses in its production is the same amount that one household uses in an entire month. Feedlots are also a significant source of water pollution. The conditions which chickens, cows, and hogs are forced to live in are also unnatural, cruel, and gross.

Along with the impact of their production on the environment, fat, salt, refined sugar, and processed foods have been associated with cancer, obesity, diabetes, atherosclerosis, angina, heart attacks, strokes, kidney disease, gallstones, arthritis, high cholesterol and high protein levels, chronic constipation, and diverticulosis.

Some Tips on Healthy Eating

1. Reduce intake of fat and cholesterol. Switch from meat and eggs to cereals and salads. If you eat meat, trim the fat, remove the skin, and do not fry. Cook with water rather than oils, and reduce your intake of milk products.
2. Reduce intake of salt. Avoid salting foods during cooking and at the table. Also avoid anchovies, bacon, bologna, corned beef, hot dogs, salted snacks, and sausage.
3. Eat less processed sugar. Deserts and sodas contain large amounts of sugar.
4. Avoid additives and processed foods. Approximately 3 thousand chemicals are added to foods during processing. Packaging and spraying are thought to be responsible for 10 thousand more chemicals entering our foods. These include familiar compounds such as saccharin, cyclamates, butylated hydroxytoluene (BHT), vinyl chloride, and acrylonitrile.
5. Read labels carefully. Reviewing ingredients is one of the best ways to know what you are buying and eating. Ingredients are listed on the label in descending order according to which there is the most of. Any artificial flavors or colors must be listed. FD&C Yellow #5 must be mentioned specifically, because of a high incidence of allergic reaction. Also, just because a product says "natural" does not mean that it is unprocessed or without chemical additives. It just means that there is at least one natural ingredient, like water. The FDA is still arguing over what they will soon establish as nation wide guideline for "natural." Until it becomes law, any company is allowed to write "natural" on its product.
6. Avoid the worst chemicals. Ask two questions about the fruit you buy: "is it fresh?" and "has it been grown organically?"

Relative Safety of Common Food Additives

Adapted from Well Body, Well Earth, Sierra Club Books, 1983. Avoid the following ...

1. Orange B (hot dogs) — causes cancer in animals.
2. Red #40 (soda and candy) — causes cancer in mice.
3. Red #3 (dyed cherries and candy) — may cause cancer.
4. BHT (in some cereals and potato chips) — may cause cancer.
5. Saccharin (soda, diet foods, toothpaste) — causes cancer in animals.
6. Sodium Nitrate (bacon, ham, luncheon meats) — can be chemically transformed into cancer causing nitrosamines, especially in fried bacon.

See "Start Now," page 10

Tuition Increase: Students & Faculty Persevere Together

Dina Sansing
Staff Writer

Members of the college community have been responding to the twin announcements of a tuition increase but no increases in salaries for faculty and staff for the coming academic year.

Gene Hessey, Senior Vice President for Finance and Management, comments that the administration would have liked to include a raise in salaries in the budget; however, several economic issues did not make that possible. Budget cutbacks in the state of Maryland have resulted in revenue losses for the College. Investment yields from the endowment have been lower than in previous years. Hessey states that revenue losses could be as much as $500,000 this year.

The administration does feel that there should be limits made on how high tuition can be raised, and they understand the concerns expressed by both parents and students about additional increases. Tuition increases for the upcoming year will offset the current costs of maintaining the College that the decreasing profits from the endowment cannot cover. Hessey reports that the budget will be reviewed in September and if the situation has improved, modest increases in salaries will be made available at that time.

Dr. Nathan Smith, Professor of History, believes that balancing the budget by freezing salaries is unfortunate. He adds that a salary freeze is made harder by a rising rate of inflation. He admits that Washington College is an expensive operation (citing new buildings and increased commitment to financial aid) and feels that the only way to meet our expenses is through increasing the College's endowment.

Hessey sums up this current dilemma by saying, "Washington College has not been able to exempt itself from the surrounding economic conditions. However, it has been able to avoid layoffs and furlough where other institutions have not."

Brief Beef

Security Phone System Approved

The SGA unanimously approved Tuesday a measure to improve security on campus. Last semester's suggestion by the SGA to install callboxes outside of dormitories was tabled until recently because of budgetary concerns. Security Director Jerry Roderick hopes that the phones, which will allow students to call either Security or on-campus extensions, will prevent students from propping locked doors at night. Propped doors provide easy access for intruders to enter residence halls and have been a major security concern in the past. The callboxes will allow guests to call the extension of the resident they wish to visit so they can be let into the building.

Rotary Clubs offer Aid to Study Abroad

Local Rotary Clubs are sponsoring air fare plus a $20,000 scholarship for the 1994-95 year to a student wishing to study abroad whose home is on the Maryland Eastern Shore or Delaware. Details are available in the Dean's Office.

Scholarships Announced for Business and Nursing Students

The Board of Directors of the Mid-Atlantic Treasury Management Association, Inc. has approved the awarding of educational grants to qualified students for the year 1993. The student must demonstrate need, have a minimum GPA of 3.0, be a junior or senior, and major in business. Each student must submit a 1,000 word essay on "Should the Federal Reserve have an independent role in determining monetary policy?" .The essays must be turned into the Financial Aid Office by April 1, 1993.

The State of Maryland is offering Nursing Scholarships for 1993-94. The scholarships are offered to full- or part-time nursing students who demonstrate need, have a CGPA of 3.0, are a resident of MD, attend a MD college and are enrolled in a nursing degree program for at least six (6) credit hours per semester. Recipients may apply for a Living Expenses Grant by filing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) and the Maryland Financial Aid Form (FAF) by March 15. Please contact the Financial Aid Office for Additional information.

Volunteers Needed for Camp Fairlee Manor

Easter Seal Camp Fairlee Manor is looking for volunteers to help out with mentally/physically handicapped campers of all ages from April 2-4. It's a lot of fun and great experience! For more information or to sign up, call Jeanine Bilderback at ext. 8794 or Camp Fairlee at 778-0566.

Correction

In last week's article "Faculty, Board Meetings Discuss Budgetary Problems" (March 5 issue), the Board member who made a grant to Miller Library was misspelled; his name is Duemling, and he donated $10,000, not $100,000.

Emily's

HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS

Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686

FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed

"New Services"

Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist
Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow

Permanent Hair Removal
Electrologist –
Louise Leaverton, L.E.

Week at a Glance

March 12 – March 25

Film Series: Rhapsody In August

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Sunday (March 21), and Monday (March 22)

Actors Community Theatre presents Graceland. A short play by Ellen Byron as a companion piece to an evening of Elvis Presley music as interpreted by various musicians. Norman James Theatre, 8:00 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

18 Thursday

Actors Community Theatre: Graceland. Norman James Theatre, 8:00 p.m.

19 Friday

Actors Community Theatre: Graceland. Norman James Theatre, 8:00 p.m.

20 Saturday

The O'Neill Literary House Video/Film Series presents the film Sylvia Plath. O'Neill Literary House Reading Room, 7:30 p.m.

23 Tuesday

The Goldstein Program in Public Affairs presents Can the Conservative Movement Survive the Media? A talk by Mr. Joseph Goulden, Accuracy in the Media. Hynson Lounge, 7:30 p.m.

The McLain Program in Environmental Studies presents Oil Pollution in the Marine Environment: Inputs, Fates, and Effects. A talk by John W. Farrington, PhD, Associate Director for Education and Dean of Graduate Studies, Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute. Dunning Lecture HAll, 7:30 p.m.

24 Wednesday

The Center for Career Development presents Graduate School Workshop for Juniors. Career Library, Spanish House, 4:30 p.m.

The Gender Relations Awareness Alliance presents Abuse: Definition and Effects. A talk by Tami Larson. Sophie Kerr Room, Miller Library, 7:00 p.m.

The Conrad M. Wingate Memorial History Lecture presents Emancipation in Comparative Perspective: The Aftermath of American Slavery and Russian Serfdom. A talk by Professor Peter Kolchin, University of Delaware. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 8:00 p.m.

25 Thursday

The Washington College Drama Department presents Orgasmo Adulto Escapes From the Zoo. A contemporary Italian work by Dario Fo. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m. Parental Discretion is advised.

Have a Great Spring Break

(But don't forget to come back for classes)

Get your seats early for

ORGASMO ADULTO

ESCAPES FROM THE ZOO

Call ext. PUFA to reserve seats • Opens Thurs. March 25

A&E

Orgasma Lyncha

Orgasmo Adulto Escapes from the Zoo is a political play about women and their condition. Written in 1970 by Franca Rame and Dario Fo, the work is a series of monologues all featuring women, their sexuality, their oppression, and their struggle for escape.

Director Heather Lynch is a senior Drama and English major who doesn't want anyone to be afraid of their own sexuality. She sees a lot of Brechtian influences on the authors. "They — and I — are trying to incite people to action, to provoke political, social and emotional action. This play is really about taking emotional action."

The actresses include Rachael Fink, Emily Grush, Elisa Hale, Alexa O'Brien, Cleo Patterson, Jennifer Sendax, and Tarin Towers. Josh Buchman is stage managing the production, which includes a set design by Lynch and Deidre Reigle '92 and a lighting design by Steve Brown. Brad Foster and Steve Fuchs are co-Technical Directors.

Student Profile: Brenda Stanley

Originally from Federalsburg, MD, Brenda Stanley one day wants to be the first black, female President of the United States, but she doubts if that is possible because of her flamboyant activity at WAC. A Junior pursuing a major in Psychology and a minor in Business, Brenda is a very active member of the student body. Besides being the Resident Assistant for the Queen Anne dorm, second floor, she was just elected the President of the Zeta Tau Alpha fraternity, she is a co-captain for the Washington College Cheerleading Squad, and is a manager for the WC Baseball Team.

She is also a student member of the WC Grievance Committee, an organization that discusses and makes decisions concerning sexual harassment, discrimination, etc., and a member of the Washington College Board of Visitors and Governors Honors and Awards Committee, where she helps decide who the speakers and guests for certain activities around campus should be, such as for commencement and convocation.

Last summer, Brenda attended the University of South Carolina in order to take part in an internship dealing with Experimental Psychology. She is now applying to SUNY Stony Brook for next summer doing the same type of thing.

After graduation, Brenda is planning on attending graduate school at Texas A&M in order to pursue a career in Industrial and Organizational Psychology. And after doing that for a while, Brenda wants to go back to school to study Clinical Psychology and eventually open up her own practice.

Her final response was: "Long Live Sexual Chocolate".

To Those About to Leave Chestertown: We Salute You

George Jamison
A&E Editor

It is now four o'clock in the morning. Everyone is asleep, my CD player is shuffling between my favorite discs, and it is almost spring break (THANK GOD). There seems to have been an epidemic of sickness going around campus once again and everyone is going through the mid-term blahs. And as I sit at my computer, I am thinking that I am going to be one of the few people that are not going to leave quaint (written sarcastically) Chestertown.

So, in order to offer myself some solace, I have decided that there should be an information center for individuals that don't have any idea of what to do for the next ten days. And since I will probably use this list more than anyone, I will be my own information service. Oh, where shall I begin, there are soooo many options.

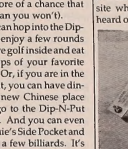
First, for those of you with cars and that want to spend money you can actually do a variety of different things. You can go to the Queen Anne's Bowling Center. They offer regular twelve pin bowling and duck pin bowling. Duck pins are great fun if you have never played. You also can drive out to Rock Hall. There are many things that can be done and if you actually do drive out there, I would advise you to go to the wildlife refuge (the name escapes me at this early hour) and take advantage of the view. It is fabulous, especially around sunset. I know, I have pictures.

But the final two options for individuals that do have automobiles and money seem the most important. You can either cruise Kent Plaza pretending that you are a townie and try to pick up some under-age tramps or you can actually get out of Chestertown. Run. Leave. Get away. You have been here for entirely too long. Visit someone that you haven't seen in a while. In fact, just across the Bay Bridge lies a whole new world that is just waiting to be explored. Baltimore, Annapolis, Washington DC, etc., are waiting for you to bring to them your own specialness. Go. Have a great time. And don't forget to take the less fortunate, car-less people with you. They would just love to be out of the town that always sleeps. Hell, even if you don't like them, you can take them to a large city, lose them, and not have to deal with them for a while. Either way, it seems like a plus just to take an excursion.

For those of you who are stuck in Chestertown with money but without a vehicle, there are also options. There are a few options up at the Washington Square Shopping Plaza (that's where Super Fresh is, in case you did not know). You could actually spend a large part of one afternoon up there.

First, you could visit the bookstore up there and search to see if there are any of your favorite books that you want to re-read in your spare time, or you can search for a soon-to-be-favorite-book that is not available through the ever-so-large assortment of books in WAC's own bookstore. Hell, you might even find some of the books up there are actually cheaper than what you will have to pay for next semester (there is more of a chance that you will than you won't). Then, you can hop into the Dip-N-Put and enjoy a few rounds of miniature golf inside and eat a few scoops of your favorite ice cream. Or, if you are in the mood to eat, you can have dinner at the new Chinese place and then go to the Dip-N-Put for dessert. And you can even go into Louie's Side Pocket and hit around a few billiards. It's all up to you, the options are endless.

And finally, if you want the evening to continue on in this manner, you can go into the new video rental store. There is a large selection and this can supply you with at least an hour of entertainment just wandering up and down the aisles trying to figure out what movies you have seen and, what one's you haven't. Oh yeah, they also have a fabulous children's section filled with all of your childhood favorites, and if you are sly enough, you might be able to get a chance to jump into their big pit filled with balls. Watch out for children though, they can be hurt very easily.



And if you are having trouble finding a movie that you want to watch, just ask the workers for help. They are very friendly and if you are lucky you will get to talk with the owner while he explains why

See "C-town," page 8

Smoke Up With Drivin' 'N' Cryin'

Justin R 'M' Cann
Features Editor

Two summers ago, I was in a bus going south on Route 13 in Delaware to the archeology site where I was working. I heard on the radio that Lynyrd

Skynyrd was playing at the Philly Spectrum. Oh, well. But wait, drivin' 'n' cryin' was opening for them. I jumped up. "Turn this bus around!"

That's right, I'd have bought a ticket and left before Skynyrd ever got on the stage. Sure., I know "Mess with the best, die like the rest!" Right. But really, Lynyrd Skynyrd should have been opening for drivin' 'n' cryin'.

What?! You've never heard of them! Well, they just put out an album in late February. It's called Smoke. And that's exactly what it does.

"What do they sound like?" you ask. Well, their sound is a completely unique fusion of southern rock with about fifteen million other things, and a social conscience to boot. They're from the Atlanta scene, but are a quite different from bands like R.E.M. and the B-52's. They sound more like they just walked in from your garage to get a beer from the 'fridge. Plus, they have Kevn Kinney's amazing lyrics. Some of the stuff from Mystery Road still makes me cry. Kevn's lyrics are far better than your average southern rock lyrics ("my hound dog died, my woman left me, and my truck blew up … then I got drunker 'n hell.")

This would be a short review if I had to talk about the album, because all I can really say is buy it without hesitation. So instead, I'll let the band members tell you what they think about Smoke. (I got this from their fan newsletter. Yes I wrote away for it, and it was worth the Elvis stamp too)

Tim Nielsen: Reckless hungry sex.

Jeff Sullivan: Iron, blood, smoke.

Kevn Kinney: Caffeinated daisy blast. (He has daisies in his mouth in the photo inside the little booklet.)

Buren Fowler: Live in your living room.

KEVN KINNEY

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
MALCOLM X
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0186

"C-town," from page 7

he gets what movies he does and why he doesn't get the movies that he doesn't. It is really interesting and is sure to knock of another half-hour of your busy schedule.

You also have the option of going out to eat at any time, if it so strikes your fancy. But, do be prepared to spend a little bit of money. For a small town, they don't really offer anything with small-town prices. If you are in the mood for fast food, you can go to the ever popular Burger King™, Roy Rogers™, or Pizza Hut™. But if you are interested in sampling some of the extraordinary cooking that can be offered in a small town, I advise you to check out Wilma's Kitchen. Located on Cross Street, this little shop will tantalize your tongue and keep you coming back. Honest. This place is incredible. The owners are a laugh a minute and the workers serve your food with a flair that can be expected in a small town. Try it, you will love it. Oh, yeah, there is also the Feast of Reason, The Old Wharf Inn, The Imperial Hotel, and Downey's. I have never eaten at Downey's and if anyone has please tell us what it is like. We all need something new to keep our sanity.

And for those of you that are over twenty-one and enjoy sitting back and having a relaxing drink, walk down to Andy's. It is the coolest place to hang out. If you are lucky enough, you might even be able to catch one of the many excellent bands that performs there. There is also Newt's for those late night party animals that like to drink all the beer they can at $.15 a beer, and the Blue Bird Tavern.

And for those of you that are so unfortunate and do not have any transportation nor any money, just wait for these incredible options. There is a playground that is just seconds from the end of campus and there are always children there. If you like children, this is the place to be. You can just sit back and watch them or you can even join them in a great game of tag or hide-n-seek. Even if you don't like children, they are not there all the time and you can still spend some quality time reminiscing while swinging on a swing. Or you can go for a walk. Chestertown does have some very interesting places to see. The cemetery for one. The waterfront for another. And if you feel brave enough, you could even borrow a friend's bike and peddle out to Pomona and watch the sunset.

And finally for those of you who do not even want to leave the campus for the next ten days, you can start preparing for May Day. It is coming up very quickly and the sooner you get used to the fact there will be naked people, the sooner you will be able to join in on the festivities. Take off your clothing and run around campus. Even is someone sees you, what does it matter? They probably know you and they probably think that you being naked is the least of your worries.

So, whatever you are doing this Spring Break remember that there will be people that do not have the opportunity to leave Chestertown like you do. Pity them. Send them a postcard. Call. Just do something to let them know that there is more to life than running around campus naked all break. Oh, if you do decide to start practicing for May Day, watch out for the colder weather. It does make certain parts of the human anatomy shrink. And many of the towns people might get the wrong idea about our college. Oh, well. At least you will be entertained.

"Tradition," from page 4

Blackhearts, a highly unique event founded on the creative energy of the Drama department and the Lit House crowd, seems to have the makings of a long-lasting tradition. So intent are its organizers on making sure that the event survives, they quickly pulled together to throw a successful bash in the Lit-house this year after they found that they could no longer use Phoebe's, the traditional Blackhearts arena, in the basement of Tawes.

So, tradition is alive and well at Washington College. But for how long? It's scary to think that we must depend on the few events described above for a lasting sense of tradition. What if Blackhearts falls victim to the same budgetary cuts as the Birthday Ball. What if the Chestertown police, wary of the possible traffic complications caused by curious Chestertown drivers on May Day, decide to bring an end to the festivities once and for all. What if the Chestertown Fire Department enters the world of computers, and discovers it no longer has any use for its siren. Suddenly, we would be a school absolutely devoid of tradition.

The point is, we must encourage the creation of new traditions on the WC campus. Sounds like an easy task, doesn't it? In fact, in the authoritarian atmosphere which has slowly been pulled over this campus like a blanket during the past two years, it is a difficult task indeed. Last Night (Thursday) I sat in on a Student Conduct Council hearing as a character witness for five freshman males accused of vandalism. Their actual legal infraction: Accidently breaking a window on the bottom floor of a dormitory. As it happens, the dormitory serves as housing for one of the three fraternities at Washington College. We'll call it Frat A. It also happens that at least three of the accused are currently pledging one of the other fraternities on campus. We'll call it Frat B.

Briefly, the story behind the "vandalism" is that the accused were told by some of the brothers of Frat B about a sign which is currently in the possession of Frat A. The sign had been "stolen" originally by Frat B from a pub in the area which had been closed for a number of years. Security and the police entered the picture and demanded that the sign be returned, which it was. Subsequently, the sign was discarded by the owners of the defunct pub and taken by the members of Frat A. The members of Frat B, hearing of the sign's second relocation, told the pledges that they should try to steal the sign back at some point during the pledge period. The idea was to set up a sort of tradition between the two organizations in which each semester, the group without the sign would try to steal it back from the group with the sign. Rather reminiscent of the Army/Navy mascot stealing tradition, wouldn't you say? Anyway, all of this is unimportant except that it shows that the five young men were not acting maliciously on the night in question. Drunkenly and stupidly, maybe, but not maliciously.

I'm not excusing the actions of these five individuals. They were not told to damage any property in their efforts to get the sign, and a little more planning would have allowed them to avoid any such damage. When they were caught after breaking the window, they should have been made to pay for the damage. They should have been made to write a formal apology for their actions. Instead, Security was brought in and formal statements were taken from each of the culprits. When a formal apology was sent from Frat B to Frat A the next day, the letter was photocopied and sent to security and the administration, and the process was started to bring the five before the SCC, a process which is apparently so monumentous that once its wheels have been set in motion it cannot possibly be stopped until it has run its full course. Please.

When I was a freshman, I got in trouble during orientation week for breaking some ceiling tiles in Kent House. I had to make a statement to Security. I was called into Student Affairs to discuss the situation with the Deans. In the end, all that was all it took. You talked to the Deans and then you straightened out your act. If you didn't, you knew that sooner or later you'd be asked to leave. I didn't have to go before any formal disciplinary council. Amazingly enough, I turned out alright. I'm even an RA. And as an RA, I can tell you that when I have a problem on my hall, I don't go running to Security or the administration to deal with it for me. I assess the situation myself, and if I think it can be handled without intervention from either of those two groups, I handle it. That is my job. The administration's job is to run the school. Security's primary job is to ensure the safety of each and every student on this campus. It's easy to understand why it takes so long to respond to a call for help from a girl being harassed in Caroline (see Elm, 2/26) when they're constantly being called on to deal with petty things like this.

Washington College is changing. Much of that change is for the better. This year, I am told, we have the brightest freshman class in recent WC history. Physically, the school has changed dramatically, and for the better, during my four years here. Hopefully, the look of the campus and the quality of the school's faculty will continue to attract exemplary students. Unfortunately, improving an institution in one area often means cutting it back in another. This year, we witnessed the end of two age-old Washington College traditions due to budgetary cuts. But, tradition is not dead at the WAC. And it will continue to thrive as long as there is any spirit left in the students of this school. I realize that WC is also trying to improve itself from a disciplinary standpoint. But let's not overdo it. Overdoing it is as bad as underdoing it and in the balance between the two lies the spirit of this school.

$5 off any service over $20 with ad
(one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2666 Chestertown, MD 21620

FAMILY BOOKS NOOK
All in stock Books DISCOUNTED!
Hard Cover Books - 15% Off
New Paperback Books - 10% Off
Pre-Read Paperback Books - 50% Off
Discover our Pre-Read Paperbacks. Credit for Your Gently Read Paperbacks - BROWSERS WELCOME!
Washington Square Shopping Center - near Super Fresh

Pip's Discount Liquors
Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER - CHILLED WINES
QUANTITY DISCOUNTS BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES
TELEPHONE 778-6128
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA, CHESTERTOWN

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
Fine Framing • Select Gifts • Artists' Materials
P.O. Box 402 • High Street, Chestertown, Maryland 21620

'Wal-Mart," from page 1

clothes, fabrics, shoes, housewares, appliances, hardware, electronics, cameras, home furnishings, automotive accessories, garden equipment and supplies, toys, pharmaceuticals and jewelry" at "Everyday low prices."

From KCN editor and publisher H. Hurtt Deringer's editorial in that issue: "Samuel Moore Walton, founder of Wal-Mart Stores Inc., ... opened his first Wal-Mart Discount City in 1962 in Rogers, Arkansas. ... Wal-Mart is second in the country to Exxon and ahead of Philip Morris, GE and AT&T."

According to a letter in the same issue of the KCN by Larry Mohler, "A Wal-Mart on the average carries about 30 percent of what a true general merchandise store carries but it is the 30 percent with the highest rate of sale."

What is the Coalition for the Preservation of Chestertown? The Coalition is a group of concerned citizens from Kent County who say they are not against Wal-Mart, but against overdevelopment, and are represented by Hoon & Carroll, Attorneys-at-Law. A petition they currently have circulating in the community had approximately 1,200 signatures at press time.

Who's against Wal-Mart? Who's for it? Although the situation is not completely cutand-dried as to "sides" for or against the megastore, the lines tend to be drawn (at least in Chestertown) by socioeconomic classes: older, wealthier persons and local merchants tend to oppose the plan, while lower-middle class workers tend to favor the coming of Wal-Mart. In the rest of Kent County, opinion tends to vary depending on each town's proximity to Chestertown versus other areas which currently have department stores.

However, an interesting note is the survey sent out by the Chestertown Chamber of Commerce; only about a quarter of businesses responded against Wal-Mart.

Hopefully this will not turn into the race issue as witnessed in Talbot County in recent years concerning the building of their Wal-Mart outside of Easton; I have only anecdotal evidence of this, having not followed it as closely, but my relatives in the area said it was pretty ugly.

Why Chestertown is worried: As Deringer said, "Hello Glen Burnie!" The tendency of Wal-Mart to offer bargain-basement prices, lowering them further to compete with other retailers, is seen as a threat to both the existing shopping plazas and to the downtown merchants. For example, the two small pharmacies (Stam's and the Chestertown Pharmacy) will have to compete not only with each other, Rite-Aid, and Thrift Drug, but with Wal-Mart's pharmaceuticals section.

In addition, people who may have come to the downtown section for Dollar General and McCrory's (who cannot afford to rebuild), will no longer have to shop downtown; Wal-Mart theoretically still will be within walking distance of Chestertown. The smaller specialty shops will be further threatened by the diversion of 'shopper-flow' from downtown to north of town.

Other vacancies still exist which need to be filled, both in the two plazas and downtown; Ames will close this month, Roses has filed Chapter 11 Bankruptcy, and the Sears catalog store on Route 213 also will close in the coming months. The current jeopardy of discount department stores (including Chesapeake Pottery in Grasonville, also closing) is seen as evidence that the economy cannot support competition against the all-powerful Wal-Mart.

Studies of other communities have shown that Wal-Mart can be detrimental to the life of a small town; Hearne, in Robertson County, Texas, in particular, has been pointed to as an example. The town and county were roughly equal to that of Chestertown and Kent; Wal-Mart (in a smaller form) effectively shut down the local businesses. The corresponding unemployment rate caused many residents to emigrate; Wal-Mart lost its market and left a modern day "ghost town." According to Floyd T. Hafley, City Manager for Hearne, (KCN, February 24 issue), "Our town was 'sucked dry' by Wal-Mart."

Finally, plain and simple old-fashioned ness, with some old-fashioned snobbery mixed in, plays a not-small role in anti-Wal-Mart sentiments. Why don't so many non-business-owner types want Wal-Mart? Because it suggests trashiness, filth, ugliness. To those who don't need a discount store, it would be nothing more than an eyesore and another traffic problem. Do these people shop in Dover and Annapolis? You bet. And they'll keep going, Wal-Mart or no.

Pro Wal-Mart arguments:

It will create jobs for the working class.

It will give tax money to the county, promote local competition, and bring in more businesses to this new high-demand consumer area to fill in those oft-complained about vacancies. Besides, none of those vacancies are big enough for the space needed by a truly big department store.

Less gas will be wasted going to Dover and Annapolis; the money will be kept in Kent County. The consumption at local restaurants will also increase.

Some comparative studies show favorable results; after all the hubbub, Easton hasn't been harmed one bit by its Wal-Mart.

The expensive downtown shops have only rich people and tourists as patrons anyway, and they'll keep that clientele. The college students that shop there will keep on doing so, and those with less money won't leave the county to shop as much.

More counter-arguments:

The middle- and upper-management positions will be filled from out-of-state; Wal-Mart will hire twice as many minimum-wage-range employees at half-time to avoid paying them benefits.

There will be effectively no price competition; Wal-Mart will become a monopoly in certain areas and will then be able to charge what they want.

Unlike small businesses, they don't support Little League teams, local charities, etc., or even support local papers with advertising revenues.

My position:

Right now, I'm not slanted either way. I love Kent County and I have lived here for close to three years now (including summers). But I'm not a resident, I'm a transient. I don't feel that I have a right to complain either way. I can have an opinion, sure, but lobbying would be like trying to vote in a Colombian election. I don't have residency.

I see both sides of the argument, and both sides have very good points. I have tried to list all the points that I have seen both sides present, and I don't think either side has the upper hand in validity of opinion. But when I look at Silver Spring, Glen Burnie, and Kent Island, I see Maryland turning into one giant strip mall stretching from the Appalachians to the Atlantic, and I am very scared. Meanwhile, Annapolis manages to keep its quaint, historical downtown intact while supporting a large commercial sector on the outskirts, with no harm done (except stinky exhaust fumes).

I would like to state very clearly, however, that I think that an opinion recently stated on QuickMail that the "tree-hugging liberals" are the ones in opposition to Wal-Mart is a crock. I don't think this is an issue of political ideology, except for with respect to economics. Is opposing large-scale development in opposition to free enterprise? When it's a question of allowing megastores at the risk of the downfall of an entire community, I think "the American Way" goes beyond a question of equal opportunity for some.

As David O'Dell of the Kent County News told me, "Either way, the residents of Chestertown don't want things to stay the way they've always been." What's for the best? I honestly don't know, but I'm sure waiting to find out.

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

"Bessie," from page 1

sure that it would not start up again.

Fortunately, no one was hurt in the fire, but everything was lost to it. By the next day, money was already being raised to help out Miss Bessie and her family. Students have charged money on their student ID's, Jeff Miller, Director of Athletics, donated clothes and toys for the sons, and the Panhellenic council held a raffle that ended March 11th.

Rose Usilton and Sara Elburn, WC Dining Service employees, helped to notify the college community of the incident and organize the collection of donations. The Washington College community has shown a lot of financial and emotional support toward Miss Bessie and her family.

Mary Brown, Associate Director of Summer Conferences, said, "It is not easy to go through [losing everything], but when you do, it is nice to know that you have the WC family."

Local churches have also shown their concern and that of the Chestertown community by donating money and various goods to the Maples family. Miss Bessie is currently working with Interfaith Housing Project, a locally-based service aimed at helping individuals find housing; she has also sent an application for an apartment at Chester River.

Miss Bessie still manages to have a positive outlook: "I'm still holding on to my joy, and I'm going to stay happy."

If any one would like to donate clothes to the Maples family, the sizes are:

Mr Maples: medium in shirts; 30-34 in pants; 10 &1/2 in shoes.

Miss Bessie: size 18; 8 wide in shoes.

Wayne (eldest son): extra-large in shirts; size 40-32 in pants; 10&1/2 in shoes.

Trey (youngest son, 6 yrs): 7 regular in pants and shirts; 12&1/2 in boys shoes.

"Koon," from page 3

in areas where the provision of retail and other services is a major sustenance activity. Consumer spending in such areas stimulates the local economy, creating jobs and slowing the tide of emigration. These established retail centers are also favored sites for new firms, which enhance the area's growth potential even further."

This is frightening to many people, and given the minimallification of America, quite justifiably so. I don't believe that anyone really wants Chestertown to become a place with a lot of franchise establishments. But this is not a realistic danger. Chestertown does not have what is needed to support a large change in population. Some may say that Chestertown will become like Dover, but this is a groundless fear; Chestertown is not the state capital, does not have a huge Air Force base and is not located on a major highway.

What Chestertown does have is a slowly growing population and insufficient retail capacity to meet the needs of the local population. Ames is going under, and so is Roses. At the current time many residents already are forced to shop elsewhere; with all the major general merchandisers gone, that means a net outflow of capital from the community.

Furthermore, not all of Chestertown's residents have the means to shop elsewhere. At the last census, 13.4percent of Chestertown residents did not own cars. Unless Barker's starts selling color TV's, where will these people go to do their shopping, and how will they get there? I don't see any of the Wal-Mart opponents offering free rides to Dover so that autoless Chestertonians can shop.

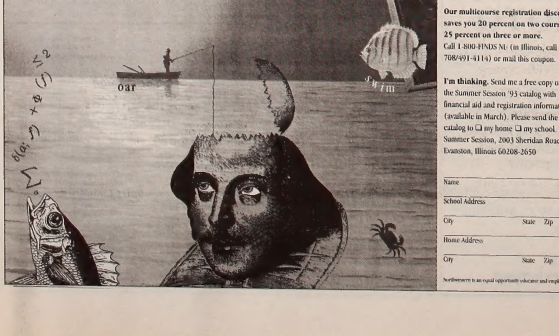
And as the county seat, Chestertown has a certain responsibility to the county. The people of Kent County shouldn't have to drive all the way to Dover, Annapolis or Easton. This costs both time and money. It strikes me as odd that most of the people who oppose Wal-Mart are by and large from Chestertown, whereas the county as a whole is looks upon the proposition with a favorable eye.

This is significant because the county as a whole has more native residents than Chestertown. Only 59.1 percent of Chestertown residents were born in Maryland, compared to 64.8 percent of Kent County residents. If the total of non-native Chestertonians were subtracted from the population of the county as a whole, this disparity would be even more evident.

This disparity is because of the attempt to gentrify Chestertown. At the last census the per capita income for Chestertown was $14,847, whereas it was $6,700 only ten years before. Even when allowing for inflation, the increase in income is significant. At the last census, 27.4 percent of Chestertown residents had a college education, which compares to 16.9 percent for the county as a whole. Interestingly, this disparity did not exist in the 1980 census, when only 12.6 percent of Chestertown residents had a college education. Also, the age of county residents is higher than in surrounding counties: 38.9 percent of Chestertown residents are age 45 or older, whereas only 25.2 percent of Queen Anne's County residents are 45 or older and only 29.6 percent of Cecil County residents are 45 or older. The percentage of Chestertown residents in poverty has decreased from 17 percent in 1980 to 11.1 percent in 1990.

Given that the population has increased very little in the period between the two censuses, this would seem to indicate that the few newcomers to Chestertown would account for most of the observed changes, particularly in income. This allows us to infer that the hypothetical "average" newcomer is 45 or older, has a car, a bachelor's degree and an income of over $50,000 a year.

This sort of person is likely to have come to Chestertown because it is quaint. They also have the resources to travel elsewhere for shopping, so therefore the nuisance costs associated with having a Wal-Mart in Chestertown far outweigh the benefits. The majority of Kent County residents, however, are not so comfortable that it means nothing to them to have to travel great distances.



Some also argue that while many part-time jobs would be produced by Wal-Mart, most upper level positions would be filled by outsiders. This reveals the class bias of those who argue against Wal-Mart; they are not the sort of people who consider that many jobs for working class people are important, but they are the sort of people who are concerned about management jobs for a few of their friends.

Aside from this, the argument is flawed. It is true that initially management positions will be filled by outsiders, but that is only in the short term. These positions will be filled be people who already work for Wal-Mart, because the company believes in promotion from within. This means that in the long run there will be real opportunity for career advancement for local workers. And what about the soon-to-be-former Ames employees? I don't see the anti-Wal-Mart faction offering any solution to the unemployment crisis faced by these people on a personal level.

Some demagogues also dredge up stories about how Wal-Mart uses up towns. But let's look at the real threat which has caused store closings in Chestertown. The real threat has been instability on a chain-wide level, as faced by both Ames and McCrory's. Ames is going belly up because it is doing so on a nation-wide level. This will not happen to Wal-Mart. Its 1991 sales were $43.9 billion, its profits were $1.6 billion, and the company's market value was $61 billion. That Wal-Mart managed to achieve these figures in a year when other retailers were filing for chapter 11 is quite impressive. They will not go broke.

Nor will they use up Chestertown and leave it high and dry. That is not how Wal-Mart became the nation's number one retailer. It is a success story of capitalism. It became the top dog by lowering costs and offering fantastic prices. Sam Walton made his billions by maximizing consumer surplus, not by ripping people off. To imply otherwise is to express some sort of deep-rooted dissatisfaction with the capitalist system.

Years ago tall ships traveled the Chester River. When they stopped coming, Chestertown survived. Wal-Mart will not change Chestertown nearly so much. People will cut down on pollution and save money by not having to drive as far. People in town will have the option of buying high quality merchandise at low low prices. Isn't that what capitalism is all about? Of course it is. If people who don't like the idea of Wal-Mart really do support capitalism, free enterprise, motherhood, the flag, school prayer, and prices so low it's insane, they'll pipe down and suck it up. If they don't, perhaps they should meet privately with me, and we can come up with a scheme to make Chestertown a totally radical place to live!

"StartNow," from page 5

Use with Caution

1. Artificial flavoring (soda, candy, gum, breakfast cereals) — may cause hyperactivity in children and some adults.
2. BHA (cereals, potato chips) — needs testing.
3. EDTA — may leach minerals from the body.
4. Gums (ice cream, beverages) — poorly tested, probably safe.
5. Monosodium glutamate/ MSG (soups, sauces, some Chinese food, Italian sauces) — damages brain cells in mice; causes headache and burning in head, neck, and arms of some people.
6. Propylgallate (soups) — poorly tested.

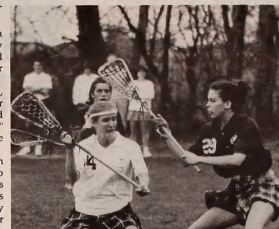
The information in this article is condensed from pages 59-61 in The Green Lifestyle Handbook, Edited by Jeremy Rifkin, 1990 by the Greenhouse Crisis Foundation.

Women's Lacrosse Shoots For Season Of Surprises

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

The women's lacrosse team will open their season at Mary Washington on March 16, and Coach Diane Guinan sees a year of uncertainty ahead of her.

"We have a fairly young, inexperienced team, and our numbers are kind of small, and we play a tough schedule," Guinan said. "It's going to take a while to put it all together."



However, Coach Guinan believes the opportunity to do well still exists with players such as senior co-captains Eleanor Shriver and Amy McCleary, as well as seven other returning players.

"I think I've got a pretty good, dedicated group of people who I think are working hard and want to do well," she said.

Leading the charge this season will be McCleary who was selected to the All-South Region team as well as an MAC All-Star in 1992. Last year, the senior scored 35 goals, placing second on the team's scoring charts.

Shriver returns to anchor the defense in her third year on the lacrosse team. Other letter winners from 1992 include juniors Jennifer Bornfriend, Kirsten Lucas and Karen Scott as well as sophomore Nancy Millhouser.

Sophomores Jen Hagey and Debbie Spence also return from last year's squad, and Peggy Bowman returns to Washington College after a year away from the school to play her second year of lacrosse for the Shorewomen.

Amy McCleary was the second leading scorer for Washington last year with 35 goals

Coach Guinan will also count on two freshman to contribute to the team this year. She hopes Jill Schultz and Ali Nadich will have strong seasons.

"We'll certainly look to (Nadich) to help us on attack," Guinan said. "She's bringing some previous experience and success from the high school level."

The other players on the varsity lacrosse roster for the 1993 season are juniors Salwa Amer, Renee Guckert and Beth Hocker and freshmen Peggy Busker and Renee Seaman.

The Shorewomen will begin their season with away games at Mary Washington and Franklin & Marshall. The home opener will be March 25 versus Swarthmore College at 4:00 p.m.

They will also face traditionally tough opponents such as Johns Hopkins, Gettysburg, Dickinson, Ursinus and Haverford.

NCAA Division III 1993 Pre-Season Lacrosse Rank

1. Nazareth ~Rochester, NY	6. Gettysburg ~Gettysburg, PA	11. Clarkson ~Potsdam, NY
2. Hobart ~Geneva, NY	7. Washington ~Chestertown, MD	12. Hartwick ~Oneonta, NY
3. Roanoke ~Salem, VA	8. Ohio Wesleyan ~Delaware, OH	13. Middlebury ~Middlebury, VT
4. Ithaca ~Ithaca, NY	9. Alfred ~Alfred, NY	tie Fr. & Marshall ~Lancaster, PA
5. Salisbury State ~Salisbury, MD	10. Cortland ~Cortland, NY	15. Wash. & Lee ~Lexington, VA

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

It's hard to believe how hard it is to come up with a good candidate for Newt's POW in between seasons. Sure, Shawn Hamill was an excellent selection last week, but at the same time, we can't wait for those varsity sports to get rolling, so we can have more choices than we know what to do with.

As hard as it was to find someone this week, a choice finally jumped out and hit us. In this column we too often tend to compliment people for their athletic prowess (ie. "They have a sweet shot," "He hits hard," "Wow, she can spike it," "She swims fast," or "What an awesome hat trick!"). However, it seems we often forget that the object here at college is to hit the books.

Therefore, the Newt's POW this week combines the best of both worlds. This week, Andy McKim was named to his third consecutive MAC All-Academic Team. The senior swimmer from Towson, MD holds a 3.64 grade point average, and during the dual meet season, he swam for four fifth place finishes and was a member of four second place relays.

An international studies major, McKim will be the only member of the men's swim team to graduate in 1993, as he is the only senior on the team.

So if you see Andy around campus, congratulate him on his amazing ability to balance his studies and his athletic career at such a high level.

Have a great spring break everybody!
—your great sports editors
Doug Hoffberger and Matt Murray

Tuesday - Saturday
Planning of Hair Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
HAIR, TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave.
Chestertown, MD 21620
(Behind Bonanza)
Janet Thomasson
(301) 778-0888

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Washington Lacrosse Ranked #7 In NCAA Division III

Baseball and Crew head for Florida for competition and fun in the sun

WC • ELM

Sports

Hoffberger Sacked:

Masses Riot, Call For Return of the Bleacher Creatures

Women's Lacrosse Prepares For Season: Opener On March 16

Joe Boan seeks to lead the Washington baseball team to a successful stint in sunny Florida over Spring Break. On the mound, the senior hopes to return to his sophomore year form when he won seven games. Last season, he pitched the second-most innings on the club. He should be even more dangerous in the batter's box, as he hopes to improve on his performance of last year when he batted .307 with three homeruns and 21 RBIs. Look for the results of the baseball team's Spring Break excursion in our next issue on March 26.

Upcoming Events

Men's Lacrosse
vs. Western MD
March 13
@ Navy
March 17

Women's Lacrosse
@ Mary Wash.
March 16

Men's Tennis
@ Emory at W&L
March 12
@ Clemson
March 13

Women's Tennis
@ Wash. & Lee
March 13

Rowing
@ Central Florida
March 20

Baseball
Florida Trip
March 12-20

Softball
@ Frank. & Marsh.
March 20

Three WC Swimmers Make The All-MAC Academic Team

Andy McKim: NEWT's Player of the Week

All the news that fits in your pocket

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: Mostly cloudy, H in low-mid 50s
Weekend: Partly cloudy; chance/showers; H in 60s

Volume 64, Number Twenty-One • March 26, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

College to Launch New, Improved Review

J.Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

Are creative writing students and journalists the only ones at Washington College who regularly have the opportunity to see their work in print? Not anymore, according to the master plan of Washington College Review Publisher Robert Day.

The Washington College Review will no longer simply be a collection of various creative writing efforts with a few essays here and there, and its publication schedule will be neither sporadic nor guessed at.

The plan is for the revamped journal to truly represent the liberal-arts college; correspondingly, there will be three sections: Social Sciences, Natural Sciences, and Humanities and Creative Writing, with professors Dan Premo, Don Munson, and Kathy Wagner serving as the editors of those divisions, respectively.

Richard Striner of the History Department will serve as General Editor, and junior Jennifer Reddish has been selected as Student Editor. Director of College Relations Meredith Davies-Hadaway is Managing Editor for the publication.

Day wants to see the Review become "a genuine liberal arts journal for good student writers in all disciplines. We hope there will be fine essays and articles in political science, natural science, and philosophy, for example."

Students interested in publishing work in one of the three divisions should contact the editor for their area of interest; however, solicitations for work will also be culled from the professors in every department. "If they're shy, it doesn't matter," said Day. "We're going to go out and find them. We're not going to let this fall into lethargy."

All of the featured writing will be by students, and, with the exception of Reddish, all the editing will be done by faculty. "This is still a student magazine," said Day, "But this is the one best example I can think of of cooperation between the students, faculty and administration." He cited Davies-Hadaway as being exemplary of the cooperation and enthusiasm exhibited by the administration.

Day wants all students to be able to see their work in print. "... we can take the papers they have done for coursework, and with the faculty editors, turn that into a general interest article," he said. "We're no longer just defining a writer as a creative writer."

Davies-Hadaway will be in charge of, among other things, budget and production schedule. She is the editor of The Washington College Magazine, WC's alumni publication. She will also oversee the layout of the magazine: Lara Usilton, the College Relations Office intern, will lay out the Review on PageMaker, based on a design by Literary House Press Master Printer T. Michael Kaylor.

"We hope to produce the entire thing in-house, including printing it at the Literary House Press," said Davies-Hadaway. The computer-generated layout sheets will be reproduced onto printing press plates using a sophisticated piece of computer equipment. Student interns at the Press will assist in printing the Review at the O'Neill Literary House.

Davies-Hadaway suggests that "this will be an opportunity to publish beyond the Literary House," although the magazine will be printed in that building. "It's probably the first effort of its kind, to bring in all the liberal arts divisions, so it's kind of a landmark in that respect," she said.

"It'll be a completely homegrown effort, a showcase of WC student writing," said Davies-Hadaway.

It also has potential for expansion, she added, with the possibility of the Admissions and Development Offices using it to elicit a favorable response from the public.

The Washington College Review will collect its work each spring and publish in the early fall. The slated release date is October 1 of this year; this spring's deadline for submissions is April 19.

The Review is sponsored by the Society of Junior Fellows, the McLain Program in Environmental Affairs, The Goldstein Program in Public Affairs, The Sophie Kerr Committee, The Writer's Union, and the O'Neill Literary House.

As Professor Day said, "I think it'll be terrific!"

Arabian Feminism

Two Middle Eastern women visiting Chestertown during Washington College's Sophie Kerr Weekend will participate in a discussion of Arab feminism on Saturday, March 27. The symposium begins at 1 p.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room of Miller Library.

Sponsors include the Goldstein Program in Public Affairs, the Gender Relations Awareness Alliance, the Middle East Club, the Gay and Lesbian Alliance, and the Anthropology Club of Washington College.

Nawal al-Saadawi, a visiting professor at Duke University, joins Fedwa Malti-Douglas, a professor at Indiana University, for a discussion of women's struggle against oppression in the Middle East.

Saadawi is giving a reading from her work Friday, March 26. The reading, sponsored by the Sophie Kerr Committee of Washington College, begins at 4:00 p.m. in Norman James Theatre of William Smith Hall.

Saadawi is the author of several novels, including Woman at Point Zero, God Dies by the Nile, The Fall of the Imam and, most recently, Searching.

Mysterious Fire Swept through Worcester Room over Break

Jen Waldych
Staff Writer

Anyone who has had to walk through Worcester has noticed the smell. People who have been on the first floor have seen the streaks of gray rising from the door frame to the ceiling and the yellow police tape across the door. Others who have not passed through this dorm may not know that there was a mysterious fire in Worchester 104, Chris Kennedy and John O'Hearn's room.

The fire started on Wednesday, March 17, St. Patrick's Day. When questioned about the possibility of a cigarette causing the fire, the two freshmen told me that they had been gone for three days before the fire started.

"No one was in the room for three days before the fire so how did it start? A cigarette doesn't smolder for three days. Let's see what the Fire Marshall says." Kennedy added that he was not smoking on his bed, where the fire was suspected to have started, and that O'Hearn does not smoke at all.

"Nothing's left," O'Hearn said. "All that's left is a jar of peanut butter and a bag of potato chips."

"Yeah. And the CDs are melted," Kennedy added. The two roommates had to move those belongings that were salvageable to the upstairs lounge, where they are currently living. They said that they are doing fine. Fortunately, both of them brought home the majority of their possessions over break.

While the fire appeared to have been accidental, O'Hearn mentioned that certain articles in his room were missing and unaccounted for, including ten or fifteen dollars in change and a shoebox of CDs.

Kennedy and O'Hearn met with the WC Security Director Jerry Roderick, the assistant superintendant and fire marshall on Wednesday March 24. The fire marshall reportedly stated, "I've been in this business for 32 years and I'm stumped." He did not find any real pattern to the fire.

The area affected by the fire was primarily around Kennedy's bed, but articles on the other side of the room also burned. There were burned pieces of furniture next to unscathed peices. However, the fire marshall does not suspect arson or any foul play, despite the fact that the window was found to be unlocked and items missing from the room. In addition, the fire alarm that was in perfect working order when inspected in October was found unplugged.

"I have a lot of questions," Kennedy said, "but I'm going to put it to bed. I'm just glad that it happened when no one was here."

Inside

Crisis Extra: Visual Aids For Fundamentalists 3

What Did Allen Marshall Do For Spring Break? 3

Two Letters On Racism 4

One More Reason For Rubbers: Overpopulation 4

See Orgasmo or Have Your Penis Planted

Controversy Comes in Different Colors...

Woo woo woo. Yes, I've said before that there's nothing like a good controversy. In fact, some news stories would have little value to an eye that didn't see the subtext: an action which provokes thought about an issue larger than that isolated incident makes for good controversy and, hopefully, good journalism.

The last issue of the Elm was kind of a funny one. There wasn't a lot in the way of "hard news;" in fact, much of the news section was written in a rather informal, "featuresy" style. To choose articles for any given week can be difficult in such a small community. I wrote the article on Wal-Mart (and requisitioned several others) because it affects the community we (however briefly) live in. And because I feel strongly that the Kent County area tends to be ignored by the campus at large; a lot of students I know see Chestertown as a quaint brick movie set with a lot of bars and liquor stores.

The reason for asking Jason Ronstadt to write his piece on the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange controversy (See "What's all the Hubbub, Bub," page one, March 12 Elm) was rather similar. A few months ago, DAHE president Dawn Israel wrote a formal apology to the Elm for an unspecified action by members of that group. The letter confused a lot of people; exactly what happened and what was covered up was a big ol' mystery. I only heard the same rumours the rest of you did.

So, albeit later in the semester, we had an article written. I will make it very clear to you all right now that the information therein comes from Israel herself.

We did not intend to make a value judgment over whether the "gaffiti" was making a positive or negative statement, or whether the decision to cover up (whatever you want) that gaffiti was the right decision. But the fact is, it happened, and until that point, the rumour mill just churned out much worse things than was actually the case.

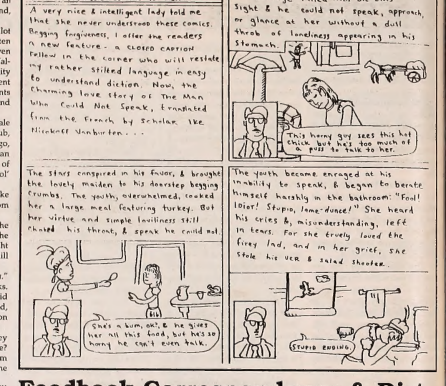
No, Lisa, the statements described did not "offend the staff of The Elm." Perhaps certain individuals at this college were offended by those remarks. But not us. Should we have been? I don't quite see a point here. Why did we do the article? Because people repeatedly asked me what happened, ooooo, controversy brewed. Frankly I had no idea what was written on those walls. But I wanted you all to know.

If the statements weren't offensive, why were they "erased"? If they were, why were they written in the first place? And were they offensive? By whose standards? I am not here to provide you with the answers. I'm here to provoke you into finding the questions. The answers have to come from inside of each of us.

What does offend me is the assumption that I would be offended by a statement like "Support Black Colleges." Okay. What do I think of it? I think it's a wee bit sensationalist at a school like WC, whose ethnic makeup may leave much to be desired. It sounds as though the author may have been turning against his or her own school. But was I offended by the statement? No. I found it intruiging, and if anyone can offer me a Why on this one, I'd love to hear it.

And I certainly hope, Tia, that you weren't insinuating that it was The Elm that was "crying reverse discrimination or separatism." Maybe I'm getting a little paranoid here. But I don't like being called a racist any more than I like being called "whitey." Calm down, I realize that that was not the point of your letter. But I also suggest you re-read your article. Nowhere did it suggest that DAHE was practicing reverse discrimination. The last paragraph, again, featuresy, merely served as a summary of what Israel told Jason.

If there has been a backlash against the efforts of DAHE, TELL US ABOUT IT. In specific. Everyone on this campus holds an opinion about issues of race, and they vary widely. But nothing will get accomplished by a general vent which makes me nervous and a little sad that someone may be accusing us of racism simply by reporting a controversy that happened to involve black students.



Give us fucking break. You want us to report all the news? Good. So do we. But in order to do that, if there's something we don't know, TELL US. We don't have little spies everywhere sniffing out news. Nope. But we'll listen to whatever stories you want to tell.

From Curtis Arnold's letter: "If you have a problem with the group why don't you get involved instead of sitting around talking about how it's a black group." Good. But if someone has a problem with the group, you should realize that yes, that means controversy, and that means that questions should pop up, perhaps the foremost one being, "Why?"

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers
Photography Editor: Margaret 'Wistie' Wurts
News | Sports
Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan | Doug Hoffbuger & Matt Murray
Features | Arts & Entertainment
Justin 'M' Cann | George Jamison
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Avertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehreit Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 8 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Ducknet. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-7843.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback Correspondence & Dirt Shriver's Advice: Think Before You Speak

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to the Campus Voices in The ELM on March 12, 1993.

First, congratulations to all the candidates who ran for SGA positions two weeks ago. Regardless of who was elected, I feel confident that all of the candidates will contribute their leadership abilities in the future.

Second, I am disappointed in two of my fellow Resident Assistants. Comments were made by Chris Vaughn and Charlie Linehan regarding John Phoebus' and Eve Zartman's campaign.

If I recall correctly, each Resident Assistant agreed in August to be supportive of one another. Chris Vaughn's comment on John Pheobus cannot be classified as supportive, but rather rude and insensitive. Charlie Linehan's comment, although not directed toward a fellow Resident Assistant, was also unnecessary.

I had been under the impression that Resident Assistants were to set examples for other students. Is this how we want the rest of the student body to act?

My reason for writing is not to attack two of my friends (RA's), but to remind everyone that students/politicians, contrary to popular belief, have feelings too! My advice to everyone is to learn a lesson from this, particularly, one about thinking before saying something that might be regretted later.

Eleanor Shriver
RA, Third Floor Reid

Linehan Should Remember His Gentleman's Agreement

To the Editor:

Two weeks ago, in the Elm, Charlie Linehan wrote a piece entitled "Tradition, Discipline, and the Spirit of Washington College" (see Elm, 12 March 1993). In most respects it was a fine piece, albeit largely opinion in the News Section of the paper [NOTE: Linehan's article appeared in the Features Section on Page Four — Ed.]. But I feel that there are a few items in his article that need to be addressed.

Tradition is a good thing, I accept that. Phi Sigma pledges running to the statue of George Washington is a good tradition, the Birthday Ball is a good tradition, Blackbeards Ball is a good tradition but Mr. Linehan, attempted breaking and entering is not a good tradition. It never has been, and I should hope it never will be. Attempted breaking and entering, that was the infraction that the five young men committed. While they were pulling a basement window out of its tracks, a basement window that opens into one of Frat A's chapter rooms, the pressure on the glass caused the window to shatter. And as would make sense in a case such as this, Security was called. Wouldn't most people contact the Security Department if their room was broken into? Seems to me that a residential dormitory room and a fraternity meeting room are pretty much the same in this regard. If there was potential or actual theft, why shouldn't the Security Department be notified? Repeatedly, Mr. Linehan referred to the situation as "petty," but I, and I imagine that most people might agree, do not regard attempted breaking and entering as "petty."

As to the point about rivalry between Greek-letter organizations, it would have been more interesting if Frat A had known of Frat B's intentions of creating such a rivalry before such an incident occurred. Now, after the fact, it may only appear that Frat B is attempting to pull its biscuits out of the fire.

And for future reference, at

See "Tarleton," page 8

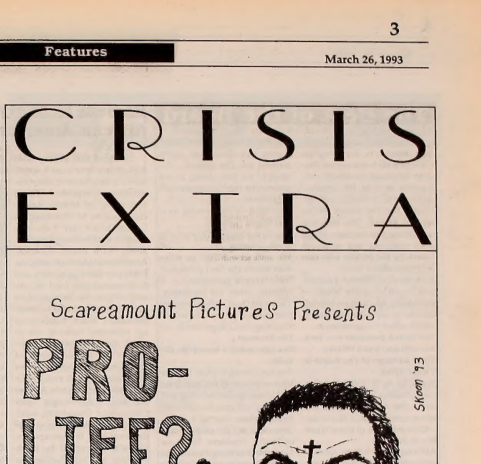
CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

The murder of Dr. David Gunn outside a Pensacola clinic has sparked a national debate. The killing was an overt act of terrorism against an abortion provider, and was intended as a purely political and moral statement. What is it that makes an ordinary, religiously devout and financially stable family man like Michael Griffin shoot an unarmed man in the back three times?

Currently, abortion is the only political issue which is capable of exciting such divisive and militant emotions across the country. The opinions on both sides of this issue are fervently held. Feminists contend that the struggle to criminalize abortion is an attack on women's fundamental and inalienable right to control the reproductive capacities of their bodies, and that the attack on abortion rights therefore constitutes an attack against women's ability to control their social, political, moral and economic destinies.

Abortion foes, on the other hand, assert that life begins at conception, and that abortion is a particularly heinous form of murder whose victims are the most innocent, helpless and pure members of society. This, at least, is the attitude of moderate abortion opponents, who also contend that they do not oppose birth control. Indeed, many of these moderates publicly argue that birth control is a socially acceptable and morally sound alternative to abortion.



One moderate opponent of abortion is John Leo, who recently penned a scathing indictment of those who use such tactics as "butyric acid attacks on clinics, bombings, gunfire at a Michigan Planned Parenthood office, arson at clinics in Texas and Florida, death threats to doctors and stalking of clinic personnel." In his op-ed piece in US News and World Report, he also wrote that "Instead of shrieking at women entering clinics, abortion protesters ought to take them seriously as moral decision-makers."

The politically moderate opponents of abortion generally believe that criminalizing abortion should be achieved within the political system. They may even give money to Operation Rescue or other anti-choice groups.

But these people are not the ones who are at the front lines of the fight to deprive women of their reproductive freedom. The anti-abortion fight is led by a cadre of Christian holy warriors engaged in a fundamentalist jihad against what they see as a satanic conspiracy to destroy the moral fiber of America. These people reject the notion that women are "moral decision-makers." They accept only one moral code as universally applicable, and that is the infallible Word of God in the Holy Bible -- as interpreted by them.

While it is true that attacks on abortion rights are a part of a larger pattern of attacks against women's rights (as incontrovertibly proven in Susan Faludi's Backlash), historically these same reactionary classes

See "Koon," page 9

Open Forum: What I Did Over Spring Break

Allen Marshall is a currently a Freshman studying traffic theory.

I spent most of my spring break doing pretty much what you're doing now. No, I didn't sit down to lunch and read the Open Forum of the Elm for 7 days, but I did get to do much reading. The reason for this is that I was snowed in for two days and my car was snowed from Saturday until Thursday. I got to begin a book by Robert Heinlein: The Number of the Beast. The title seems to be misleading if you ask me. It should be called Here is Another Example of an Author Portraying Women as at Least a Bit Less Intelligent than Men and Placing them in Subservient Roles Even When They do Have an IQ.. Point to Their Name. But anyway, the point of this story is snow, not sexist themes in potboiler literature or how I really spent my vacation as if anyone cared how I spent my vacation, but it's snow. Yes, the Blizzard of '93. Well, we got a lot of snow in my area, enough that I-95 (though in different sections) was closed for three days.

Allen Marshall

Most of the roads were closed in NJ and a state of emergency was declared. On Sunday, only 4 wheel drive vehicles were allowed on the road. Well, my car, "¡Ora-le Bato!", is four wheel drive; it's also snowed in. Fortunately, my very kind sister goes as stir crazy as I do in six hours and also has a four wheel drive, "Pendeja". On Monday, my sister and I decided to get out of the house before I had my daily fight with my parents and pissed everyone off for a few hours (what I do best).

We drove down to the Cherry Hill Mall because it was there and wasn't at home and I wanted to get some art pencils. Well, the ride down was uneventful except for the fact that I continually protested the speeds at which my sister drove. The roads were pretty much cleared in that area with a few snow drifts on the shoulders here and there and a bent sign or two where someone slid off their intended course. We needed to buy something for my older sister for her birthday, so we went off in search of that next.

Across the Burlington Bristol Bridge we went up Rt. 413 north. What a fun ride that was! Apparently Pennsylvania Department of Transit decided to let traffic do what their trucks were supposed to be doing the previous evening: clear the roads. Much of 413 was too narrow for the one lane of traffic it is supposed to convey. If your wheel base was smaller or larger than the tracks created (my sister's car's wheel base was too small) well, you just had to drive slower or slide into a family of six. We chose to drive a bit slower.

We made it to US Rt. 1 trying to get to the Oxford Valley Mall (we had a discount for something for my sister and really the only places to go in the daytime are malls or Filthadelphia. Most stores are closed in Filthadelphia on a

See "Marshall," page 9

The Best of the Board

It's for printing the best responses to each week's Board. The Board is Washington College's SGA-sponsored Student Response Board—It's on the first floor of Bill Smith—right next to Dr. Fessler's office. Come! See The Board! Write on The Board! The Board is something you can use—to get your opinions and concerns heard, by the people who can do things about them!

Each week a different question will be put up on the Board,—pertaining to campus-related issues, or to national issues which affect our generation.

The Board members are Tara Kidwell and Ryan Walker.

The Chairman of The Board is Tanya Allen

Speak to us if you have any suggestions or complaints about the Board, if there are any questions you'd like to see addressed there, or if you'd just like to help out.

Although we adore controversy, the only things prohibited from The Board are personal, hurtful statements, such as: "fire Dr. Kumquat" or "Bobby Kumquat is a jerk." Please use discretion when writing on The Board. Although we hate doing it, we reserve the right to censor such statements.

The SGA is sponsoring several Board contests!

Our first contest will begin the week of March 29.

We will give $25.00 to whoever draws the best picture of their favorite professor. (Artistic talent not necessary. The word "best" refers to whatever picture we and the rest of Washington College decide we like the most.)

See next week's board for details!

See next week's ELM for the best responses to the question: "If I woke up one morning and found myself transformed into James Baker, (the SGA president-elect, not the ex-Secretary of State,) President Trout, or God, the first thing I would do about Washington College would be...."

Racism Is Everyday Issue for African American Students

To the Editor:

It seems that whenever an Afrocentric term is used, someone is crying reverse discrimination or separatism. I will tell you, being an African-American student at Washington College is not easy. I am confronted with racism everyday, along with many African-American students on campus. Everyday that I go to class and look around and see I am the only African-American student in the classroom. Also, when in class and a "black" issue comes up, everyone looks to me to speak for every black American in the United States of America. After a while, it can really start to get to you. That's why groups like Dale Adams Heritage Exchange and Cleopatra's Daughters were formed. But you have to understand that the groups are basically supported by black students and our heritage is what is going to be portrayed in these groups until they become more diverse. Dale Adams Heritage Exchange is one of the largest organizations on campus, having over fifty members, but less then half of them are active. If you have a problem with the group why don't you get involved instead of sitting around talking about how it's a black group. In fact, members of Cleopatra's Daughters are wearing their shirts today. I believe that there is some confusion as to the goals of Cleopatra's Daughters. We invite you to inquire about our organization. Do not be scared of Afrocentricity because it is not a bad thing. As long as there are African-American students at Washington College, it is going to be here, so get use to it. I personally believe there is no such thing as racism; there is only intelligence and ignorance.

Curtia Arnold
Member, Dale Adams Heritage Exchange and Cleopatra's Daughters

Cleopatra's Daughters

To the Editor:

The Afrocentric terms mentioned in March 12, 1993 of The Elm were "Cleopatra's Daughters" and "support black colleges." These terms used to describe some of the members of the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange were not negative rather, they reflect a positive representation of many members in the group. I believe these terms should not be considered offensive; instead it should be an indication that some of the African-American students at WAC are proud of their heritage. These terms should be hailed rather than rejected as reverse racism and racial separation; instead negative descriptions such as "sexual chocolate" in reference to the sexual attributes of black women is wholly and completely negative and should offend the staff of The Elm and WAC community, not positive statements such as "support black colleges."

Lisa Castro
Junior

Overpopulation: Root of Evils

To the Editor:

Overpopulation options for Somalis, college students and college presidents are identical:

- death by pollution
- death by starvation
- death by deforestation

Stop anybody addressing the environment.

We have been concentrating on the "environment" for the last 25 years or so and with each passing year, I have watched the environment go down and the population go up. Example:

America The Beautiful — 1792 (4 Million Humans)

America The Waste Dump — 1992 (250 Million Humans)

(60 times increase in 2 centuries)

Since everything from Chesapeake Bay to San Francisco Bay to Tokyo Bay to the Mediterranean Sea to the Amazon River is already polluted (and getting worse), I warn you that college students will face catastrophe - each of us will face catastrophe - unless we switch the focus from "Environment" (the symptom) to Global Overpopulation (the problem).

I worry profoundly about each of our students at Oxford, Harvard, MIT, etc. I worry about each student's alleged "future" and I wonder if 1993 will be the year that college students, college faculties and college presidents finally wake up and break the silence about Global Overpopulation.

I am angry with our "institutions of higher learning" and I am angry with our churches. They have failed, century after century, and continue failing, day after day, to warn our students of the consequences and perils of Global Population.

I am infuriated that our "institutions" have failed to even show our students the mathematical relationship between global population in 800 BC as contrasted with global population in 1990.

-800 BC (5 Million Humans)
-1990 (5 Billion Humans)

It took roughly 10,000 years (from 8000 BC to about 1850) for our global population to increase to 1 billion. Now, our population is increasing by 1 billion in ten year increments.

- Our population is 1000 times larger.
- Our population is going up 1000 times faster - Who can Survive this?

Still - no warning - from our "leaders" in the United States Senate, Parliament, the

See "Population," page 8

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

BAY TO BAY TRADERS

NOT JUST ANOTHER PRETTY FACE

CANNON STREET COURTYARD
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
LOCATEDBEHINDGROUNDSECURE

20 % SALE
THROUGH MARCH
ON
PATAGONIA
RAY BAN JANSPORT
ATLANTIS MAD BOMBER
BULA GREAT LAKES
FUNCTIONAL GEAR FOR ACTIVE SPORTS IN ALL CONDITIONS

The Elm Needs YOU

The Elm is now accepting applications for editorial positions for next year. Positions available are Editor-in-Chief, Potography Editor, News Editor, Sports Editor, Features Editor, Arts & Entertainment Editor, Layout Editor, Advertising Manager, and Circulation Manager. Call ext. 8585 for more information.

Andy's

337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm

FRI 26 HENDERSON & LASH. Acoustic rock/folk duo from D.C. !!!
SAT 27 THE MOVIES One of our Favorite Rock& Roll, Rhythm& Blues dance bands!!!
TUE 30 DERRYBERRY AND ALAGIA

This Week: On The Road to a Better World

We blamed Exxon when the Valdez spilled eleven million gallons of crude oil into Alaska's Prince William Sound in the spring of 1989. But we neglected to acknowledge our collective obsession with cars — and their insatiable thirst for oil — as the root of our problem. No nation in the world uses more oil than the U.S. or wastes it so carelessly — mostly because of our persistent addiction to driving private vehicles to get just about anywhere, whether it's across the country or to the corner store. At the rate we're squandering this precious, non-renewable resource — which nature took millions of years to create — the world supply of oil will be completely spent in just thirty years.

Christabel Garcia-Zamor

Every mile you drive uses precious petroleum and creates poisonous pollution ... the average car in America dumps it's own weight in carbon dioxide into the atmosphere every year. Burning one gallon of gas creates twenty-two pounds of carbon dioxide, hydrocarbons, benzene, nitrogen oxide, particulates, and lead. These chemicals can ultimately lead to depletion of the ozone layer, leukemia, acid rain, cancer, as well as damage to the brain and central nervous system of animals (including humans).

Here's What You Can Do:

•To get the best mileage, inflate tires to the maximum tire pressure indicated on the sidewall; an estimated fifty percent of the tires on the road are under inflated.

•Get a tune up every 7,500 miles; clogged fuel filters can make your car use more gas.

•Slow down ! a difference in just ten miles per hour — from 75 to 65 — cuts your fuel consumption by 15 to 30% and reduces nitrogen oxide emissions. The average car gets the best mileage at 40 mph.

•Never pour used oil or transmission fluid down the drain, into the sewer, or onto the ground. Just one quart of oil can contaminate up to 250,000 gallons of drinking water. Used auto fluids can be recycled by you r auto mechanic or service station, along with old car batteries.

•Try windshield washer fluid and antifreeze revitalizers, among other products from Chief Auto Parts, Inc., labeled as "environmentally safe and biodegradable".

•Remove unnecessary articles from your car. Each one hundred pounds of weight decreases fuel efficiency by one percent.

•Avoid short trips when possible. They use more gas because your car is usually cold. For the first mile, a cold vehicle gets only 30-40% of the mileage it gets when it is warmer up.

•Turn off the car if your car is idling or you are waiting for someone. Just 30 seconds of idling can use more gas than it takes to start your car.

•Walk.

•Ride a bicycle.

•Take any sort of public transportation.

Buying a New Car ?

•Transmission. Manual transmission is more efficient than automatic. A four speed can give you up to 6.5 more miles per gallon than the three speed. A fifth gear adds even more. An overdrive feature can save even more in both the automatic or manual transmission.

•Engine Size. The smaller the engine, the better your mileage. Of course, there's a trade off in power ...

•Tires. Radial tires can give three to seven percent better mileage than regular bias-ply tires. Steel belted are the most efficient. If all the cars in the U.S. were equipped with the most efficient tires possible, fuel savings would be 400,000 barrels of oil per day.

•Cruise Control. Get it ! Driving at a constant speed uses less

See "Cars," page 8

Brief Beef

SGA Election Results

The winners of the 1992-93 Executive Board elections are as follows: President, James Baker; Vice-president, Max Walton; Secretary, Megan Ward; Treasurer, Sonja Wilson; and Social Chairs, Gibson Semmes and Doug Hoffberger. The Elm staff would like to congratulate everyone who ran for a great campaign effort.

Attention: Editors Needed For Next Year's Elm and Pegasus

The Board of Publications is now accepting applications from students interested in serving as the editor of the Elm or the Pegasus during academic year 1993-1994. These are salaried positions. Application letters should be sent via campus mail to Prof. Richard Striner, Chair of the Board of Publications. The application deadline is April 15. Please include in your application letter any information about your experience and background that might be applicable to these editorial positions.

A Few Cents Make a Lot of Sense

The Brothers of Kappa Alpha Order will be holding our "Making Cents" program again this semester to support the Muscular Dystrophy Association. We will be going around to dorms on Monday night, March 29th. Your donation to this highly worthwhile charity is greatly appreciated. —W. Kevin Marshall, MDA Chairperson

Hands Out Back to the Playground

This Sunday, March 28, the Garnett Elementary School will be having a spring clean-up of their playground from noon until 4 p.m. Everyone is invited and encouraged to help out. For more information, contact George Jamison.

Volunteers Needed for Camp Fairlee Manor

Easter Seal Camp Fairlee Manor is looking for volunteers to help out with mentally/physically handicapped campers of all ages from April 2-4. It's a lot of fun and great experience! For more information or to sign up, call Jeanine Bilderback at ext. 8794 or Camp Fairlee at 778-0566.

Pan-Hel Update

Panhellenic Committee

Panhel sponsored a raffle last week for Ms. Bessie last week and it was very successful. Panhel is also donating money for a violence lecture which will be held on Thursday, March 25 in the Sophie Kerr Room in Miller Library at 7 p.m. A Greek picnic is in the works for the spring. There will be a spring Panhel tea held in the Coffee House on April 18 at 7 p.m.

Alpha Omicron Pi

Our chapter consultant, Stephanie Marsh, is visiting us this week. Congratulations to our new pledges: Nicole Bromwell, Shrylenea Johnson, Suzanne Basel, Jennifer Hoffman, and Amie Wiseley.

AOPi will help with The Community Beautification on Saturday, March 27. AOPi will also conduct an easter egg hunt for the children at the Benedictine School on Sunday, March 28 from 2 to 4 p.m.

On April 4, another one of our famous carwashes will be held. In suport of our International theme, "AOPi Cares about the World," on Saturday, April 24, Earthday, AOPi will have a booth set up downtown to help out.

Finally, on May 1, we are having a barbecue for our parents and alumni.

Alpha Chi Omega

Recently the Sisters of Alpha Chi Omega organized the signing of a petition against the early parole of Charles Blackiston. The Sisters were successful in gaining the support from many students, but have not received judiciary results. On a social level, the AX's are busy planning for their nautical dinner dance in Georgetown on April 17. Congratulations to the new pledges: Jessica Levy, Susan Hanna, Robin Woollens , Jen Saunders, Emily Grush, Crystal Windsor, Erika Ford, Becky Strauss, Shannon Metcalf and Amy Tingle.

Zeta Tau Alpha

The Sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha will be participating in the Bowl for Kids' Sake on Sunday, March 28 at the Chestertown Bowling Lanes. We will be helping to raise money for those children who are in medical need. This weekend will be very busy because we will also have a Car Wash behind Hardee's. This will be from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and the cost is only $3! So bring your dirty cars and trucks and have the ZTA's wash them for you! Let us wash off all of the dirt and grime from snow-covered roadways. We will help you find that new shiny look while the money goes to a good cause. Proceeds will go to the Susan G. Koman Breast Cancer Foundation. So, come on out and support the ZTA's!

Week at a Glance

March 12 – March 25

Film Series: Brief History of Time

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

26 Friday

The Sophie Kerr Committee presents Egyptian novelist Nawal al-Sa'dawi reading from her work. Norman James Theatre, William Smith Hall, 4:00 p.m.

The Washington College Drama Department presents Orgasmo Adulto Escapes From The Zoo. A contemporary Italian work by Dario Fo and Franca Rame. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m. Parental discretion advised.

The Student Activities Office presents Friday Night Live featuring Tom Acousti. C-House, Hodson Hall, 9:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m.

27 Saturday

The Washington College Drama Department presents Orgasmo Adulto Escapes From The Zoo. (see above) Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m. Parental discretion advised.

28 Sunday

The O'Neill Literary House presents The Second Annual Junior/Sophomore Reading. O'Neill Literary House Reading Room, 7:00 p.m.

The Garnett Elementary School is sponsoring a Spring Cleanup for the Playground. 12:00 p.m.—4:00 p.m. All are encouraged and invited to attend.

29 Monday

The Sophie Kerr Committee presents Shakespeare's Twelfth Night. Performed by King Alfred's Players, King Alfred's College, Winchester, England; Ray Ingraham, Director. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 7:30 p.m.

30 Tuesday

The O'Neill Literary House Video/Film Series presents The Jilting of Granny Weatherall. A film by Katherine Anne Porter. O'Neill Literary House Reading Room, 7:30 p.m.

The Center of Career Development presents a Career Brief/Drop-in: Networking—Who and How. Career Library, Spanish House, 3:30 p.m.

Hands Out Meeting. Basement of Minta Martin, 7:30 p.m.

31 Wednesday

Advising Day— see your adviser if you are to be advised.

The Center for Career Development presents Special Life/Work Planning: Condensed Version. 10:00 a.m.-12:00 p.m. and 2:00 p.m.-3:00 p.m. Career Library, Spanish House. Contact Dawn Baker with questions-ext. 7888.

The William James Forum and the Goldstein Program in Public Affairs present Is Deep Ecology Too Radical? A discussion with Dr. William Aiken, Chatham College, and Dr. David Rothenburg, New Jersey Institute of Technology. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Surveys Due.

Yadsruht

April Fool's Day (I am not kidding this time).

Classes cancelled due to lack of interest. There will be a party at Chuck Trout's house instead (I am kidding this time).

Washington College Welcomes

Nawal al-Sa'dawi

For Sophie Kerr Weekend

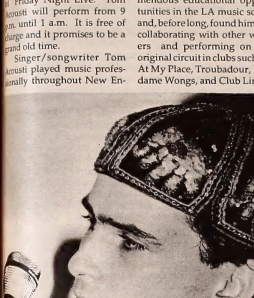
Friday at 4:00 pm in Norman James Theatre

A&E

Orgasmo: Feel It

From Thursday, March 25 until Saturday, March 27, the Washington College area will be able to witness an incredibly done play that will force some of its viewers into changing some of their opinions about women. Orgasmo Adulto Escapes From The Zoo, written by Dario Fo and Franca Rame, brings the women's liberation movement to the forefront by a series of monologues. Each different monologue tells a story about women and the troubles that they have dealing with man's sexuality. There are many parts of the monologues that strike at the heartstrings of men and women alike. Be aware of the stage though, at first it is reminiscent of a psycho/sexual maniacs basement, but that is the point really. And there is plenty of audience participation for those of you that like that sort of thing. Men should beware though. There are plenty of times where you will become uncomfortable with the actions of the performers. But don't worry. It is nothing that any one of you or I or any other male hasn't done to a member of the female population. This play gets even with men in one of few ways that women can get even: through their sexuality.

Student Profile: Heather Lynch



Student Profile Data Sheet

Name: Heather Lynch
Home: The Pearl of the Eastern Shore
Bust: 57 Waist: 10 Hips: 23
Hair Color: Red and cannot remember original
Major: Drama/English Year: Senior
Academic Standing: Dean's List student
Outstanding Achievement: Director of Orgasmo Adulto Escapes From The Zoo
Family: Oldest of five children
Children: 2—one black and one grey—experimental accidents
Favorite part of her body: the penis in her ear and her beautiful labia
Favorite TV Shows: Sesame Street and Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood
Favorite Movie: The Cook, The Thief, His Wife, and Her Lover.
Plans after Graduation: Get a job at Camp Fairlee Manor, an Easter Seals Camp, teaching theatre
Long Term Plans: Wants 75 cats all named Bob, wants to teach physically/mentally challenged children theatre, and wants to grow a penis tree by planting as many penii as possible and seeing what happens
Final Quote: "What Talented Birds On Sticks"

Just When You Thought It Was Safe To Go Back To The Coffee-House. . .

Tonight, the C-House presents the last of its installments of Friday Night Live. Tom Acousti will perform from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. It is free of charge and it promises to be a grand old time.

Singer/songwriter Tom Acousti played music professionally throughout New England before heading west to study acting at The American Academy of Dramatic Arts in Los Angeles. While at the Academy, Acousti saw tremendous educational opportunities in the LA music scene and, before long, found himself collaborating with other writers and performing on the original circuit in clubs such as: At My Place, Troubadour, Madame Wongs, and Club Lingerie. During the day, Acousti engineered and produced for Classic Sound, one of LA's busiest studios.

Since returning to the East Coast in 1986, Tom has built a strong following as a soloist specializing in college coffeehouse performances. Boasting a 100 percent re-booking rate, Tom Acousti has become somewhat of an institution at many East Coast colleges.

In 1987, Acousti released his debut LP entitled Process of Elimination, which received significant radio air play throughout New England. Produced by Acousti, songs cover a wide spectrum of production values, from just vocal and acoustic guitar to completely synthesized and sequenced tracks.

After a vigorous promotional tour, Tom temporarily put his recording career aside to create the role of "Nick Piazza" in the world premier pre-Broadway production of FAME, the Musical at the Coconut Grove Playhouse in Miami. FAME was scheduled to travel to the Walnut Street Theatre in Philadelphia when Tom decided to leave the show in order to focus solely on his music career.

Since returning to music, Tom has delivered his grass roots musical message to over 200 colleges and universities throughout the continental United States. With the lyrical honesty of Jackson Browne, songwriting versatility of Billy Joel, live energy of Bruce Springsteen, and a vocal style like no one else . . . singer/songwriter Tom Acousti has become one of the most soughtafter soloists of today's campus stage.

"Deep" Thoughts By William Aiken

"Deep" Ecology will be the topic at Washington College's William James Forum on Wednesday evening, March 31.

Professors William Aiken of Chatham College and David Rothenburg of the New Jersey Institute of Technology will be the speakers on the subject "Is Deep Ecology Too Radical?" The meeting begins in the Hynson Lounge of Hodson Hall at 7:30 p.m. and is open to the public free of charge.

Deep Ecology is a movement that began in the 1960's with the publication of Rachel Carson's Silent Spring and other books calling attention to pollution and species extinction on the planet. Norwegian philosopher Arne Naessis the best-known spokesman for the movement, which deplores the "Christian arrogance toward nature" and calls for radical steps to curb human overpopulation and destruction of nature.

William Aiken is a well-known expert on ethical issues in agriculture and is co-author of World Hunger and Moral Obligation. David Rothenburg is co-author (with Arne Naess) of Ecology, Community, and Lifestyle.

Junior Sophomore Reading

On Sunday, March 28, the O'Neill Literary House presents The Second Annual Junior/Sophomore Reading. The reading will begin at 7 p.m. and will end when it is over. The readers that will be contributing to this reading will be: Tanya Allen, Marianne Culbertson, Rachael Fink, Forrest George, Thane Glenn, George Jamison, Tara Kidwell, Jennifer Reddish, Kate Sullivan and J. Tarin Towers. Last year's reading was very entertaining and this year's promises to be the same. Come on out and show your fellow classmates your support.

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
A FEW GOOD MEN
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 5

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday

238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

"Population," from page 4

United Nations, Academia, our Churches, The American Medical Association, Environmental "Protection" Agency, National Institutes of "Health", CBS, ABC, NBC, BBC, New York Times, Los Angeles Times, London Times, "Think" Tanks, etc.

After years of analyzing and scrutinizing the absolute and direct relationship between global population increases and global environmental destruction, I warn you - Global Environmental Collapse Is Imminent unless drastic, unprecedented and immediate action is taken.

It is truly mind-boggling that 20 percent (1 billion) of our citizens on our ever stressed (overpopulated) planet are already suffering from malnutrition and 12-14 million of our world citizens are already starving to death each year, yet in spite of the fact that our projections indicate we will increase our population by 1 billion each decade, there is still no warning from our "leaders" about Global Population.

Keep clearly in mind that starvation is the symptom — Overpopulation/Gutless leadership is the problem. This is not to mention the accelerating nightmares (accelerating symptoms) of ozone depletion, acid rain, global warning, contaminated water supplies and unhealthy air, plus the escalating and cumulative symptoms of worldwide cemeteries, landfills and oil spills in combination with constantly increasing amounts of toxic, medical, chemical, biological, and nuclear waste. Again, these are the symptoms which will eradicate us, unless we address the problem — Global Overpopulation.

I could try to speculate but I just can't predict how angry — how enraged — the world's students and citizens are going to get when they finally figure out that the failure of our "leaders" to warn us forces our students, our families and our children to face the very genuine probability of death by population and starvation.

Time is against us — but I wonder if our students and citizens of the world know how fast we can mobilize, how fast we can begin to turn this nightmare around by millions upon millions of us marching on Washington, London, United Nations, College Campuses, Area Churches, etc., demanding Overpopulation Summit '93.

Overpopulation Summit '93, in contrast with the Earth Summit in 1992, which addressed the symptom (environment) would, for the first time in human history, bring together the world's foremost scholars and experts in population to develop plans and strategies to address the problem — Global Overpopulation.

It would be help if we would reflect, each hour, on the finality of our present situation (our population exploding and simultaneously our natural resources disappearing). If we would imagine — if we would visualize — what America (and the entire world) is going to look like with millions of us starving to death on our streets and on our campuses, etc., maybe that image — that image of members of our immediate family lying there helplessly and facing agonizing, prolonged and inescapable death — would be enough to spark our outrage at our so-called "leaders" — maybe that image of our Moms and Dads, our Sisters and Brothers, and our Sons and Daughters facing agonizing, prolonged and inescapable death — would be enough to jolt us out of centuries of complacency and wake all of us up to the reality that there is simply no time to waste before marching and demanding Overpopulation Summit '93.

The Ultimate Warning that I can share with you is that the hour is late! Overpopulation should have been addressed long ago. I just can't see any easy way around this. We either face a summit on overpopulation or we let our population explode and we face eradication.

We humans had best get marching — we had best send a message to our "institutions," to our churches, to our United Nations and to each of our Nations of fellow humans around the world that — in order to survive — we demand Overpopulation Summit '93. Most specifically of all — bearing in mind that when the people lead, the "leaders" will follow — we had best send this message to our very own elected "leaders," our gutless, worthless and pathetic United States Senators who, while purporting to represent our interests, created this overpopulation the rest to our lives — threat to our planet — by failing to warn us in advance. They were so afraid to speak out about Global Overpopulation, so afraid they might rock the boat, so afraid they might offend someone, so afraid they wouldn't get themselves re-elected to their $120,000.00 a year jobs, that they kept their mouths shut all this time and in so doing sold us and sold our planet down the river.

Sincerely and respectfully,
Michael Bloomgarden
Chestertown

"Tarleton," from page 2

the Military Academies, the theft of another branches' mascot is a serious offence that meets with severe disciplinary actions. But that's not important here, now is it? But, if the facts are not straight, how can Mr. Linehan get his point across?

Now I don't excuse the actions of the five either, nor do I excuse the individuals that suggested that they steal the sign in the first place. I also do not excuse the way that the situation was handled.

In fraternities, it is through the president that things are done, through him statements are made and through him that agreements are reached. To this day, the president of Frat A has not heard from the president of Frat B regarding the incident. In fact, except at an Interfraternity Council Meeting, the president of Frat A has never heard from any officer or member of Frat B. The president of Frat A's phone calls to Frat B, lest you think Frat A was not trying, were never returned. When the RA for the building that Frat A resides in, tried to make contact with the president of Frat B to ascertain what had occurred, he was rebuffed at each turn. So Mr. Linehan when the two groups cannot get together, and through their president's or RA's is the only way it will happen, what do you suggest?

Mr. Linehan has outlined in his article what he feels the responsibilities of the Security Department are, and what the role of the RA staff is. Now for the role of the institution. I feel it is the job of the school to create good citizens, well-rounded with an understanding of right and wrong. Now unless you've got a large amount of built-up guilt, all the formal apology writing that Mr. Linehan suggests isn't going to do you any good at all. Unless someone knows that the threats of repercussions are not empty words, they will in all likelihood go on breaking the rules. And breaking into places.

Mr. Linehan, we live in a world of rules, and those rules need to be enforced. I'm all for good-spirited tradition, and I don't want to kill the spirit of this school, but some actions cannot be excused. Remember your gentlemen's agreement, Charlie. I do.

Brian K. Tarleton
Sophomore

Second to none.

SECOND NATIONAL Federal Savings BANK
Over $1.6 Billion in Assets
FDIC Insured
503 WASHINGTON AVENUE
P.O.BOX 577
CHESTERTOWN, MD21620
410-778-1013
OPEN 6 DAYS A WEEK FOR YOUR BANKING CONVENIENCE
EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

Emily's
HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS
Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686
FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring:
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Cutting
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Sunbed
"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist
Embrocean – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal
Electrologist –
Louise Lesverton, L.E.

Olde Towne Barbers
Flat Tops
Frostings
French Braids
Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

Women's Tennis Weathers Storm

Lizzy O'Hara
Staff Writer

Despite the horrible weather much of us experienced over our Spring Break, the Women's Tennis team was able to plow through the snow and ice and face their southern opponents.

The first opponent, on March 16, was Newberry College. Washington College was able to make a clean sweep of Newberry, with a score of six for Washington College and zero for Newberry college. Washington's number-three player, Diana Clausen, was able to totally dominate her match by pulling off a score of 6-0, 6-0.

St. Patrick's Day was both green and sour for the women's team . Erksine was the team to beat that day, but Washington College lost 3-6. On the up side, Pam Hendrickson came through beating her opponent 6-3, 6-2. The same positive play was true for the doubles team of Pam Hendrickson and Jen Sloan. They were able to come out on top by a score of 6-4, 6-7, 6-3. Diana Clausen and Tina Lennon were able to beat their opponents as well by a score of 3-6,7-5, 6-2.

On March 19, the women met with the Trinity College (Texas). Trinity took control of the entire match, sweeping Washington College 6-0. The next match at Emory, against Smith, did not prove any better for the Shorewomen. The winning scores all went to Smith players. Jen Sloan, Diana Clausen and Tina Lennon all had their matches suspended, but were able to play later that same day.

Although the end of the break did not bring about the best results for the ladies of the WC Tennis team, the beginning did however, illustrating the great potential for the 1993 Spring season.

"Marshall," from page 3

Monday.). Rt. 1 was the same as 413. Only one lane open (as of Friday night, this was still true for parts of Rt. 1). The tracks of those that went before were all you could ride on. Rt. 1 was worse in one spot though: a three lane jug-handle was reduced to one lane, causing several near accidents in the short time it took us to get through the light at the jug-handle. The parking lot of the mall was cleared better than the major highway leading to it.

I'm not sure if many of you are familiar with Rt. 1. It is a heavily traveled route which links tightwads in the Trenton area with Filthadelphia and the PA Turnpike who are too cheap to drive to the turnpike bridge and get to the turnpike. It is traveled by people who often have no other way of getting to work. The section I mentioned above was business Rt. 1, an off shoot of Rt. 1, but it was the same for both on Monday.

Why was it so difficult for PennDOT to clear the heavily traveled roads at off hours? NJDOT had many roads cleared Sunday morning, and most major highways were cleared by Monday morning. (The NJ Turnpike began clearing as soon as the snow stopped. Crews started immediately.) Interstate 95 was snowed over for three days in different sections. All of it (in PA) was closed on Saturday (no surprise). From Girard exit to Woodhaven exit was closed on Sunday, and from Woodhaven north to Trenton, NJ was closed on Monday.

Well, we can draw up theories until the Sun turns black, but will that answer why an organization that is supposed to deal with such situations chose to ignore it this time? A state just across the river from Pennsylvania which got just as much snow had it's roads cleared quickly; why didn't Pennsylvania? I mean, NJ may be a place to drive through, but PA actually has businesses that people work at and need to get to. Clearing the roads, which is necessary to commerce, should be given priority over some plow-driver's coffee break, which is not.

Sorry, I just needed to make a pointless rant.

"Cars," from page 5

fuel than changing speed often.

- Air Conditioning. It makes your car less efficient because it adds weight and robs your engine of some of it's power. Consider installing a cutoff switch that automatically turn it off during quick acceleration. Light colored cars and white interiors are a lot cooler than darker colors.
- Trim and Power Packages. These add weight to your car and cut down on fuel efficiency. If the weight of your car increases by ten percent, your fuel economy will drop by four percent.

The 1993 Environmental Car

After reading several articles and calling the dealers myself, I would suggest the new 1993 Honda Civic three door VX model. It gets 55 miles per gallon, has an airbag, and is in the range of $10,000.

Compiled From:
Ecologue, Edited by Anderson, Bruce N. Anderson and Schuster, 1990. P'gs.172-185.

"Koon," from page 3

have led a series of attacks against the rights of all Americans. The campaign against abortion rights is therefore not only indicative of this group's dissatisfaction with advances in the status of American women, but also has been found and undying hatred of the American tradition of tolerance and moderation. To understand the motivation of men like Michael Griffin, we must further analyze evangelical extremists.

Historically, American reactionaries have struck at the same victims: Blacks, immigrants and women. When mainstream America becomes shocked by atrocities committed against one of these groups, the focus of attack is shifted to another subset of the American people.

Currently, we are in the midst of such a shift. For the last two decades, the American Right has focused like a laser beam on attacking women's right s, particularly abortion rights. When attacks on abortion rights within the mainstream political arena have succeeded, these extremists have asked for more radically restrictive measures. When attacks on abortion rights within the mainstream political arena have failed, anti-abortion groups have grown more militant and violent in pursuit of their ultimate aim.

The result of this evolutionary process has been alienation of the majority of Americans away from the anti-abortion movement. When moderates abandon the anti-abortion cause, more violent and narrow minded men are left in control.

At the same time, abortion foes are faced with a fundamentally alienating tactical dilemma. Although Pro-Lifers often compare themselves to the civil-rights movement, in actuality their material goals are fundamentally different. The goals of the civil-rights movement were to allow Blacks to eat at any lunch counter, ride in any seat on buses and to receive the same quality of education as Whites.

Tactically speaking, these are all positive goals, in that they are all geared to allowing people more freedom of action. As this is the case, civil-rights activists had great tactical freedom to pursue these goals, as the media continued to cover sit-ins and non violent protests. This clearly revealed the excesses of those who sought (and still seek) to oppress American Blacks.

But the anti-abortion forces are faced with a negative objective. They do not seek to allow people to do something; they seek to prevent people from doing something. Therefore they must actively "get in the face" of women seeking abortions. (And, incidentally, any women entering a facility which offers abortion services. In one case this inability to discriminate between abortion seekers and women seeking prenatal care ended in a young man punching a woman in the stomach, which resulted in a miscarriage (charges were later.)

This leaves the public and the media with the impression that organizations like Operation Rescue victimize women. This means that the same tactics which got extensive media coverage in 1988 are ineffective in 1993. The end result of this is an escalation of politically motivated violence.

Make no mistake about it; these radical evangelicals who like to compare themselves with the civil-rights movement are the same people who violently opposed it, and do to this day. It is significant that the Roe decision came at about the same time that racism was becoming socially unacceptable. Roe provided these zealots with a new vehicle to attempt to impose their backward and totalitarian beliefs upon America. It is no coincidence that David Duke opposes abortion rights. And it is also no coincidence that John Burt, Griffin's friend and regional director of Rescue America, is a former Klansman.

This brings me back to the point with which I began this article; what is it which gives someone who believes in the preservation of all human life the feeling that they are morally justified and qualified to act as judge, jury and executioner? The answer is as old as time itself; the fanatical conviction that one knows the absolute truth of God's will.

These people feel, as Pat Robertson does, that "The spiritual standard for America should be the gospel of Christ and everything in the Old and New Testaments." Men like Michael Griffin act in accordance with Deuteronomy 7:2, which states "When the Lord your God delivers them (enemies) over to you to be destroyed, do a complete job of it – don't make treaties or show them mercy; utterly wipe them out."

None of this is to be construed as a broad condemnation of pentecostals, charismatics, evangelicals or fundamentalists. I'm a South Carolinian, and I know what it means to be a Christian in the exclusive, Southern sense of the word. My mother's side of the family are Southern Baptists, and my father's side are devout Wesleyan Methodists. They're good, simple people, and their faith has at times been inspirational to me. I love them, and know that I can always rely on them.

But there exists a grave danger in faith which is too absolute. Griffin regularly attended an Assembly of God Church. As a pentecostal, he may have believed in the word of knowledge, which is the "ability to discern the needs and spiritual condition of another." One who believes that he possesses such a gift from God may assume absolute spiritual superiority. From there it is only a short step to killing in the name of the Lord. The more alienated and politically powerless such an individual feels, the stronger the temptation grows to sanctify America not in the blood of the Heavenly Lamb, but in the blood of the unbeliever.

In another column earlier this semester, I outlined the declining role of the religious right in the Republican Party. It seems that this decline will play a role in the further radicalization of the anti-abortion movement. These intolerant zealots feel that they are above the law. Operation Rescue's Randall Terry "Said that he regretted the act but that, after all, Dr. Gunn was a murderer of babies." Newsweek also quoted Klansman turned Pro-Life activist John Burt as saying "When Clinton came in we had to stop looking to the President and start looking to God."

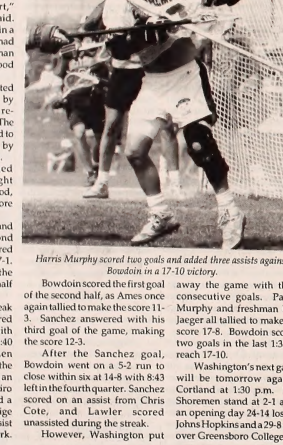
But it seems that the more these extremists look to God, the more they rely on the deadly methods of confrontation, sabotage, and assassination. And the more these tactics are used the more these unholy warriors become the tools of Satan. They will become politically marginalized, morally isolated, and bankrupt in their faith. And if they listen carefully to God, they will hear him say unto them "You must wander in the desert like nomads for forty years. In this way you will pay for your faithlessness, until the last of you lies dead in the desert." (Numbers 14:33) Such is the fate of those who place their trust not in God, but

Shoremen Bash Bowdoin

Men's Lax Moves To 2-1 On Season

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

On Wednesday, the Washington men's lacrosse team hammered Bowdoin College 17-10. Even though the field conditions were very muddy, the Shoremen stormed to a 12-3 lead over the visiting Bears. Jason Paige and Chris Sanchez led the offense with four goals a piece.



"It was a good effort," Coach Terry Corcoran said. "We played a lot of people in a muddy game. We probably had 30 people playing on a 40 man squad so we had a lot of good contributions."

Washington (2-1) started off the game with a score by Ted Greeley with 13:21 remaining in the first quarter. The Shoremen then built the lead to 3-0 on consecutive goals by Paige and Greg Mouracade.

Thomas Ryan ended Bowdoin's scoring drought with 2:36 left in the first period, but Greg Lawler made the score 4-1 just over a minute later.

Harris Murphy, Lawler and Sanchez opened the second period with three unanswered goals to build the lead to 7-1. David Ames scored for the Bears with 10:04 left in the half to pull within five.

After a long scoreless streak for both teams, Sanchez scored on an assist from Paige with 4:44 remaining. In the last 2:40 of the half, the Shoremen notched three goals to make the score 11-2. Paige scored on an assist from Murphy, Janairo "Hondo" Hernandez added a goal with 1:22 left, and Paige scored again on another assist from Murphy at the 0:46 mark.

Harris Murphy scored two goals and added three assists against Bowdoin in a 17-10 victory.

Bowdoin scored the first goal of the second half, as Ames once again tallied to make the score 11-3. Sanchez answered with his third goal of the game, making the score 12-3.

After the Sanchez goal, Bowdoin went on a 5-2 run to close within six at 14-8 with 8:43 left in the fourth quarter. Sanchez scored on an assist from Chris Cote, and Lawler scored unassisted during the streak.

However, Washington put away the game with three consecutive goals. Paige, Murphy and freshman Bart Jaeger all tallied to make the score 17-8. Bowdoin scored two goals in the last 1:33 to reach 17-10.

Washington's next game will be tomorrow against Cortland at 1:30 p.m. The Shoremen stand at 2-1 after an opening day 24-14 loss to Johns Hopkins and a 29-8 win over Greensboro College.

Men's Crew Looks To Strong 1993

Senior Leadership Along With Added Depth From Host Of New Faces Will Provide Edge

Duke Krieger
Staff Writer

It's all a quest for speed. That's why varsity rowers put up with anaerobic threshold workouts, erg tests, morning practices and absolute pain and suffering. This year, the varsity men are lean, strong, and in sync.

Coach Mike Davenport believes the last barrier for his rowers exists only in their minds, and he's not sure what to expect from the season.

"The physical tools are there -- now it's all mental," Davenport said. "I'm always the pessimist. I expect surprises and get them, but they're mostly better than I expect."

Men's Crew brought back more than a tan from Florida as well. Davenport was quite pleased with the team's Spring Break trip.

"We wanted fun for the kids, to build team harmony and build speed," he said. "I think we met all of those goals."

The team is a little behind in part due to winter weather and a plague of injuries, but they are firming up and are trying hard to perfect the "high speed-low drag" concept as well as using mental conditioning techniques taught by Davenport.

Seniors on the team will be helping to lead the way this season: Ari Kodeck, John McCarthy, R.J. Eldridge, and John "The Beast" Mulvaney. It's Mulvaney and Eldridge who help make up the men's varsity four, also with James Pitt and Eric Jewitt, which took a first place at the Metro Cup in Florida.

The men's varsity boat is the same group that was ranked third in the country last year (except for Pitt), and it is returning to do battle with Temple and Rhode Island.

The lightweight four is looking fast as well with a first place in the Metro Cup against the University of Central Florida and Rollins College.

Davenport says it's too early to tell how the season will go though, but things look good so far.

He says the key race will be the Murphy Cup in Philadelphia on April 17. Davenport believes this race has the same impact as a football team playing four games in a row and then evaluating their performance.

Davenport knows next year he will have a very young team. Five key seniors will graduate this year and leave tremendous shoes to fill. However, he thinks there is good depth in the underclassmen and the novice teams are full of potential.

But first things first. Beat Temple, keep the Truslow Cup away from Johns Hopkins, and complete the quest for speed.

Women's Lacrosse Hopes To Bounce Back

Sarah Feyerherm
Sports Information Director

Battling injuries and inexperience, the women's lacrosse team finally got its season underway on Saturday but found an even more formidable opponent in a visiting Mary Washington squad. Originally scheduled to be played at Mary Washington but moved to Chestertown because of better field conditions, the game saw the Shoremen fall behind early on their way to a 15-1 loss.

Spreading their 15 goals out between seven players, the visitors scored five first half goals before Kirsten Lucas answered with Washington's first goal of the season at the 26:16 mark of the first half. After that, it was all Mary Washington again as the Eagles pelted Shorewoman goalkeepers Nancy Millhouser and Peggy Busker with 24 shots, scoring eight first half goals and shutting out the Washington attack for the remainder of the game.

With several Shorewomen playing out of position, the Washington attack never got off the ground. On the other end of the field, line defenders Eleanor Shriver and Peggy Bowman played strong throughout the game despite being under constant pressure from the opposing attackers. Playing the majority of the game, Millhouser stood strong in goal, turning away seven Mary Washington shots.

"I thought the defense played well," noted head coach Diane Guinan. "You could really see things coming together for them and they were executing the things we had practiced."

"We anticipated a lot of their passes and were able to cut a lot of them off," said Shriver, who, along with Bowman, is the most experienced member of the defense. "They weren't a spectacular attack but we just had a few breakdowns and weren't able to double team as much as we would have liked."

With only 12 bodies -- and only a few of them healthy -- several Shorewomen were forced to play unfamiliar positions, which hurt the team, particularly in the midfield.

"We need to work on our transition game and generating more attack," said Guinan, who has compiled a 29-23 record in her six years as head coach. "We had been working on specific plays for the attack, but because of injuries, we had to move people around to different positions and 45 minutes before the game, I'm asking them to do things that they haven't practiced. Things were just out of kilter."

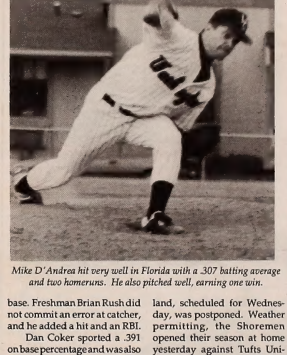
Lucas, who scored five goals last season, and senior Amy McCleary will be key to the success of the Washington attack as the season progresses. McCleary, a regional All-American and All-MAC pick last year, posted 35 goals last season, and should start producing again, once the offense finds its rhythm. Until then, the Shorewomen will have to focus on improving with each outing, allowing the younger players to gain valuable game experience while the veterans provide the necessary stability.

Baseball Catches On To Winning Spirit In Florida

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

The Washington baseball team returned from sunny Florida with three wins in six games against Wooster College, Western New England (two games), Skidmore College and New Haven University (two games).

After falling to Wooster 11-0 in the opener, the Shoremen bounced back with a 7-6 win against Western New England. In their second game against Western New England, they again lost 5-3 but then reeled off consecutive wins versus Skidmore and New Haven University. New Haven won in the sixth game by a score of 8-1.



"We are pleased with all aspects of the game after playing in Florida," Coach Ed Athey said. "Let's hope we brought it back with us."

Mike D'Andrea, Joe Boan and Keith Whiteford all picked up a win a piece on the mound. Kevin Roland also pitched well in a complete game effort but took a loss.

D'Andrea exploded offensively, hitting .307 on the trip with two home runs and four runs batted in. Rory Conway and Gerry Scully also paced the offensive attack, batting .409 and .375 respectively.

Senior second baseman Mike Hanifee provided a strong contribution as well with a .285 batting average, including two doubles. He also made only one error in the field in 28 chances.

Andy Parks batted .250 with flawless fielding at first base. Freshman Brian Rush did not commit an error at catcher, and he added a hit and an RBI.

Mike D'Andrea hit very well in Florida with a .307 batting average and two homeruns. He also pitched well, earning one win.

Dan Coker sported a .391 on base percentage and was also errorless in the field. Chad Campbell had a base hit in six at bats, and Max Walton went one-for-three at the plate. Kyle Hutchinson also played, batting three times during the trip.

Washington's double header against Western Maryland, scheduled for Wednesday, was postponed. Weather permitting, the Shoremen opened their season at home yesterday against Tufts University.

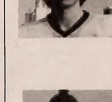
The team will travel to Haverford College tomorrow for a 1:00 p.m. double header. They will play at home again on Monday, March 29 with a 1:00 p.m. double header against Lincoln College.

Men's Tennis Rallies In '93

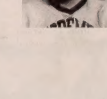
Doug Hoffberger
Co-Sports Editor

The Washington College Men's Tennis program got off to a tough start, returning from Spring Break with a record of 1-4. The losses during the spring trip to Hilton Head were at the hands of Division-I Clemson and, ninth-ranked Division-III Emory, and Division-II Furman. The loss versus George Washington came before break on Washington's home omni-surface, The Benjamin Johnson Lifetime Fitness Center. The sole win came against Newberry College, during the spring trip.

Regardless of the rocky start, Coach Tim Gray is optimistic that his netters, once the season progresses, will compile wins in those crucial matches. At the number two doubles position, Erik Pikus and Emilio Bogato have compiled a record of 4-1. Washington College's doubles teams will be the strong point of this years squad.



Also during spring break, the netters played in the Emory invitational, a flighted tournament, which counts for personal rankings and not team rankings. Competing in this tornament along with the Division-III fifth-ranked Shoremen, were 24th-ranked Methodist College, 11th-ranked Skidmore, ninth-ranked Emory, eighth-ranked Trinity, and number-one Kalamazoo College, located in beautiful Kalamazoo, Michigan.



At the Emory Spring Festival, Alberto Diaz advanced to the semi-finals in the number one seeded flight. Trevor Hurd won the Number two singles flight, reminissent of the Cincinatti Golden Bears. Trevor, the bears are very lucky that the Maryland Terrapins aren't in the touney, because we all know the story of the tortoise and the bear, or is that the hare? Anyway the Terps would have won.

Emilio Bogato advanced to the semi-finals in the flight of the number three seeds and Erik Pikus advanced to the Quarters in the number four spot. Moffat, Raja, and Mclemore all competed in their respective 5th, 6th, and 7th spots, playing hard, but failing to make it to the quarter finals.

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

For their efforts on the field, the awesome Shoreman attack of Harris Murphy, Jason Paige, and Chris Sanchez have earned the Newt's Player of the Week award.

The entire team has played downing opponents left and right, or lefty and righty! Paige, a Junior Syracuse transfer, tallied 4 goals and 2 assists in the win versus Bowdoin. Chris Sanchez also got way off scoring 4 goals and an assist. Harris Murphy, the father or grandfather of this line, added 2 goals and 4 assists.

Speaking of caps, nobody should enter the Newt's tournament - I've already won! Anyway, look for the entire lacrosse team to get nice on Cortland State on Saturday!

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Bankernatal)
Janet Thompson
(301) 778-0888

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Men's Lax Thrashes Both Greensboro And Bowdoin; 29-8 & 17-10

Women's Lacrosse Hopes To Rebound From Loss In Opener

WC • ELM

Sports

Brian Flynn: ONE WAY ------> ------>

Baseball Hits For Average In Florida With 3-3 Record

see story p. 11

Scores

Men's Lacrosse

Washington	29
Greensboro	8
Washington	17
Bowdoin	10

Baseball

Washington	0
Wooster	11
Washington	7
W. New England	6
Washington	3
W. New England	5
Washington	10
Skidmore	2
Washington	7
New Haven	5
Washington	2
New Haven	8

Women's Lacrosse

Washington	1
M. Washington	15

Jon Mulvany, John McCarthy, James Pitt and Eric Jewett lead this year's men's rowing team. The team just returned from Florida where they competed with the University of Central Florida and Rollins College. Coach Mike Davenport is unsure of what to expect from this season as he says, "I'm always the pessimist. I expect surprises and get them, but they are mostly better than I expect. The key race for Crew will be the Murphy Cup in Philadelphia, Pa. on April 17.

Crew Very Impressive In Races During Spring Break At C. Florida

Murphy, Paige Sanchez: NEWT's Players of the Week

"Why can't we all get along?"

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: Cloudy, H in low-mid 50s, W-wind
Weekend: Partly Cloudy and cool H mid 40s-50s

Volume 64, Number Twenty-Two • April 2, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Turmel Leaves Student Activities

Amanda Burt
Co-News Editor

After nearly two years in her position as Washington College's first Director of Student Activities, Teri Turmel has resigned. She will become the Director of the Student Center Program at Rice University in Houston, Texas. Her resignation is effective April 23.

Turmel said that she decided to accept the position at Rice because it would be a "great opportunity to work at a very prestigious school." She added that there will be more cultural opportunities for her at Rice, where she also hopes to begin work on her Ph.D.

Because Turmel beganthe student activities program at the college, she said it will be difficult to leave. "I'll miss everything ... the reaction of people when something gets done –comedy nights, leadership programs, concerts."

Turmel further noted that it is next to impossible for students to coordinate major student activities such as The Connells concert that was recently held at the college because most booking agencies will not deal directly with students. "Students can be taken advantage of," she said.

Although Turmel does not know whether or not her position will be refilled, she said that the student activities program encourages a positive social atmosphere for students during their academic education. "If students are happy while they're here, they'll give more back later," she remarked.

"I'd like to thank Student Affairs, Security, Maintenance, and the cafeteria staff," Turmel said. "They have all been incredible and have accommodated me without questioning."

African Unity Model

Christabel Garcia-Zamor
Staff Writer

March 3-6, seven Washington College Students and Dr. Tahir Shad of WC's Political Science department went to Howard University in Washington, DC to represent the African country of Angola in the National Model Organization of African Unity (OAU).

The director of the model was Dr. Micheal Nwanze, Director of Seminars in Diplomacy and Chair of the Political Science department at Howard University.

Thirty-four schools were represented, with students coming from as far away as Texas.

The OAU is a regional organization dedicated to addressing pressing nationwide issues of modern-day Africa. The Model OAU is designed for students to learn more about the role of diplomacy by conducting meetings utilizing the same parliamentary procedures as the actual OAU.

During the three-day stay, Washington College students assumed a role of diplomacy, officially representing Angola. We each were assigned to represent our country in one of six commissions, including the Council of Ministers, Economic, Social, Liberation and Defense, and Mediation, Conciliation, and Arbitration. Beforehand, the students who attended had to create a paper of regional policy reform for each commission which was called a resolution.

Meetings were all day, starting at 8 a.m., and they often ran as late as 10 p.m. in debate of which resolutions were to be voted on and passed by each commission. Few resolutions passed easily, and many hours of debate dealing with exact wording took place, often making it seem as if meetings got us nowhere.

Sashi Fernando, a junior Washington College student from Sri Lanka said, "It was a really good experience — not just for an International Studies major — but for anyone with an interest in world wide concerns. It was a learning experience. There was a lot of frustration. I really enjoyed it, though I learned in a short time that diplomacy is not an easy task."

It was often our job to stand before all the other African representatives of each com-

See "OAU," page 12

Off-Campus Students and Jaycees Organize Earth Day at Worton Park

Jill Sakaduski
Staff Writer

Earth Day, an annual recognition of our planet to aid its preservation and reconstruction, has been slightly overlooked in the past. However, in Chestertown this year, Earth Day will not be forgotten.

The Society of Off Campus Students, a newly formed organization of students who attend Washington College and live off campus, has worked in conjunction with the Kent County Jaycees to organize an Earth Day benefit on Saturday, April 24.

With the Mayor and Council's permission to use Wilmer Park, SOCS and the Jaycees will provide an entire day of earth awareness.

Group founder and project initiator Curt Millington has worked closely with County Court Clerk Mark Mumford to organize the society and plan the day's activities.

"It's important that Earth Day be recognized annually, especially in such an agricultural town," Millington said. "With the town and students working together, Earth Day can truly become an eagerly awaited holiday in Kent County."

The day's activities are long and plentiful, and begin as early as 8 a.m. Along with Beth Armstrong of Kent County Parks and Recreation, and Beryl Friel of Kent County Recycling, members of the groups and other volunteers will participate in the Betterton Beach clean-up.

At noon, members of environmental organizations like the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Sierra Club, Camp Echo Hill, the Cousteau Society, World Wildlife Fund, and others will set up booths with environmental information.

Campus organizations such as Terra Firma, Hands Out, and Sane/Freeze will contribute information as well.

See "Earth," page 12

Inside

Moonpile Reforms the Role of College Sports 3

What Did You Write On The Board 4

Convict Escapes to West Virginia 5

Junior/Sophomore Reading Was a Blast 9

Lots O' Letters See Pages 2, 6 and 7

Guess I'm not the only one...

Yup yup yup.

The last thing I wanted was a letter war. Sheesh. No, make that the next-to-the-last thing I wanted. The VERY last thing I wanted was to be criticized (again) for use of the word 'fuck.' Here's my quote from last week: "Give me a fucking break." Does it sound to any of you like I'm cursing someone out? Didn't think so. By the way, the quote still stands. It's not, and it wasn't, directed at anyone specific. But we're all adults here. So what if this is an R-rated newspaper? We're all over 17 here. At least, in chronological age. If I choose to use a naughty word, so be it. I don't censor letters. Please don't tell me to censor my editorials. (NOTE to squeamish readers: the words 'damn' and 'hell' appear in two of the letters in this issue. Read with caution.)

No one has to tell me that I'm paranoid. I said it myself last week (paragraph 3, line 8 of my editorial). But wouldn't you be a bit paranoid too? Not about anything personal. But what if you were running a coffeeshop, and your customers started talking about how much they like the coffee down the street. Or if they started saying, "you know, the service across the street is really speedy." Wouldn't you wonder a little bit if people thought your establishment was doing something wrong?

Washington College is not the place for a race war. No place is, but my meaning is that WC basically just recently kicked itself in the pants and started trying to make its stats look a little more realistic compared to those of the nation (or the Eastern Shore).

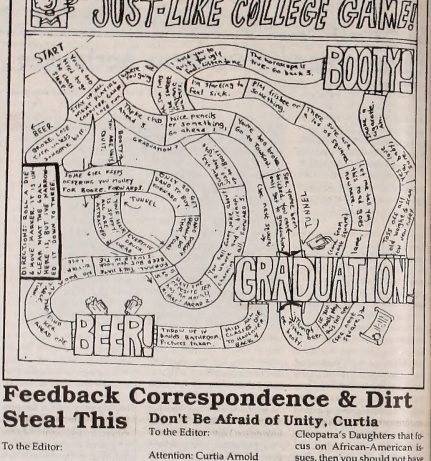
Black students are not the only ones who face racism.

I mean three things by this statement. First of all, There are multitudes of ethnic groups who find themselves being judged solely on their heritage/skin color/last name/religion/what-have-you. Second, this includes whites. I don't believe that "reverse discrimination" is an accurate term. Discrimination exists, period. And the only way it will cease to exist is if we all try to understand each other a little better. And third, everyone, I believe (albeit idealistically) is troubled by racism. I don't think anyone hates another human being or group thereof without being troubled by it a bit. And I think the people who sit idly by and let things happen do so because they're scared and/or ignorant.

Which brings me to my next point. Ignorance is the biggest problem Americans face today. Any of us who participate in the educational system, whether as students or as teachers, are trying to combat this.

But it's not easy. Ignorance exists and it feeds hatred, fear, and more ignorance. And I think all of us are guilty to a certain extent. I for one have no idea what the ideals, goals, prospects, purpose or membership of Cleopatra's Daughters are. I admit that I know nothing about it except they're hosting a jazz thing tonight. But I'd like to know. If a group arose calling themselves "Sons of Beowulf" I'd ask the same thing.

Is it a color thing? I hope not. Because, and I say this 100 percent honestly, I don't care what color, height, weight, age, religion, sexual preference you are. YOU ARE HUMAN. And I respect all humans until they give me cause to lose that respect.



And I'm not trying to start controversy. I'm just asking for the story. I'm just asking why everyone's so upset if there's "really no problem with racism on campus." I'm asking if there's a problem in the classroom, and if so, what. I'm asking the members of Cleopatra's Daughters, in a completely innocuous manner, to write us (the student body) a letter or an article explaining who they are and what their agenda is.

Why am I paranoid? Because what I do fear is an outbreak of hatred on this campus. Between any persons it can do no good.

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief: J. Tarin Towers
Photography Editor: Margaret "Wattie" Wurts
News Editors: Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan
Sports Editors: Doug Hoffburger & Matt Murray
Features Editor: Justin 'M' Cann
Arts & Entertainment Editor: George Jamison
Layout Editor: Brian Matheson
Advertising Manager: Peter Jons
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Visions do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday night at 8 p.m. for that week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickmail. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-8361.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback Correspondence & Dirt Steal This

To the Editor:

It seems kleptomania has swept Washington College. At 4 a.m. last Tuesday morning, a couch, a full-length mirror and two-framed Spanish poems were stolen from the International House first floor.

Stealing from fellow students is unseemly. The International House has livened a socially dead campus with numerous parties and by funding interesting, timely speakers. Taking furniture from the house hurts everyone in the end. Tuition is rising just fine without thievery's additional costs.

No, the items taken from the International House were not financially that valuable. Yet the framed poems are of sentimental value to the house. Besides, the mirror and the couch were convenient for first floor residents.

Personally, I do not care who committed the act. The residents of International House ask that they be returned, no questions asked.

Jennifer Gray Reddish
International House

More letters on pages 6 and 7

Don't Be Afraid of Unity, Curtia

To the Editor:

Attention: Curtia Arnold

U-ni-ty (yoo' ni te), n. 1. the state of being one single entity; oneness. 2. the state of being combined with others to form a greater whole. The Random House College Dictionary defined unity to its fullest potential.

I was quite astonished to know that the definition of unity that I had in mind was similar to one defined in the dictionary. How will we be able to demonstrate unity if we have narrow-minded people like you, who feel as though you should be the spokesperson for every African-American student on Washington College's campus?

No, not every African American student feels that they are confronted with racism everyday. As far as I am concerned, you do not have supportive evidence to prove how you are faced with racism everyday. How would a racist know if he/she is a racist if you do not tell him/her? So what you might be the only African-American student in a class! Get over it! Low self esteem, yes, that's what it is. Who gives a damn if you are the only African-American student in the class? I guess if you were the only women in a class that would not be so bad, right?

If you have supportive groups like the Dale Adams Heritage Exchange and the Cleopatra's Daughters that focus on African-American issues, then you should not have a problem with knowing your heritage and being secure about it. The purpose of going to college is not to gain a higher education, but to introduce other cultures and aspects of other peoples' lives as it is in the real world. Did it not occur to you when you applied to this institution of higher learning that this was a majority Caucasian school? Just as you said, "Don't be afraid of Afrocentricity...," don't be afraid of UNITY.

I do not know if you were aware of the fact that you contradicted yourself in stating, "I am confronted with racism everyday [...] I personally believe that there is no such thing as racism; there is only intelligence and ignorance."

You be the judge, is it ignorance or intelligence to place yourself in a situation where you are unable to thoroughly explain how you have been placed in that situation? If your feelings are that strong I do encourage you to support black colleges, but in order to do so, your attendance is imperative. I respect your opinions, but when they become dogmatic that is when it is time to draw the line.

Shrylnee' Johnson
Debbie-Ann Robinson

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

Last week a speaker from Accuracy in Media came and spoke at Washington College. During his speech he made it clear that while his group does seek to encourage the media to be accurate in reporting the news, this is not their primary objective.

He posited that the media was run by leftist journalists, and that this results in a liberal bias in the presentation of straight news stories in both the print and broadcast media. He presented his group as an arbitrary watchdog over the media, and defined this function as a socially valuable one in forcing the presumable liberal press to be more impartial.

This intrigued me, as I really have not noted any sort of liberal bias in the American media. It seems to me that when events sponsored or endorsed by conservative organizations are not covered, the participants take steps to rectify this problem. So during the question and answer period I asked what he thought of the success the conservatives had gained by Operation Rescue's attempts to get media attention at the 1988 Democratic National Convention. I also asked what the possible implications of bad press resulting from the murder of Dr. Gunn were.

At that point he informed me that as a matter of general principle he did not publicly address any issues concerning abortion. This struck me as not constructive, in that someone who insists that the media has an agenda ought at least pay us the courtesy of instructing us of their own agenda. One who contends that the media is not fair to the conservative movement should not refuse to address one of the issues which the conservative movement has made a vital part of its agenda.

This inconsistency disturbed me, for inconsistency in action implies a poorly formulated understanding of one's own ideology. So after the lecture I obtained four free issues of Accuracy in Media's newsletter, the AIM Report. Sometime later a friend gave me two issues of Campus Report, which is the newsletter of AIM's sister organization, Accuracy in Academia (AIA).

One AIM article assailed a producer at ABC News who allegedly advised Clinton during the campaign. Another defended Caspar Weinburger's contention that he does not remember anything about Hawk missiles being shipped from Israel to Iran. Yet another sought to vindicate Nixon by linking the Watergate break-in to a prostitution ring whose customers included officials at the Democratic National Committee.

The common thread through all of these articles is not conservatism per se. It strikes me as most odd that AIM, who profess conservatism as their agenda, nevertheless fail to address themselves to conservative Democrats or conservative independents. AIM material, when not ad-

See "Koon," page 11

The Reformation of Athletics: Moonpile on Sports and Education

Justin Cann

Lately our society has been reevaluating the role that sports play in education. Some states have enacted 'pass-to-play' legislation regarding High School athletes. These laws usually require the student athlete to get a certain grade point average in order to play inter-mural sports.

Colleges and universities have also been reevaluating the role of sports as the result of NCAA investigations regarding the illegal recruitment and payment of student athletes. Have varsity sports become the reason that many athletes attend college? Have they overshadowed academics as the primary reason such schools exist?

I believe that varsity sports truly have become more important than academics for many people including the students, the administration, and even alumni. Many students attend colleges solely for the opportunity to play varsity sports, hoping for a shot at the professional leagues. School administrations overfund sports programs at the expense of academic programs in hopes that alumni will be roused to give more money because of the school's illustrious sports record. The alumni, thus targeted, when they do give money, earmark it for the team of their choice. Administrations also allow sports to interfere with classes by allowing students to take excused absences for sports events.

Now, I will be the last to say that sports should be completely eradicated from the college and university environment. Used wisely, they can foster physical fitness and community spirit: two important things to the academic well-being of an institution.

There can be no doubt that a person in good physical shape will be mentally sharper. Physical fitness and education have been going hand in hand since the ancient Greek schools for good reason. What we need to do today, is to make a system in which sports and education can co-exist without individuals losing sight of their primary reason for being at a college: education.

First, I suggest that a time be set aside each day during which no classes are held. A good time might be from between 2:00-4:00. During this time, a rec-sports program would hold tournaments and informal athletic competitions. Students would not be required to participate, but would be strongly encouraged to take part. These sorts of intra-mural sports would, aside from providing a regular exercise regimen, foster a sense of unity in the student body.

Students would be thrust into social situations with others who they may not have associated with otherwise. They will have a common ground on which to stand if they did not already. This may help to reduce the schismatic tendencies inherent in student bodies.

Second, the role of intermural sports would be de-emphasized. For example, the administration would not allow students to take excused absences for varsity and junior varsity sporting events. If a student decides she would rather be on the playing field then she must accept the unexcused absence. Practices could be held during the 'rec-sports time' each day so as not to interfere with classes. Away games may still interfere, but each student would be required to make the decision for himself.

However, inter-mural sports would not be simply cut altogether. They do foster an inter-mural sense of academic community that is important. Varsity sports should foster this sense of community between schools rather than provide professional leagues with meat. Baseball provides us with a good example here. They do not generally recruit from colleges, but instead maintain farm teams. The NFL, NBA and other professional sports leagues should look to this example and stop

See "Sports," page 12

Open Forum: Hamsters Help You Flirt

Note: Tanya Allen was going to write this Open Forum about something else. However, Tanya Allen is having a bad week. Because Tanya Allen is having a bad week but still has to turn in an Open Forum for this week's Elm, she is submitting an essay she wrote when she was a wee little Freshman—back when she was still young and innocent and had hamsters.

Tanya Allen

Everyone needs a pet. However, most college dorms do not allow their residents to have any sort of animal in their rooms besides fish. In my opinion, fish are ugly and die quickly. My friend Kim had three goldfish at Emerson last year: Fairfax, Flannery, and Fred. They're all dead now.

One of my mother's Syracuse roommates had a fish. Her roommate was also a messy person. My mother does not like people to be messy. (I know this because I myself have been messy in the past. Now I am hearing impaired because of the loudness of my mother's screams when I was being messy.)

One day, a long time ago, my mother decided to clean her roommate's half of the room, because it was messy. My mother put her roommate's fish's bowl on the radiator to get it out of her way while she cleaned up her roommate's mess. Needless to say, her roommate's fish's bowl's water boiled. My mother's roommate's fish is now dead. My friend and fellow Washington College student Mike just got a plecostimus—a gray, slug like fish—for his birthday. It's not dead yet but it sure is ugly. Maybe he should have my mother clean his room.

Anyway, if you're planning on going to college, and are planning on having a pet, which you should be planning to do, because everyone needs to have a pet, forget about fish, and think about…hamsters. Hamsters are nice to have and if your RA happens to ask to see your room sometime to make sure you don't have any pets in it you can quickly throw a bunch of your jeans and sweaters over the hamster cage and then smile and nod a lot at your R.A. while professing to be petless.

I have two hamsters, Eegor and Viola. I spell my male hamster's name with two E's because at the time that I named him I didn't know that the traditional spelling of the name Eegor is "Igor." Now I tell everyone that I meant to spell Eegor like I spelled it, and they believe me. Eegor lives in a glass tank and thinks that he's a plecostimus. I say this because I put a small, glass bowl in his tank—one of the sort usually used for tropical fish, and he loves it. He sleeps in it all the time and looks quite delighted with himself when he does so. Many of my friends say that Eegor is stupid for doing this and for thinking that he is a plecostimus but I know they're wrong. He does look pretty bored sometimes, though, even though he has his fish bowl, so I've gotten him a girlfriend, the aforementioned Viola. I didn't come up with the name Viola, another friend did.

I made the traditional mistake when I got Viola. I forgot

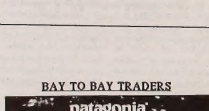
See "Hamsters," page 11

The Best of The Board

Things to Change & Things to Keep

Ryan Walker
Board Person

If you contributed to the success of last week's Board, buy yourself a big ol' ice cream cone. If not, write something on this week's topic about the role of alcohol at Washington College.



And do some drawing. As of now, the competition for the professor/administrator drawing prize of twenty five dollars is less than heated, but that just improves your odds. We've got to give the money to someone, so grab a card and draw. And stick to the petty and imposing rules (no dice, Scott).

We promised to give the best ten answers to last week's question, "What would you change at WAC? What would you keep?", but we lied. Here are the seventeen responses most representative of the varying concerns and positions of those who inked their think. Sorry we're skimping on the requests for sameness, we misplaced 'em.

Fleas for Change
- Get kegs back on campus.
- Get a real RA hiring process.
- Better free condoms.
- Bus in more men with big hair.
- Change the fact that I am here.
- Goober Junction--get rid of it.
- A football team, by God!
- No mandatory attendance for classes! We are all adults and will have to take responsibility for our own actions. If we fail then its our problem!
- Eliminate the athletics department.
- Put cots in the library.
- Don't build the new academic building! Use Bill Smith and put the funds to better use.
- The idea to increase enrollment is ludicrous--ask 80% of the population and they came here to go to a small school.
- Arm security! Put some teeth in the law!

Keep it the Same
- Goober Junction--keep it forever.
- May day
- The Disco Ball
- Expired drugs in Health Services--it keeps the element of danger and chance in all our lives. We are TOO safe.

BAY TO BAY TRADERS

NOT JUST ANOTHER PRETTY FACE

CANNON STREET COURTYARD
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
LOCATED BEHIND BOSTON SCAPE

20 % SALE
THROUGH MARCH
ON

PATAGONIA
RAY BAN JANSPORT
ATLANTIS MAD BOMBER
BULA GREAT LAKES

FUNCTIONAL GEAR FOR ACTIVE SPORTS IN ALL CONDITIONS

Know Your Virii

Disinfectant

PAUL REVERE VIRUS: This revolutionary virus does not horse around. It warns you of impending hard disk attack — once if by LAN, twice if by C:.

RIGHT-TO-LIFE VIRUS: Won't allow you to delete a file, regardless of how old it is. If you attempt to erase a file, it requires you to first see a counselor about possible alternatives.

DAN QUAYLE VIRUS: Prevents your system from spawning any child processes without joining into a binary network.

DAN QUAYLE VIRUS 2: Their iz sumthing rong with yore compueter, ewe just cant figyour owt watt.

MARIO CUOMO VIRUS: It would be a great virus, but it refuses to run.

GEORGE BUSH VIRUS: It starts by boldly stating, "Read my test ... no new files!" on the screen, proceeds to fill up all the free space on your hard drive with new files, then blames it on the Congress Virus.

ROSS PEROT VIRUS: Activates every component in your system, just before the whole thing quits.

ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER VIRUS: Terminates and stays resident. It'll be back.

MICHAEL JACKSON VIRUS: Hard to identify because it is constantly altering its appearance. This virus won't harm your PC, but it will trash your car.

ELVIS VIRUS: Your computer gets fat, slow, and lazy and then self destructs, only to resurface at shopping malls and service stations across rural America.

OLLIE NORTH VIRUS: Turns your printer into a document shredder.

TERRY RANDLE VIRUS: Prints "Oh no you don't" whenever you choose "Abort" from the "Abort, Retry, Fail" message.

TED TURNER VIRUS: Colorizes your monochrome monitor.

JIMMY HOFFA VIRUS: Nobody can find it.

ADAM-AND-EVE VIRUS: Takes a couple of bytes out of your Apple.

LAPD VIRUS: It claims it feels threatened by the other files on your PC and erases them in "self-defense."

CONGRESSIONAL VIRUS: The computer locks up, screen splits erratically with a message appearing on each half blaming the other side for the problem.

CONGRESSIONAL VIRUS 2: Runs every program on the hard drive simultaneously, but doesn't allow the user to accomplish anything.

FEDERAL BUREAUCRAT VIRUS: Divides your hard disk into hundreds of little units, each of which does practically nothing, but all of which claim to be the most important part of the computer.

GOVERNMENT ECONOMIST VIRUS: Nothing works, but all your diagnostic software says everything is fine.

HEALTH CARE VIRUS: Tests your system for a day, finds nothing wrong, and sends you a bill for $4,500.

STAR TREK VIRUS: Invades your system in places where no virus has gone before.

AT&T VIRUS: Every three minutes it tells you what great service you are getting.

THE MCI VIRUS: Every three minutes it reminds you that you're paying too much for the AT&T virus.

PBS VIRUS: Your PC stops every few minutes to ask for money.

POLITICALLY CORRECT VIRUS: Never calls itself a "virus," but instead refers to itself as an "electronic microorganism."

OPRAH WINFREY VIRUS: Your 200MB hard drive suddenly shrinks to 80MB, and then slowly expands back to 200MB.

TEXAS VIRUS: Makes sure that it's bigger than any other file.

AIRLINE VIRUS: You're in Dallas, but your data is in Singapore.

SEARS VIRUS: Your data won't appear unless you buy new cables, power supply, and a set of shocks.

NEW WORLD ORDER VIRUS: Probably harmless, but it makes a lot of people really mad just thinking about it.

GALLUP VIRUS: Sixty percent of the PCs infected will lose 38 percent of their data 14 percent of the time (plus or minus a 3.5 percent margin of error).

IMELDA MARCOS VIRUS: Sings you a song (slightly off key) on boot up then subtracts money from your Quicken account and spends it all on expensive shoes it purchases through Prodigy.

FREUDIAN VIRUS: Your computer becomes obsessed with marrying its own motherboard.

NIKE VIRUS: Just Does It!

KEVORKIAN VIRUS: Helps your computer shut down whenever it wants to.

CLEVELAND INDIANS VIRUS: Makes your 486/50 machine perform like a 286/AT.

CHICAGO CUBS VIRUS: Your PC makes frequent mistakes and comes in last in the reviews, but you still love it.

This Week: Dixon's Auctioneers

Every Wednesday, starting at 9:30am and ending only when all the merchandise is gone, Dixon's Auctioneers in Crumpton Maryland holds the largest used item auction on the Eastern Shore. Everything you could possibly imagine (old books, antiques, jewelry, furniture, knick-knacks, old Church alters and 4 foot candle holders, for example) can be found here. This is a wonderful place to go if you need to purchase odds and ends. You are not only recycling re-usable items that are in good condition, but at the same time forgoing the temptations of mass consumerism and the environmental side-effects resulting from the common production of synthetic materials (of which nearly everything is made).

Christabel Garcia-Zamor

On Wednesday, March 31, I attended this Eastern Shore event. I heartily recommend this gathering, not only as a recycling opportunity, but as a cultural experience. You will defiantly walk away from it with a true taste of the Eastern Shore in your mouth. The auctioneer sits on top of a stand with wheels and talks in a fast mickeymouse voice that is hard to decipher, and people crowd all around him. The battery-driven mike is hard to hear. There's tons of native food around, like snowcones, cotton candy, and fried chicken. The conglomeration of people is amazing. I saw license plates from as far away as Washington State. Many of the people there are antique dealers who come to make mass purchases for resale. Outside, plants and country CD's were for sale.

Across the street, next to Lane's Liquors, is an open lot, where just (mostly antique) furniture is sold. There was so much there that it could have filled up the whole lawn in front of Bill Smith! An added treat: From about 5-10 pm, live BlueGrass Country is played inside Dixon's salebarn. So next time you need something or feel like blowing a few bucks, or just want a taste of Eastern Shore Culture, go checkout Dixon's Auctioneers in Crumpton, Maryland.

How To Get There:

1. Head South on Washington Avenue/Route 213, cross the bridge and past Smiley's.
2. Make a left on Rt. 544.
3. Go for about 10-15 minutes. When you get to the flashing yellow light, make a left. Make your immediate left into the salebarn parking lot. There should be lots of cars there. Enjoy.

DeProspo On Porn

On Saturday, the Gender Relations Awareness Alliance will present a lecture by Dr. Richard De Prospo, titled 'The Female Pornographer: Katt Shea Ruben and 'Cat' McKimmon." The lecture will be held at 10 a.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room in Miller Library.

De Prospo will integrate a discussion of recent landmark anti-pornography legislation with some brief clips of soft-core pornography films, including Rubens' performance in Stripped to Kill and Poison Ivy.

In addition, he will talk about such controversial figures as Bob Guccione, the publisher of Penthouse, and Andrea Dworkin, a lesbian activist.

De Prospo said he may also consider the difference between the male and female pornographer in the production of soft-core genre films.

Escaped Rapist

Last Tuesday Randy McBee escaped from the Eastern Pre-Release Unit in Church Hill, Queen Anne's County, Md, four days after he arrived in Church Hill from the Central Laundry Facility in Sykesville.

He was finishing a five-year prison sentence for a robbery committed in Washington County, Md and would have been eligible for parole next year.

McBee allegedly broke into the home of a Queen Anne's County Commissioner's son — twice. Reported stolen were two pistols, a shot gun, 100 rounds ammunition, hiking boots and some camouflage clothing.

Friday morning at approximately 8:30 a.m., McBee allegedly forcibly entered the home of an elderly woman and proceeded to sexually assault her while holding another woman and a young girl hostage.

He escaped with the woman's tan 1990 Volvo.

A statewide search involved a five-hour State Police helicopter patrol and a K-9 squad. A Chestertown home, reportedly belonging to a relative of McBee, also was searched.

Tuesday night the Volvo was found near Berkley Springs, West Virginia, in the vicinity of McBee's former home. McBee was sighted in area, which is densely wooded and near the Potomac River. He was chased on foot late Tuesday night but has not been apprehended.

Apparently McBee is an accomplished survivalist.

He has escaped twice before from West Virginia prisons, while serving time for rape and armed robbery.

Correctional officers feel that McBee was not an unsuitable candidate for the pre-release center since his last infraction was over three years ago.

—Compiled by J. Tarin Towers from the Kent County News, March 31 issue; Queen Anne's County Record Observer, March 31 issue; and the Baltimore Sun, March 31 issue.

Editors-in-Chief needed for 1993-94

Pegasus and Elm

Please contact Board of Publications Chair Richard Striner by April 15

Questions? Call Elm at 8585 or Pegasus at 8584

Other staff positions will be available after selection of the editors-in-chief.

Layout Editor Trainee wanted immediately.

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Andy's

337 1/2 HIGH ST.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9.pm

FRI 2 SCUBA DIVE BINGO Classic Rock
SAT 3 THE MARK BRINE TRIO Country/Blues singer songwriter from Baltimore
778-6779

Pip's Discount Liquors

Complete One Stop Service
Domestic & Imported Wines, Beer And Liquors
COLD BEER — CHILLED WINES
QUANTITY DISCOUNTS BELOW OUR REGULAR LOW PRICES
TELEPHONE 778-6128
KENT SHOPPING PLAZA, CHESTERTOWN

$5 off any service over $20 with ad
(one ad per customer)
The Beauty Lounge
Paul Mitchell & Nexus
Open Tuesday through Saturday
Downtown behind Post Office
778-2455 Chestertown, MD 21620

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY
THERE'S NOTHING MIGHTIER THAN THE SWORD

You Want to Drink? Do it Responsibly

Responsible Drinking

Some recent incidents on campus have threatened current beneficial campus policies. Times are changing and we need to adapt to avoid future restrictions which could inhibit social life on campus. The administration has been basically lenient in recent times but this does not mean that we can press our luck. We are lucky to have such a liberal drinking policy here on campus. Many colleges and universities are bound by much greater restrictions. There are several reasons why we have been able to remain under this system.

Our small school environment keeps problems within our community such as maintaining open communication lines with the administration. There is an unwritten trust issued to the students expecting them to act responsibly and respectfully for the most part. Obviously, there is always going to be some trouble but we believe this sort of trusting system minimizes that trouble better than the tyrannical administration that operate without sympathy to individual concerns.

This provides us with a great deal of freedom. There are no students monitoring entrances and exists at every door. We do not have to pester ourselves with complex guest lists. It is easy to forget the freedoms you have until they are gone. There is no reason why a few individuals should spoil these freedoms of the whole. Slowly, occurrences are going to force the administration to install restrictions which may infringe upon our privileges in the near future.

Respect fellow students' rights and residence. Be responsible and act with self-restraint when attending a social function, or that social function may not be there for you next time. If you don't believe we have these freedoms, respect your fellow students who do.

Theta Chi Fraternity

Interim Chair on C-House Wall Issue

To the Editor:

I am writing to clarify many things concerning the CoffeeHouse/Dale Adams Society issue. I was the head of the CoffeeHouse Interim Project and can testify for the truth of what really happened. Many of the facts that the Elm told you were true, but it did not include everything. The reason that the wall was, I hate to use the words, "white washed," was because of the derogatory comments on them. It was not the "Support African American Colleges" statement that inflamed such an issue, but other comments.

Things such as "Kill at Will" referring to murder without remorse. Other things on the wall, such as, a poem about hating all black women because they were/are "bitches and whores." As well as comments referring to white women in the same way. This was written by an African American male whom I assume the Dale Adams society has sanctioned. But it was in no way a reflection of the society as a whole. Many members of the group, as well as others who saw what was up there, were either inflamed with anger or just started to cry. Once the issue was discussed with members of the society and Dawn Israel became aware of what was said, it was just known that something had to be done. It was not appropriate for a project which was supposed to represent the coming together of the college, nor did it represent the groups message. The decision was made to re-do the wall with a consensus on what should be said, rather than the previous message sent out: "Any member of the group can go down and work on it."

Second clarifications, the titles given to the two letters by Curtia and Lisa were titled by the Elm and not the writers themselves. They wanted me to clarify this point. They felt that the titles were inappropriate and did not reflect their articles. For future reference, maybe people should write the titles of their letters so as not to come to the same result.

There will be much controversy over this issue for a while. I just felt that the truth should be known. I am a member of the Dale Adams group, though somewhat inactive for lack of time, but being a caucasian I do not feel rejected from the group. I do not see this society as a "black" one. Many of the members are African-American, but there are a large number that are not. Before any one judges the group I think they should be sites it for what it really is and take some time to go to a meeting or a function. Only if people see in black and white will they see the group in such a category. Life is a shade of grey that varies between the two extremes.

Eve Zartman

Editor's Note: Letters to the editor, just as anything else in a newspaper, are titled according to the column space which the letter occupies. Titles suggested by the authors are helpful, but often must be changed to fit the allocated space.

Lack of Interpersonal Communication

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to Eleanor Shriver's letter in last week's edition of the Elm. I was disappointed by Ms. Shriver's condemnation of my commentary in Campus Voices in the March 12 edition of the paper. My disappointment was aroused not because I was in any way happy with my comment, but because in the ten times I saw Eleanor after the paper came out, she failed to say anything to me about my statement.

In her letter, Eleanor stressed the importance of support amongst the RA staff. Certainly, communication plays a vital role in that support system. Unfortunately, Eleanor's lack of communication undermined that system and caused her to write an article which I feel attacked me unjustly. As my comment on the SGA campaign was worded very poorly, I'm afraid Eleanor misunderstood my meaning. In fact, my comment was not intended as a personal attack on Eve Zartman but as a criticism of the excessive use of campaign flyers. As Ms. Zartman's dollar bill flyer was the most unique and, therefore, the most prominent flyer, it was the first one which came to mind when I was asked the Campus Voices question. After the paper came out, my realization that the comment might be taken in the wrong way, caused me to write a letter of apology to Eve, four days prior to the appearance of Eleanor's letter.

Eleanor's comment was not the only negative response to my statement which I received. It was, however, the only one which I had to read the Elm to find out about. Everyone else spoke with me directly. I am sorry that Eleanor failed to show me the support which she feels to be so fundamental to the RA system.

Charlie Linehan
RA, Cardinal

Elm Editor is 'Paranoid and Vulgar'

To the Editor:

After reading your editorial, "Controversy Comes in Different Colors" in March 26,1992 of the Elm, I was outraged by your arrogance. I suggest that you reread my letter because you took my statements out of context. I was not addressing the article "What's all the Hubbub, Bub." It wasn't even mentioned in my letter, let me break it down for you point by point.

First, there is no intelligent reason why the editor of a college newspaper should degrade herself and her opinion by the use of profanity. College students, especially by the time they become juniors and seniors, should be able to express themselves in acceptable and appropriate ways. Your word choice was completely unprofessional.

Second, although I agree with the title, "Racism is Everyday Issue for African American Students," that was not the focus. Furthermore, my letter addressed racism as a form of ignorance dealing with my personal opinion about Afrocentricity.

Third, no Tarin, I was not "insinuating that The Elm was "crying reverse discrimination or separatism."" Although The Elm and its staff are not crying reverse discrimination or separatism, there are people who do, and I was addressing them in my letter. All letters submitted to The Elm as editorials are addressed "To the Editor," but that does not mean they are directed towards you personally. In fact, the letters "To the Editor" are directed towards the readers of the paper.

I also feel that you seem to be paranoid. I think this is a good place to ask, what seems to be your favorite question, "WHY'. Why is it that people become "paranoid" when these issues are raised at WAC? A lot of people feel the same way as I do. Would you curse them also?

There was no reason for you to attack my letter in such a speculative manner; but, you said yourself, "there's nothing like a good controversy." I hope the Washington College community read my letter and based on their experience, formed their own opinion.

Curtia Arnold
Sophomore

Dale Adams: For People of All Cultures

To the Editor:

The Dale Adams Heritage Exchange was founded as a learning experience for the students and faculty at Washington College. It was meant to be a group where all people, not just one select group, could learn about each other and contribute a little of their culture to our small community at WAC.

The following is not a criticism of Dale Adams. It is, however, the feelings of myself and other members of the organization.

The events that took place at the Coffee House, referring to the writings on the DAHE wall, did not uphold the ideas that Dale Adams stands for. "Support black colleges," although not personally offensive, does not belong in a group that represents people of all cultures.

There were many other improper things that were written ion the wall. Such as the statement concerning interracial couples. This statement basically said that no real black man or black woman would date outside of their own race. Being a white member of Dale Adams who happens to date a black woman, I did not appreciate this. It was a personally opinion and choice. Who I choose to date and who decides to date me is no one else's concern but mine and my girlfriend's. If one chooses not to date outside of their race that is fine, but everyone has the right to choose for themselves and no one should condemn that choice.

This sort of statement had no place on the Dale Adams wall. Many other members of Dale Adams were also offended besides myself. Not just for this comment, but others as well. This is why such swift action was taken by the leaders of DAHE to show the whole college campus, as well as its members, that this is not the view of Dale Adams, but rather other individuals. That is why an apology was needed and made. No one was, to my knowledge, accusing the Elm of being racist. But as the editor of the Elm said, "controversy brewed."

As Dawn Israel said, the only way that things will get settled is when the rumor mill at WAC is stopped. The Elm, however, didn't do much to suppress these rumors, instead they just fueled the fire. The Editorial in March twenty-sixths Elm was not appropriate. Antagonizing the members of DAHE with childish phrases such as "Woo woo woo" and "oooooo" only added to the hostility that already existed. It made the Elm seem like it was hoping for this type of controversial event to occur and it was going to milk it for all that it was worth. I know the Elm can't be that desperate for news stories. The use of foul language in the editorial only infuriated people more and made tempers flare. This use of foul language and childish phrases was entirely uncalled for and just plain rude.

It is a granted fact that there are problems with Dale Adams. But its original purpose is still important and should always be respected. The only way to overcome prejudice and hate, which everyone has, is to learn and understand. Knowledge is power and with power you can overcome any obstacle. Its true that Dale Adams does focus highly on Afro-American topics and events, but this can only change if you, the students and faculty at WAC participate in the organization. Everyone is welcomed. Many projects of unity are in place, such as a visit to Johns Hopkins and the Card for the terminally ill children there. Dale Adams is not a black thing, it's not a white thing, it's a people thing, and that's the only way it will work!

Richard McKee, Member
Dale Adams Heritage Exchange

"Think About What You're Saying"

To the Editor:

Attention: Curtia Arnold, Lisa Castro, and all remaining ignorant people

It seems that whenever I pick up the Elm, there's always something about racism inside. But, so far all I've seen is hypocrisy. Things are becoming so drastic that every time I say something I feel as though I'm offending someone because I'm black. I truly believe that there is a lot of pent-up hatred inside some of our students. I for one don't believe that people try to understand one another. People are too hung up on the issues of color, nick names and the word "racism".

First of all, no one really cares what color you are, it's about who you are. If you know that you exhibit an enticing persona, why worry (please, by all means flaunt it)? As far as nicknames are concerned...they're personal. I feel that no one has the right to intrude on a person's private life. Whatever my nickname may be, realize it's mine and only I have to live with it. And, if people make you feel uncomfortable, don't tell us, tell them. All of this outrages talk is about nothing. From my point of view, EVERYONE faces racism at one point in their lives. I believe that all these generalizations people are making are being stretched too far. And it's "gittin" on my nerves.

The only thing that truly bothers me is the quote "Support Black Colleges." I'm not saying I don't believe what the quote says. But, I believe that those who say it are hypocrites. In all seriousness, if you really want to support black colleges... you should have gone to one. Think about what you're saying! Most of the black students here are here on scholarships that they wouldn't have received from a black college because of their race. Here YOU are a minority, and WAC recruits and urges you to come here. Black colleges don't pursue you like WAC does. Here you are not a number, you're a person with a face and name. When a black prospective student visits this campus, do you think they want to hear your hypocritical chant? Hell no!!! What you're saying is don't come here...attend and support black colleges. You can be proud of your race, but don't forget that you are still a person.

"Sometimes I feel discriminated against, but it does not make me angry. It merely astonishes me. I have no separate feeling about being an American Citizen and colored. I am merely a fragment of the Great Soul that surges within boundaries." —Zora Neale Hurston

Tanae N. Coates
Freshman

Linehan Strikes Back at His Critics

To the Editor:

First, let me apologize for taking up more of your time discussing an issue which has already been run into the ground. I had not intended to address the "broken window fiasco" again. Unfortunately, Mr. Tarleton's letter in last week's edition of the Elm made a number of innaccurate statements about my article which I feel it is my obligation to correct.

I would like to start by saying that at no point in my article did I attempt to label the act of vandalism ("breaking and entering" according to Tarleton —Funny, I wasn't aware it had ever made it past the "breaking" point) committed by the five freshmen as tradition. The only time I mentioned tradition, except in my discussion of traditions which presently exist at Washington College, was in my explanation of the events which took place prior to the act. At the point which the students attempted to force open the locked window, tradition ceased to be associated with the incident. By personally condemning the actions of the five, I thought I had made this clear. Apparently it was not clear enough for Mr. Tarleton.

Next, I would like to address Mr. Tarleton's mention of my "[Repeated reference] to the situation as 'petty'" (Elm, 26 March 1993). I've been through the article a number of times and as far as I can see, the word 'petty' appears only once. I would hardly label that repetition. Further, the word appears after discussion of a harrassment incident which took place in Caroline recently. I hope Mr. Tarleton would agree that, by comparison, the broken window seems rather petty.

As for Mr. Tarleton's ramblings on the art of communication between fraternities — well, I'm a little confused. I'm not exactly sure how it works over at KA (I'm sorry. I know everybody was just getting used to Frat A and Frat B.), but at Phi Delt, we're confident in our communication skills and we don't rely solely on our President to speak for us everytime something goes awry. In fact, on the night of the incident in question (if my information is correct — and I think it is) there was a good deal of communication in Cecil, after the incident occurred, between a number of KAs and a number of Phi Delts who had sufficient knowledge of the incident to talk about it. In addition, there was plenty of communication between the KA president and a number of ranking Phi Delts at the IFC meeting which Mr. Tarleton mentioned. (Since this is really the only point in the two years which Mr. Tarleton has been at this school that I have spent any amount of time in his presence, I'm assuming that the "gentleman's agreement," to which he made such ominous reference, is supposed to have taken place here. That said, I'm afraid I have to admit that I have absolutely no idea what he is talking about.) Presumably in deference to his president, Mr. Tarleton was particularly silent during this meeting. The KA president, in his position as mouthpiece for his fraternity, seemed to agree that the incident may have been taken a bit far.

And that brings me to my final point. In my article, I intended to point out that the incident was a overblown. Of course I felt that the five freshmen deserved to have some type of disciplinary action taken against them. What they did was wrong. However, bringing the case before the Student Conduct Council, especially considering the culprits' cooperation in the aftermath of the incident, was overkill. I thought so when I wrote my original article, and I think so today.

Mr. Tarleton spent a good deal of time in his letter lecturing me on getting my facts straight. They are straight and they've been straight all along. Perhaps he should have spent more time reading the article and getting his own facts straight before writing such a misguided response.

Thank you for your time. I won't waste any more of it on this tired issue.

Charlie Linehan
Senior

Week at a Glance

April 2– March 7

Film Series: Cousin Bobby

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

2 Friday

The Washington College Community Chorus presents A Gilbert and Sullivan Extravaganza. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center. Coffee and pastries, Cafe Gibson at 7:00 p.m.; performance8:00 p.m.

The Dale Adams Heritage Exchange presents Jazz Extravaganza featuring Jazz Johnson. Coffee House, Hodson Hall, 9:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m.

3 Saturday

The Gender Relations Awareness Alliance and the Department of Philosophy present A Symposium On Freedom Of Expression: The Sexual Revolution In The Arts. Sophie Kerr Room, Miller Library, 10:00 a.m.-3:00 p.m.

The Student Government Association and Theta Chi present The Great Heiney Heist featuring Probable Cause. Dining Hall, Hodson Hall, 9:00 p.m.- 12:00 p.m. $3 at the door.

Passover Begins

4 Sunday

The Goldstein Program in Public Affairs presents Can We Govern Ourselves? Douglas Cater, President Emeritus of Washington College. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 8:00 p.m.

LAST DAY TO WITHDRAW FROM CLASSES

5 Monday

1st Annual Just-Like College Game!™ Tournament. Mike Sapp's room.

6 Tuesday

Advising Day: no class.

7 Wednesday

The Women's League of Washington College: Spring Style Show, Luncheon, and Card Party, featuring A Day in the Life of an Eastern Shore Woman. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 11:30 a.m. Reservations required.

8 Thursday

The International House presents The Middle East Crises. The Honorable Talcott Seelye, U.S. Ambassador to Syria. International House Basement, 7:30 p.m.

ΘX and SGA Present

PROBABLE CAUSE

live at

The Great Heiney Heist

Saturday April 3, 9pm-12am

$3 cover charge

A&E

Love Them O's

The Washington College Student Activities Office has tickets for upcoming Baltimore Orioles Home Games. Tickets are now on sale for the Friday, April 16 and the Saturday, May 1 games. April 16 will be the Orioles' third home game of the season. The seats are for the first base side and the May 1 tickets are for the third base side. Game times are 7:35 p.m. and 7:05 p.m., respectively. The tickets are being sold as first come, first served and there will be no reserved tickets. They are being sold for $8 and can be purchased in the Student Activities Office, and if enough people are interested, transportation can be provided.

Student Profile: Jason Truax

A Libra from Chambersburg, PA, Jason Truax has a cummulative GPA of 3.40. He is double majoring in International Studies, where he is concentrating in Anthropology; and Art, where he is concentrating in History. He declared a double major because he cannot decide in what field of study he really wants to concentrate. He is the current president of WC's Anthropological Society and Amnesty International. He joined Amnesty International because he is a firm believer in Human Rights.

Jason has applied to be an intern at the Phillips Collection in Washington D.C. for this summer; the Phillips Collection is holding nineteenth and twentieth century French and American Art. He would eventually love to combine both of his disciplines and work at the State Department Art Bank.

The former Features Editor of the WC Elm, Jason likes chocolate and nuts and his favorite cuisine is Greek. In fact, Jason can even speak a little Greek, and French, but only to the people that he likes. He also comes across as quiet but once you get to know him, he shows no mercy. He has even proclaimed himself as the most pensive person on campus.

One day, Jason wants to have a lot of money because he wants to have four houses: a Brownstone in New York, a Victorian Townhouse in Washington D.C., a Villa in Northern Greece, and a little farm in the Pennsylvania Amish Country. He also wants to have a doberman named ZEUS because he believes that all people of small physiques should have big dogs. This could stem from the fact that he does not like cats. He hates them because when he was a child, his parents thought that he needed a companion because his sister was older, and the cat taunted him. Ever since, he has been "allergic."

Mary Holmes said that he was boring, but he has a good fashion sense. And Elisa Hale has observed him as more catty and bitchy than any woman that she knows.

Jason's final thought was that he believes that everyone has the right to be who they are.

Music - Music - Music

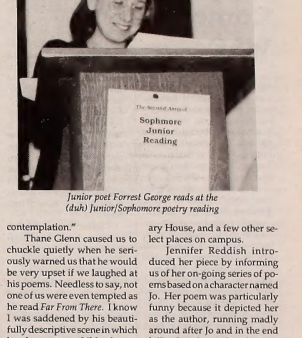
Jazz Night

This Friday, The Dale Adams Heritage Exchange and WC's Student Government Association are sponsoring a Jazz Night. This event is special because they are aiming for a nightclub atmosphere in the Coffee House, while still keeping it a "classy joint."

Jazz Johnson, a local Chestertown star, will be performing with his entire band. And to top it all off, the night will also feature performances by Washington College students, such as Ciaran O'Keefe, Chris "FATMAN" Goldenberg, Bridgette Avant, Yvette Hynson, and Tina Balin.

Jazz Night will run from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. The cost is $3 for WAC students and $5 for non-students. Come on out and see your friends and classmates there and join us in "All That Jazz."

Juniors to Jam



Juniors John Harris and Ciaran O'Keefe will present a recital on Tuesday, April 6 at 8:00 p.m. in Norman James Theatre.

Ciaran, on piano, will be playing works of Chopin and of the 20th-Century composer Ginesterra, as well as one of his own compositions. A Music and Psychology major, Ciaran has been playing the piano since the age of four.

John Harris, a Music major, will be playing a variety of works from a Concerto by Alexandre Guilmant to a jazz tune by Leonard Bernstein. Currently John is principle trombonist with the Delaware Repertory Orchestra and lead trombone for the Dover Laboratory Jazz Ensemble. Professor Garry Clarke and jazz pianist Dick Durham will accompany him on piano.

A Room Full O' Scary People

Marianne Culbertson
Staff Writer

Junior poet Forrest George reads at the (duh) Junior/Sophomore poetry reading

"You want a cigarette?" I asked Tanya Allen as she began to bring the diverse group to order. It was the evening of March 28, 1993, and the Second Annual Junior/Sophomore Reading was about to begin. To anyone who does not understand what exactly this entails, I will offer the briefest explanation possible. This is an event where anyone in the above classes may come together in a semi-organized group to read any poetry or prose that they have created.

This year we had an unusually large group of writers who decided that they could overcome the embarrassment of reading their own work: Rachael Fink, Thane Glenn, Kate Sullivan, Tanya Allen, Tara Kidwell, Jennifer Reddish, Tarin Towers, Forrest George, and myself. Each one of these talented people were able to move the audience to laughter or quiet contemplative thought. I don't believe that anyone present found themselves yawning or staring up at the ceiling in prayer for the end.

In fact, this was one of the most humorous groups that this college has witnessed. At several points the audience was prompted to almost hysterical laughter. Wine and cheese warmed everyone's palate while Tanya's poem Oranges caused us to envision beautifully round citrus fruit flying through the air. My piece induced laughter as the audience imagined my psychotic character Murphy, stuffing a pair of detergent perfumed panties between his mattresses "for later use and contemplation."

Thane Glenn caused us to chuckle quietly when he seriously warned us that he would be very upset if we laughed at his poems. Needless to say, not one of us were even tempted as he read Far From There. I know I was saddened by his beautifully descriptive scene in which he shows us a child who remembers that his father's toys were burned when he contracted Scarlet Fever and relates this event to his father's actual death.

Both Thane and Tanya have had poetry published as Broadsides. This semester, look for Thane's poem Hands, and Tanya's poems From the Steps of the Silver Valley Rest Home, and Mother in Stones. These poems are posted in The O'Neill Literary House, and a few other select places on campus.

Jennifer Reddish introduced her piece by informing us of her on-going series of poems based on a character named Jo. Her poem was particularly funny because it depicted her as the author, running madly around after Jo and in the end killing her, thus ending the saga. Jenn is Managing Editor of the Tribal College: Journal of American Indian Higher Education, Editor of the International Studies in Political Science Newsletter, and Student Editor of the Washington College Review. You may also view her work in earlier publications of Broadsides and in the Washington College Review.

See "Reading," page 10

Twelfth Night

Tara Kidwell
Staff Jeweler

On Monday, the King Alfred Players performed Twelfth Night at Tawes Theatre. The play opened with a Greek-style chorus that, for some, became tedious after the first act. The acting troupe, while quite knowledgeable of their script, did not seem to make their characters go farther than a two- dimensional portrayal.

The actor who played Sir Andrew Aguecheek, Simon Halls, was perhaps the most entertaining and believable; the next possibly being Malvolio, Bruce Rodgers. The clown, Feste, played by Mark Dymock, did not encompass the brilliance which is what Shakespeare intended the clown to be. Another discrepancy within the play was that instead of having the clown sing the songs, they chose to have the Greek-esque chorus sing them, and even they were flat. The Bard responsible to the play was mixed, some enjoyed it while others felt that the players did not do justice to this incredible Shakespearean comedy. Many who enjoyed the production felt that it was due mainly in part to the fact that it was a play written by Shakespeare.

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
A FEW GOOD MEN
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St.
Chestertown

gallery 59

Mon. - Sat.
10 - 5 p.m.
778-3483

Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday

238 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

Gilbert & Sullivan Come to WAC

Join the Washington College-Community Chorus for a Gilbert and Sullivan Extravaganza, an evening of music by the Victorian-era Savoyards much loved on both sides of the Atlantic. The concert is set for Friday, April 2 at 8:00 p.m. in Tawes Theare of the Gibson Performing Arts Center.

The chorus, directed by Associate Professor of Music Kathleen Mills, will perform excerpts from five comic operas by the legendary duo, librettist William Schwenck Gilbert and composer Sir Arthur Seymour Sullivan. The program features favorites from the choral repertoire suchas the lovely madrigal When the Buds are Blossoming from Ruddigore, and The Prisoner Comes to Meet His Doom from Yoeman of the Guard, as well as ensemble numbers such as the quartet Queen Victoria herself adored, Then One of Us Will Be a Queen, from Gondoliers and the hilarious trio I am a Maiden, Cold and Stately from Princess Ida. Truly versatile, Gilbert and Sullivan's collaborations range from the sentimental(Oh Love, True Love from Sorcerer) to the somber, and from the silly(Oh, Happy the Lily When Kiss'd By the Bee from Ruddigore) to the satirical. That sharp satire of Victorian society and politics continues to entertain audiences today.

The Lobby of Tawes Theatre, transformed for the evening into "Cafe Gibson," will be open from 7:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. for coffee, tea, and sweets prepared by local chefs. Admission to the concert is free and pastries and beverages will be available for a small fee.

Garry E. Clarke, Professor of Music and Chairman of the Music Department, is accompanying the chorus. Soloists include Heron Point residents Traver Berry, Henry Brust, and Richard Eberts; local teachers Jim Landskroener and Laura Tidemann; area residents Kate Bennett, John Farr, Hilda Greene, Meredith Davies Hadaway, Marcia Landskroener, Diane Landskroener, Art Leiby, Glenn Miles, Steve Mumford, and J.S. Edward Tatnall; Washington College students Katie Degentesh, Niki Goenaga, Erin Talbert; and Washington College Professor of Sociology Steven Cades.

"Reading," from page 9

Metaphysical Mistress Tara Kidwell enticed us with her Gypsy jewels and her piece Algiz which is Runic for protection, while Forrest George brought a silent calm over the listeners with her poem For Those Who Wonder. Rachael Fink describes her poem Plastic Landscape as "a merging of dissimilar images into a cohesive visual image." Needless to say, I agree with her. The audience was fully able to comprehend Kate Sullivan's poem Revelation, about which she commented that "it is the piece most personal to me and I felt that through this poem I was giving the most of myself."

Tarin Towers did not surprise those of us who know her in any respect with her rant, Telling These People to GO AWAY. Here we found the Editor In-Chief of The Elm discussing one of her most favorite things in life, ORGASMS. When asked to comment on her work she stated, "all the critics love me in New York." Besides the NY skyscraper job of running The Elm, you may have seen her performance in Orgasmo Adulto Escapes from the Zoo, or even more recently jumping around on her most favorite thing, a circus size trampoline.

To all of you who failed to attend or even acknowledge the existence of such an event, you missed what Robert Day openly proclaimed as "terrific, with one exclamation point for each of the writers." There is always next year, but don't put it off for two long or Tanya's airborne oranges may seek you out and juice on you. Everyone else, thank you for attending and a HUGE THANKS to the writers who had the GUTS to read. No Tarin! Not that knife again!

"Koon," from page 3

dressing such non-partisan issues like the now-infamous GM truck booby-trapped by NBC, addresses itself solely to Republicans.

The axe which AIM grinds is not ideological, but partisan. In the examples cited above, AIM focused on either embarrassing Democratic politicians or defending Republican politicians. AIM had a booth at the Republican Convention at Houston, and I'm certain that some enterprising journalist with more time than I could find many, many more links between the Republican Party and AIM. If it looks like a Republican Party front organization, and if it squawks like a Republican Party front organization, then it probably is a Republican Party front organization.

Although it disturbs me that what is essentially a partisan organization represents itself as nonpartisan (and therefore tax-exempt), my real beef with AIM is that it does not do the job it claims to. While AIM does publicize inaccurate news stories, from what I have seen in its newsletter it does little to actually uncover them. Indeed, many of the articles blasting inaccurate news items actually use other journalists or news organizations as the source.

Conservatives argue that industry should let the free market determine its decisions on matters of policy. So does AIM, in an article denouncing a suit to have pesticides listed as a food additive. Yet if this is the case, then why attempt to intervene in the free market in the news media?

If the conservative point of view sells more papers or gets higher ratings, then it will stand on its own, without the whining of groups like AIM. But the fact is, conservatives seem less willing than liberals to actually buy newspapers. There are market forces which determine whether the Washington Post or the Washington Times has a higher circulation. If AIM was ideologically consistent, they would shut up and let these market forces determine editorial policy.

Oddly enough, it seems that AIM has not taken a serious look at Campus Report, the newsletter of its sister organization, Accuracy in Academia. This newsletter has a more journalistic format; indeed the format is similar to the college newspaper you are reading right now. But if AIM subjected Campus Report to the same critical eye with which it evaluates other publications, it would find that Campus Report is neither accurate, nor academic.

The front page of Campus Report features what on first glance appears to be a straight news story entitled "Reagan Legacy Under Attack." A little blurb under the author's byline informs the reader that it is a "proactive article." Assuming, however, that the average college student (Campus Report's target audience) does not know what proactive means, they are liable to read it as a news item.

Among other things, this article states that Carter neglected the military. This is a blatant lie; Carter increased the military budget substantially, and many of the weapons which won Desert Storm stem from the Carter era. The author also erroneously asserts that "the way the country feels about itself" cannot "be measured with statistics." Actually it can, and it has been since the invention of nationwide polling.

The author (who I will not name because in my view he's an idiot whose lack of command over factual data is an embarrassment to his organization) also asserts that Reagan "cut taxes for every class, not just the rich." This guy needs a big whack with a clue stick. While it may not be false to assert that Reagan cut taxes, it is very misleading to state this without looking at the ramifications of these cuts.

The author's method of reasoning is anecdotal and poorly researched. Therefore, so that it may not be said that I am unfair, I will employ the same sort of argument in opposition to him. When Reagan cut taxes, he did so at the expense of federal funding for programs administered by the states. This meant that states had to raise taxes. Since the federal government relies heavily on the progressive income tax and most state governments rely on regressive "revenue enhancers" such as lotteries, taxes on cigarettes and sales taxes, the net result of Reagan's programs was a net tax decrease for the rich and a net tax increase for the poor.

This seems obvious to anyone with a brain, but it is apparently not obvious to the author of the aforementioned article; therefore, he has no brain. Yet what is most disturbing about AIA is that it offers $100.00 to any student who submits an article documenting "classroom indoctrination or political correctness." AIA offers money to those willing to rat on students or faculty who are active politically and are liberal.

AIA also offers "Stop the Liberal/Media Lynch Mob" t-shirts for $12.00. What is most ironic is that in this country I have never heard of a liberal lynch mob, only conservative

Emily's

HAIR & BEAUTY PROFESSIONALS

Rt. 213 South
Chestertown, Maryland 21620
Phone: (410) 778-2686

FULL SERVICE SALON Featuring
"Personalized" Perming • Coloring • Curling
Also
Manicures • Earpiercing • Tanbed

"New Services"
Esthetic Skin Care and Make-up Specialist
Esthetician – Rebecca Bigelow
Permanent Hair Removal
Electrologist –
Louise Leaverton, L.E.

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER

SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography

10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students with I.D.

778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

"OAU," from page 1

mission and convince other countries that our resolution was one worth voting for. It was very challenging because we had to act in the interests of true Angolan diplomats, sometimes having to vote against humane resolutions which appealed to our Western idealism, while conflicting with the true interests of Angola.

To make the Model more realistic, the teacher advisors, in conjunction with Howard University political science professors, design what is called "the crisis". This is a secret crisis that involves a major disaster which the students have to resolve within a given time. This year, there were two crises, one of which was in Angola!

As are several countries in Africa today, Angola is experiencing civil war. The crisis involved a hostile takeover of electricity and water plants by rebel forces, as well as bloodshed in ensuing panic and skirmishes. This resulted in a massive outpouring of refugees into surrounding countries which had no space or resources to accommodate them.

It was our job as diplomats of Angola to take a leading role in the crisis resolution. The other crisis occurred in Liberia.

After each commission voted on each of their individual resolutions, the re-written ones that passed were all conglomerated into one big packet. The final day was spent with all the commissions in one room, with head delegates as our only representatives. Angola's head representative was Andy McKim.

This was very frustrating because resolutions that were discussed and argued over at great length in the individual commissions could be voted against in this final meeting.

The Model closed with a speech by the Honorable Dr. A. Salim Salim, Secretary General of the real OAU. He was the youngest diplomat ever, beginning his career at age 21. The OAU Headquarters is in Addid-Abba, located in Ethiopia, so it was a great honor to have him speak for us. He was a very charismatic speaker and his words were quite moving.

"It makes me happy that you have all immersed yourselves in the art of being Africans and the art of being good diplomats," he said. "You have felt the frustration of diplomacy because diplomacy is a very frustrating job. I feel glad that every member felt the joy [of] getting resolutions passed] and frustration. If you didn't feel it, you would not be good diplomats."

Junior Washington College student Jennifer Reddish commented, "It is not every day you get to see Dr. A. Salim Salim. I thought what he said was pertinent to news coverage today. International Politics is increasingly aggravating, but still rewarding." W C students who attended include Steve Dashiell, Sashi Fernando, Christabel Garcia-Zamor, Andrew McKim, Ilene Mselis, Jennifer Reddish, and Sui Yee. We could not have done it without the expert advice of our resident expert and advisor, Dr. Tahir Shad, to whom we are all deeply indebted.

The Model OAU is a learning tool that I believe the International Studies department will soon find indispensable in a world which demands hands-on practical experience, rather than just classroom participation. I found it to be the most exciting and challenging college-sponsored event I have yet to experience.

FAMILY BOOK NOOK
All "in stock" Books DISCOUNTED!
Hard Cover Books - 15% Off
New Paperback Books - 10% Off
Pre-Read Paperback Books - 50% Off
Discover our Pre-Read Paperbacks. Credit for Your Gently Read Paperbacks - BROWSERS WELCOME!
Washington Square Shopping Center - near Super Fresh

THE FINISHING TOUCH
Robert R. Ramsey
301-778-5292
Fine Framing - Select Gifts - Artists' Materials
103 Bow-got 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620

"Hamsters," from page 3

that when a male hamster and a female hamster get together the result is usually...hamlets. Viola had four of them—Laertes, Horatio, Yorrick, and Ophelia. At the time that the hamlets were born I didn't know that when a couple of hamsters have babies for the first time they often end up ... eating them. I know this now. All of the babies were eaten, except for Horatio, who was rescued and given to another friend. Egor and Viola now live in separate cages on my floor and drive my roommate crazy.

This is one of the advantages of having hamsters: when you get mad at your roommate you can leave the hamster's metal exercise wheels in their cages at night. The hamster's metal exercise wheels squeak, loudly, and because they squeak profusely your roommate will not be able to fall asleep until 4 o'clock in the morning, and will propose sleep the 8:30 Freshman Biology class, and thus you will have revenge on her for whatever it is she did to make you angry. The disadvantage of leaving the hamsters' metal exercise wheels in their cages is that the noises they make will keep you awake also, and thus you too will miss the 8:30 Freshman Biology class.

Another good reason to get a hamster is that hamsters are very good props to use for flirting. For example: say you meet a guy who you want to get to know a little, or a lot, better. One day, when you're talking with the cute guy, try to steer the conversation over to the subject of hamsters. If he's a good guy, as well as a cute one, he will say something like, "Hamsters! I love hamsters!" and then you will say, "You love hamsters? Really?"

"Yes," he will say, "Really."

"I have a hamster!" you will say. "Would you like to meet my hamster?"

"Cool!" the cute guy will say.

And then you will bring the cute guy to your room. As you enter the room, the two of you will be talking about your Biology class—about how annoying the professor is, and about how much you hate getting up for an 8:30 class—about how annoying the professor is, and about how the girl who sits in the front row and actually brings apples in for the professor is such a brown-noser and you both wish she would get hit by a Procolino's delivery car some day ... and then you and the cute guy will run out of things to say. The two of you will then sit on your floor in silence.

However, even though you're being silent, neither of you will feel awkward. This is because you will be looking at the hamster, who will be, if it's daytime, sleeping and looking cute, or if it's night, running around on its wheel, then getting off and starting to do something that sort of looks like aerobics—jumping up and down at the side of the cage, hoping against all that all of a sudden the cage's glass will disappear and it will be free. "Ha, ha!" you and the cute guy will say. "You silly hamster! You will never get out of there! Ha ha ha ha ha!" Looking at hamsters with another person is a bonding experience.

Finally you will get up your guts and tell the cute guy, "Would you like to ... hold my hamster?"

"Why, yes, I sure would!" he will say, and you will pick up Finnegan, or Curtis, or Afuasaba, or whatever it is you have called your hamster, and put it into his hands. The cute guy will get all excited, and the hamster will try to run away from him and jump off of his fingers. You will then put your own hands next to the cute guy's hands, and the hamster will try to jump off of your own fingers, and will end up using both your hands and the cute guy's hands as a makeshift treadmill. This will be good because it will give the cute guy and you a nice, light amount of body contact, as your hands will touch his and vice-versa as you hold them up for the hamster to run on. And by doing this, by playing with the hamsters together, the cute guy and you will also be having another bonding experience. The act of bonding is very important in a beginning relationship.

However, then your roommate will come into the room, with steam coming out of her ears. Your roommate will not usually have steam coming out of her ears, but this day will be an exception, because on this day she will be incredibly angry at you; both because she got her Biology test back that morning, and failed, as most of the questions came from that day of lecture which she missed because your hamsters kept her up all night (the reason you passed is because you had explained the situation to your Biology teacher, and he really likes hamsters, so he gave you a break); and secondly because she doesn't have any cute guys of her own, and here you are, sitting on the floor, bonding so charmingly with this one. So, these two factors will have combined to create the steam which will be coming out of your beloved roommate's ears.

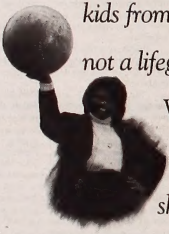
"Get rid of that hamster!" your beloved roommate will bellow, her face red, her steam purple. "Or I will flush it down the toilet myself!" and then you will say "Oops..." and after that you will ask the cute guy "Would you like to have a hamster of your very own?" and he'll say "Uh...." and you'll flutter your eyelashes at him and say "Pleeeeeaaaase..." and he'll say "Well...OK..." and he will take your hamster back to his dorm with him, thus giving you an excuse to visit him several times a day under the pretense that Mushmush, Mooh, Glubbitysnhump or whatever else you have named your hamster always has fresh water, plenty of food, plenty of affection, and a clean cage. As for you yourself, you will go back to the pet store and buy yourself a plecostimus, and hope that your roommate never gets an urge to clean....

Epilogue, 1993: "Horatio," a.k.a. Curtis, was adopted by Washington College alumni Raphael Koster, and now lives quite happily with 14 other hamsters, Curtis' own wife, Isabella, and several hamlets. As far as I know, Curtis has not yet devoured any of his own children, but you never know.

Mike's plecostimus died. Mike got another plecostimus to replace the first one. That plecostimus died also. Mike's third plecostimus died too, and so did his fourth. The moral of this anecdote is: if you really want a fish, invest in trout.

Egor and Viola are also dead. Remember that commercial about "When it's hot enough to fry an egg on the sidewalk, it's also hot enough to fry a dog's brain"? Well....the same holds true for hamsters. Egor and Viola...fried...in my parent's car, sometime during the long ride from Connecticut to Washington College—when I was being driven back from summer vacation the first day of my sophomore year. This week's Open Forum is dedicated to the memory of Egor and Viola, and to all other pets who have met similar fates...

New Literary Prize Established for Juniors



The Veryan Beacham Prize will be awarded to a Washington College junior for excellent writing, including — but not limited to — essays on philosophy, history, science, social sciences and literature; or compositions of short fiction, drama, poetry and the personal essay.

The spirit of the Veryan Beacham Prize is to recognize writing that reflects both the liberal arts tradition and the importance of language in the expression of ideas. The winning manuscript will be published by the O'Neill Literary House Press of Washington College in a numbered, limited edition. Manuscripts from Washington College Juniors may be submitted to Professor Robert Day no later than 1 May 1993.

This prize is not just for creative writers. Students who have written in a variety of fields are eligible, and should not hesitate to submit it to Professor Robert Day. Submissions should be labeled "Beacham Prize" and submitted to Day via campus mail or in person. The author's name should appear on each page of the manuscript. Work turned in for class work, or for other publications such as the Elm or for the upcoming Washington College Review are eligible.

Bill Nave saved these kids from drowning, but he's not a lifeguard.

Verleeta Wooten found several new stars, but she's not an astronomer.

And Ivan Neal put out a lot of fires, but he's not a firefighter.

These are teachers. But to the kids they reach, they're heroes.

BE A TEACHER. BE A HERO.

Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

Ad Council — A Public Service of This Publication

Photos: Robin Sachs

Reach for the Power — TEACH

"Earth," from page 1

At 1 p.m., the foot of High Street will be re-landscaped and dedicated.

At 2 p.m., Jeff Land from the Chesapeake Bay Foundation will give an address on Bay preservation.

Finally, from 3:30-9 p.m., the reggae music of both Uprising Revolution and the Tribulations will bring the festivities to an end.

The park will be colorfully decorated with chalk drawings contributed by the children of Garnett elementary school. Food and drink will be available throughout the afternoon.

Environmental activities are free of charge and tickets for the concert are ten dollars if purchased at the bookstore or Andy's. Otherwise, they are fifteen dollars at the door, if available.

By combining town and student efforts, SOCS and the Jaycees hope that Chestertown will actively recognize Earth Day as it approaches each year. In order to preserve our environment, we must first acknowledge the benefits of our planet. Buy your tickets for the concert now and prepare to join in the activities on Earth Day 1993!

"Sports," from page 3

interfering with the education of America's students.

Third, funding would be re-routed away from sports teams and toward more academic ends. Not to say that sports programs' budgets would be decimated, but they would no longer receive the ludicrous amounts of money they generally get today.

Finally, the administrations of colleges and universities, in conjunction with organizations like the NCAA, would not allow the disguising commercialization of college sporting events. I saw a Pizza Hut cup commemorating the NCAA final four. This is not what college sports should be about at all. Simple as that.

These recommendations are just a starting point. No doubt, if they are ever enacted (fat chance) there will be several modifications to make them more practical. With these changes, hopefully we will be able to have a more physically and mentally fit student body — a student body that works together toward the common aim of education.

CAMPUS VOICES

By Dude

Psychological Profiles of Your Pals!

	A) Claire Pitt Freshman London, England	B) Jen Waldych Freshman Baltimore, MD	C) Thane Glenn Junior Bryn Athen, PA
1. Hat	A) Hair	B) Hair	C) Hair
2. Lamp	A) Cabbage	B) Light	C) Shade
3. Love	A) Heart	B) Whatever	C) Good
4. Book	A) Read	B) Read	C) Open
5. Father	A) Mother	B) Gone	C) Mother
6. Paper	A) Pen	B) Must write	C) Long
7. Breast	A) Body	B) What?	C) Different
8. Curtains	A) Light	B) Closed	C) Window
9. Trunk	A) Case	B) Full	C) Car
10. Drink	A) Drunk	B) Drank	C) Alcohol
11. Party	A) Beer	B) Need one	C) Hat
12. Spring	A) Bounce	B) Here	C) Rain
13. Bowel movement	A) Shit	B) What?	C) Toilet
14. Bug	A) Carpet	B) Driving	C) Floor
15. Boyfriend	A) No one	B) No	C) Girlfriend
16. Chair	A) Table	B) O.K.	C) Sit
17. Screen	A) Yell	B) Flies	C) Window
18. Penis	A) Sock	B) Uh-huh	C) Me
19. Radiator	A) Heat	B) No heat	C) Heat
20. Frame	A) Butterfly	B) Picture	C) Window
21. Suicide	A) Kill	B) No	C) Bridge
22. Mountain	A) Snow	B) Climb	C) Sunset
23. Snake	A) Reptile	B) Pit	C) Grass
24. House	A) Tree	B) Apartment	C) Chimney
25. Vagina	A) Baby	B) What?	C) Women
26. Tobacco	A) Smoke	B) Smoke	C) Smoke
27. Mouth	A) Teeth	B) Kiss	C) Teeth
28. Horse	A) Back	B) Ride	C) Cattle
29. Masturbation	A) No answer	B) You	C) Closed door
30. Wife	A) Husband	B) Later	C) Husband
31. Table	A) Rug	B) Chair	C) Chair
32. Fight	A) Hands	B) Hit	C) Sword
33. Beef	A) Cow	B) Jerky	C) Cow
34. Stomach	A) Baby	B) Joe	C) Intestine
35. Farm	A) Animals	B) Animal	C) House
36. Man	A) Person	B) Yeah	C) Woman
37. Taxes	A) Trouble	B) George Bush	C) Bad
38. Nipple	A) Back	B) Psychology	C) Breasts
39. Doctor	A) Nurse	B) Play	C) Stethoscope
40. Dirt	A) Mud	B) Hurt	C) Mud
41. Cut	A) Rugby	B) Michael Douglas	C) Blood
42. Movies	A) Films	B) Florida	C) Man on the moon
43. Cockroach	A) Bug	B) Dog	C) Bug
44. Bite	A) Teeth	B) Bite	C) Pain
45. Dog	A) Cat	B) Fun	C) Fury
46. Dance	A) Sing	B) Finished	C) Jump
47. Gun	A) Shoot	B) Drink	C) Shoot
48. Water	A) Ocean	B) Play	C) Stream
49. Husband	A) Wife	B) Husband	C) Wife
50. Mud	A) Dirt	B) Lit House	C) Slime
51. Woman	A) Man	B) Washington	C) Man
52. Fire	A) Burn	B) Need some	C) Burn
53. Suck	A) Bad	B) Is this almost over?	C) Vaccuum cleaner
54. Money	A) Cash	B) Money	C) Gold
55. Mother	A) Father	B) I don't know	C) Father
56. Hospital	A) Ill	B) Cab	C) White
57. Girlfriend	A) Boyfriend	B) Later	C) Good
58. Taxi	A) Car	B) Now	C) Ride
59. Intercourse	A) Sex		C) Vocalization
60. Hunger	A) No answer		C) Passion

SCORING: "The analysis of responses to this... [the Menninger clinic's] word association technique is often commonsensical. People in a normal state of mind favor synonyms, opposites, or complements of the test word. An overuse of neologisms - dubious words like 'foodless' for 'hunger' - are held to indicate low intelligence. Psychotics favor non sequiturs." - from Bigger Secrets, by William Poundstone. In addition, one word responses are supposed to indicate defensiveness. Something to remember the next time your parents ask you what you're learning in that fancyschmancy college of yours.

Shoremen Baseball Cruises Past Lincoln

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

On Wednesday, the Shoremen baseball team faced Lincoln University, as they looked to bounce back from a double header loss to Haverford last Saturday. In a blowout win, Washington crushed Lincoln 19-2 in the opener of a double header.

Mike D'Andrea led the Shoremen with five RBIs at the plate and three innings of two-hit ball from the mound. Striking out four, D'Andrea's only mistake came in the first inning when he gave up a 350-foot homerun to left-center.

"I wasn't pleased when I gave up the (homerun)," D'Andrea said. "But the day at the plate made up for the disappointment."

Freshman Tod Hall followed D'Andrea on the mound and went two innings, giving up three hits and a run while striking out one.

"Even though we were beating those guys pretty bad, I still had to play like it was a serious game," Hall said. "Being a freshman, I had to work on the things I can do as a pitcher."

Coach Ed Athey has been pleased with the pitching performances he has received thus far. However, he says hitting will be the key throughout the rest of the season.

"If we hit, we're going to be all right," Athey said. "We hit today, but we have to hit in the league games."

The Shormen banged out nine hits on the afternoon in a shortened five inning game.

Lincoln scored first on the day with a homerun in the first inning. In the bottom of the first, Washington scored two runs, without the aid of a hit, on a combination of walks and wild pitches, which made the score 2-1.

After D'Andrea retired the side in order in the second, Washington went to work. The Shoremen exploded for 14 runs in the second inning, sending 19 men to the plate.

Lincoln gave up four consecutive walks to Dan Coker, Rory Conway, Keith Whiteford and Mike Hanifee to drive in the first run of the inning. Joe Boan drove in the next two runs with an RBI single to left-center. Andy Parks walked to load the bases again, and D'Andrea walked to drive in the fourth run of the inning.

Boan scored on a wild pitch, and Brian Rush walked to load the bases again. Parks scored on another wild pitch, and D'Andrea scored on a balk. Gerry Scully walked with Rush on second base, and Lincoln changed pitchers for the second time in the game with the score 9-1.

On a wild pitch, Rush went to third and Scully went to second. Coker knocked in a run with a ground out, and Scully went to third. Conway reached base on an error as Scully scored, making the score 11-1.

Whiteford batted next and hit a bloop double to left-center field with Conway holding up at third. Hanifee drilled an RBI single to left, bringing in two runs. Boan doubled to bring Hanifee home. After Parks was hit by a pitch, D'Andrea singled to drive in Boan and make the score 15-1.

After Rush hit into a fielder's choice at third, Coach Athey sent Gary Yovanovich to the plate to pinch hit. Yovanovich drove in a run with a single to right, as D'Andrea scored. Coker, batting for the third time in the inning, struck out to end the second inning with the score at 16-1.

The defensive play of the game was strong in the top of the third. With one out and a man on second, the batter hit a pop-up behind the plate. Substituting for Rush, Max Walton made a sliding catch and threw out the runner trying to tag up at third to end the inning.

Washington scored three more in their half of the third. Doug "Billy" Blair singled, Chad Campbell flied out to left, and Ian McVeigh walked. Chris Eaton singled to bring home Blair. After Hall popped out and a balk put runners on second and third, D'Andrea singled to bring home two and make the score 19-1.

Neither team scored in the fourth inning, but Lincoln scored their second run of the game in the fifth inning on two singles, a stolen base and an error.

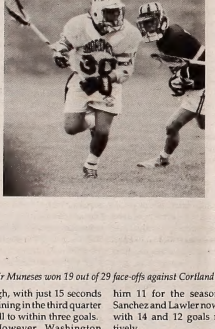
The results from the second game of the Lincoln double header were not available at press time. The win breaks a four game losing streak dating back to the team's Spring Break trip. Last Friday, Tufts University defeated the Shoremen 7-2 and Haverford beat Washington twice last Saturday by scores of 4-0 and 5-2. The team's next game will be tomorrow with a double header at home against Swarthmore at 1:00 p.m.

String Of Third Quarter Goals Carries Lacrosse Past Cortland

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

On Saturday, the Washington men's lacrosse team defeated the highly-touted Cortland State Red Dragons 18-9. Jason Paige led the Shoremen attack with five goals and two assists, and goalie Jon Lundberg anchored the defense with 14 saves on the afternoon.

Cortland, ranked 10th in Division III in a pre-season coaches' poll, scored first, 1:39 into the contest. Chris Sanchez answered for Washington with a goal 1:30 later on an assist from Chris Cote. However, the Red Dragons finished the first quarter with back-to-back goals and led 3-1 at the break.



The pace of the game changed very quickly, though, as the Shoremen scored the first eight goals of the second period, four of which came in the first three minutes.

Goals came from Paige, Jamie Carver, Ted Greeley, Cote, Paige again, Sanchez twice in a row and Cote again, as the Shoremen took a 9-3 lead. Paige, Greg Lawler and Sanchez all added two assists during the run, and Greg Mouracade also had an assist.

However, the Red Dragons did not quit as they scored the last three goals of the first half, and the first goal of the second to pull within two goals at 9-7.

Paige's third goal of the game made the score 10-7 with 9:07 remaining in the third quarter. Kenny Garcia of Cortland answered with his second goal of the game less than a minute later to pull within two goals again.

With 5:29 left in the third, Lawler scored his first goal of the game, and he scored his second just 12 seconds later on an assist from Cote. Garcia scored again for Cortland, though, with just 15 seconds remaining in the third quarter to pull within three goals.

Blair Muneses won 19 out of 29 face-offs against Cortland State

However, Washington chased Cortland right out of Kibler Field in the fourth quarter, scoring six unanswered goals, to close out the scoring at 18-9. Paige and Sanchez both had two goals during the run with Cote and Lawler adding the other two. Harris Murphy had three assists on the six goal spurt.

With the win, the Shoremen moved to 3-1 on the season, and Paige's five goals gave him 17 on the year. Murphy's three assists gave him 11 for the season, and Sanchez and Lawler now stand with 14 and 12 goals respectively.

Blair Muneses also had a great game, winning 19 out of 29 face-offs. The Shoremen also prevailed in the groundball department with Carver leading the team with eight. Patrick Crann, Sanchez, and Scott Overend all scooped up seven.

The team's next game will be Saturday with two games at Drew and FDU-Madison. On April 7, the team will visit Swarthmore College and will return home April 10 to face Franklin & Marshall.

NCAA Division I
Basketball Final Four
Semi-Finals
Saturday, April 3
Kentucky Wildcats vs. Michigan Wolverines
N. Carolina TarHeels vs. Kansas Jayhawks
Finals Monday, April 5

Women's Lacrosse Outlasts Swarthmore With 13-12 Win

Sarah Feyerherm
Sports Information Director

Bouncing back from a dispiriting 15-1 loss to Mary Washington, the women's lacrosse team put its offense in high gear last Thursday and squeaked by Swarthmore, 13-12, sparked by a six-goal performance from senior Amy McCleary.

McCleary, who leads the team in scoring with eight goals this season, started the scoring with an unassisted goal nine minutes into the contest. From there on in it was a see-saw battle that included five lead changes and some key defense by the Shorewomen late in the game.

After McCleary's initial goal, Swarthmore didn't take long to respond, getting a goal from Amy Noyes with 20:29 remaining in the first half. McCleary and Noyes traded goals again before junior Kirsten Lucas got in on the scoring for Washington, tallying her third goal of the season. However, three consecutive goals from Noyes put the Garnet up 6-4 and it looked like the Shorewomen offense had stalled.

However, Lucas and McCleary got the Maroon and Black back on track, answering with key goals only 46 seconds apart to tie the game once more. In the second half, junior center Reneé Guckert and freshman attacker Ali Naditch came alive, scoring all five of their combined goals in the closing stanza. Naditch opened the scoring in the second half, taking a feed from McCleary to tie the game at 7 a piece.

Naditch later scored what proved to be the winning goal on another pass from McCleary when she found the Swarthmore net with 5:00 left to play, putting Washington up 13-11. Naditch's goal was the last of the day for Washington. Swarthmore closed the gap to 13-12 on a goal from Noyes with just over one minute to play and threatened to tie several times thereafter, but key saves by goalie Nancy Millhouser and some timely checks from defenders Peggy Bowman and Eleanor Shriver closed the door on the Garnet.

"Nancy's play in the goal was key to the win," noted assistant coach Lacy Frazer. "It worked like the snowball effect where one person is really on and it carries over to the other players. Everybody worked extremely hard from one end of the field to the other for the entire game."

Overall, the game was a much cleaner one than the season-opening loss to Mary Washington. There were fewer turnovers, particularly in the midfield which has been an area of concern for the coaching staff.

"Our basics skills were much better," said Frazer after the win. "Our passing and catching were much better...we were cutting to the ball and passing a lot quicker. We really worked together as a team."

Despite a renewed confidence in their attack, the Shorewomen were forced to face MAC division opponent Western Maryland on Tuesday without two of their top players. Bowman and Guckert both missed the game due to injury and their absence was noticeable as Washington fell to the Green Terrors, 18-3.

McCleary accounted for two of the three goals while Lucas contributed one for the Shorewomen who were outshot, 38-9. Millhouser and freshman goalkeeper Peggy Busker combined for 17 saves on the afternoon as the team dropped to 1-2 and 0-1 in the MAC West division. The Shorewomen, who haven't played an away game yet this season, will host Susquehanna on Saturday at 11:00 a.m.

Women's Crew Gains Experience In Florida; Washington Wins Varsity Lightweight Race

Kara Wiesenbaugh
Staff Writer

The Spring racing season is approaching fast for the Women's Crew Team, and they expect to be well prepared. The practices over Spring Break in not-so-sunny-Florida should pay off very soon. Since the team managed to avoid the snow drifts and the foul weather of Chestertown, they were able to gain valuable water time and much needed racing experience against other crews. After the next few regattas, we shall see how the women rank against other schools around the area.

In the Metro Cup in Winter Park, Florida, on Saturday, March 20, the eights competed in two 2000 meter races against the University of Central Florida and Rollins College. In the Women's Varsity Heavyweight Eight race, UCF finished in 7:01, Washington College in 7:08.2, and Rollins in 7:13. In the second race, the Women's Varsity Lightweight Eight crossed the line in front of UCF.

Lisa Brown was the coxswain for the first race and Amy Bortmes was the coxswain for the second; the rowers remained the same. This eight team included rowers Kara Wiesenbaugh, Jen Hozik, Jennifer Dougherty, Mary Bird, Sue Czechowski, Stacey Sherman, Kathy Mullan, and Zandra Geller.

The Women's Novice Team is looking forward to their first-ever racing season. They also competed at the Metro Cup and gained some necessary racing experience. Their eight included coxswain Eileen Hunter, followed by stroke Taber Overall, Melanie Baldwin, Eliza Dickinson, Jenny Sue LeSchander, Melissa Olsen, Christy Hutson, Mary Jefferson, and Angie Smidga. They also competed in a four which finished second out of four crews. This boat consisted of coxswain Renee Kuhnel, Jenny Sue LeSchander, Melissa Olsen, Taber Overall, and Melanie Baldwin.

This past Saturday, March 27, the Women's team scrimmaged Union College of Rochester, New York. This team had travelled South to Chestertown to practice during their Spring Break. In the 2000 meter Varsity Eight race, Washington College surpassed Union with a time of 7 minutes 50 seconds over their time of 8:08.

Varsity Women's coach Glenn Merry claimed, "the women rowed well against less experienced crew teams" and that this race was a good opener to the season. This eight included coxswain Lisa Brown, with the stroke position Kara Wiesenbaugh, Jen Hozik, Jennifer Dougherty, Mary Bird, Sue Czechowski, Jenny Sue LeSchander, Kathy Mullan, and Melissa Olsen in the bow. The team feels quite confident about their upcoming race on Saturday at the Hopkins Invitational At the meet, they will compete against Carnegie Mellon, LaSalle, Lafayette, and Susquehanna. Merry stated,

"I'm looking forward to seeing how we row against more experienced crews at Hopkins, and I'm confident we'll make it to the finals."

They plan on it—wish them luck!

NEWT'S Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

For his efforts on the tennis courts, Trevor "Big Toe" Hurd has been named Newt's player of the week.

This native of Spring, Texas has compiled an awe-striking record of 40 wins and 2 losses against Division III opposition. Against Division I Teams, Trevor's record is "hush hush" among his teammates. Pre-season Trevor was ranked 35th in the nation, but his win in the second flight of the Emory Invitational Tournament, during Spring Break, should advance him about ten places. In his victory, Hurd dfeated the Eighth ranked player in Div. III. Paired with Co- captain Alberto Diaz, Hurd looks to prove once again that their doubles team is worthy of their all-american distinctions. Coach Tim Gray commented, "Trevor is having a great year, and that's about all I'll say because I don't want Trevor's head to get any bigger." Ouch! Hey Cinncinatti, thanks for trying out! Devlin, the only part of the caps game you'll ever be good at, is talking trash.

Tuesday - Saturday
Parking in Rear
Appointments Preferred
A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
905 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbershop)
Jane Thompson
(301) 778-0686

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Lacrosse Crushes Cortland

See story p. 10

Women's Lacrosse Takes First Win By A 13-12 Score Over Swarthmore

WC • ELM

Sports

Butt Clown

Baseball Bruises Lincoln 19-2

Chris "split the reed" Cote and Jason Paige have had a huge impact on this year's season. With the lacrosse team standing at 3-1, Paige and Cote have been big reasons for the team's easy victories. Last Saturday, against Cortland State, Paige had five goals and two assists and Cote had three goals and three assists. On the season, Paige leads the team with 17 goals, and Cote is tied for fourth with 15 total points. The lacrosse team will play two games tomorrow with contests against Drew and FDU-Madison.

Scores

Men's Lacrosse
Washington	18
Cortland St.	9
Baseball
Washington	2
Tufts	7
Washington	2
Haverford	5
Washington	0
Haverford	4
Washington	19
Lincoln	2
Men's Tennis
Washington	5
Wash. & Lee	4
Women's Lacrosse
Washington	13
Swarthmore	12
Washington	3
W. Maryland	18

Trevor Hurd: NEWT's Players of the Week

Women's Rowing Team Seeks Promising 1993 Season

"Information wants to be Free"

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

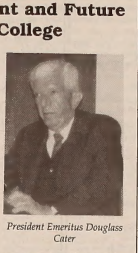
Weekend Weather
Friday: Cloudy, H in low-mid 70s increasing high
Weekend: Partly Cloudy showers likely H mid 50s-60s

Volume 64, Number Twenty-Three • April 9, 1993

Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Douglass Cater Reflects On The Past, Present and Future Of Washington College

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief



President Emeritus Douglass Cater visited his old campus this week to give a speech, "Can We Govern Ourselves?" as part of the Goldstein Program in Public Affairs.

Cater is perhaps best known to current members of the WC community as "the man with the master plan." It is Cater's Walk we tread on every day on our way to classes. The Constance Stuart Larrabee Arts Center, the Casey Swim Center and the Casey Academic Center are also parts of this legacy.

"The thing about having a master plan is that you wonder if you've got hold of it or if it's got hold of you," Cater said in an interview Wednesday. But he's happy with the result.

"We now have a three-dimensional campus — before I came all the buildings were facing Washington Avenue, with a few outposts on the back half of campus and a public road running through the whole thing," he said.

He quipped at Monday's lecture that he was afraid his

President Emeritus Douglass Cater

name "would be the equivalent of mud when I left." He added that the students who were at WC at the time weren't around to really enjoy most of the physical transformations the college underwent during their stay.

"But we managed to get through those years without major stress — there weren't any mud strikes or mud wars," he joked.

Cater lists not buildings, but rather the Goldstein Pro-

See "Cater," page 5

Faculty Prepares for End of Year

"On a lot of nights, I'm not sure exactly where I'm sleeping." President Charles H. Trout was referring to the amount of traveling he's been doing, both regionally and nationally. But his monetary campaign, while vigorous, is not solving the financial crisis at Washington College, as became apparent at the April 5 faculty meeting.

Senior Vice President for Management and Finance Gene A. Hessey continued to point to declining interest rates on investments and on endowment capital as a key factor in the college's deficit.

"The college is extremely underendowed, and that has to become a major concern in the future of this college," Hessey said.

All departmental equipment and travel budgets have been frozen for the remainder of the fiscal year. More budgetary information will appear in future issues of the Elm.

Some positive financial news was announced, however. The Jesse Ball DuPont Fund has awarded a $78,000 grant to the college. $37,000 has been allocated to scientific equipment purchases, with the remainder going to summer research collaborations between WC students and faculty.

In the Maryland State budget for the upcoming fiscal year, WC received $972,000 in state aid. While this figure is approximately $20,000 less than originally anticipated, it is 15.9 percent higher than the current year's amount from the state.

President Trout also announced that the Board of Visitors and Governors will vote on two tenured positions. Faculty members Emily Arnt (currently on sabbatical in England) and Richard Striner, both of the history department, will have their nominations considered at the April 24 meeting in Baltimore.

Provost and Dean of the college Gene C. Wubbels, in discussing the upcoming Middle States Re-Accreditation process, played teacher to the faculty and listed on the Dunning Lecture Hall blackboard his five-step plan for an organized review process. Each committee will start from the Mission Statement, and from that infer goals which Wubbels called "the eternal properties of the college."

These goals lead to more localized objectives, which can then be assessed as to their feasibility. Finally, the specific planning process for the immediate future of the college "should cast its eyes toward the future."

One of the major agendas for Monday's meeting was the confirmation of Senior honors and awards. This was a confidential process, and the awards will be announced at Commencement on May 23.

An agenda which some faculty were slightly less secretive about was the annual amendment process to the Faculty Handbook. While some wording was reworked here and there, the main event concerned language about the position of Faculty Secretary.

Earlier versions of the book contained no mention of the position, which is filled in one-year stints, usually by a member of the junior (untenured) faculty. The current volume listed the record-keeping job under "other elected positions."

Modern Languages Lecturer Jefford Vahlbusch read a lengthy declaration on the part of the junior faculty (not all of whom personally endorsed the mandate) which stated the belief that not only is this position traditionally selected by the Nominations Committee without a vote from the faculty at

Model UN Teaches Ways of The Real World

Ann Veiga
Staff Writer

Why would fourteen students and an instructor wake up at 2:30 am to walk outside in the pitch-black, cold winter air and pile into a van for an eight hour ride to Boston?

From left to right: Monique Ware, Juan Lorenzo, Sarah Young, Karen Walker, Amy Bortmes, Krissy Rindfuss, Dr. Shad, Lionel Dyson, Stephanie Sherwell. In front of Faneuil Hall in Boston.

Senior Stephanie Sherwell's answer is, "I just like arguing."

Traveling with a bunch of bodies and luggage seems like a lot of trouble to go through for an argument. One could just write a letter to the editor of a school newspaper. However, these students attended the Model United Nations conference for other reasons.

Monique Ware, a senior majoring in Humanities and Spanish, wanted to see how the UN works. She said the UN is something she always reads about. By attending the Model, she said she was exposed to world viewpoints and "confronted with the issues of today." Because Washington College represented the nation of Spain, Ware discovered that the world "really does not care about Spain." She concluded that it was probably because Spain is almost 100 percent self-sufficient.

On the other hand, this was Sherwell's second trip to the Model. Sherwell represented Afghanistan last year, and she said she felt more respect from the world community as a Spanish delegate. Working in the committee to integrate street

See "UN," page 8

Inside

Marianne Explores Fredrick's of Hollywood 3

Board Report: Baez Wins Portrait Contest 4

Smidga Accepted to Oxford University 6

Victor Returns to WC with Dick Durham Trio 7

Centennial Conference Sponsors Logo Contest 7

This Space For Rent

Actually, you will be paid to fill this space. Your student activities fee pays me to fill this space weekly, whether or not I use the word "funk." However, next year I will explore other venues in which no one will complain about my "funk-ed up" language (read: Tarin will have two senior obligations and a legal ID).

If you want a newspaper to read next year, you have some serious thinking to do. This applies not only to would-be applicants but to the less journalistically inclined as well. The Elm will again turn over its helm to ... someone. Now, not to call names here, but for those of you who remember the 1990-91 Elm, well, let's just say that bla bla bla we don't want a bla bla bla newspaper like bla bla bla that ever again.

Therefore, each of you has the option, nay, the duty to do one of two things. Either apply for the editorship or support someone's application. If your roommate has a brain and a nose for news (typing fingers don't hurt either), convince him or her that yes, he/she should apply for the job. It pays. If she's female, she gets first pick of the groovy apartment in Reid with the private bathroom and kitchen. Your duties/perks also include attendance at faculty and Board meetings (which is cooler than it sounds) and lots of invitations to dinners to meet the illustrious lecturers who visit campus.

You also choose the other members of the editorial staff (for future reference, these are also salaried positions), which is an important task, because these are the people who will make the next nine months of your life either sheer joy or living hell.

It sounds like having a baby. Well, running a newspaper is not that far away from birthing a child. Every week. There is some pain involved. There are some tough choices to make. But when it comes out it is indeed a happy moment. And this is accompanied by the realization that you are, indeed, responsible for the product, which will be much improved if love (and other assorted emotions) go into it. And yes, this newspaper hurts me much more than it does you. Heh.

In fact, journalism is something of a public service. Ignorance, as I've said before, is perhaps the largest enemy in America today. And in my view, teachers and journalists are the main combatants of ignorance—at least, in theory. Students as well are waging the battle by (hopefully) opening their minds to the flow of information that wants to be free, wants to be known.

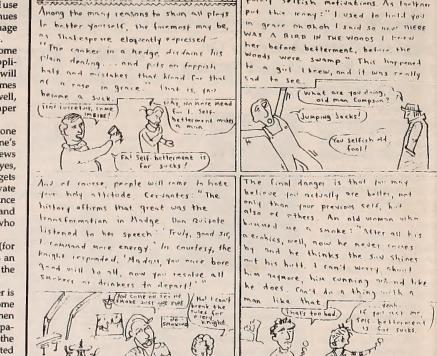
When information is hidden from the public it is rarely for the public's own good. The perpetrators of censorship and the propagators of ignorance often have excuses. They are valid only insofar as the public agrees with them.

The goal of the journalist should be to 'feed the heads' of the public with the truth, as much as possible.

The goal of the editor of the Elm is to make this process possible on this very campus, and to make sure this process continues by helping to select and train subsequent journalists. I hope that you take these concerns seriously, and do your part by applying or supporting the position of the next filler of this space.

Whether you like the Elm or hate it, I'll wager that it has provided an information service and that if you're reading this, you appreciate that service.

Whether you like the editorial or not is also a matter of taste; the style, content and opinions expressed by the official newspaper will depend on the applicant pool.



This editorial was brought to you by me. I'm a person. So are you. You use words. You read words. I, however, have spent the last year living words, and it's time to pass the baton.

And it's even possible to do this without using the word 'fuck.'

The Washington College ELM
Established 1930

Editor-in-Chief J. Tarin Towers
Photography Editor: Margaret 'Wistie' Wurts
News Amanda Burt & Charlie Linehan
Sports Doug Hoffberger & Matt Murray
Features Justin 'M' Cano
Arts & Entertainment George Jamison
Layout Editor: Brian Mathews
Advertising Manager: Peter Jens
Circulation Manager: Gehrett Ellis

The Washington College ELM is the official student newspaper of the college. It is published every Friday of the academic year, excepting holidays and exams.
Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-Chief. The opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor, Open Forum, and Campus Voices do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ELM staff.
The Editor reserves the right to edit all letters to the editor for length and clarity. Deadlines for letters are Wednesday noon at 6 p.m. for the week's paper.
Correspondence can be delivered to the ELM office, sent through campus mail, or queued over Quickshell. Newsworthy items should be brought to the attention of the editorial staff.
The offices of the newspaper are located in the basement of Reid Hall. Phone calls are accepted at 778-4215.
The Washington College ELM does not discriminate on any basis.

Feedback, Correspondence & Dirt

Campus needs leaders who can follow as well

To the Editor:

As a campus leader we find support to be lacking in the student body. However, we can turn to fellow leaders for support, or rather, I thought you could. But be aware, other campus leaders, because, support from some of your fellow leaders is not there.

I contend that support by other leaders is not often recognized by their attendance at an event or meeting you might be holding. As it is, the other leaders are holding their events and meetings. We would like to, but we as humans can't be in two places at once. The support is not always spoken, but it is felt as they being leaders know the struggle it takes to get an event to work around here.

I thought, but boy was I wrong. Support from other leaders doesn't happen in some cases. Maybe their egos are too large or there maybe personal reasons against you, so these so-called leaders choose not to support other endeavors to strengthen and broaden the college community.

History shows us that the great leaders are also great followers. As a leader we all need our followers who can support the cause. As leaders we can't do it alone. I contend that the great leaders of tomorrow are not those leaders of this community who turn their nose up or boycott an event for one reason or another. I see the great leaders of tomorrow as those who are willing to support today when they are not the leaders of the cause. These are the unsung heroes of this community who come to the event as supporters and for no other reason.

Mark Moxley for example is a known campus leader who is willing to play the role as a follower. He is an example of someone who does not complain about the problem, rather he suggests ways of solving the problem.

Lisa Pruett is a problem-solver who is willing to not only attend the events but is someone who wants to work for the cause.

Stephanie Sherwell is an example of someone who attends and supports the cause by just being there.

I would like to think that these three people are the standard for the WC community. They are not. This college community relies on student support to make things work. However, the student support is lacked and rather disappointing for a college that claims to be a close-knit group.

All students could show more support and less complaining. Well, as it stands, now students complain more then it seems they do anything else. Now some will say I am one to talk and I agree, I am not doing all I can to put my best foot forward, but that is going to change! Better late then never.

As a student leader and follower stop the complaining and set your best foot forward. The rewards will be amazing. Follow the examples of Mark, Lisa and Stephanie and do all you can, and once you have done that, do just a little more.

"A campus leader who needs student support"
Whitney W. Myrus
Senior Class President

Applications are Being Accepted for Editors-in-Chief for Next Year's Elm and Pegasus. Call ext. 8585. Other Staff Positions will be Available After Selection of the Editors-in-Chief. Elm Layout Position is Available Imediately.

CRISIS

Scott Ross Koon

It seems that American editorial writers will never tire of writing about "the plight of the inner city." Every library closing, corruption scandal and infrastructural crisis is accompanied by editorials full of observation and commentary and devoid of critical analysis.

This is especially true when the issue of the 'day is crime. The print and broadcast media relate a seemingly endless stream of criminal activity. Many journalists attempt to explain these phenomena as symptomatic of either a failure to properly educate our youth, or a symptom of the lack of vocational opportunities in American cities. Sometimes more conservative columnists will offer explanations which are either racist, stupid, or both.

But when suburban Americans commit crimes, these same columnists are remarkably silent. The liberals are baffled because the criminals are middle class and therefore do not fit into their theory that poverty is the primary cause of crime. The conservatives are baffled because they like to attribute crime to some moral phenomena which might be broadly defined as a "decline in Christian values." They usually argue that this decline is occurring in Black and Hispanic communities, and so when a White person commits a crime they become quite puzzled and simply devote their ink to another topic.

They do not look at the other side of the coin, which is that if urban crime is a symptom of some fundamental problem in urban life, then suburban crime is a symptom of some fundamental problem in suburban life.

This is not only a problem in journalism, but in academia as well. If the unexamined life isn't worth living, then I certainly wouldn't want to live in the suburbs, for it seems that nobody really wants to take a good hard look at this subject. This may be because suburbanites prize privacy nearly as much as they prize property. It may also be that most academics lead the suburban lifestyle themselves, find it utterly uninteresting, and therefore choose not to study it. Or it may also be the case that scholars are afraid of discovering how perverse and sick our society is.

Although people have lived on the periphery of cities throughout the history of civilization, the suburbs as we know them today are a relatively recent innovation. Suburbs began to appear in America during WWII and shortly thereafter, at the exact time of the most rapid expansion of its industrial capacity.

This first wave of mass migration to the suburbs from the cities also created a trend, in that moving to the suburbs became a way of increasing social status. Another corollary to this theory is that creating a lot of housing shortly after the war helped to minimize the unemployment created by America's return to a civilian economy.

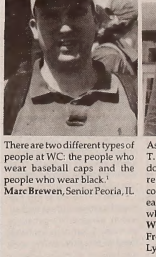
And, of course, there was a psychological motivation at work as well. America had just won a war which taxed the psyche of the population. People had an emotional need for stability and prosperity. The soldier's reward for coming home alive was a car, a wife

See "Koon," page 4

CAMPUS VOICES

By Dude

How do you feel about conformity at WC?



There are a lot of conformists on campus. People tend to find a group and stick to it.
John Nunn, Junior
Washington, DC

No complaints.
Chad Campbell, Freshman
Georgetown, DE

If people feel they have to follow someone to fit in, then they should do it, but I think people should be their own person.
Ann-Marie Molina, Freshman
Hyde Park, NY

There are two different types of people at WC: the people who wear baseball caps and the people who wear black.[1]
Marc Brewen, Senior Peoria, IL

As the great Pharoah Benjamin T. Hinkle once said, "People don't look the same but pretty relaxed and laid back and comfortable hanging out with each other it doesn't matter where you're from."
Will "Red Dog" Smiley, Freshman
Lynchburg, VA

As the Great Pharoah Benjamin T. Hinkle once said, "Can we find out what Smiley said first?"
Dave Cola, Sophomore
Dover, DE

[1]Actually, there are only two different types of people: ones who like the Dude who feel that they have to classify everyone into one different type of people. Ed.

Open Forum: Fredrick's Clothes You With Tires

Marianne Culbertson is an indescribable, indefatigable (regarding laughter) Sophomore who was kind enough to pull this Open Forum out of a nether region. She unzipped her teddy to get it out.

As I sit here eating this beautifully round cherry-red apple and flipping through the catalogue in front of me I am moved to think of virgins and cupless bustiers. Both in the same sentence and only words apart you ask? Yes, I answer because I am perusing the funky bedwear advertisements in Frederick's of Hollywood.

I happened across this risqué piece of mock-literature while passing through the business office where I was paying one of my bills. Yes, the business office, where older women dream of nights when they can slip on those leather, no, excuse me, "vinyl teddies" that they have ordered secretly from the catalogue.

Marianne Culbertson

I can just see them adding the "all-the-way-up-the-thigh high boot (that can also be worn cuffed)," and then adding the "world famous 5 inch spiked metallic heel," to their already stunning teddy. Did I mention that the vinyl teddy is also crotchless?

One of my personal favorites is entitled "Zipper Passion." Take a slow meditative look at the following description of this metallic, mechanical wonder: "Super soft vinyl teddy looks wet and slick with high-cut legs and plenty of zip and lace appeal! Zippers at bustline and crotch with soft fine liners beneath. Elastic back and adjustable straps. Polyurethane. Imported."

Hey we're back to my review again, how about that? "Polyurethane" and "Imported," you see my most revered audience, polyurethane is just a fancy name for, and I quote from Webster's, "any of various synthetic rubber polymers produced by the polymerization of a hydroxyl radical and an NCO group from two different compounds: used in cushions, insulation, molded products, etc..."

People, what we are talking about here are tires. In essence all they have done is thin the rubber out and dye it so that it can be slipped rather snugly over the torso. Let me further address this by saying, while I do enjoy wearing creative lingerie I do not want to even take the chance at having a very messy accident due to an industrial zipper being closed in the crotch area.

See "Tires," page 4

THE BOARD

The topic of the board last week was not illegal narcotics, but rather alcohol, but thank you for showing your support for Pat and Ed as well as for your feelings about marijuana. The responses that best sum up the feelings about alcohol on campus are as follows:

• Everyone should see a videotape of themselves while they are drunk. I personally have done the video-drunk thing. I discovered that my lips enlarged, my manner grew vile, and I have an organ unbeknownst to the medical profession containing 1/2 dissolved rice and pizza.

• The drinking and inconsideration on this campus is ridiculous. I am tired of being awakened at all hours of the night with loud and obnoxious behavior.

• The more restrictions that are placed on students drinking on campus, the more problems are going to pop up. People will find a way to drink, it will be impossible to stop.

• We need kegs! All the cases we buy just waste for the environment! Also—Security sucks—they break up parties for the most trivial reasons; this is a college campus not a prison-of course there is going to be drinking. Who doesn't drink in college?!?!/(RE) There are some (not me) but there are some./ (RE-RE) Yeah those of us here who are recovering alcoholics or have bodies with no tolerance for the stuff!!!!!

• Stop trying to bring down drinking and start trying to bring up academics.

Congratulations to Alex Baez, the winner of the portrait contest, for her drawing of Christine Pabon. And KUDOS to Elisa Hale and D. Powell for properly participating. Thank you to all the other contributors as well.

The Multiple Aspects of Mrs. Pabon

"Koon," from page 3

and a detached house in the suburbs. In this way the American capitalist system infused the masses of petit-bourgeois and working class with false consciousness.

My own perception of American suburbs is that, while they appear very orderly and sane, in reality they create socially maladjusted citizens. Behind the well-maintained lawns and walls of suburbia lurk an alienated and anti-social breed of humans who do not know how to love their families, let alone their neighbors. In such environs are the likes of Ted Bundy bred.

Our society is only now reaping the negative consequences of the suburban explosion which has been occurring in America over the course of the past 40 years. When Americans left the cities behind, they also left the extended families and ethnic associations which are invaluable to providing emotional support.

For the first time in the nation's history, we became a people devoid of context. The alienating dynamic of the split between the social nature of production and the private ownership of property was accelerated by removing people from their emotional context. People no longer felt connected to their neighbors. The increasing demands for workers to be geographically mobile also helped break up whatever personal connections people did make. Children were also affected, many of them having to uproot and move many times, leaving behind their friends and schools. It is a direct, inevitable result of demands placed on American workers by their bosses.

The end result of this has been the creation of a suburban nation where every person is an isolated community of one. People interact more with computers and televisions than with each other. While it is true that capitalism has made us prosperous, it is also true that it has made us a nation of sickos.

This is what makes it possible for organizations such as the Spur Posse to exist. For those who are unfamiliar with this controversy, the Spur Posse is a group of suburban high school athletes in Lakewood California who had a system whereby individual members competed to see who could have sex with the most girls.

This games seems to me to be a natural outgrowth of football. The goal was to get the most points—yet there were no rules, no referees and no boundaries of chalk to delineate the playing area. As a result of this, girls as young as 10 and11 were raped by gang members.

Many young people (particularly young men) view other people not as individuals with rights of their own, but as objects. There must be outrage against the corruption of our youth, but it should be directed at the real causes of moral decay. Don't blame the schools, the politicians, the churches, pornographers, rock stars or professional athletes. It's not their fault. This is a direct result of the alienation of capitalist society. It is but a short step from accumulating capital by forcing someone to do meaningless and degrading work to accumulating points by raping little girls. Is it a utopian dream to ask, to insist that our sick, twisted society conform to some standard of decency? I have devoted my life to combating the satanic capitalist system, and I would do so even if I were a minority of one. There is invaluable political work do be done, and so I ask the reader to kindly wake the fuck up and join me. To support the capitalist system is the moral equivalent of genocide.

"Tires," from page 3

Guys! Here's a little something for you too. How about a little (we're talking miniscule here) Heavy Metal, "Super shiny, made-to-cling metallic microkini G-string [that] is like wearing nothing at all! Soft, stretchy poly [tires again folks] with metallic elastic." Essentially we are talking about simulated gold and silver ball sacs. This piece looks a lot like the skimpy covering worn by the tribal males in the latest issue of National Geographic.

This edition of Frederick's also features Quick Release: "Sizzling peek-a-boo stripe and sheer nylon/cotton fits like a dream. 2 quick-release clips for easy on and off. Imported." Ok Ladies and Gents, we've now moved down the totem pole from lusty lingerie to side show costumes. Who in his right mind would willingly pull this little doozy on and let his girlfriend, or whatever, just go ahead and pop it off? I can see it now, "peek-a-boo" she squeals, with obvious pleasure at seeing you be made fun of, unless she is also mentally ill.

At this point I am disposing of my apple core and on the last page of the ladies lingerie section I find yes, the Frisky Feline, "In sensuous stretch lace, our cupless underwired catsuit entices with a thong back, gartered legs, and flirty sheer ruffle shoulders and ankles." Neck ruffle included. I am just SO READY to slide into this CUPLESS wonder, which still contains underwire otherwise it just wouldn't look right (women you know why and men just ask a decent looking chick).

Well that's about it for this months Frederick's of Hollywood review. Keep reading because featured in one of these catalogues may be your cupless, vinyl, zippered crotch, dream-come-true-for-the-night-of-candle-light-mischief, teddy.

OLD WHARF INN
OVERLOOKING THE CHESTER RIVER
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
778-3566
Sunday Brunch 10-3 Lunch & Dinner Daily

Andy's
337 1/2 High St.
Music Starts At
Approx. 9pm
FRI 9 JANE WILLAMS & DAVE RICHARDS
Singer/Songwriter from D.C.
SAT 10 The CHESAPEAKE RETRIEVERS
Traditional blend of Bluegrass and Country
THUR 15 DUANE DILLARD and COMPANY
778-6779

This Week: Detoxifying Your Pets

We in the United States share our homes with 50 million dogs, 58 million cats, 425 million fish, and 3 million other assorted furry, feathered, or scaled creatures. As a whole, we in the United States spend an average of $10 million a year on everything from flea collars to hamster bedding. If we are going to spend such vast amounts of money, why not assure that the products we purchase are environmentally friendly?

Wait! Don't flip forward to the next page of the Elm! Although this may not sound like a very important topic for this week's article, I can assure you from personal experience that that we were responsible. She passed away only three weeks after we first realized she was becoming sick.

You could be endangering your pets as a result of the products you are purchasing for them. Please take a few minutes to read the checklist below, to assure that your pets will live long happy lives. Sometimes, you never really know how important they are until after they have already gone.

What You Can Do:

Fleas can be a problem with many household pets. These steps can help:

- Vacuum your pet's bed and the surrounding area frequently.
- Look for anti-flea products containing pyrethrin . It is a completely nature-made and toxic free substance made from African chrysanthemums, and it is effective in breaking the flea/egg/flea cycle without harming your pet. Fleas don't build up an immunity to it, either. It can be found in the form of dips, sprays, collars, and house foggers.
- Never put any chemicals on your pets that you wouldn't willingly put on your own skin. If you get a funny feeling about having it near you, chances are it is not very healthy for your pet, either.
- Feed your pet brewer's yeast, fennel, rosemary, vitamin B, and garlic tablets. (I have found that our family cat in Rockville like to nibble straight from the small potted rosemary herb plant we have in the backyard. Try setting a small potted rosemary plant on the windowsill or on the back patio, or mix it into the food).
- Make citrus-oil spray by blending orange or grapefruit skins, then simmering the blend in water. Rub cooled pulp into the pet's fur with your hands.
- Consider raising llamas instead of horses. They are often used as substitutes for horses on ecologically sensitive trails because they move so lightly on the land they don't damage it. You can shear them once a

See "StartNow," page 8

Christabel Garcia-Zamor

it is. I, myself, had a horrible experience this past summer involving this poorly publicized issue. I had to watch my Doberman Pincher die after being poisoned from toxic anti-flea treatment.

First of all, it was really gross to see. Her stomach and spleen enlarged to such great proportions that she flinched if you even touched her belly. She was so swollen she looked pregnant. She couldn't walk, and she ate less and less until finally she ate nothing at all. The worst part was that it happened really quickly. Her usual hyperactive demeanor was replaced to lethargic whimpering within a matter of weeks. After extensive blood work, our veterinarian informed us that she had been poisoned. Of course, we were baffled.

Jamie was like a member of the family. How in the world could she have gotten poisoned? We swept the house through, from top to bottom, trying to find what could have done this. I felt my heart skip a beat when my mom informed me that the flea and tick spray we dutifully sprayed Jamie with was the culprit. It was bad enough that she was going to die. It was even worse knowing gram, as well as the McLain Program in Environmental Studies and the Society of Junior Fellows, among his favorite accomplishments as president of Washington College. He helped acquire funding for these programs shortly before he left WC; they now have a combined endowment of about $2 million.

"Cater," from page 1

Modeled after the older Sophie Kerr Fund, each of these programs tries to do for WC on a smaller scale what the Kerr Fund does, largely by bringing in speakers of note not just to deliver a lecture, collect a fee and live but to stay for several days and become a part of the campus life while at WC.

Attending or teaching in regular classes, as well as participating in workshops or dinners with the students, are among the things Cater sees a speaker wanting to do while visiting WC. He himself arrived Sunday and stayed until Thursday noon.

He ate dinner with the Junior Fellows Wednesday night and is pleased with what the group is doing, although he'd like to see more.

"I feel that every college has to have a way to encourage the highly-motivated students. We concentrate so hard on keeping the ones at the bottom of the net from falling out that we forget to take care of the ones at the top," he said.

"It disturbs me that we give so much money to the so-called merit scholars who may or may not have shown their distinction in high school. Then they come to college and goof off," Cater said. "The college has to reward the students who are motivated and talented while in school here."

He sees the Junior Fellows Society as a "Fraternity of the Meritorious," adding that it's not so much a mark of the elite as of the excellent. "I would like to see the Fellows become more collegial — there should be a student chair who works alongside the curator. and regular meetings."

When asked what his fondest memory was as President, Cater was briefly stumped. But the quickly found myriads of things he enjoyed thinking about. "The jubilation of Commencement was always sort of the headiest moment — you'd produced another graduating class, you'd gotten distinguished speakers to appear — it's a coming-together of the work of the year."

And echoing the thoughts of many at Washington College, he added, "the anticipation of the relief of summer coming was always a reward in itself."

Brief Beef

Any graduating Senior who would like to read in the annual Senior Reading on May 2nd at 8 p.m. should let Kathy Wagner know by April 23rd.

April 15 is the deadline not only for filing tax forms, but for several Washington College projects. Submissions to the Washington College Review are due and should be addressed to Editor Richard Striner; Natural Sciences Editor Donald Munson; Social Sciences Editor Dan Premo; or Humanities and Creative Writing Editor Kathy Wagner. Non-fiction articles and essays are accepted, as are fiction, poetry and drama.

In addition, April 15 is the deadline for applications for Editor-in-Chief of the Elm and Pegasus. A letter of interest and a list of qualifications should be addressed to Board of Publications Chair Richard Striner. Questions can be addressed to the Elm at ext. 8585 and the Pegasus at ext. 8584.

Finally, the Charles H. Trout Commission on Undergraduate Research funds independent research projects and internships. Interested applicants should contact Michele Crosier before Thursday's deadline.

Pan-Hellenic Report

Pan Hellenic Committee

A Greek picnic is in the works for the spring and Greek letters will be sold there. Also this spring another Pan Hel tea will be held in the Coffee House on April 18th at 7 PM. On April 13 Pan Hel will be having a pizza party at 5:30 in Minta Martin Basement for all leaders Council Members of AOPi, ZTA, and AXO.

Zeta Tau Alpha

The Bowl-For-Kid's Sake was a success. The sisters and pledges of Zeta Tau Alpha were able to raise much-needed money. Thanks to all who supported those sisters who went out and bowled. Easter is just around the corner and the Easter Bunny hopped into town a little early. The chapter sponsored an Easter Egg Hunt for the children of the Chestertown community. The eggs were hidden all over the front lawn and even George had a hand in hiding a few eggs! It did not take long for the kids to find the hidden eggs and the treasures they held. The pledges of ZTA will be sponsoring a Car Wash on April 18th. More details will follow, but come out and support our pledges. All proceeds will go to the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation.

Alpha Omicron Pi

The weekend of March 27 was very busy for AOPi. They helped with the Community Beautification and held an Easter egg hunt for the children at the Benedictine School. This past weekend AOPi and KA held a car wash at Roy Rogers and the Citgo Station and were very successful. On April 17 AOPi is planning on having their annual Rosebail Celebration. Finally, in support of our international theme, "AOPi Cares About the World," on Saturday April 24, Earthday, AOPi will have a booth set up downtown to help out.

The Village Tavern
presents
Moby Dick every
THURSDAY
and 50 cent Busch on Draft 9pm-closing
also
$1 BUD LIGHT
LONGNECKS
Mon-Thurs, 5pm-closing
COMING APRIL 16, 17 TOUR DE FORCE

Week at a Glance

April 9-15

Film Series: The Story of Boys and Girls
Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sunday, and Monday

9 Friday

Good Friday for all you Christians out there.

10 Saturday

The O'Neill Literary House and the Music Department present a jazz concert featuring The Dick Durham Trio. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m. Tickets available at the door. $10 adults; $5 students, youths under 18, and WC Faculty and staff.

11 Sunday

Easter-Go to church, if you are a practicing Christian. If not, wake up early and frolic about the countryside looking for hidden eggs and chocolate.

12 Monday

Health Service Task Force Meeting.

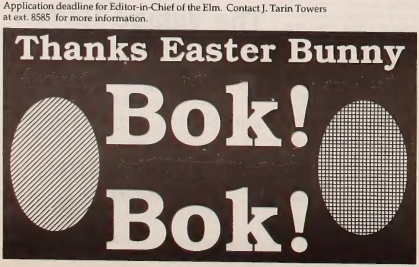
The William James Forum and GALA present A Preview of the April 25 March on Washington for Gay Rights. A talk by Rev. Harry Quiett, All Souls Unitarian Church, Washington, D.C. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 7:30 p.m.

13 Tuesday

The Goldstein Program in Public Affairs presents Clinton's Foriegn Policy: Change and Continuity. Howard Wiarda, National War College. Hynson Lounge, 7:30 p.m.

14 Wednesday

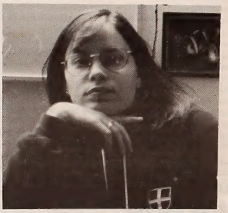
Beverly Hills 90210 will present a very special episode about teenage angst (imagine that!)



15 Thursday

The William James Forum and the Sophie Kerr Committee present The Extraordinary Family of Henry and William James. A lecture commemorating Henry James' 150th birthday by Professor Charles Caramello, Department of English, University of Maryland at College Park. Hynson Lounge, Hodson Hall, 7:30 p.m.

The Washington College Drama Department present Cinders. Tawes Theatre, Gibson Performing Arts Center, 8:00 p.m. Parental discretion advised.



Application deadline for President Charles H. Trout's Comission for Undergraduate Research. Contact Michelle Crosier for more information

Application deadline for Editor-in-Chief of the Elm. Contact J. Tarin Towers at ext. 8585 for more information.

A&E

Student Profile: Angie "Non Circum Coitus" Smidga

Angie Smidga, a Senior Humanities major from Glen Burnie, Maryland, has just been accepted into the PhD program at Oxford University. She plans to start in the fall if everything works out. She wants to major in History studying Anglo-Saxon England: Ecclesiastical History. She has been on the Dean's List and would have been a Junior Fellow and an ODK member if she had applied, she thinks. She skipped her freshman year because she had enough AP credits and also has a 3.5 GPA.

She spent her Junior Year Abroad at Oxford University studying English History and Latin and spent her spare time traveling and backpacking across Europe and Russia. She has a talent for foreign languages and has taught herself Latin. Angie enjoys reading and biking and her current favorite book is Honor Bound by Joseph Steffen.

Angie has intermed at The Maryland Gazette and Kent County News and is now a freelance reporter for the Annapolis Capital, Kent County News, and the Bowie Blade.

She rows on WC's illustrious crew team and has very bad dreams about ergs. She enjoys college basketball and is being honored at the "sports thing for academia".

Angie is a serious supporter of women, gay and lesbian, and animal rights and considers herself a "serious" liberal. And she insists that her being a vegetarian is not just a phase. In fact, when the Dining Hall does not offer anything good for vegetarians, she enjoys pickle and bar-b-que sauce sandwiches.

A bit on the quiet side, Angie likes to keep up with new music and she enjoys going to clubs in DC. KMFDM and Meat Beat Manifesto are current favorites, but L.L. Cool J holds a special place in her heart. Her current favorite song is Martin Scorcese by King Missile. She also enjoys ballroom dancing and country music.

She owns a 1989 Subaru "Trusty" Justy and has five points on her driver's license that should come off this month. And while living with Elisa Hale for a month and a half, she learned more than she did in kindergarten.

Angie's immediate goal is to earn an A in Dr. Munson's Chesapeake Bay class. Her long term goal is some sort of academic fulfillment but would really enjoy beating Ed Sloman at a game of Scrabble™.

Dick Durham Trio: Victor Belanger Returns

The Dick Durham Trio will present a jazz concert at Washington College's Tawes Theatre on Saturday, April 10, at 8 p.m. The concert is being sponsored by the O'Neill Literary House and the College's Music Department.

Durham is an accomplished jazz pianist, composer and arranger, whose personal style on the piano weaves an element of Garner, Evans, Peterson and Waller and remains faithful to the tradition of sensible melodic and harmonic interpretations of jazz music.

Durham's 30-year career includes appearances with the Count Basie Orchestra, Flip Wilson and Stanley Turrentine. He also has appeared on numerous television shows, concerts, and club appearances. Durham's recordings include "Remembrance" and "O.P.'s Waltz" among others.

Appearing with Durham in concert on April 10 will be Victor Belanger on bass and Ray Anthony on drums. Belanger is currently attending the North Bennett Street School in Boston while he is studying for his certificate as a piano technician. Originally from Toronto, Belanger studied music privately and traveled for a number of years working as a musician. He most recently has been heard playing with Bob Moses, a drummer who has played with Gary Burton and Pat Metheny.

Many know Victor as the dearly missed entree chef and all-around nice guy from

See "Trio," page 8

Centennial Conference Seeks Student-Designed Logo

The newly-formed Centennial Athletic Conference, which Washington College will join as a founding member in the fall of 1993, is sponsoring a contest at member schools to design a logo representing the conference as a whole. Guidelines are as follows:

1. The logo must include the words "Centennial Conference."
2. The camera-ready logo must be submitted by April 30, 1993 to the Conference Office.
3. Logos will be judged by athletic administrators and presidents.
4. The prize for the winning logo will be $150.
5. All entries become property of the Conference.

The member schools of the Centennial Conference are Bryn Mawr College, Dickinson College, Franklin and Marshall College, Gettysburg College, Haverford College, the Johns Hopkins University, Muhlenberg College, Swarthmore College, Ursinus College, Washington College and Western Maryland College. The Centennial name stems from the fact that all the institutions are more than 100 years old.

The purpose of the Centennial Conference is to provide for athletic competition among institutions that share similar academic aspirations and are committed to the importance of the total educational experience for students engaged in sports.

The Conference comprises independent institutions whose student body are academically selective and whose mission and curricula are predominately in the tradition of liberal education. The member institutions share an educational culture that seeks to foster academic excellence.

Intercollegiate athletic programs are an integral part of the life of a member institutions and complement their educational objectives. Each institution provides a comprehensive, broad-based athletics program, available to all students. All varsity sports are expected to be treated equitably.

The supervision and oversight of the athletics programs is vested in the president of each institution. The day-to-day operation of the program is conducted by administrators of athletics.

Within an atmosphere of integrity and mutual trust, the member institutions pledge their commitment to the purpose and mission of the conference.

Submissions should be addressed to: Steve Ulrich, Exec. Secretary, Centennial Conference, Franklin & Marshall College P.O. Box 3003, Lancaster, PA 17604-3003. For information, call (717) 399-4463.

Please include your name, address and daytime phone number.

Logo submissions may use either pen and ink, or computer media.

Cinders: Good Girls Grab Gusto

Come one come all, to Cinders, a drama being presented next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. Cinders is a humourous portrayal of the tradgedy of life at a girls' reform school, "not that far from Warsaw, really." Venture to Tawes to see what happens when a film crew meets the jaded girls of the school. There are shocks and surprises which will keep you in stitches or leave you in tears.

Bawdy humour and profound statements on life will keep you enrapt as you watch the drama unfold. The cast, under the direction of Tim Maloney, is one not to miss either, it is a diverse group of the familiar and some new faces who will entertain you like no other cast could. You will either love Cinders or hate it, there can be no in between, so come to see which judgement you will pass.

The cast includes Paul Briggs, Steve Brown, Joshua Buchman, Melanie Green, Cleo Patterson, Eve Zartman, Thea Mateau, Lynn Clifford, Susan Parker, Jen Friedman, Lisa Christie, Tony Squires, Chris Goldenberg, David Johnson, Tara Kidwell, and Alexa O'Brien. The crew includes Richard McKee - Stage Manager, Bridgette Avant - Assistant SM, Eve Zartman - Props, Brad Foster & Kerry Kelly - TD, Jason Rubin - Set, Dale Daigle - Lighting

Wings to Go.
Authentic Buffalo-Style Chicken Wings
GRAND OPENING
$100 DOOR PRIZE
FREE SAMPLES
Saturday, April 10, 1993
2 p.m. - 4 p.m.
Mon. Thurs. 11 a.m. - 10 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11 a.m. 11 p.m.
Sun. 11 a.m. - 8 p.m.
Washington Square Shopping Center
Rt. 213 Chestertown, MD
778-0800

THE ROYAL PRINCE THEATRE
proudly presents...
GROUNDHOG DAY
Monday-Thursday 7:30 Friday & Saturday 7 & 9

117 S. Cross St. Chestertown
gallery 5
Mon. - Sat. 10 - 5 p.m. 778-3483
Artwork, WC Prints, Sculpture
Jewelry, Fine Crafts
Custom framing available

IRONSTONE CAFE
Lunch and Dinner Tuesday - Saturday
Closed Sunday & Monday
235 CANNON ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
778-0188

"StartNow," from page 5

year for wool, and their dung is so odorless you can use it (composted, of course) on house plants.

•Compost your cat-box litter in a corner of your yard. Most of it is just clay — a natural ingredient.

•Avoid dry dog food bags that have foil liners. Most dry food is packaged in paper bags, so this is easy.

•Do you get your house sprayed by Orkin, or some other anti-bugging company? Be sure to ask them if what they are spraying is safe for animals. Also ask to see the list of chemicals that they are spraying, and do several minutes of research. You would be surprised how many people don't even know what types of chemicals are toxifying the household.

•Read the ingredients in your dog, or cat food. By-products are okay, but be careful about the long lists of chemicals some have. I have found that the generic brand names tend to have less synthetic chemicals, and are also cheaper.

Safer Sources

These companies put out catalogs full of environmentally safe products exclusively for your pets. Call about receiving a catalog.

- The Hummer Nature Works (512) 232-6167
- Animail Pet Care Products: (800) 255-3723
- Pedigree: The Pet Catalog (716) 637-1431
- Cedar-al Products, Inc. (800) 431-3444
- Elexis Animal Pet Care (716) 352-1232
- Lion and Lamb Cruelty Free Products (718) 361-5757
- Safer, Inc. (800) 423-7544

Read all about it

For more information, see Ecologue, edited by Bruce N. Anderson, published by Prentice Hall, 1990.

"UN," from page 1

children and the disabled into society, she said the Latin American countries depended on Spain to voice their concerns to the European Community. She said, "France and Germany are more inclined to listen to Spain than to Nicaragua."

Juan Lorenzo, a junior exchange student majoring in English language and International Commerce, said he enjoyed representing his own country in an academic atmosphere. As a delegate in the World Health Organization, Lorenzo said he learned about other countries' views concerning health and of the conflicts that arise when opinions differ.

The students said they would attend the Model UN again because they learned a great deal about other cultures and how they work to solve world issues (and Lorenzo said he would do it again if he could represent Spain).

However, Ware hopes that instructors will take the Model more seriously. Because the Model UN is organized by Howard University, Washington College competes with nationally recognized and competitive schools, and delegates spend whole days in session caucusing and debating, Ware feels the instructors at Washington College should be more understanding when students miss classes for the Model.

Others who attended the Model in late February were Elizabeth Aylesworth, Amy Bortmes, Charles Bucknor, Michael D'Andrea, Skip Gibson, Lionel Dyson, David Tsipenyuk, myself, Karen Walker, Sarah Young, and organizers Krissy Rindfuss and Dr. Shad.

"Trio," from page 7

WCDS. He was a member of the Duane Dillard Trio, who often appeared at Andy's. He and wife Cynthia are well-known and liked in the WC community.

Anthony, a graduate of the Berklee School of Music in Boston, has toured internationally with such blues artists as Pinetops Perkins (of Muddy Waters fame) and Eddie Kirkland. Anthony also has recorded with Kirkland and John Lee Hooker. When not on the road, Anthony lives in Betterton, MD. Both Belanger and Anthony are featured on Durham's latest recording, "Remembrance", recorded in July 1992.

Tickets for the upcoming concert are $10 for adults, and $5 for students, persons under 18, and Washington College faculty and staff. All tickets will be available at the door the evening of the concert.

For more information on this and other events at Washington college, call the Campus Special Events Coordinator at (410)778-7849.

"Faculty," from page 1

large, but without a say from the candidate himself.

Vahlbusch recanted allegations which he compared to "extortion" on the part of "senior faculty members, deans and department chairs." He noted anecdotal reports from past faculty secretaries, and included legend that the only junior faculty member ever to turn down the nomination was not tenured and is no longer at WC.

In fact, said Vahlbusch, it is "common knowledge" that the "tenure threat" is levered against nominees as lightly as encouraging them to accept so that they will get tenure, and as forcefully as stating bluntly that if the position of faculty secretary is turned down, so are they.

He said that the demands made (such as this one) on junior faculty members are such that tenured faculty and even deans refer to them lighthearted-ly as "only hazing," and reminded the audience that hazing is harassment and deliberate humiliation.

Tenured faculty such as Nate Smith and Robert Day dismissed the allegations as "over dramatized" and even "silly," stating that senior faculty often have to serve on more (and more taxing) committees such as Appointments and Tenure.

But Junior faculty such as Kate Verville and Lida Baldwin (who as a group prevented President Trout from cutting off Vahlbusch in mid-stride) reminded the audience that the issue was a valid one, particularly to the untenured.

The faculty secretary position requires a lot of drudgework, and the occupant of said position rarely vocalizes his position and often abstains himself from voting.

Professors Fessler and Newell reminded the group that the issue could not be resolved in this single meeting, and the goal of the statement was simply to cut the paragraph regarding the Faculty Secretary position and to further investigate the allegations by means of a faculty advisory committee.

After considerable grumblings from both sides, the amendment was passed. The text was deleted to be further considered in committee.

The next item, brought forth by Dean Wubbels for Academic Council, was the creation of a Committee on Off-Campus Study. The committee would oversee the activities of the various other abroad programs such as Junior Year Abroad, the Manchester College Program, etc.

Wubbels stated that the membership would be comprised of a faculty member from each division (Natural Science, Social Science and Humanities) as well as an at-large faculty member and three students.

Some discussion ensued over the makeup of the committee, and its sensitivity to the needs of the already-existing programs. Wubbels assured the audience that the Nominations Committee would be 'wise enough' in its selection of members.

"I'm not so sure," said Modern Language Chair Thomas Pabon. "I'm not challenging the incompetence of anyone [on the Nominations Committee]," he continued. "I'm very suspicious of this ... just nominating people out of the total blue."

"It's very easy to destroy a program that's been developed carefully over the years," he added.

The Off-Campus study issue also was remanded.

Other business:

- Rosemary Ford of the Committee on Athletics examined per the March meeting the reasons behind the reporting by semester the grades of varsity athletes compared to non-athletes. Differences have slight; Ford reported that the rationale behind the affair was concern over possible substandard performances by athletes and possible NCAA concerns with grades; the grades will continue to be monitored but will not be reported unless a substantial difference is noted.
- Dean Wubbels reported that a gift has been allocated to redo Dunning lecture hall, improving the lighting system and adding a more convenient storage facility for AV equipment.
- Robert Day reported for Faculty Affairs that the Affirmative Action Statement will be forthcoming.
- The keynote speaker for graduation will be acclaimed Watergate journalist Bob Woodward. The faculty approved the candidates for the degree contingent on satisfactory completion of coursework and the senior obligation.

EASTERN SHORE CAMERAS
we are
1 Hr. PHOTO
at WASHINGTON SQUARE
SHOPPING CENTER
SPECIALIZING IN
Quality Film Processing
Cameras, Film, Albums and Frames
Portraits, Model Portfolios and
Glamour Photography
10 % DISCOUNT FOR W.C. Students
with I.D.
778-5212
Rt. 213 North Chestertown

Second to none.
SECOND NATIONAL Federal Savings BANK
Over $1.6 Billion in Assets
FDIC Insured
503 WASHINGTON AVENUE
P.O.BOX 577
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
410-778-1013
OPEN 6 DAYS A WEEK
FOR YOUR BANKING
CONVENIENCE
LENDER

Netters On A Roll: Two Wins in a Row

ong Hoffberger
Sports Editor

Last week, the WAC
ectors defeated Washington
ad Lee and Monmouth Uni-ersity, 5-4 and 5-2, respecively. The real test for the horemen was against warthmore, who is ranked enteenth in the nation, on ednesday (article to appear next week's Elm), and versus erford College, a MAC nference rival. Last year, the horemen won 5-4 without the d of their ace Frank Hartwig.

In playing their first set of atches, the Shoremen have me to the realization that they must give 100 percent at all
mes. The Netters have had no
Gimme" matches and probbly won't have one until the tter half of their schedule.
ead coach Tim Gray has been ry happy with the play of his op six singles players, and especially with the play of the two, three, four, and five positions. At the number one position, Alberto Diaz has not had the kind of season he would like to have so far, but that is all a matter of confidence.

"Every team usually has at least one good player, which means Alberto must be at the top of his game at the beginning of every match... Alberto has had some great wins," commented Gray. Against the Division I Clemson powerhouse, Alberto went three sets with the number one player, which proves Alberto can hang with the best.

Alberto Diaz and Trevor "Van Exel lost the three point shooting contest" Hurd are ranked eighth in the nation, and continue to produce key wins for the Shoremen.

The bright spot for the Gray's Netters has been at the position of number two doubles. the tandem of Erik Pikus and Emilio Bogado have tamed the number two doubles teams of Furman, George Washington, Emory, and a host of others. They also played a hard fought three setter in losing to the number two doubles team of Kalamazoo University, best team in the nation for Division III. In singles, the freshman Pikus has been doing very well, while gaining great match experience. At the number five position, Andrew Moffat has been hitting the ball very well and is also gaining much needed experience.

In the next few weeks, Rochester and SUNY Binghampton both ranked top twenty in Div. III, appear on the WAC schedule. Rochester has just come off a large upset handily beating Skidmore College, a top ten Div. III team. Let's all get out and support the Shoremen Netters.

The next match was against Gettysburg, here in Chestertown on March 27th. The Shorewomen came out on top by a margin of 5-4. Some impressive performances were exhibited throughout the singles rounds, specifically by Hendrickson, Clausen, Lennon and Harmeyer. The number two and three doubles matches were suspended due to time constraints, but the number one partners, Hendrickson and Sloan came out on top in their match.

Millersville was the next opponent for the team on March 31. Washington College once again came out on top with a score of 5-1. Clausen and Harmeyer continued to hold their winning streak; Clausen with a hot 6-4, 6-1 and Harmeyer with a cool 6-3, 6-1.

It seems to be looking up for the Women's team. Gray saw much improvement and hopes to keep the winning streak going. Keep an eye out for some upcoming home matches, the courts are right behind Cardinal and the women would love to see you come out and support them!

Women Make Five Goal Run at Susquehanna but Fall Short

urah Feryerherm
Sports Information Director

Still plagued by injuries, the omen's lacrosse team dropped a 14-8 decision to squehanna despite a fiveoal run that spanned the first nd second half and brought he Shorewomen back from an ight-goal deficit. Now at 1-3 verall, the team is still 0-1 in MAC West action after an ear-er loss to Western Maryland.

A sluggish beginning by Washington gave Susquehanna
-1 0 lead before leading goal corer Amy McCleary finally onnected with just over 15 inutes remaining in the first alf.

The Shorewomen were own 10-3 with less than two inutes left in the stanza when cCleary scored the first of four nswered goals—two in the nal two minutes of the first alf and two in the first nine inutes of the second. Kirsten ucas tacked one on to narrow he Crusader lead to three goas, ut Washington ran out of gas ward the end and the visitors alded away with four straight oals to secure the victory.

Still playing without center
Rose Guckert (knee) and deender Peggy Bowman (hamtring) the Shorewomen truggled to make connecting asses and committed 20 turn-vers during the game.

"We are still having trouble ith the basics—throwing and atching," said head coach Diane

Ali Naditch, '96 vs. Western Maryland

Guinan. "We can't afford to give the ball away that many times."

Aggressive play by Susquehanna, a team that was winless last year and in its first two games of this season, enabled the visitors to collect 35 ground balls while holding Washington to just 13 shots. McCleary and Lucas converted on a high percentage of their shots, as they have done all year, but they simply weren't able to muster enough shots to goal to pose a serious threat to the Crusaders.

Freshman Jill Schultz and senior Eleanor Shriver continued to play solid defense for the Shorewomen, forcing a combined eight turnovers, but their efforts couldn't contain the swarming midfield play of Susquehanna which used double and triple teams to reclaim the ball.

The schedule will not get any easier for the Shorewomen, who were scheduled to face division foe Johns Hopkins on Thursday and will meet Dickinson, another league opponent, tomorrow. Still on the slate are Salisbury State and traditional power Gettysburg.

Ditto

Lizzy O'Hara
Staff Writer

The Washington College Tennis Team had some time off between their excursion southward over Spring Break and their next couple matches. The final matches of Spring Break were over shadowed by the team's most recent victories..

The first match for the women after the break was at Swarthmore. Considering that this team is ranked thirteenth in the nation, the Washington College loss of only 4-5 was not that discouraging. Clausen, Harmeyer and Roth all shined with a victory against their opponents. Hendrickson and Roth did the same in the doubles competition with a score of 6-2, 6-3 over their opponents.

The next match was against Gettysburg, here in Chestertown on March 27th. The Shorewomen came out on top by a margin of 5-4. Some impressive performances were

Olde Towne Barbers
Flat Tops — French Braids
Frostings — Cuts For Everyone
COLEY, CHARLIE AND LAURA
Route 213 and Spring Ave
Open Monday-Saturday
778-4771

PATAGONIA
DARE TO BE DIFFERENT

WE HAVE

PATAGONIA
JANSPORT
RAYBAN
ATLANTIS
MADBOMBER
GREAT LAKES
BULA

BAY TO BAY TRADERS
NEW SPRING MERCHANDISE
10% STUDENT DISCOUNT WITH ID

CANNON STREET COURTYARD
CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620
LOCATED BEHIND THE IRONSTONE CAFE

Softball Ends Skid

Bob Brown
Staff Writer

The Washington College Softball team, a program which in recent years has had trouble winning, snapped a 21-game losing streak this week with a 7-5 win over Wesley. The win was Coach Lanée Cole's first since coming to WAC this year. The team is now (1-3).

This new program, initiated by Cole since this fall's tryouts, is designed to make the team respectable and successful, and this win proves that her plans may be coming to fruition. This is certainly not the program that watched 21 games slip through their fingers and into the loss column.

Freshman centerfielder Michelle Chin argues that this team is not the even the same team that took the field for WAC last year.

"This is an entirely new team, built almost totally from scratch," Chin said. "We only have two returning players, Tara and Lori, our captains. Coach Cole is a hard coach, but she's also very understanding. She just wants us to play well and win. I think we have the potential to be a good team. It's a good feeling to get a win behind us."

This year's team includes some talented players from some metropolitan area schools who are used to a high level of competition. One such player is freshman first baseman Courtney Myers, who played high school ball in the Washington, D.C. area at a 4A high school.

Myers agreed with Chin's assessment of the skill level of this year's team.

"There's lots of talent on this team, and we are more than capable of putting together a winning season," Myers said. "I believe that as young as we are, in two years we'll be a a really strong team. The only thing that I see as needing improvment is pitching. We tend to fall short there. And of course we could use some fans."

Myers said that there is a difference between 4A high school softball and collegiate Division III softball, though it is not the one many would assume.

"Here in college the pitching seems to be not as good as in high school, where we may have been playing against some Division I prospects, and the level of competition here does not seem as high."

A new program, coach, and attitude, along with a fresh crop of young eager players, this season may mark a turning point for the softball program.

"Coach Cole takes a lot of time," Myers said. "But she expects 100 percent and more. I believe her to be a really good coach."

The win against Wesley was the first for the Washington softball program since 1991. The streak spanned over the last four games of 1991, all fourteen games in 1992 and the first three of this year.

Men's Lacrosse Boxscore

at Drew University			at FDU-Madison
	G	A		G	A
J. Paige	5	1	B. Jaeger	5	1
C. Sanchez	4	0	S. Warner	4	5
G. Lawler	4	0	J. Hernandez	3	1
H. Murphy	1	3	T. Albright	3	1
C. Cote	1	2	J. Carver	3	0
G. Mouracade	1	0	J. Paige	2	1
C. Boone	1	0	H. Murphy	2	4
B. Jaeger	0	1	M. Zarinko	1	2
G. Miller	0	1	M. McDermott	1	1
			T. Heibler	1	1

Lacrosse Devastates Drew

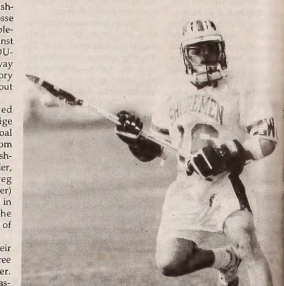
WC Leaves FDU-Madison Far Behind--29-0

Matt Murray
Co-Sports Editor

Last Saturday, the Washington College men's lacrosse squad played a rare double-header in New Jersey against Drew University and FDU-Madison. The team came away with two wins—a 17-12 victory over Drew and a 29-0 blowout over FDU-Madison.

The Shoremen played Drew first, and Jason Paige started the game with a goal 1:05 into play on an assist from Harris Murphy to give Washington the lead. Greg Lawler, Christian Boone, Greg Mouracade (from Bart Jaeger) and Chris Cote all a scored in the first period, and the Shoremen led 5-2 at the end of the first quarter.

Washington extended their lead to 8-2 with the first three goals of the second quarter. Chris Sanchez tallied on an assist from Paige with 12:29 remaining. Paige and Murphy teamed up for the second time of the game at 11:47, and Sanchez scored again on an assist from Cote at 10:37.



Drew's Amos Blinder pulled the Rangers within five, but Lawler answered on an assist from Cote to make the score 9-3.

However, the Rangers retaliated with a three-goal spurt, finishing with the last two goals of the half and the first one of the second half to pull within 9-6. Stefan Zorich tallied twice and Alex Previdi added one for the home team.

Paige answered with his third goal of the game at 13:22 of the third period. Drew pulled back to within three on a goal by Dave Newman at 11:13 to make the score 10-7.

However, at that point, the Shoremen pulled away from the Rangers on five unanswered goals which made the score 15-7. Paige scored the first two goals of the run, Sanchez scored the next two, and Lawler capped the rally with 2:23 remaining in the third quarter.

Newman scored one more for Drew before the period ended, but the Shoremen kept the momentum, as Harris

Greg Mouracade scored a goal against Drew and tallied again in the FDU-Madison game

Murphy scored on an assist from Greg Miller with nine seconds left in the third.

With the score at 16-8, Drew did not fold, scoring the first three goals of the fourth period to pull within five. However, Lawler scored unassisted with 6:31 remaining to make the score 17-11. Previdi closed out the scoring for the Rangers, tallying with 2:10 left in the game, making the final 17-12.

Jon Lundberg made 13 saves for Washington, and the Shoremen offense outshot the Rangers 56-34.

In the second game, Washington totally dominated and annihilated FDU-Madison by a score of 29-0. Freshman Bart Jaeger led the offensive attack with five goals and an assist. Junior Stu Warner amassed a total of nine points with four goals and five assists.

The Shoremen outshot the host team by an amazing 49-[illegible]. FDU-Madison goalie was called upon to make 55 saves. Jon Lundberg, Bill Griffin, Andy Manos and Craig Flury also tended goal for the Shoremen, making one save a piece.

Janairo "Hondo" Hernandez, freshman Tim Albright and Jamie Carver also added hat tricks in the winning effort. Paige continued to score goals with two, and Murphy scored two to go along with four assists.

Mike McDermott, Andrew Neville, Matt Zarinko, Tim Greeley, Greg Mouracade, Tom Heibler and Dave Lipinski also added a goal. Sanchez and Chestertown native Sterling Bright each had an assist.

Results from the Swarthmore contest on Wednesday were unavailable at press time. The team's next game will be tomorrow at Kibler Field at 1:30 p.m.

Women's Crew Makes Waves At Johns Hopkins

Kara Wiesenbaugh
Staff Writer

On Saturday, April 3, the Women's Varsity Eight raced at the Hopkins Invitational in Baltimore. It was an impressive race despite the undesirable weather conditions. The cooperative water current and tailwind quickened the race, but the waves and whitecaps made the rowing more difficult to be technically correct. In this 2000 meter race, Washington's eight recovered from a third-place position in the first half of the race to cross the finish line in first place with at least a boat length's distance of open water between them and second placed Lafayette, then LaSalle, and Susquehanna. Coach Glenn Merry was thrilled with the come back. This eight was comprised of Melissa Olsen in the bow seat, Kathy Mullen, Jenny Sue LeSchander, Sue Czechowski, Mary Bird, Jennifer Dougherty, Jen Hozik, Kara Wiesenbaugh, and coxswain Lisa Brown.

Unfortunately for the Women's Varsity Four, Novice Eight and Novice Four, all other races following the Eight were cancelled due to the poor wind and water conditions. The next regatta to look forward to is the Murphy Cup in Philadelphia on April 17, where there will be even more crews for the women to compete against.

Baseball Falls To Swarthmore

Team Hits Tailspin; Strikes Out With MAC Opponents

Kit Murray
Co-Sports Editor

As some students witnessed on Monday, watching a Washington College baseball game these days can be depressing. Since returning north from their Florida trip, the team's season has definitely headed south.

"To be honest, it's going the wrong way," team co-captain Mike Hanifee said. "We definitely need to turn things around here. People haven't been prepared coming to the field to play."

Since returning from Spring Break, the baseball team has run up a dismal 2-5 record with the only two wins coming against a weak Lincoln club. The Shoremen have dropped a double header to Haverford, a game to Tufts, and they lost another double header against Swarthmore on Monday.

"Of Haverford and Swarthmore, neither one of them is as talented as we are," Coach Ed Athey said. "But we have to hit the ball with men on bases consistently. We haven't played as well as we did in Florida."

Game one against Swarthmore was lost in heartbreaking fashion. The Shoremen trailed by only one run going into the seventh inning, but Swarthmore added three runs on a homerun to make the score 6-2. Washington rallied for two in their half of the seventh, but it wasn't enough, and the game ended 6-4.

The game started off positively for the Shoremen, as Keith Whiteford hit an RBI double in the first inning, and Washington led 2-1 after one. However, Swarthmore tied it in the third with a run, added a run in the sixth to take the lead, and finished the home team off with the homerun in the seventh.

Keith Whiteford pitched a complete game and took the loss. Only three of the six runs he gave up were earned.

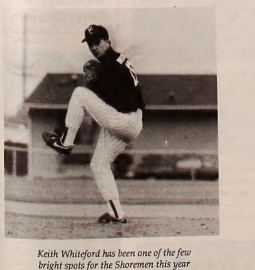
The Shoremen only managed five hits with Whiteford, Hanifee, Andy Parks, Gerry Scully and Dan Coker contributing.

In game two, Washington practically gave the game away, with nine runs scoring for Swarthmore on only seven hits. Only one of the runs was earned.

The Shoremen played much better offensively, banging out nine hits. Rory Conway had two hits, and Parks exploded for a three-for-three game including a double and two RBIs. Freshman Gary Yovanovich contributed a two-RBI single in the seventh.

The loss drops Washington's record to 5-8 and 0-4 in the MAC Southeast. There have been a few bright spots for the Shoremen this year, but they're hard to find.

"Andy (Parks) and Whitey (Keith Whiteford) are starting to hit the ball, and Brian Rush has won a couple of games with his arm (at catcher), and our pitching's been pretty respectable," Hanifee said. "I think it's going to take a couple of good games in a row. Basically, our MAC chances are over, but we always want to beat Hopkins (on Saturday)."



Signs of improvement are there for the young team, as Parks and Whiteford have begun to contribute offensively. Also, a trio of freshman in Rush, Yovanovich, and Doug "Billy" Blair have helped the team's cause. Rush has been spectacular behind the plate, Yovanovich has contributed RBI singles in the last two double headers, and Blair has provided consistency from the bullpen.

However, the Hopkins game looms on the horizon as one that could make or break Washington's season. The teams have a strong rivalry and both were favorites to win the conference. Hopefully, the team can come around.

"I think we need to concentrate and focus," Parks said. "I think we have to concentrate on playing to win instead of playing not to lose. We're not playing bad baseball right now, but we're just not hitting."

The Shoremen play the Johns Hopkins Bluejays tomorrow in a double header at Hopkins at 12:00 p.m. All fan support would be appreciated. Stop by on the way home for Easter and root for the Shoremen to break out of their 2-5 slump.

Results of the University of Maryland Eastern Shore double header from Wednesday were not available at press time.

Keith Whiteford has been one of the few bright spots for the Shoremen this year

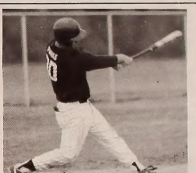
Game 1

Washington	AB	R	H	BI
Conway cf	2	0	0	0
Whiteford p	2	1	1	1
Hanifee 2b	2	1	1	0
Boan 3b	4	0	0	0
Parks 1b	3	1	1	1
D'Andrea lf	4	0	0	0
Rush c	2	0	0	0
Scully rf	3	0	1	0
Coker ss	3	0	1	0
totals	25	3	5	2

Swarthmore	AB	R	H	BI
Santora rf	3	2	1	0
Montenegro ss	3	0	0	0
Johnson c-p	4	0	0	0
Crawford lf	2	2	1	1
Selverian 1b	3	2	1	3
Tindall 3b	3	0	1	2
Kim 2b	2	0	1	0
Gionakis dh	3	0	0	0
Hofmann 1b	3	0	0	0
totals	26	6	5	6

Swarthmore	1	0	1	0	0	1	3	–	6
Washington	2	0	0	0	0	0	2	–	4

Swarthmore	IP	H	R	ER	BB	SO
Hudson W	6	2	5	4	2	1	6
Johnson S	3	0	1	0	0	2	1



Washington	IP	H	R	ER	BB	SO
Whiteford L	7	5	6	3	1	1	7

Game 2 (Washington only)

Washington	AB	R	H	BI
Conway cf	4	0	2	0
Whiteford lf	3	0	0	0
Hanifee 2b	3	1	0	0
Boan p	3	1	1	0
Campbell dh	0	1	0	0
Parks c	3	2	3	2
Walton 1b	3	0	1	0
D'Andrea 3b	4	0	1	0
Scully rf	1	0	0	0
Yovanovich rf	2	0	1	2
Coker ss	3	0	0	1

NEWT'S
Player of the Week

NEWT'S CHESTERTOWN BAR
Trust Me
(410) 778-9819

With all the excitement of the Wings To Go store opening in C-Town it was hard to find time to pick a Newt's POW, but we managed.

We know him affectionately around campus as "The Bomber." Well this week, Andy "A.P." Parks has been named the Newt's Player of the Week for his stellar performance on the baseball team. While the team is struggling at the moment, Parks has continued to shine. In his last four games (doubleheaders against Lincoln and Swarthmore), the Bomber has gone five-for-eight (.625 streak), with two doubles, six RBIs and six walks. He also threw out three runners on the bases from catcher against Lincoln.

Parks is hitting well over .300 for the season, and the junior catcher/first baseman was a runaway choice for this issue's Newt's POW.

When asked how he felt about the honor bestowed upon him, the jovial ball player from Hagerstown, Maryland would only say, "It's about time!" Don't let the Bomber feel slighted—give him an enthusiastic congratulations if you see him around campus.

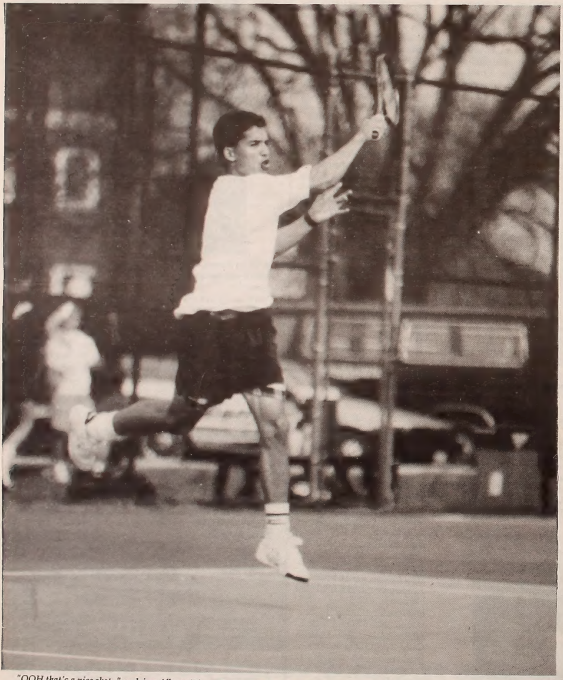
Hey Nora, I challenge you to a wing eating contest!

Tuesday - Saturday
Flexible Hours
Appointments Preferred

A Shear Design
COMPLETE HAIR & NAIL CARE
NAIL TIPS • OVERLAYS • FACIALS
505 Washington Ave
Chestertown MD 21620
(Behind Barbertinis)
Jaime Thompson
(301) 778-0888

778-3181
Shirt Laundry
Carpet Sales
Park
RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.
107 N. CROSS ST.
CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620

Softball Breaks 21-Game Streak



Baseball Hits Season Low

WC • ELM

Sports

Wings To Go opens in C-Town
(feature to appear in next week's Elm)

Men's Lax Rolls Over DU Rangers Annihilates FDU-Madiso

"OOH that's a nice shot ," exclaims Alberto Diaz as he his winning forehand careens down the line for a winner. Co-captain Alberto Diaz has been playing at the number one position for the Shoremen this season, and has certainly held his own versus Div. I and Div. III opponents. In singles, Alberto is ranked among the top 30 Div. III players. Paired with Co-captain Trevor "Big Toe" Hurd in doubles, Diaz and Hurd are ranked eigth in the nation.

Scores

Lacrosse

Men's

Washington	1
Drew	12
Washington	2
FDU-Madison

Women's

Washington
Susquehanna	14
Washington
Widener	18

Baseball

Washington
Swarthmore
Washington
Swarthmore

Softball

Washington
Wesley
Washington
Gettysburg	15
Washington	1
Gettysburg	4

Andy Parks: NEWT's Player of the Week

Women's Lacrosse Falls To Susquehanna And Widener By Scores Of 14-8 And 18-8

"The Unexamined Life Is Not Worth Living"

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The Elm

Weekend Weather
Friday: PM T-storms High 75 Low 60
Weekend: Increasing Clouds High 65 Low 40

Volume 64, Number Twenty-Four • April 16, 1993 Washington College • Chestertown, Maryland

Deficit Nears Million-Dollar Mark

Hopes raise for June resolution to temporary crisis

J. Tarin Towers
Editor-in-Chief

As of the end of February, the financial state of Washington College showed red ink of over $900,000. As reported at the faculty meeting, this deficit is expected to be drastically reduced by the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

Senior Vice President for Finance Gene Hessey wanted to dispel any fears that this was truly a "million dollar crisis."

Hessey told the Elm last week that it is "not at all unusual to have a larger deficit in February than you'll have in June."

The projected end-of-year figure for the college is a financial debt of $572,000, this in spite of the year-long efforts to cut back and reduce spending.

Hessey also hopes that the debt can be even further reduced by June to as little as $322,000 by additional belt-tightening.

He explains: "When the extent of the financial aid overrun became known in September, a year-end financial deficit of $322,000 would be right on," he said, considering that the financial aid overexpenditure had not been budgeted in at any point. The $322K figure is approximately equivalent to breaking even in this light.

The freeze on equipment spending and travel funds has been in effect for some time now, Hessey said, and part of this is an effort to reach the $322K mark. The freeze will hold through the end of June.

"[It is] not at all unusual to have a larger deficit in February than you'll have in June." —Gene Hessey

"In addition, discretionary funds can by intent be avoided simply by not making planned purchases," he said. The cuts will not affect the campus security phone system currently on order.

There has also been some question as to whether the Athletic Department and sports budget had not been cut when all others had. This misinformation, said Hessey, was the result of poor formatting on the part of the comptroller; the $2,000 cut from the athletic budget was 'hidden' under the heading of "Auxiliary" rather than "Athletics."

Other fund-saving efforts include freezing the contingency fund which is in place to cover unforeseen costs. Approximately $100,000 of that fund has been frozen and applied to the deficit, said Hessey, and this does not affect any departmental budget.

The departments were affected by a 5 percent across-the-board cut in September, with additional discretionary cuts Now, in addition to the freeze on equipment and travel, sources of substantial balances were also frozen, with a positive budgetary gain of up to $250,000.

Also, as Hessey pointed out, all the annual fund and alumni contributions have not been added, and a large revenue will accrue in June — the receipt of the Summer Conference income, which is estimated at $25,000.

Student Conduct Council Held First Trial on Break In

On March 11, the Student Conduct Council (SCC) heard its first case of the 1992-93 academic year. The case involved five freshman breaking into Middle Hall in to order to steal a sign. In the course of the theft, the window which served as point-of-entry was dropped and destroyed. Brian Rush, Geoff Bley, Brian Bird and Steven Dashiell all appeared before the SCC and were each found responsible for the vandalism. Each were ordered to pay 1/5 of the total cost of damages (amounting to $2670) and were required to perform five hours of community service for buildings and grounds. In addition, they each received an Official College Warning.

Christopher Evans, the fifth student accused of vandalism, failed to attend the March 11 hearing and did not give the council prior notice. Because Evans was not present to give his testimony he was found in contempt of council and was fined $25; a separate hearing date was scheduled for April 1. Evans again failed to attend the hearing. The SCC decided to conduct the hearing in his absence and he was again found in contempt of council. He was ordered to pay 1/5 of the damages plus completing five hours community service with buildings and grounds; he also received an Official College Warning. In addition, he must write a "well-written" letter of apology to the SCC showing a clear understanding of the need for compliance with the judicial system. He was also forbidden to pledge a fraternity this semester.

This case is the first to be brought to the SCC in the last two years. Bridgette Winchester, president of the SCC, hopes that in the future more cases will be brought before the council instead of always going to the Student Affairs Office or All-Campus Judiciary. She feels that "Students deserve the right to participate in the judicial system."

Alternatives to Forms of Literature and Composition Class Examined

Tanya Cunic and Amanda Burt
News Staff

Earlier this year, Dean and Provost Gene G. Wubbels proposed that the Writing Committee consider the development of a new course for freshmen to replace the current Forms of Literature and Composition program.

In a recent memo to the committee, he said that the composition class for freshmen "may not be the right course" for them. He listed a lack of connection to advising as well as a lack of writing across the curriculum as some of the more prominent problems with the current Forms course. He asked the committee to evaluate further "the problems with what we do now."

Wubbels also suggested that the new course for freshmen might incorporate the following:

- writing and teaching across the curriculum
- the professor teaching the course would also be the academic advisor for the students
- an introduction to other competencies such as library research, time management, reading, math and computer skills
- an emphasis on interdisciplinary teaching
- uniform course content, possibly thematic in nature, that would give some sort of a common experience to all students

The Elm spoke recently with Dean Wubbels and some members of both the writing committee and the English department to discuss the possibility of instituting a new freshmen common course.

Wubbels said that he does not want his recommendations to be viewed as coming down as a "pronouncement from on high." But he added that the current course does not offer students any common experience, nor does it offer any opportunity for "curricular pioneering."

He hopes that the new program will offer students an introduction to a number of disciplines and will encourage them to investigate new courses that they may not have had the opportunity to explore in the current program. "Writing already has an exalted place in our college," he said, "and this will play to our strength."

Wubbels noted that because the written language is a way to articulate what a person is thinking, the structure of the new course will promote good writing. "The English department warmly endorsed the idea of a new common course for freshmen," he said, "they were strongly supportive."

An anonymous source from the college told the Elm,

See "Forms," page 12

Inside

Tons of Events for your Parents and Yourself 5

Christabel Sees Gorbachev Speak 5

1782 Society Gala in Baltimore Next Friday 6

Stoltzfus Wins Theology Fullbright Fellowship 6

WC Alum Tells the Story of Recycling 13

You Don't Want to Read This

As I near the end of my term as Editor-in-Chief, I return to two topics which people are still afraid of; and this time they're combined into one dandee story.

I got an E-mail message from my friend Roy on Tuesday night. Roy was not a happy camper. Roy had been talking to a friend of his on the network, on one of the bulletin board systems. Something bad happened, she said. And she wouldn't say what at first. Jesus. I wouldn't have either...

What happened was this: Roy's friend was reading one of the "rooms," or topics, on the BBS called "Queersplace." This is a "safespace" discussion for "LesBiGay" people (if you don't know, this is a convenient moniker used to describe three varieties of non-hetero-sexual people) to talk about LesBiGay issues. Roy's friend is female and bisexual. But, of course, to the average onlooker, you can only tell she's female. That's all.

Of course, the average onlooker doesn't look over women's shoulder's, see the word "Queer," assume she's a 'dyke,' and then see red. The average onlooker doesn't get two of his buddies to wait with him outside of the computing center at Northwest University in Missouri for the dyke to leave the building. The average onlooker doesn't drag her away, beat her senseless, and rape her repeatedly with his buddies' help. "We're not going to let you go until you like dick better than pussy," they chanted.

No, these are not your average onlookers. These are, however, your average perpetrators of hate crimes. A white middle-class woman is not exempt from bigotry if she is SUSPECTED of being gay. And this is what happened to Roy's friend. These "men," these utter wastes of carbon, saw her reading a computer screen. And they took out every gram of hate they had on her, more specifically, on her body.

And her body represented in those awful hours two things: all women, and all gay people. Rape is a crime of violence, this is true. But the sex is not removed from it altogether. That poor girl right then became a stand-in for every woman who has ever looked askance at that bastard ... every girl who ever turned him down, who looked at him funny, who laughed in his face. And she became an object, a cockpit for him to fly in and strafe all women and all gay persons.

